The Poor Relief Act, 1601 (43 Eliz c 2), taxed "every inhabitant, parson, vicar and other"; the Poor Rate Exemption Act, 1840 (3 & 4 Vict c 89), put an end to the rating of an "inhabitant," as such, upon his property or upon the profits of stock-in-trade; but it continued the liability of the parson, vicar, and other persons named in the text.

rateable occupation in an interval during which there is no user (n), or no profitable user (o), of the hereditament. At the same time, legal possession of a permanent nature with an intention to occupy is not necessarily sufficient to constitute rateable occupation, for there may be possession or bare occupation without the possibility of profit or advantage; in order to constitute rateable occupation there must be a use and enjoyment which is, or is capable of being, beneficial (p).

SECT. 2.
Rateable
Occupation.

Occupation, in order to be rateable, must be exclusive (q), therefore, if more persons than one have rights in a hereditament, that person who has the right of regulation and control over the other persons enjoying subordinate rights is the rateable occupier (r).

Exclusive
occupation.

3. Rateability does not depend upon title (s), and a mere trespasser may be rateable (t); but evidence of title may be material, as where it is doubtful which of two persons is the rateable occupier (u), or whether there is any person who can be so described (v).

Title not always material.

Persons in possession at will may be rateable occupiers, such as the occupants of almshouses (a), or of rooms in a royal palace (b), or companies which are allowed at will a certain use of land for commercial purposes (c).

Rateable Occupation.

Ownership, coupled with possession and beneficial enjoyment.

Premises required to be left empty or unentered.

4. Ownership, if accompanied by possession and enjoyment, which is, or is capable of being, beneficial, constitutes rateable occupation (d); but bare ownership does not (e), even though possession goes with it, if there is no such enjoyment by the owner (f). An intention on the owner's part to occupy is for this purpose equivalent to enjoyment (g).

5. There are certain classes of hereditaments the normal use of which requires them to be kept empty, or left unentered for a time, for example, grass land (h), houses kept to be let furnished (i), seaside lodging-houses (k), seaside shops (l), warehouses kept for the business of letting floor space (m), exhibition buildings (n), part of a works kept as a stand-by (o), lands forming the catchment area for a waterworks undertaking (p). Such hereditaments are the subject of rateable occupation, even during their periods of emptiness (g).

6. The mere enjoyment of an easement over land does not itself constitute rateable occupation (r); but a person may be the rateable occupier of land although the rights granted to him therein are only in the nature of an easement, if the exercise of such rights requires, and brings with it, the exclusive possession (s). Under similar conditions, the enjoyment of a licence may be such as to confer rateable occupation (t).

A person may be in rateable occupation of land by means of what is called an easement, although others, including the grantor and persons deriving title from him, also have rights of user of another kind (a). A user of land in a certain way amounts to rateable occupation if the person so using it can prevent any other person from using it in the same way (b), but not if the grantor reserves a right to a similar user (c).

SECT. 2. Rateable Occupation.	Land may be rateably occupied by means of moorings, if these are fixed in one place and the person rated has the exclusive right of using them (d), but not if the moorings are in fact constantly removed (e), or if they are mere accessories to a floating vessel (f), or if the right to use them is not exclusive (g).
Moorings.
Artificial watercourses and towing paths.	A canal or navigation company is in rateable occupation of a canal or an artificial cut (with the towing-path (h)), but not of a natural river or the towing-path alongside, unless the soil is vested in the company (i). A towing-path which is so vested is capable of rateable occupation, although the natural river which it adjoins is not (k). There may also be a rateable occupation of a sluice in a natural river (l).
Harbours.	Harbour commissioners are in rateable occupation of any portion of the harbour of which the soil is vested in them (m).
Tolls.	7. Tolls are not rateable per se , that is, if they are not a payment for the use of the soil (n). But if a person, as a necessary

8. A right of common is not itself a rateable subject-matter (d); but the exercise of such a right over land may bring with it such an exclusive enjoyment of the land as to constitute rateable occupation (e). If the persons who feed cattle on the land in the exercise of the right are tenants in common for the whole year, they are rateable (f); if the rights of common are vested in trustees to manage and to receive moneys paid for the grazing during part of the year the trustees are rateable (g); but a municipal corporation which manages a common on behalf of the freemen is not rateable for the common (h).

Occupation by servant or agent.

Bodmin Union Guardians* (1880), 49 L J. (M C.) 69). The above cases refer to markets held in highways. The same principle has been applied to inclosed markets in the following cases (but see note (a), p. 9, ante):—Percy v. Ashford Union (1876), 34 L. T. 579; Bedford (Duke) v. Holmes Common (1867), L. R. 2 Q. B. 482); see also Trenfield v. Lowe (1869), L. R. 4 C. P. 454; and compare title ELECTIONS, Vol. XII., p. 147.

Tewkesbury (Burgesses' Trustees)*, supra. But it is doubtful how far this principle can be reconciled with those laid down in Mersey Docks v. Cameron, Jones v. Mersey Docks (1865), 11 H. L. servant or agent occupying a separately rateable hereditament, although he does so by virtue of his employment, may be the rateable occupier (k).

SECT. 2.
Rateable
Occupation.

A mere caretaker cannot himself be a rateable occupier (l); but the caretaker's employer may, in some cases at least, have a rateable occupation by the caretaker (m), but the usual practice is not to rate such an employer. Where the owner of a house employs a caretaker to do other work by residing there, in addition to taking care of the house, the owner may be rateable (n). Where the hereditament consists of parts capable of separately rateable occupation, the residence of a caretaker in one such part does not make his employer the rateable occupier of the whole (o).

10. A bankrupt may be in rateable occupation although he holds indirectly of the trustee in bankruptcy (p).

In a winding-up, liquidators who carry on the business of the company continue the rateable occupation of the company's premises (q); and they are in rateable occupation even if they occupy merely for the purpose of fulfilling outstanding contracts (r), or of preventing damage to the company's property (s).

Where a receiver is appointed under a deed of floating charge, and the company is not directed to deliver up possession of land to him, the receiver has no rateable occupation of the company's land (t); but a receiver appointed under the terms of a deed by which the company is to give up possession at a certain date is in rateable occupation after the date when possession is given up (a).

SECT. 2.

Rateable Occupation.

Hereditaments separately let Flats.

Single building with two or more occupiers.

Joint occupation of single hereditament.

Separate use of property by several persons.

11. A hereditament which is capable of being separately let may be separately rated (b); but a hereditament which is physically undivided, and is actually occupied by a single occupier, may be rateable as a whole, although parts of it are capable of separate letting (c): it is not, however, necessarily so rateable (d). Flats, in the modern acceptance of the term, which are occupied by separate tenants are separately rateable (e).

A single building may have two or more occupiers who are separately rateable, although there is no structural severance between the portions of the building occupied by each of those persons (f). But a person cannot divest himself of the rateable occupation of a whole building by merely permitting other persons to use some part of it, or by shutting up a part (g).

12. Several persons, as in the case of partners, may be in joint occupation of a single hereditament and liable for rates in respect of the whole (h).

13. Where property is used separately by more persons than one, the question which of such persons is the rateable occupier of any particular portion of the property is answered by ascertaining which of those persons has the control of the portion in question during the continuance of the user (i). Thus, a tenant of a flat is the rateable occupier of it because he is not subject to the landlord's

Corporation, [1896] 2 Ch. 212; see Re Marriage, Neave & Co, North of England Trustees, Debenture and Assets Corporation v. Marriage, Neave & Co., [1896] 2 Ch. 663, C A, per RIGBY, L J, at p. 678. As to the duty of a receiver to pay rates, see title RECEIVERS, pp. 401, 402, post.

(b) Merssey Docks and Harbour Board v. Birkenhead Overseers (1873), L. R. 8 Q. B. 445. There is no statutory definition of a rateable hereditament. As to the effect of the control of a portion of property in making that portion a separately rateable hereditament, see the text, infra.

(c) Ravenshoe v. Hursley Union Guardians (1877), 3 Ex. D. 44. In North Eastern Railway v. York Union, [1900] 1 Q. B. 733, where a similar decision was given, the parts were not capable of separate letting without some physical alteration.

(f) Allchurch v. Hendon Union Assessment Committee and Guardians, supra (where each of the two storeys of a house was let to a separate tenant, and the tenants had the joint use of the yard, closet and cistern); see R. v. St. George's Union, supra.

(g) R. v. St. Mary the Less, Durham (Inhabitants) (1791), 4 Term Rep. 477; R. v. Aberystwith (Inhabitants) (1808), 10 East, 354. These cases, however, are scarcely reconcilable with the more modern decisions cited in note (e), supra, compare R. v. Smith (1860), 30 L. J. (M. C.) 74, cited in note (m), p. 13, post. Permission by the Crown to use part of a building belonging to it may make the person so permitted a rateable occupier (R. v. Ponsonby (Lady Emily) (1842), 3 Q. B. 14; and see note (b), p. 5, ante).

(h) R. v. Paynter (1845), 7 Q. B. 255. But if the several persons are in fact separately rateable they are not liable for the rates on the whole hereditament if it has been incorrectly rated as a single hereditament (R. v. London Justices, [1899] 1 Q. B. 532, 539).

control (h); but a lodger (l) or a person allowed the use of offices (m) is not, if he is subject to such control, the rateable occupier of the lodgings or offices. Similar considerations apply to parts of industrial undertakings appropriated to the use of persons conducting subsidiary enterprises (n). The agreement which allows the separate user may contain words of demise, but it does not necessarily follow that the grantor has transferred to the grantee the rateable occupation (o); and the grantee may be the rateable occupier, although no such words appear in the agreement (p).

SECT. 2.
Rateable
Occupation.

A person who enjoys the use of the portion in question, and can exclude from that portion the person who has allowed him the use, is the rateable occupier (q).

Power of exclusion.

Where one railway company has running powers (r) over a line owned by another company, the rateable occupation is in the company which exercises control over the general management of the line; and an obligation to do repairs is strong evidence of occupation (s).

In these two cases the dock board retained the control, and the persons using were held not rateable, but where the board appropriated a portion to a firm of wine merchants, for use as bonded stores, the latter were held to have such control as to be rateable (Young & Co. v. Liverpool Assessment Committee, [1911] 2 K. B. 195). In the cases of the following properties the persons allowing the use retained control of the whole and were the rateable occupiers—a portion of an exhibition appropriated to a caterer (*R v. ministration.

14. The Crown is not rateable for the relief of the poor (t), and consequently no rate can be imposed in respect of hereditaments occupied by the Crown, or by the servants of the Crown for the purposes of the Crown (u). Occupation by the great departments of State is therefore not a rateable occupation (a). The rule extends also to property occupied by persons whose subordination to the Crown is less direct, such as police quarters and offices (b), county buildings used for assize courts (c) or for county courts (d), gaols (e), and premises used exclusively for purposes of the Territorial Force (f).

But county buildings, so far as they are used for other than judicial business, are the subject of rateable occupation (Middlesex County Council v. St. George's Union Assessment Committee, [1897] 1 Q. B. 64, C. A.; Worcestershire County Council v. Worcester Union, [1897] 1 Q. B. 480, C. Carlisle Local Board of Health* (1857), 8 E. & B. 116; see title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VII., p. 120). As to county buildings, see also Lancashire Justices v. Cheetham (1867), L. R. 3 Q. Manchester Overseers, supra*. Prison officers may, however, in certain circumstances, have a rateable occupation of their quarters; see p. 15, post. As to the classification of prisons, see title PRISONS, Vol. XXIII., p. 235.

(f) Wixon v. Thomas (No. 2), [1912] 1 K. B. 690, C. A. Militia premises were exempt (R. v. Fuller (1855), 8 E. & B. 365, n.; R. v. Jay (1857), 8 E. & B. 469), and volunteer storehouses were exempted by the Volunteer Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 65), s. 26; but no property used exclusively for volunteer purposes was rateable (Pearson v. Holborn Union Assessment Committee, [1893] 1 Q. B. 389; see title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VII., p. 120).

PART I.—POOR RATE: LIABILITY TO THE RATE.

Under some circumstances, however, an officer of the army (g), of a prison (h), or of a police force (i), may be regarded as being himself the occupier of his quarters, and as therefore having a rateable occupation of them, although if the Crown were the occupier there would be no rateable occupation (k).

If the Crown permits a person to occupy part of its property that person may be rateable (l); and if premises are used by a servant of the Crown for Crown purposes, but such servant has not the exclusive occupation, the actual occupier is rateable (m).

The occupation by the Commissioners of Woods and Forests (n) or Public Works (o) of property maintained out of public money is not rateable (p).

SECT. 2. Rateable Occupation.

Property occupied by public officer in personal capacity.

Private occupation of Crown property.

Property maintained out of public money.

The use of such property for entertainments might, however, make the occupation rateable (Rayner v. Drewitt (1900), 64 J. P. 567; Lewis v. Durham Union (1904), Ryde and Konstan's Rating Appeals, 357; 68 J. P. 220); and see, generally, title ROYAL FORCES.

(i) Martin v. West Derby Assessment Committee (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 145, C. A.; Showers v. Chelmsford Union Assessment Committee, [1891] 1 Q. B. 339, C. A. In both these cases the quarters were some distance away from the police offices and cells. But in Monmouth Overseers v. Monmouthshire County Council (1902), 66 J. P. 788, quarters adjoining a cell were held to be in rateable occupation; see also E. v. Bridgetown (1869), 20 L. T. 658, MacHarg v. Stoke-upon-Trent Assessment Committee (1884), 48 J. P. 775.

(k) See the cases cited on p. 14, ante. It is difficult, upon the cases, to state a more definite rule than appears in the text, supra. For instance, the fact that the chief constable was bound to reside where he did, did not prevent him from being rateable in Showers v. Chelmsford Union Assessment Committee, supra. But such a condition may probably at the present day be held sufficient to destroy rateability; see Cross v. West Derby Union (1899), 16 T. L. R. 120 (see note (b), p. 14, ante), Warren v. Thomas, Lambert v. Thomas, Burrows v. Thomas (No. 2), [1912] 1 K. B. 690, C. A. (see p. 14, ante). The residence of the officer's wife and family with him does not suffice to make him rateable (Leicester County Council v. Leicester Parish Assessment Committee (1898), 78 L. T. 463); compare R. v. Stewart (1857), 8 E. & B. 360.

(l) R. v. Ponsonby (Lady Emily) (1842), 3 Q. B. 14. Where the site of a royal palace is demised to a subject for a permanent interest, the occupier is rateable (Portland's (Duke) Case (1760), 1 Bott's Poor Laws by Const, 131; and see Bute (Earl) v. Grindall (1793), 2 Hy. Bl. 265, as to the ranger of a royal park). The Crown's tenants "in ancient demesne" are rateable (E. v. Aylesford (Inhabitants) (1860), 29 L. J. (M. (p) On the same principle, the Royal Academy were held not rateable for a part of the National Gallery appropriated to them (R. v. Shee (1843), 4 Q. B. 2); but a school supported by the Committee of Council on Education out of money voted by Parliament was held rateable (E. v. Temple (1853), 2 E. & B. 160; followed in E. v. Kneller Hall (Trustees) (1858), 6 W. R. 605). As to schools, see, however, pp. 16, 22, 23, post. Hornsey School of Art v. Edmonton Union (1905), 2 Konstan's Rating Appeals, 393; 94 L. Universities.

Property occupied for public purposes.

Premises acquired for telegraph purposes are, to a certain extent, rateable (g).

The occupation of reformatory and industrial schools is generally rateable (r).

A university has a rateable occupation of its premises though created by charter from the Crown (s).

15. The occupation of property for public purposes other than those of the general administration of the country is rateable (t), although no pecuniary profit results therefrom to the occupier (a). A harbour board is rateable for its docks, even though its profits must by statute be devoted to the purposes of the trust (b); an education authority is rateable for its schools (c); a county council or sewerage authority is rateable for its outfall works (d), its sewage farm (e), and the adjuncts to the works or farm (f), as well as for its sewers, whether above ground (g) or underground (h); guardians are rateable for their workhouses (i); the governors of a hospital are rateable for it (k).

(g) Telegraph Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict c 110), s. 22. The premises are rateable subject to the same limitations of value even when let to a tenant (St. Gabriel, Fenchurch, Overseers v. Williams (1885), 16 Q. B. D. 649; see also R. v. Postmaster-General (1873), 28 L. T. 337).

SECT. 2
Rateable
Occupation:

Property vested in local authority, subject to exercise of rights of the public.

16. Where, although property is vested in a local authority, that authority could have discharged its public duty without acquiring the property and merely exercises statutory powers of conservancy over it, the public may be the only occupiers, as in the case of a toll-free bridge (l), or a public park (m), and in such cases there is no rateable occupation. Even if the authority derives from the property some small revenue insufficient to cover the cost of upkeep, the property is not thereby made rateable (m); but there is a rateable occupation of the hereditament if it is used for purposes other than, and not subsidiary to, the exercise of the rights of the public (n).

17. Rates cannot be recovered from ambassadors and their servants in respect of houses occupied by them (o). Ambassadors.

SECT. 3.—Special Cases in which Owners are Liable as such.

18. Parsons and vicars are rateable in respect of the tithes received by them (p), and lay impropriators, as well as spiritual Tithe-owners

Assessment Committee, [1901] 1 K. B. 406, C. A., underground sewers, to the expenses of which no contribution was made by any person or body other than the owning authority, were not rateable, but West Kent Main Sewerage Board v Dartford Union Assessment Committee, [1911] A. C. 71, has swept away this distinction and shows that sewers generally are rateable.

The principles stated in the text, supra, underlie, it is submitted, the distinction between the decisions in Lambeth Overseers v London County Council, supra, and London County Council v Erith (Churchwardens) and Dartford Union Assessment Committee, [1893] A. C. 562.

This applies even to a British subject who is a member of a foreign embassy (Macartney v Garbutt (1890), 24 Q. B. D. 368). A consul, however, is rateable (Viveash v Becker (1814), 3 M. & S. 284, see title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VI., p. 438); and so is a British subject who, though an ambassador's servant, occupies a house for purposes not connected with that service (*Novello v. corporations to which tithes are appropriated, are also so rateable (q). The rateability extends to tithe commutation rentcharges (r), and any other rent or rentcharge substituted for tithes (s), unless it is specifically declared not to be rateable by the document which effects the substitution (t). A payment resembling tithe, but not created in substitution for tithe, is not rateable, whether it be payable to the parson or vicar (a), or to a layman (b). A tithe rentcharge, as defined in the Tithe Act, 1891 (c), is rateable in the hands of the owner (d).

mines.

19. The lessor of a mine other than a coal mine is rateable for it if the dues are wholly reserved in kind although the lessor has the option to take them in money (e).

Allotments.

20. A local authority which provides and lets allotments is rateable therefor as if it were the occupier (f).

Advertising stations,

21. If land not otherwise occupied, including that part of a highway which is in front of buildings in course of construction, is used for advertisements, whether temporarily or permanently, the person who allows the land to be used by the advertising contractor or, if that person cannot be ascertained, the owner, is rateable therefor (g). Where the land is also occupied for other purposes, able A parson or vicar is not rateable for a payment made to him out of the proceeds of a tithe rentcharge which is not assigned to him (Frend v. Tolleshunt Knights (Churchwardens) (1859), 1 E. & E. 753).

(q) Poor Relief Act, 1601 (43 Eliz c 2), s 1 These persons are there described as "occupiers" of "tithes impropriate or appropriations of tithes" (see pp. 3, 4, ante), but they are in effect owners. The rateable value is, however, calculated as if they were occupiers; see p. 45, post.

22. Promoters of undertakings becoming possessed of land under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (i), though not liable as such promoters to be rated, are liable, until the works shall be completed and assessed, to make good the deficiency arising in the poor rate by reason of the land having been taken and used for the purposes of the works (j).

SECT. 4.—Owners Rateable in Place of Occupiers.

23. In respect of various classes of small property, the liability to the poor rate has been transferred by statute from the occupier, who would otherwise have been liable, to the owner (k).

Liability of owners.

24. In a parliamentary borough, where a house is wholly let out in apartments or lodgings not separately rated on the 15th August, 1867, the owner is rateable for the whole house without any reduction, even though the various apartments are separately rateable hereditaments (l) and are separately assessed in the valuation list (m).

Houses let in apartments.

25. The occupier of any hereditament, of whatever value, let to him for a term not exceeding three months, including a hereditament let from week to week at a week's notice, is entitled to deduct from his rent the poor rate paid by him (n).

(k) The Poor Relief Act, 1819 (59 Geo. 3, c. 12), s. 19, which dealt with this subject, has not been explicitly repealed; but the Representation of the People Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 102), and the Poor Rate Assessment and Collection Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 41) (see note (l), infra), repeal it by implication (West Ham (Churchwardens) v. Fourth City Mutual Building Society, [1892] 1 Q. B. 654).

26. In the case of a hereditament below a certain specified value (o), the owner may agree with the overseers for a term of not less than a year to pay the poor rates, whether the hereditament is occupied or not, and the overseers may allow him a commission not exceeding 25 per cent. on the amount of the rates (p). In a rural parish, the consent of the parish council or parish meeting is necessary (q); in an urban parish, that of the borough or district council (r) or of the vestry (s).

In the case of all hereditaments which are within the same limits of value (t), and which include a dwelling-house, the local authority above referred to may make an order for rating the owner instead of the occupier to all rates made after the date of the order, the owner receiving in any case an abatement of 15 per cent., and if he claims to be rated, whether the hereditament is occupied or not, a further abatement not exceeding 15 per cent. (u). The same authority may rescind the order after six months' notice (v).

27. For franchise purposes, allowances or deductions actually made, and purporting to have been made under the preceding provisions (w), are deemed to have been validly made (a).

(o) For the limits of value, see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII, p. 488, note (b).

(p) Poor Rate Assessment and Collection Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 41), s. 3. "Owner" is defined as "any person receiving or claiming the rent of the hereditament for his own use, or receiving the same for the use of any corporation aggregate, or of any public company, or of any landlord or lessee who shall be a minor, a married woman, or insane, or for the use of any person for whom he is acting as agent" (ibid, s. 20). Such an agreement cannot be made where the Poor Rate Assessment and Collection Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 41), s. 4 (see the text, infra), is in force, or vice versa (James v Woolwich Corporation (1903), Ryde and Konstam's Rating Appeals, 333). It is uncertain whether such an agreement will continue in force after the value of the hereditament has increased beyond the prescribed limit (Norwood Overseers v Saller, [1892] 2 Q. B. 118).

(q) Poor Rate Assessment and Collection Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 41), s. 3; Local Government Act, 1894 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 73), ss. 6, 19, and see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX, pp. 246, 247, 258, 259.

(r) If an order has been made under the Local Government Act, 1894 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 73), ss. 33 (1), (6), 34; and see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., p. 267.

(s) If no order has been made; see note (r), supra, and see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., p. 261.

(t) See note (o), supra. An order made under the Poor Rate Assessment and Collection Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 41), s. 4, applies only to hereditaments whose value is below the maximum when the particular rate is made (Norwood Overseers v Saller, [1892] 2 Q. B. 118).

(u) Poor Rate Assessment and Collection Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 41), s. 4. As to the forfeiture of the right to abatement by non payment of poor rate, see ibid., s. 5.

(v) Ibid, s. 4 (3). A resolution to make all agreements with owners under ibid, s. 3, has the effect of rescinding an order under ibid, s. 4 (James v Woolwich Corporation, supra).

(w) I.e., under the Poor Rate Assessment and Collection Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 41); see the text, supra.

28. Where any right of sporting (b) is let to a person other than the occupier of the land, either the owner or the lessee of the right is rated in respect of it, at the discretion of the persons who make the rate (c). If the right is enjoyed by the owner, not being the occupier of the land, the occupier may deduct from his rent the amount of the rate paid by him in respect of the rateable value due to the sporting right (d).

SECT. 5.—Exemptions of Persons otherwise Rateable.

30. There is a statutory exemption (f) from poor rate in favour of a society instituted exclusively (g) for the purposes of science, literature, or the fine arts, including music (h), and supported wholly or in part by annual voluntary contributions (i), provided (k) that

(c) Rating Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c 54), ss 6 (2), (4), 9.

(d) Ibid, ss 6 (1), (4), 9.

(e) Rating Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict c 54), ss 8, 9. Ibid, s 8, applies only to mines made rateable by that Act. Coal mines were already rateable under the Poor Relief Act, 1601 (43 Eliz c 2); and lessors of dues payable in kind had been already held rateable; see note (c), p 4, ante. The Rating Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict c 54), s. 8, has no operation where there is a specific contract on the part of the occupier to pay the rate in the event of the mine being made rateable, which was actually done by the Act. As to what is or is not such a specific contract, see Devonshire (Duke) v. Barrow Steel Co (1877), 2 Q. B. D. 286, (C. A.); Chaloner v. Bolckow (1878), 3 App. Cas. 933.

(f) Scientific Societies Act, 1843 (6 & 7 Vict c 36), s 1. For cases in which the exemption has been held to apply, see titles LITERARY AND SCIENTIFIC INSTITUTIONS, Vol. XIX., p. 205, note (e). For cases in which the exemption has been held not to apply, see ibid, St. Marylebone Vestry v. Zoological Society of London (1854), 3 E. & B. 807; R. v. Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society of London (1857), 30 L. T. (o. s.) 133; Liverpool Corporation v. West Derby Union (1905), 92 L. T. 467 (free library); and as to other particular societies, see notes (g)—(k), infra.

(g) This word is important (R. v. Cockburn (1852), 16 Q. B. 480 (where the United Service Institution was held not to be exempt), Inland Revenue Commissioners v. Forrest (1890), 15 App. Cas. 334, 352); and see title LITERARY AND SCIENTIFIC INSTITUTIONS, Vol. XIX., p. 205, notes (e), (g).

(h) Royal College of Music v. Westminster Vestry, [1898] 1 Q. B. 809, C. A. But a musical society the primary object of which is the amusement of the members is not exempt (R. v. Brandt (1851), 16 Q. B. 462).

(i) Contributions are not voluntary if a material equivalent of pecuniary value is received in return for them (Savoy Overseers, etc. v. Art Union of London, [1896] A. C. 296); but a grant made by Government or by a county council does not prevent the exemption applying (Hornsey School of Art v. Edmonton Union (1905), 2 Konstam's Rating Appeals, 393; 94 L. T. 203).

(k) R. v. Jones (1846), 8 Q. B. 719. But the exemption is not defeated by the possibility of a division of the property upon a dissolution of the society (Birmingham (Churchwardens) v. Shaw (1849), 10 Q. B. 868 (Birmingham New Library); R. v. Manchester Overseers (1851), 16 Q. B. 449 (Royal Manchester Institution)), nor by the sale of a member's share any division of money among the members is expressly prohibited by the laws of the society, and that the prescribed (l) certificate by the Chief Registrar of Friendly Societies is obtained (m).

The exemption applies only in respect of property occupied by the society for its own business and purposes (n), and does not apply if any part of the premises is sublet (o), unless that part is separately rated (p).

31. There is a statutory exemption in favour of churches, chapels, and premises exclusively appropriated to public religious worship (q). The exemption applies although some part of the premises is used for Sunday or infant schools, or for charitable education (r), but it does not apply to college chapels (s), or to burial grounds (t) acquired under the Church Building Acts (u).

Exemption may also be granted at their discretion by rating authorities to certain Sunday and ragged school premises which do not fall within the preceding exemption (a).

No person is liable to be rated in respect of any non-provided (Bradford Library Society v. Bradford (Churchwardens) (1858), 1 E. & E. 88; Liverpool Library v. Liverpool Corporation (1860), 5 H. & N. 526), nor by the fact that some of the members are paid for their services to the society (Royal College of Music v. Westminster Vestry, [1898] 1 Q. B. 809, C. A.).

(l) See title LITERARY AND SCIENTIFIC INSTITUTIONS, Vol. XIX, p. 207.

(m) The certificate is a condition precedent to the exemption being allowed; see the Scientific Societies Act, 1843 (6 & 7 Vict. c. 36), ss. 1—6: Friendly Societies Act, 1896 (59 & 60 Vict. c. 25), s. 2. As to appeal against the certificate, or from a refusal to grant a certificate, see title LITERARY AND SCIENTIFIC INSTITUTIONS, Vol. XIX, p. 208. The grant of a certificate is, however, not necessarily followed by the allowance of the exemption (R. v. Phillips (1848), 8 Q. B. 745); and see title LITERARY AND SCIENTIFIC INSTITUTIONS, Vol. XIX, p. 207.

Part II.—Poor Rate: Basis of Assessment.

SECT. 1.—Rateable Value General Principles.

SECT. 1.
Rateable
Value:
General Principles.Rateable value.Gross estimated rental.

42. The poor rate is assessed upon the "rateable value" of the hereditament (b), that is to say, upon a sum estimated to represent the rent at which the hereditament might reasonably be expected to let from year to year, free of (c) all usual tenant's rates and taxes and tithe commutation rentcharge, if any, and deducting therefrom the probable average annual cost of the repairs, insurance, and other expenses, if any, necessary to maintain the hereditament in a state to command the rent (d). "The gross estimated rental" is estimated in the same way, but without any deduction for repairs, insurance, or expenses necessary for maintenance (e); it thus forms a step in the ascertainment of the rateable value (f).

Derby Sanitary Authority* (1885), 16 Q B D 163, "for the education of the poor exclusively," Hadfield v. Whitehaven Union Assessment Committee (1905), 70 J P 89, and as to "general purposes rate," see Burrup v. London and South Western Rail Co. (1890), 64 L T 112. The poor rate is a "public" tax (R. v. Scott (1790), 3 Term Rep 602), and the county rate is a "parochial" tax (R. v. Aylesbury with Walton Overseers (1848), 9 Q B 261), and see title CHARITIES, Vol. IV, p. 213

Matters to be considered in ascertaining rental value:
(i) as regards
tenant;

43. In order to estimate the rent which would be paid from year to year, it is necessary to take into account all the persons who might possibly take the hereditament at a rent for such a term (g), including the person actually in occupation, even though he happens to be also the owner of the hereditament (h). The actual rent is not the measure of value (i); but a rent from year to year recently fixed as between strangers, and including the whole of the consideration proceeding from the tenant for the occupation of the hereditament, may be the best evidence of rateable value (k). If what is called "rent" includes a payment made for something other than the occupation of the hereditament, a correction must be made in order to arrive at the rateable value from the so-called rent (l).

(ii) as regards term,

44. Although the tenant is assumed to take the hereditament only from year to year, he is supposed to have a reasonable prospect of continuing in occupation (m).

be let from year to year, if the landlord undertook to pay for the repairs and insurance, represents the gross estimated rental, and the rent at which it would be let from year to year, if the tenant undertook to pay for the repairs and insurance, represents, subject to a sinking fund for renewals, the rateable value (R v Wells (1867), L. R. 2 Q. B. 542). The deductions on account of repairs, insurance and expenses necessary for maintenance, being the difference between "gross estimated rental" and "rateable value," are often called "statutable deductions"; as to these, see, further, p. 30, post. In connection with special kinds of property, e.g., railways, the rateable value is often ascertained first, and the amount of the deductions added thereto, in order to ascertain the gross estimated rental, see, generally, pp. 30 et seq., post.

(h) R v London School Board (1886), 17 Q. B. D. 738, C. A.; London County Council v Brith (Churchwardens) and Dartford Union Assessment Committee, [1893] A. C. 562. An occupying owner must, however, be taken into account as a possible tenant, and the rent that he would give as tenant may often (as in the case of a country mansion) be arrived at on considerations quite different from those which would actuate him in fixing a price for the purchase of the hereditament; see p. 28, post.

(i) R v London School Board (1886), 17 Q. B. D. 738, C. A.; see R v Skingle (1798), 7 Term Rep. 549, Hayward v Brinkworth Overseers (1864), 10 L. T. 608.

(k) If, however, a premium is paid for the tenancy of the hereditament, or if some other sum is in fact periodically paid for the occupation besides what is called the rent (Pullen v. St. Naviour's Union, [1900] L. Q. B. 138), or if a burdensome covenant is imposed upon the tenant (Davies v. Seisdon Union, [1908] A. C. 315), some addition must be made to the rent reserved before the rateable value can be arrived at from it.

(l) As where flats or property let by the week are let on the condition that the landlord pays the rates and taxes (see p. 29, post), a very frequent case, or where the "rent" includes the water rate (Smith v. Birmingham (Churchwardens, etc.) (1888), 22 Q. B. D. 211; not appealed against on this point). No correction is, however, admissible in the case of such property on account of its standing empty or of the rent being irrecoverable (Smith v. Birmingham (Churchwardens, etc.) (1888), 22 Q. B. D. 211, 703, C. A.). As to the nature of "rent" and as to payments which are not "rent," see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., pp. 464-466.

SECT I
Rateable
Value:
General Principles.

45. The rent which a tenant could afford to give is calculated with reference to the hereditament in its existing physical condition (n), and to the mode in which it is actually used (o). A continuance of the existing conditions is prima facie assumed (p).

46. The rent is assumed to be given for the accommodation that the hereditament affords, and where the accommodation afforded by the hereditament is required for the carrying on of a gainful trade, that fact must be taken into account in ascertaining the rent that would be given (q).

Where the trade could be equally well carried on upon some other hereditament of the same class, there is no need to inquire into the profits actually made (a), but where the trade can only be carried on upon the particular hereditament, as in the cases of licensed property (b), railways (c), tramways (d), waterworks (e), gasworks (f), electric undertakings (g), mines (h), harbours (i), and other

(iii) as regards condition of premises;

(iv) as regards accommodation afforded. When it is unnecessary or necessary to inquire into profits made by use of premises.

(n) R. v. Grand Junction Rail. Co (1844), 4 Q. B. 18; Sculcoates Union v. Kingston-upon-Hull Dock Co, [1895] C. A. 136. If the land has buildings upon it and is occupied it must be valued with them (see, e.g., R. v. Aberystwith Overseers (1808), 10 East, 354), but land must not be valued at the rent at which it would be let if more, or more valuable, buildings were erected upon it (R. v. Gardner (1774), 1 Cowp. 79, Kempe v. Spence (1779), 2 Wm. Bl. 1244, R. v. Mast (1795), 6 Term Rep. 154; R. v. St. Luke's Hospital (1760), 2 Burr. 1053, 1064, East London Rail. Co. (Directors, etc.) v. Whitechurch (1874), L. R. 7 H. L. 81, 86). Where the value of the land proceeds from the right to remove a portion of the soil, the rateable value is the rent which would be given for the land so far as it is workable and unexhausted, as in the case of a coal mine (R. v. Bedworth (Inhabitants) (1807), 8 East, 387; Tyne Coal Co. v. Wallend Overseers (1877), 46 L. J. (M. C.) 185), of a brickfield (R. v. Westbrook, R. v. Everist (1847), 10 Q. B. 178); or of a gravel pit (Farnham Flint, Gravel and Sand Co. v. Farnham Union, [1901] 1 K. B. 272, C. A.).

(o) Skuley v. Castleton Overseers (1864), 5 B. & S. 505, Harter v. Salford Overseers (1865), 6 B. & S. 591. The former case was distinguished upon the facts in Hoyle and Jackson v. Oldham Poor Law Union Assessment Committee and Oldham Township (Churchwardens, etc.), [1894] 2 Q. B. 372, C. A. (where a strike was held not to have affected the rateable value of certain mills); but the rule as stated in the text, supra, was not doubted.

(p) Skuley v. Castleton Overseers, supra, R. v. Fletton Overseers (1861), 3 E. & E. 450.

(q) R. v. Grand Junction Rail. Co, supra.

(a) As in the case of a small shop, or a barrister's chambers (Mersey Docks v. Liverpool (1873), L. R. 9 Q. B. 84, per BLACKBURN, J., at p. 97, R. v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1874), L. R. 9 Q. B. 134, per BLACKBURN, J., at p. 144, see R. v. North Aylesford Union Guardians (1872), 37 J. P. 148). In such cases evidence of rateable value is found in the rent actually given for the hereditament, or in the rents prevailing for similar property in the neighbourhood; and an inquiry into profits is not admissible (Cartwright v. Sculcoates Union, [1900] A. C. 150, 157, 158). Neither do the profits made constitute an element in estimating the rateable value of factories; but here actual rents are rarely available, and other methods of valuation are employed; see p. 28, post.

RATES AND RATING.

Sect. 1. Rateable Value; General Principles.

special kinds of property (k), the actual profits made upon the hereditament are among the matters which an intending tenant would take into consideration, and are therefore used as a basis upon which to calculate the rateable value (a). Where the actual profits are thus looked at, the inquiry must embrace the whole of the profits made upon the hereditament, although a part of them does not enure to the actual occupier (b).

Capital value as evidence.

* 47. Where neither actual rents nor the profits of trade are available as evidence for the estimation of rateable value, a percentage of the capital value of the hereditament is in some cases taken as evidence, although not necessarily conclusive for that purpose (c). When such a course is taken, the capital value is the value for which a hereditament equally fit for the same purpose as the one to be valued could be erected on the site, and not the actual cost, nor the depreciated selling value, of the particular hereditament in question.

Machinery and plant.

48. The actual equipment of a hereditament with machinery and plant must not be left out of account (d), even though the whole

Great Central Railway*, [1909] A C 78). It has been applied in ascertaining the rateable value of a lighthouse (Lancaster (Port Commissioners) v. Barrow-in-Furness Overseers, [1897] 1 Q B. 166).

(d) This principle applies whether the rateable value is arrived at by a percentage on capital value, or by a mere estimate of rent; and was laid down with regard to a steelyard (R. v. St Nicholas, Gloucester (1783), 1 Bott's Poor Laws by Const, 163), to a cotton carding machine (R. v. Hogg (1787), 1 Term Rep 721), to steam engines etc. (R v. Birmingham and Staffordshire Gas Light Co. (1837), 6 Ad. & El. 634), to machinery in ironworks (R v. Guest (1838), 7 Ad & El. 951), to cranes and other machines used for dock purposes (R v Southampton Dock Co. (1851), 14 Q B. 567; *London and India Docks Joint Committee v. 49. The probable rent is to be estimated upon the assumption that the tenant pays all usual tenant's rates and taxes (f): if, therefore, the landlord pays these, a deduction must be made from the actual rent when using it as a basis for calculating the gross estimated rental (g); and for this purpose the amount to be deducted (h) must be ascertained irrespective of the fact that the landlord receives an allowance or abatement (i). The land tax (k) is not a tenant's tax, nor is the income tax (l); but a special rate (m), levied for protection against damage by flood or erosion, may be a tenant's rate

(e) Kirby v Hunslet Assessment Committee, [1906] A. C. 43. This decision, which was concerned with a small engineering works in which none of the machinery and plant was attached to the freehold, abolished the restrictions which were thought to have been imposed upon the principle stated in the text, supra, by the decisions in R v Halstead Overseers (1867), 32 J. P. 118, Chidley v West Ham (Churchwardens) (1874), 32 L. T. 486, Chockett v Northampton Assessment Committee (1902), 72 L. J. (K. B.) 320. The method by which the principle laid down in Kirby v Hunslet Assessment Committee, supra, should be fully applied in practice is still undetermined.

(g) Parochial Assessments Act, 1836 (6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96), s. 1; see p. 25, ante. The poor rate itself (Hackney and Lamberhurst Tithe Commutation Rent Charges (1858), E. B. & E. 1, 47) and the other rates described in this title, with the exception of special sewers rates (see p. 112, post) and private improvement rates (see p. 98, post), are tenant's rates. A water "rate" is not a rate, strictly speaking, but if included in the rent should be deducted before arriving at the gross estimated rental (Smith v Birmingham (Churchwardens, etc.) (1889), 22 Q. B. D. 211, 703, C. A. - see p. 26, ante); compare E v. Bilston (1865), L. R. 1 Q. B. 18; see p. 30, post.

(h) The amount to be deducted must, of course, be calculated by a proportion sum with reference to the rateable value, which it is the object of the calculation to fix (Tyne Improvement Commissioners v Chilton Overseers (1862), 32 L. J. (M. C.) 192).

In calculating the rateable value from the gross estimated rental, deductions must be made for the probable average annual cost of repairs and insurance, and other expenses necessary to maintain the hereditament in a state to command the rent (n). Such expenses include a sinking fund for the ultimate renewal of the perishable portions of the hereditament (o), whether such a sum is actually set aside or not (p), and some special rates, for example, a sewers rate (q), or, in valuing a fishery, a rate for fishery protection (r); but they do not include a water rate paid by the landlord (s), or the compensation charge imposed in respect of certain licensed premises (t).

Tithe commutation rentcharge (u) and any rentcharge equivalent thereto (v) must be deducted.

50. In order to ascertain the rateable value of that portion of a railway undertaking (w) which is situated in a given parish, the whole undertaking is divided (x) into those portions which are directly productive of profit and those portions which are thought to be only indirectly productive thereof (a). The former portions consist tax, or as an expense necessary to maintain the hereditament (R v. Adames (1832), 4 B. & Ad. 61; E v. Hall Dare (1864), 5 B. & S. 785; E v. Gainsborough Union (1871), L. R. 7 Q. B. 64). But the deduction, where the rate is not deductible as a tenant's rate, is only admissible in respect of so much of the rate as is levied for the protection of the particular hereditament that is rated (Green v. Newport Union, Stead v. Newport Union, [1909] A. C. 35). The authority of E v. Vange (Inhabitants) (1842), 3 Q. B. 242, is considerably diminished by the decision in Green v. Newport Union, Stead v. Newport Union, supra.

(x) This division is made for purposes of valuation only; there is no objection to the whole of the railway undertaking in one parish being shown in a single entry in the valuation list and poor rate, though station hotels should probably be assessed separately (North Eastern Railway v. York Union, [1900] 1 Q. B. 733). As to the valuation list, see pp. 47 et seq., post.
(a) R. v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1846), 6 Q. B. 179; R. v. Eastern Counties Rail. Co. (1863), 4 B. & S. 58. The distinction between the two classes of works, which is somewhat artificial, had already been set up in

of the running lines (b), the latter of the sidings, the stations and the rest of the undertaking (c).

51. The stations, sidings and other indirectly productive portions are rated in the parish in which they are situate, and are usually valued by putting a percentage upon their present structural value (d).

52. The rateable value of a railway is ascertained in ordinary circumstances by reference to the ability to carry on a gainful trade thereon (e); and, as it scarcely ever happens that a rent is paid for that portion of a railway line which lies within a given parish, the calculation of the rateable value of an ordinary running line (f) is made upon the basis of the profits which can be earned by the parochial portion of the railway (g). The receipts earned in the particular parish form the starting point of the calculation (h).

53. The gross receipts actually earned in the parish must be specially calculated (i), the calculation being made for the latest

(b) The "running lines" practically comprise all those lines whose primary and principal purpose is the carrying of traffic forwards to its destination; and only those lines whose primary and principal purpose is the waiting and marshalling of traffic are reckoned as "sidings" for rating purposes (*Stockport Union Assessment Committee v London and North Western Rail. (c) Signal boxes (Midland Railway v Pontefract Assessment Committee, [1901] 2 K B 189) and signals and levers (*Great Northern Rail Co v. (d) R. v North Staffordshire Rail Co (1860), 3 E & F. 392. This method of valuation is described at p 28, ante In valuing stations, the value of advertisement hoardings (see pp 18, 19, ante), bookstalls (see p 13, ante), and coal merchants' yards (p 13, ante) are included or excluded according as the railway company itself is or is not rateable in respect of them. The value of station hotels and refreshment rooms is usually excluded (North Eastern Railway v. York Union, [1900] 1 Q. B. 733) As to the method of valuing the latter, see Clark v. Fisherton-Angar (1880), 6 Q B. D 139; see p 28, ante As to a station into which a second company has running powers, see p. 35, post. (h) The practice on this point is different in the valuation of waterworks (see p 35, post) and gasworks (see p. 35, post), though otherwise the principles of valuation are the same

(i) It is not correct to take the total gross receipts of the whole system and allocate them to the parish according to mileage (R. v. London, Brighton and South Coast Rail. Co. (1851), 15 Q. B. 313). The fares paid for the period, prior to the date of the rate, for which this can be conveniently done (k). The receipts only include tolls actually taken (l) in respect of transit over the line that is rated (m); and they include so much of the terminal charge as is attributable to the parochial portion of the line upon a mileage apportionment (n). The gross receipts may be proved by the production of written statements on behalf of the company, subject to verification and to cross-examination (o).

*54 From the gross receipts earned in the parish, a portion, allocated to the particular parish, of the working expenses throughout the system must be deducted. These expenses include the actual expenses of running the trains and administering the traffic, the expenses of repairing the rolling stock (p), the expenses of renewing, or providing for the depreciation of, the rolling stock (q), and the Government duty on passenger tickets (r).

Rates upon the rateable value ultimately arrived at have also to be deducted. No deduction of income tax is admissible (s).

transit of passengers, and the freights paid for the transit of parcels, goods, and minerals, over the parochial portion of the line are estimated by apportioning according to miles the total fares and freights actually paid for the transit of those passengers and those parcels, goods, and minerals. Where there is a terminal passenger or goods station in the parish, the length of line over which the transit is made in the parish is usually calculated to the buffer stops; but in certain circumstances it is not wrong to take an average point in the parish and calculate the distances to that point (Great Northern Rail Co v. Edmonton Union (1905), 1 Konstan's Rating Appeals 186, 197, 199, 207, 208). If empty wagons return by another line, a deduction should be made from the gross receipts in the parish for the expense of returning the empty wagons (Great Northern Rail Co. v. Hunslet Union (1911), 105 L. T. 544).

(k) R. v. London, Brighton and South Coast Rail Co. (1851), 15 Q. B. 313, 367.

(l) And nothing can be added for tolls which the company has power to take but do not (R. v. Stockton and Darlington Rail Co (1863), 8 L. T. 422), but where another company enjoys running powers toll-free over the line, a sum is added for the value of those powers; see p 35, post. Glandford Brigg Union Guardians* (1874), 2 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 53). As to terminal charges, see title CARRIERS, Vol. IV., p 83. Cartage and delivery charges do not form a portion of the gross receipts earned by means of the line, and are therefore excluded (Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Rail. Co. v. Cuxtor Union Guardians, Same v. Glandford Brigg Union Guardians, supra, compare Buckfastleigh and Totnes Rail. Co. v. South Devon Rail Co. (1874), 1 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 321).

Wigan Union Guardians* (1876), 2 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 240. As to the liability of a railway company for maintenance of rolling stock, see title RAILWAYS AND CANALS, Vol. XXIII., pp. 690 et seq.

(s) Compare R. v. Southampton Dock Co. (1851), 14 Q. B. 557.

A deduction is made for a portion, allocated to the parish, of the rent hypothetically paid for the use of the stations and other indirectly productive portions of the whole system, and rates payable in respect thereof (t).

A loss incurred upon a branch line cannot be deducted (u), nor, in calculating the profits of a main line, is a deduction to be made in respect of such portion of them as is due to the use of branch lines as feeders (a).

55. The amount remaining after the foregoing deductions have been made represents the net profit divisible between landlord and tenant. The portion of that amount which the hypothetical tenant would require to retain as his own share of the profits is calculated by estimating the amount of capital required to work the whole system (b), allocating a portion of the last-mentioned amount to the particular parish, and putting such a percentage thereon as is considered sufficient to remunerate the tenant, to indemnify him for the risk, and to enable him to pay interest on borrowed capital (c).

The portion of the net profits which the hypothetical tenant would not require to retain as his own share thereof represents the sum which he might be expected to pay as rent for the whole undertaking, that is, the gross estimated rental. From it must be made the statutable deductions (d) in order to arrive at the rateable value.

(t) This deduction is made irrespective of the existence or non-existence of stations and other indirectly productive portions of the line in the parish, for the reason that trade cannot be carried on upon the running line unless the system is provided with stations, sidings and the like.

(u) R v Great Western Rail Co, supra.

(a) Great Central Railway v Banbury Union, Sheffield Union v Great Central Railway, [1909] A. C. 78. There is, in general, no addition to the rateable value of branch lines on this account, see Great Central Railway v Banbury Union, Sheffield Union v Great Central Railway, supra, and see p. 34, post.

(b) This is usually done by valuing the rolling stock and other chattels actually used by the company, including what is necessary as a standby, at their actual value at the time (R v Great Western Rail Co, supra, R v North Staffordshire Rail Co (1860), 3 L. & E. 592). Machinery which forms part of a rateable hereditament ought not to be included (R v North Staffordshire Rail Co, supra, following R v Southampton Dock Co (1851), 14 Q. B. 587, and see p. 29, ante). Since the decision in Kirby v Hunslet Assessment Committee, [1906] A. C. 43, where Lord MacNAGHTEN, at p. 50, expressly based his opinion on R v Southampton Dock Co, supra, it is difficult to say how much machinery ought to be included in the tenant's capital. But it seems clear that no such machinery ought to be included where it has already been included in the assessment of the indirectly productive portions of the railway undertaking. It is usual to include in the tenant's capital a sum for cash in hand or floating capital, but it is a question of fact whether this should be allowed or not (Great Eastern Rail Co v Haughley (1866), L. R. 1 Q. B. 666).

(c) The amount of the percentage is a question of fact (R v Great Western Rail Co, supra), 17½ per cent has been a figure frequently fixed of late years, but the most recent decisions of quarter sessions have fixed 16½ per cent and 15 per cent.

Application
of parochial

56. Where the actual average expenses of the repairs and maintenance or renewal of the line in the parish can be ascertained, this is the proper way of estimating the statutable deductions (e). The whole of the expenses in respect of a bridge or tunnel are usually deducted in the parish in which it stands (f). A renewal fund is allowed, although the company may not actually set one aside (g).

57. A branch line, or link line, forming part of a large railway system is rated upon a basis only of the profits actually earned upon the branch line in the parish, although a great part of the commercial value of the branch line consists in its use as a feeder to the rest of the system (h); but a branch line for the tenancy of which several companies would compete, or which forms a link between several systems, is not necessarily rated upon that strictly limited basis (i).

(e) Sometimes, however, the expenses incurred over the whole system, or over a section of it which includes the parochial portion, are taken and allocated to the parish according to train-miles run. They are not to be apportioned according to linear miles (London and North Western Rail Co v Harborne Overseers (1870), 34 J. P. 644).

(f) In spite of what is said to the contrary in R v Great Western Rail Co (1852), 15 Q. B. 1085, 1089. As to the liability of a railway company in respect of bridges and tunnels, see title RAILWAYS AND CANALS, Vol. XXIII, pp. 655 et seq., 686.

(h) Great Central Railway v Banbury Union, Sheffield Union v Great Central Railway, [1909] A. C. 78, which adopted the "parochial principle" laid down in R v London, Brighton and South Coast Rail Co (1851), 15 Q. B. 313, and followed and affirmed the principles laid down with regard to branch and link lines in the following cases, namely:—Newmarket Rail Co v St Andrew the Less, Cambridge Overseers (1854), 3 E. & B. 94; Great Eastern Rail Co v Haughley (1866), L. R. 1 Q. B. 666; R v Llantysant (1869), L. R. 4 Q. B. 354. In Great Central Railway v Banbury Union, Sheffield Union v Great Central Railway, supra, the House of Lords declined to follow South Eastern Rail Co v Dorking Overseers (1854), 3 E. & B. 491, and the line of cases cited therewith, see note (i), infra.

(i) Lines of the classes here described were expressly excepted from the principle laid down in Great Central Railway v Banbury Union, Sheffield Union v Great Central Railway, supra, per Lord LOREBURN, L. C., at p. 87, per Lord DUNEDIN, at p. 94. Presumably, therefore, in valuing lines of this class it is permissible to have regard to the element of competition, the value of the line as a link or feeder, and to such matters as rent paid for the line, as was done in R v Eastern Counties Rail Co (1851), 23 L. J. (M. C.) 96, n.; South Eastern Rail Co v Dorking Overseers, supra; London and North Western Rail Co v Cannock Overseers (1863), 9 L. T. 325, R v London and North Western Rail Co (1874) L. P. 318; London and North Western Rail Co v. Thrapston Union Assessment Committee (1912), 29 T. L. R. 21. It was decided, however, in Great Central Rail. Co. v. Banbury Union, Sheffield Union v Great Central Railway, supra, that the evidence of structural cost was not admissible in ascertaining the value of a link line. In North and South Western Junction Rail Co. v. Brentford Union Assessment Committee (1888), 13 App. Cas. 592, it was laid down

58. Where one railway company is in rateable occupation (k) of a line over which another company has running powers, and tolls are paid by the latter company to the former, the tolls are included as part of the gross receipts (l). Where the latter company makes to the occupying company a fixed annual payment, that sum is brought into the account, whether or no it represents the true value of the running powers (m). Where no payment is made, a sum which represents the value of the running powers must be brought into the account (n).

59. In calculating the rateable value of that portion of a gas (o) or water (p) undertaking which is situated in a parish, it is the practice first to ascertain the rateable value of the whole undertaking and afterwards to apportion the rateable value so ascertained amongst the various parishes concerned (q), care being taken to see that the aggregate rateable value of the parts is not greater than that of the whole (r).

60. The valuation of the undertaking is based upon the profits which are capable of being made and are made thereby (s). that the supposed demand of an exorbitant rent by the owner of a portion of a railway line from the tenant of the rest can never be an element in the rateable value of the portion in question. In London and North Western Rail Co v Amptill Union (1907), 2 Konstam's Rating Appeals 378, C A, it was held that evidence of a rent fixed more than fifty years before the making of the rate was, by reason of that interval of time, too remote to be admissible, and in assessing a line of the classes excepted by the decision in Great Central Railway v. Banbury Union, Sheffield Union v. Great Central Railway, [1909] A C. 78, the inquiry must at any rate be limited by the two cases last cited.

this purpose include the actual payments for water (u) or gas and any water rates received (v).

61. When the gross receipts have been ascertained, the rateable value of the undertaking is calculated by making deductions of the same kind as are made in calculating the rateable value of the parochial portion of a running line of railway (a), save that there is no deduction for a "station fund" (b). In the case of a water undertaking, the "tenant's share" is, however, frequently estimated by applying a percentage to the gross receipts, on the theory that a tenant would anticipate retaining such a percentage thereof for himself (c). In the case of a gas company (d) it is proper to include in the tenant's capital the value of the meters (e), as well as of "slot" meters, stoves and fittings, where the company conducts its business by the use and hiring out of those chattels (f).

62. When the rateable value of the whole undertaking has been estimated, it is necessary, in order to ascertain the rateable value of the portion situate in a given parish, first to deduct the rateable value of the indirectly productive portion of the whole undertaking (a) the remainder is the rateable value of the directly productive

(u) R v Longwood Overseers (1852), 17 Q B 871 Liverpool Corporation v Waverline Overseers (1875), 2 Ex D 55, n. 1, Worcester Corporation v Droitwich Assessment Committee (1876), 2 Ex D 49, (C A). These cases laid down that where the charges that could be made by a local authority were restricted by statute, it was wrong to add anything on account of the larger charges that might be made by an unrestricted tenant. In consequence, it was held that the effect of such a restriction might be to reduce the rateable value of such an undertaking to nil (Peterborough Corporation v Stamford Union (1883), 31 W R 949). It is doubtful, however, if any of these cases can stand in view of the subsequent decisions in West Bromwich School Board v West Bromwich Overseers (1884), 13 Q B D 929, R v London School Board (1886), 17 Q B D. 738, (C A), London County Council v Erith (Churchwardens) and Dartford Union Assessment Committee, [1893] A (C) 562 (see p 16, ante), that schools and sewage works, carried on by local authorities who could make no profit, were rateable at their full value to an ordinary hypothetical tenant. E v Kentmere (Inhabitants) (1851), 17 Q. B. 551, appears to be more in accord with the later decisions.

(v) Dewsbury and Heckmondwike Waterworks Board v Penistone Union Assessment Committee (1886), 17 Q B D 384, (C A). But a sum raised by the general district rate and paid into the waterworks account cannot be included in the gross receipts for this purpose (Merthyr Tydfil Local Board of Health v. Merthyr Tydfil Union Assessment Committee, [1891] 1 Q. B 186).

(b) As to the "station fund," see p 33, ante. The value of the indirectly productive works (as to which see p 30, ante, pp 37, 38, post) becomes important, however, on the question of apportionment, see the text, infra.

mains and pipes throughout the undertaking, and this is apportioned among the various parishes according to the proportion which the gross or net receipts earned in each parish bears to the gross or net receipts earned on the whole undertaking (h). The rateable value of the indirectly productive portion situated in each parish is separately ascertained (i) and added to the value of the directly productive portion in the parish ascertained as above mentioned (j).

63. The indirectly productive portions of a water undertaking include reservoirs, buildings, pumping stations, and those mains which are used for the transmission of the water to the distributing mains and service pipes (k). The rateable value of these portions is ordinarily ascertained upon the principle of applying a percentage to their structural or capital value (l). Where the indirectly productive works have been constructed in excess of existing requirements in order to provide for future needs, it is proper to take this into account either by applying a lower percentage to the capital value (m) or by applying the full percentage to a reduced capital value (n). The capital value for the present purpose includes expenditure incurred for the reinstatement of persons whose reinstatement was a condition of acquiring the land (o).

Where land containing a spring (p) or an intake from a river (q) or serving as a gathering ground (r) is used for the supply of water in another parish, the additional value due to such user must be included in ascertaining the rateable value of that land.

(h) R v Mile End Old Town Overseers (1847), 10 Q. B. 208, and the cases cited therewith in note (g), p. 35, ante, are the authorities for this process. Whether the gross or net receipts shall be taken as the basis of apportionment is a question of fact for quarter sessions (Metropolitan Water Board v. City of London Union Assessment Committee (1909), 73 J. P. 142).

(j) After this process has been carried out there is usually no objection to the whole parochial part of the undertaking being assessed in one entry, see, e.g., R v West Middlesex Waterworks Co (1859), 1 E. & E. 716; compare North Eastern Railway v York Union, [1900] 1 Q. B. 733.

64. The indirectly productive portions of a gas undertaking include, besides those portions of the mains which carry the gas to the distributing mains and service pipes, the gasworks as equipped with gasholders, retorts, purifiers, steam engines and boilers (s). Their rateable value is ascertained in the same way as that of similar portions of water undertakings (t).

65. Undertakings for the supply of electrical power or light (u) are valued, and their rateable value is apportioned among various parishes, upon similar principles to those which are applied to gas undertakings (x). It is admissible to apply similar principles to electrical tramway undertakings (a).

SUB-SECT. 3. Canals.

66. The rateable value of a canal (b) is calculated upon the same principles, speaking generally, as are applied to a railway (c) or a waterworks (d) undertaking. The rateable value of the portion in any particular parish may be ascertained separately (e) upon

(s) R v. Lee (1866), L R 1 Q. B. 241, where the machinery and plant described in the text, supra, were held not to form part of the tenant's capital. The remarks made at p. 29, ante, as to the difficulty since the decision in Kirby v. Hunslet Assessment Committee, [1906] A C. 43, of determining what portions of the equipment are to be taken into account in rating a railway undertaking, and what portions to be included in the tenant's capital, appear to apply equally to gasworks.

(t) See p. 37, ante, and for an example of a gasworks valuation, see R v. Lee, supra.

(u) See title ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER, Vol. XII, pp. 541 et seq.

(x) This has been the practice at quarter sessions, and it has not been challenged in the superior courts.

(a) At first sight, tramways appear to have more in common with railways than with waterworks or gasworks; but where it was found impossible, owing to the overlapping of fares, to ascertain with sufficient accuracy the gross receipts in the parish, a valuation of the whole undertaking and an apportionment of rateable value to the parish, which had been made practically according to the methods employed with regard to waterworks and gasworks, were held not to be inappropriate: the apportionment having been made according to the numbers of car-miles run in each parish (London United Tramways (1901), Ltd v. Brentford Union (1907), 2 Konstam's Rating Appeals, 410; 71 J. P. 249, C. A.). This difficulty in ascertaining the gross receipts probably arises with regard to most tramway undertakings. For a valuation of tramways on somewhat similar methods to those which are applied to railways see McIlbourne Tramway and Omnibus Co. v. Fitzroy Corporation, [1901] A C. 153, P. C.

(b) In the absence of any special statutory provision (see p. 24, ante), the land is to be valued as used for a canal (R v. St. Peter the Great, Worcester Inhabitants) (1826), 5 B. & C. 473). As to canal undertakings, see title RAILWAYS AND CANALS, Vol. XXIII, pp. 779 et seq.

(c) See pp. 30 et seq., ante. A rent received by a canal company as owners, and not as occupiers of the canal undertaking, was excluded from consideration in R. v. Lapeley Overseers (1868), 9 B. & S. 568; compare the cases as to railways cited in notes (h), (i), p. 34, ante.

(d) See p. 35, ante.

(e) Because the receipts earned in the parish afford a measure of the rent which a tenant would pay for the parochial portion of the canal (R. v. Milton (1819), 3 B. & Ald. 112; *R. v. (f) In either case the gross receipts must be actually ascertained for the parish; it is not sufficient to fix a figure for them by a mere apportionment, whether according to the acreage or otherwise, of the gross receipts earned by the whole undertaking (R v Kingswinford (Inhabitants) (1827), 7 B & C 236, the principle of which case has been followed and affirmed in connection with railways; see p 31, ante, R v Chaplin (1831), 1 B. & Ad 926, R v Woking (Inhabitants) (1835), 4 Ad & El 40)

(u) Such dues are tolls in gross, and not rateable (R v Nicholson (1810), 12 East, 330; see p. 8, ante); hence their exclusion in rating a harbour or dock (Lewis v Swansea Overseers (1855), 5 E & B 508, Ipswich Dock Commissioners v St Peter's, Ipswich, Overseers (1866), 7 B & S 310; Faversham Navigation Commissioners v Faversham Union Assessment Committee (1867), 31 J P 822, New Shoreham Harbour Commissioners v Lancing (1870), 1 L R 5 Q B 489, R v Berwick Assessment Committee, supra, Blyth Harbour Commissioners v Newsham and South Blyth (Churchwardens) and Tynemouth Union Assessment Committee, [1894] 2 Q B 293, 675, C A, Swansea Harbour Trustees v Swansea Union Assessment Committee, supra) A fortiori, dues of this kind paid in respect of ships which do not in fact enter a dock or other portion in rateable occupation are excluded (R v Bristol Dock Co (1841), 1 Q. B. 535, R v Kingston-upon-Hull Dock Co (1845), 7 Q B 2)

Dues of the nature described in the text, supra, are often called "harbour dues" or "harbour rates", but the fact that dues are imposed under such a name is not necessarily conclusive of their nature; and a due called a "harbour rate" in a special Act may, nevertheless, be leviable in respect of entry into a particular dock (Swansea Harbour Trustees v Swansea Union Assessment Committee, supra)

(a) Questions arising upon such valuations have been decided in R v Dowlais Iron Co (1868), 10 B & S 208, R v Rhymney Rail Co. (1869), 1 R 4 Q B 276 (see p. 28, ante); *Sutton Harbour Improvement Co v. (b) See pp 32, 33, ante. The deduction for working expenses includes directors' fees and the expenses of working a tug (R v Southampton Docks Co. (1851), 14 Q B 587) Where, however, a statutory undertaking is managed by unpaid commissioners, no deduction can be made for imaginary directors' fees (R. v. Tyne Improvement Commissioners (1862), 6 L. T. 489)

(c) The tenant's capital includes the value of a tug (R v. Southampton Docks Co., supra); but not of fixed plant, (see p 33, ante), nor of "travelling" hydraulic cranes (London and India Docks v. Poplar Union (1900), 83 L. T. 371)

SECT. 2.
Rateable
Value of Special Classes of

71. Where a harbour or dock undertaking extends into more than one parish, the rateable value of a parochial portion is determined upon a basis of the gross receipts earned in the parish, where these can be ascertained (e).

Application
of parochial principle Warehouses.

72 Warehouses in fact occupied by the occupiers of the docks, but not necessarily so occupied, are rated separately from the docks (f).

SUB-SECT. 5.—Licensed Property

73. In valuing licensed property (g) it is necessary to take into account the value due to the existence of the licence, because the trade which the occupier is thereby permitted to carry on can only be carried on upon the premises rated (h). Consequently, an increase in the amount of licence duty which a tenant of the house must bear will, unless there are countervailing circumstances, have the effect of decreasing the rateable value of the house (i).

Consideration of existence of licence.

Where the occupier is bound by a "tying" covenant to take his liquor, or some part of it, from the landlord, the "tied" house is to be valued as if it were not affected by any such covenant (j).

(e) Mersey Docks v Liverpool (1872), L R. 7 Q B 643, Sculcoates Union v Kingston-upon-Hull Dock Co, [1895] A C 136 There appears to be no objection to the rateable value in such cases being determined in practice by first ascertaining the rateable value of the whole undertaking and then apportioning the rateable value so ascertained according to the gross or net receipts earned in the parish, as is done in the case of waterworks (see p 35, ante) Where the gross receipts in the parish cannot be approximately ascertained, it appears that the rateable value may legitimately be apportioned according to acreage (R v Kingston-upon-Hull Dock Co (1852), 18 Q B 325).

SECT. 2.
Rateable
Value of Special Classes of Property.

Evidence of trade done and of outgoings

The simplest method of valuing a public-house is by ascertaining the rents which are prevalent in the neighbourhood for "free" houses; but "free" houses are comparatively few, and it is therefore rarely possible to apply this test. Evidence of the trade actually done and of the profits made by the actual occupier is admissible in order to ascertain the rateable value (k). If evidence of the gross receipts is given, an appellant must be allowed to give evidence of the outgoings which have been found necessary to earn those receipts (l).

SUB-SECT. 6 — Mines, Brickfields, and Cemeteries

Method of ascertaining rateable value
of coal mines.

74. The rateable value of a coal mine (m) may be ascertained upon the same principles (n), speaking generally, as that of a railway (o) or a waterworks undertaking (p)—that is, by making deductions from the actual yearly receipts for working expenses, for the tenant's share of the profits, and for expenses of repair (q). The latter deduction includes the cost of maintaining the permanent at by taking the rent reserved and adding thereto a sum estimated to represent the burden of the tying covenant.

(k) See p 27, ante. This principle was first applied to licensed property in the case of a railway refreshment room (Clark v Fisherton-Angar (1880), 6 Q B D 139), and afterwards to public-houses generally, at any rate where there is no prevailing market rent (Cartwright v. Sculcoates Union, [1900] A C 150, by which Dodd v South Shields Poor Law Union Assessment Committee, [1895] 2 Q B 133, C A, is apparently overruled). The sum which a brewer might give in order to obtain possession of a free house and convert it into a tied house is not to be taken into consideration so as to bring the rateable value above the rent that a free tenant would give in the market (Bradford-on-Avon Assessment Committee v. White, [1898] 2 Q. B. 630).

It had long before been decided that the rent at which a coal mine would let, and at which it must be rated, must be something less than the net profits of the mine (R. v Attwood (1827), 6 B & C 277); and that if a tenant had erected engines etc for working the mine, the true rent was not to be measured by the royalties reserved in the lease (E. v. Granville (Lord) (1829), 9 B. & C 188).

roads and airways (r), but not the cost of sinking shafts (s). No deduction is allowed to provide for the ultimate replacement of the value of the minerals exhausted (t).

Where a coal mine extends into more than one parish, the rateable value in each parish must be based on the amount of coal that is worked in the parish (u).

75. Tin, lead, and copper mines, other than those of which the royalties are wholly reserved in kind, are valued according to a special standard of valuation (a).

76. The rateable value of a rapidly exhausting hereditament, such as a brickfield (b), chalk pit (c), or gravel pit (d), is the rent which a tenant might at the date of the rate be expected to give for a year's tenancy of it, and this may well be something less than a figure arrived at by a calculation based on the rent and the royalties payable upon the maximum quantity of bricks that might be made or of material that might be got (b). The royalty which the actual tenant has agreed to pay is a matter to be looked at; and there can be no deduction on account of a sinking fund to replace the value of the earth exhausted (b). The rateable value is to be ascertained with regard to the amount of gravel or other material that remains unexhausted at the date of the rate (e).

77. The rateable value of a cemetery in the occupation of a commercial company (f) is calculated upon principles much the same as those applicable to the case of a railway (g). The receipts upon which the calculation is based include receipts from the sale of rights of burial in perpetuity (h) and of portions of the land itself for burial purposes (i). Such receipts must not be spread over several years (l), although the receipts of the previous year are not conclusive of the receipts that may be expected in the year of the rate (k). Salaries of directors and other officers cannot be deducted, if unconnected with the occupation of the land (l).

SUB-SECT 7—Woodlands and Sporting Rights

Land used only as plantation.

78. The rateable value of land used only as a plantation or a wood is ascertained as if the land were in its natural and unimproved state (m); the right of sporting must be taken into account as enhancing the value (n), but nothing must be added for the possibility of improving the land by draining or other operations (o).

of saleable

The rateable value of land used for the growth of saleable underwood is estimated as if the land were let for that purpose (p) at a rent which a person would give for it who is to have the profits of the underwood when ready for cutting (q).

Land used for both purposes

Land which is used for both the above purposes may be assessed according to either standard at the option of the assessing authority (r).

Where any right of sporting (s) is in the hands of the occupier of the land (t), or where it is in the hands of the owner of the land who is not also the occupier (u), the value of the right is included in ascertaining the rateable value of the land. SUB-SECT 8 —Tithe Rentcharge

80. The rateable value of a tithe rentcharge is ascertained by taking the gross income and making deductions therefrom in respect of the following matters—ecclesiastical dues (d), costs of collection and bad debts (e), and tenant's rates and taxes (f). The costs of collection should include an adequate remuneration for the collector; beyond this, no deduction can be made for the hypothetical tenant's profits (g). The services of the clergy (h), though paid for by the recipient of the tithe rentcharge (i), and even though the clergy so remunerated minister in another parish (k), do not form the subject of deduction; neither does the cost of repairing the chancel of the parish church (l), nor do payments to Queen Anne's Bounty, though these are charged on the tithe rentcharge (m).

SECT. 2.—Method of Assessment.

SUB-SECT 1—The Overseers.

Functions

82 In each parish (t) the overseers (u) are charged with the making of valuation lists (a), the making and levying of the poor rate (b), and the defending of objections and appeals against the poor rate (c). Many of the overseers' functions are in practice carried out by the assistant overseer (d).

SUB-SECT 2—The Assessment Committee

Appointment
and functions

83. The assessment committee is a body appointed every year for every union and every parish not in union by the guardians (e) from among themselves (f). The committee has authority in every parish in the union (g), and has various functions connected with the making and revision of valuation lists (h). It has nothing to do with the making of the poor rate, but no one may appeal against a poor rate without giving notice to the committee (i), nor, in most cases, without previously objecting before the committee to the valuation list.

(o) They apply to the great majority of parishes. Local Acts are necessarily disregarded in dealing with this subject. As to unions, see title POOR LAW, Vol. XXII., pp. 553 et seq.

(t) But in urban parishes any powers, duties or liabilities of the overseers may be conferred upon the borough or district council by an order of the Local Government Board (Local Government Act, 1894 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 73), s. 33 (1)); see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., p. 267.

(b) See pp. 53 et seq., post.

(c) See pp. 57 et seq., post. This duty is shared with the assessment committee, and has in some cases been transferred altogether from the overseers, see pp. 49, 57, 62.

(d) Appointed under Poor Relief Act, 1819 (59 Geo. 3, c. 12), s. 7, by the body to whom the power of appointment is transferred by Local Government Act, 1894 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 73), ss. 5 (1), 19 (5), or 33 (1). As to the functions that he may perform, see Skingley v. Surridge (1843), 11 M. & W. 503; Points v. Atwood (1848), 6 C. B. 38; Baker v. Locke (1864), 18 Q. B. (N. S.) 52. The effect of frauds committed by an assistant overseer in collecting money on account of rates was discussed in Hornchurch Overseers v. London, Tilbury and Southend Rail Co. (1912), 76 J. P. 385.

(e) As to boards of guardians generally, see title POOR LAW, Vol. XXII., pp. 531 et seq.

(i) Union Assessment Committee Amendment Act, 1864 (27 & 28 Vict. c. 39), s. 1. As to the manner and effect of their appearance as respondents to such an appeal, see p. 63, post.

84. The assessment committee consists of not less than six nor more than twelve members (g); but if a municipal borough is coterminous with the union the town council may appoint additional members (h).

SECT. 2.
Method of Assessment.

The quorum at a meeting of the committee is three members, or one-third of the whole number, whichever is greater; the majority of the members present decides, and the chairman has a casting vote (i). The committee must keep a minute book, and any ratepayer in the union must be allowed to inspect such book and to take extracts free of charge (m).

Membership, meetings, and minutes.

The committee may require the production before it of books of assessment of parliamentary or parochial taxes or rates (n).

85. The clerk, or assistant clerk, of the guardians is the clerk to the assessment committee (o). He must send annually copies of the totals of the gross values of every parish, together with the totals of the rateable values of agricultural land and of other hereditaments, to the clerk of the peace for the county (p).

Clerk to the assessment committee.

SUB-SECT. 3.—Valuation Lists.

86. A poor rate must follow the valuation list in force in the parish at the time of the making of the rate, as far as the rateable value (q) of any hereditament included in the list is concerned (r). The total of the rateable values (s) shown in the list in force for the parish when the guardians make their estimate, together with the total, shown in such list, of the annual value of property in the parish on which the Government pays a contribution in lieu of rates (t), is conclusive for the purpose of ascertaining the amount payable by the parish to the common fund of the union (u).

Poor rate follows valuation list as regards rateable value.

87. The last valuation list approved by the assessment committee and delivered by it to the overseers, as altered and added to by any supplemental valuation list so approved and delivered, is the valuation list in force, and continues to be so, until a new valuation list for the whole parish has been so approved and delivered (b).

88. A new valuation list must contain all the rateable hereditaments in the parish (c), including empty houses if ready to be occupied (d). It must show the gross estimated rental of each hereditament included (e), the rateable value of agricultural land, and (separately) the rateable value of buildings and other hereditaments not being agricultural land (f), the totals of those three sets of values (g), and the annual value of land in the parish on which the Crown pays a contribution in lieu of rates (h). It is made in a prescribed form (i).

89. A new list is made by the direction of the assessment committee, either on its own initiative or on the application of a person aggrieved. The committee may either direct it to be made by the overseers or by a person appointed for the purpose (k).

When the overseers have made the list (l), they must sign it (m), and deposit it in the place in which rate-books are deposited (n). They must give public notice of the deposit on the following Sunday by affixing the notice before morning or evening service at or near the principal door of every church and chapel of the Established Church in the parish at which divine service is actually performed (o). Where the parish contains no such church or chapel, the notice must be affixed in some conspicuous place (p). The notice does not require signature (q).

The notice must specify all such grounds of objection as have arisen when the notice is given (r).

The overseers or the third party, if any, concerned may waive the giving of notice of objection, and, if so, the committee may hear the objection (ibid., s. 19). Upon an appeal, the appellant is confined to grounds raised in his notice of objection, see p. 58, post. see also note (t), p. 62, post. If the objector's grievance is that his own assessment is too high, "unfairness" is a sufficient ground of objection (R v West Ashford Union (1907), 2 Konstam's Rating Appeals, 624). For grounds of objection and appeal, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XI, pp. 224—264.

91. Apart from objection, the assessment committee may make such alterations in the list as it thinks fit (g), and may appoint a person to value any of the rateable hereditaments in the parish (h).

92. When the assessment committee has determined all objections and revised the list as above, it approves the list under the hands of three members present at the meeting at which the list is approved, with the date of such approval (i), but the approval must not take place before twenty-eight days have elapsed from the Sunday on which notice of deposit was given (k).

If any alteration is made in value or any rateable hereditament is newly inserted in the list by the assessment committee, the committee must cause the list to be re-deposited and notice given in the same manner as upon the original deposit (l) by the overseers (m), and must appoint a day, not less than seven nor more than fourteen days from the re-deposit, for hearing objections to the list as altered (n). The committee may afterwards make further alterations (o).

When the objections have been heard and the alterations made and a fresh re deposit, if necessary, had, the assessment committee must finally approve the list (p). The totals are then cast, the list is retained by the guardians, and a copy, signed by the three members who approved the list, sent to the overseers (q), who must preserve it and allow inspection (r). If an assessment is afterwards altered upon an appeal against a rate, the committee must alter the list to make it conform with the amended rate (s).

SECT. 2.
Method of
ment.

93. A supplemental valuation list must be made by the overseers when any property not included in the valuation list in force becomes rateable, when any property included becomes liable to be rated in parts not separately assessed in the list, or when any property has been increased or reduced in value (t). The supplemental list contains only the property concerned (u).

Supplemental
list.

(i) made by overseers,

The assessment committee may, where it sees fit, order a supplemental list to be made in substitution for any part of the valuation list in force, in the same way that it may order a new list for the whole parish to be made (a).

(ii) made by order of assessment committee.

A supplemental list is made, deposited, objected to, and approved in the same way as a new list (b).

SUB-SECT. 4.—Valuation by a Valuer.

94. A person may be appointed to make a new valuation for the purpose of a new or supplemental list, or for the purpose of assisting the assessment committee in its work of revision (c). A person may also be appointed to make and sign a new or supplemental list instead of the overseers (d). In all these cases the assessment committee makes the appointment with the previous consent of a majority of the guardians, present and voting at an ordinary meeting of which notice has been sent to every guardian (e). The guardians may, in the manner above stated, appoint a competent person, on the application of the assessment committee, to assist them in valuing the rateable hereditaments of the union (f).

SECT. 2.

SUB-SECT. 5.—*Expenses of Valuation and Valuation List.*Method of Assessment.

95. The assessment committee may charge expenses of valuations and valuation lists and certain other matters upon the common fund (g) of the union (h).

Charge on common fund
parish.

In certain cases, however, the expenses of making a valuation by direction of the committee may be charged on the parish, if made after the overseers have delivered an unsatisfactory valuation (i), but not otherwise (k).

Raised by loan.

If the assessment committee orders a valuation of all the rateable hereditaments of a union, the expenses may be raised by a loan (l).

Map or plan

The cost of a map or plan may be charged to the parish or to the common fund of the union, as the Local Government Board directs (m).

Remuneration
of valuer

The remuneration of a valuer appointed to assist the assessment committee is paid out of the common fund (n).

Expenses of
overseers.

Expenses of overseers in making lists or in valuing hereditaments are in general payable out of the poor rate, but the expenses of a valuation can only be so paid if the consent of the assessment committee was obtained before they were incurred (o). Either before or after the expenses have been incurred (p) the sanction is required, in a rural parish, of the parish council (q), or of the parish meeting (r), as the case may be, and, in an urban parish, of the urban authority, if the Local Government Board has made an order to that effect (s), or, if no such order has been made, of the vestry (t).

SECT. 3.—Making of the Rate.

SECT. 3.

Making of the Rate.

Purpose of the levy

Period for which rate may be levied.

Mandamus

Expenses met by poor rate

96. The overseers levy the poor rate (u) in order to defray their own expenses (a), and to provide funds to meet precepts (b) addressed to them by guardians (c), municipal corporations (d), district councils (e), parish councils (f), parish meetings (g), or burial boards (h).

They may make such a rate for any period within their term of office, and, if made for a period of more than three months, it may be made payable by instalments (i). If necessary, a fresh rate may be made before the period of the former rate has expired (k).

The courts will, in certain circumstances, issue a mandamus to levy a poor rate (l).

97. A poor rate may be made only to meet expenses which are about to be incurred (m). It must not therefore be made to repay loans (n), unless these have been borrowed and charged upon the poor rate under statutory powers (o). But the charges of legal proceedings necessarily incurred by the overseers may be reimbursed out of the poor rate (p), and so may unforeseen debts (q). Claims lawfully incurred by guardians may be paid within the half-year after they have been incurred, or within three months after the

(a) As to such expenses, see p 52, ante. The extent to which the overseers' debts and the expenses of legal proceedings may be levied out of the poor rate is limited by the Poor Law Audit Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict c 91), ss 1, 2, and see title POOR LAW, Vol XXII, p 530

SECT. 8.
Making of

expiration of that half-year, but this limited period may be extended by the Local Government Board (r).

98. The amount which may be levied by the poor rate for the purposes of poor relief is not limited to any definite rate in the £: but the amount which may be levied by the poor rate for certain other purposes is so limited by the statutes which enable those amounts to be so levied (s). Where the statute limits the rate to a specified rate in the £ on the rateable value of each hereditament rated, the rate in the £ must not be increased merely because many such hereditaments are empty or exempt (t).

 assessment

99. The rate is assessed upon the rateable value shown in the valuation list in force (a), subject to two exceptions—(1) where a hereditament has become rateable in parts not separately mentioned and assessed in the list, the rateable value shown in the list is apportioned to those various parts (b); and (2) where a new building, which was not ready for occupation or was not shown as such in the valuation list in force when the rate was made, becomes occupied during the currency of a rate, the overseers rate the building on their own estimate of its rateable value (c).

Title and form of rate.

100. The title of the rate must set out the period (d) for which it is estimated, and, if made in instalments, the amount, and date

In recent times the rule against retrospectiveness has been considerably relaxed with regard to the special expenses rate which, in other matters, is governed by considerations similar to those which govern the poor rate, see pp. 83, 95, post.

(s) As, for instance, sums to be raised for purposes of public libraries (Public Libraries Act, 1892 (55 & 56 Vict. c. 53), s. 18 (1), (3)), see title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION, Vol. XXIII, pp. 592 et seq., sums raised to meet the expenses of a parish meeting (Local Government Act, 1894 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 73), s. 19 (9)); and see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX, p. 260), or to meet the expenses of education other than elementary (Education Act, 1902 (2 Edw. 7, c. 42), ss. 2 (1), (3), or for the purposes of the Education (Provision of Meals) Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 57) (see ibid., s. 3, and see title EDUCATION, Vol. XII, pp. 23, 33), compare also the provisions as to the watch rate, pp. 81, 82, post.

(t) Compare Re Liverpool Library Act. Ex parte Brown (1862), 26 J. P. 389. But this decision does not apply where the maximum amount to be levied is defined by reference to the sum equal to a certain rate in the £ on the rateable value of the parish, as in the case of sums raised to meet the expenses of parish councils (Local Government Act, 1894 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 73), s. 11 (3)), for the rateable value of the parish means the total of the rateable value shown in the valuation list, and this includes the rateable value of unoccupied hereditaments, see p. 48, ante.

for payment, of each instalment(e). The rate is made in a prescribed form(f), and a declaration must be signed at the foot of the rate by the persons who make it(g). The name of the occupier of every rateable hereditament must be entered(h), even though the owner is actually rated(i). A rate is not void for not being made in the precise form prescribed(j); but it is void if it does not specify the purposes for which it is made or the authority which makes it(k), or if it does not give any description of the property rated(l).

SECT. 3.
Making of
the Rate.

101. The rate is made upon all property rateable in the parish, which includes every accretion from the sea, the seashore to low-water mark, and the bank of every river to the middle of the stream(m)

Property

102. A poor rate must be allowed by two justices having jurisdiction over the parish for which it is made(n); and, if not so allowed, is void(o). The two justices must sign the rate at the foot(p). Their duty is merely ministerial(q), but they may see whether the rate is made by persons having authority to make

A form for parishes containing agricultural land has been prescribed under the Agricultural Rates Act, 1896 (59 & 60 Vict. c. 16), by the Agricultural Rates Order, 1896 (Stat. R. & O. Rev. Notice of the rate. 103. Public notice of the rate must be given on the Sunday after it has been allowed (t); and, if this notice is not given, the rate is void (a). The notice need not state that the rate has been allowed (b).

Inspection of rate-book. Any person rated to the poor in the parish may at all reasonable times take extracts from the rate-book free of charge, and obtain copies upon payment; and the persons having custody of the rate must permit such inspection or give such copies (c).

The rate-book as evidence. If the rate is made in the prescribed form, the production of the rate-book, with the allowance, is prima facie evidence of its having been duly made and published (d).

Amendment or abandonment of rate 104. The rate cannot be amended after allowance by inserting the name of a person as having been an occupier when the rate was made (e); but the overseers can insert in it the name of a person who, during its currency, comes into occupation of premises which, at the date of its allowance, were occupied by another or were unoccupied (f), and they can also insert in it a new house or other

the Rate.

SECT. 4.—Remedies of Ratepayers.

SUB-SECT 1—Objections to the Valuation List

105. Objections to the valuation list (j) are of two kinds— objections made before the list has been finally approved (k), and objections made after final approval (l). The giving of a notice of objection, of either kind, and failure to obtain sufficient relief thereon are conditions precedent to an appeal to special or quarter sessions against a rate made in conformity with the valuation list (m).

Two kinds of objections

106. Notice of objection after final approval may be given at any time (l). The parties entitled to notice and the contents of the notice are the same as in the case of notice given before final approval (n). The assessment committee is bound to hear the objection, and has the same powers and duties as upon the hearing of an objection before final approval (o), save that it need not give the overseers notice of the meeting at which the objection will be heard (p), and that it cannot alter the list by increasing the gross or rateable value already appearing in the list (q). If the assessment committee amends the list, it must give notice to the overseers, who are required to amend accordingly the rate current when the

These conditions precedent do not apply if the rate is, under a local Act, not required to be made in conformity with a valuation list (R v Price, Ex parte Cole (1893), 62 L J (M C) 71), or, apparently, if the rate is not in fact so made. SECT. 4. notice of objection was given (r). Re-deposit (s) of the list is not necessary (t).

Remedies of Ratepayers.

Notice
requisite to found an
appeal.

107. A notice of objection given in order to found an appeal against a rate may be given before the rate is made (u), provided that the appeal is taken against the rate made next after the notice of objection was given (v); or it may be given at any time during the currency of the rate to be appealed against (a). If the assessment committee amends the list upon objection, but the objector is not content with the relief given to him, it is not necessary for him, in order to found an appeal, to give a fresh notice of objection to the list as amended (b). If the notice is given before final approval, the rate appealed against must be the first rate made after the final approval of the list (c); if given after final approval, the notice will support an appeal against the current rate (d), or against the rate made next after the notice is given (e), but not against both (f). Notice of objection given against the valuation list in force will support an appeal against the rate made next after the notice of objection, without it being necessary to give a further notice against a subsequent supplemental list in which the hereditament in question does not appear (g).

necessary to found an
appeal

108. In order to found an appeal, the objector must obtain a definite decision from the assessment committee on his objection; a mere delay of its decision (h), or an adjournment of the meeting of the committee, is not sufficient (i). Even if the ground of appeal is a matter outside the competence of the assessment committee,

SECT 4.
Remedies of Ratepayers.

Non-compliance by the overseers with an order to amend the current rate in accordance with a successful objection (l) will found an appeal against that rate, as being not made in conformity with the altered valuation list (m).

SUB-SECT 2—Appeals to and from Special Sessions

109. A person aggrieved (n) by a poor rate may appeal to special sessions on the ground of inequality, unfairness, or incorrectness in the valuation of any hereditament included in it (o), provided he has fulfilled the conditions precedent (p).

Grounds of appeal to
sessions

110. Special sessions are held for the purpose of hearing such appeals four times a year by the justices of every petty sessional division (q), public notice being given at least twenty-eight days previously (r). The appeal must be brought to the "next practicable" special sessions (s).

111. Notice of appeal in writing, stating the grounds of appeal, must be given to the assessment committee twenty-one days (t), and to the overseers (u) seven days at least (v), before the special sessions. The assessment committee is entitled to appear as respondent in the name of the guardians (a).

115. A person aggrieved (o) by a poor rate may appeal directly to quarter sessions on any ground (p), provided he has fulfilled the conditions precedent (q). Grounds of
appeal.

116. The appeal lies to the "next practicable" sessions after the decision upon his objection or, where no objection is necessary (r), after the making of the rate (s); that is, to the next sessions held thereafter, to which the appellant has had time to give the required length of notice (t), after taking a reasonable time to decide whether he will appeal or not, and, if so, on what grounds (u). What is a reasonable time depends on the circumstances of each case (a). If the appellant might have given his notice in time, but does not do so, he must enter and respite the appeal at the next practicable sessions (b). Quarter

The appeal goes to county quarter sessions, unless the union concerned is in a quarter sessions borough, in which case it goes to the recorder (c); if the union extends into two counties or two such boroughs, or into such a borough and a county, it may be brought before either court (d). and it must be signed by the appellant or his attorney (a). Any number of persons having a joint grievance against the rate may join in giving one notice of appeal (b); and the same appellant may appeal in one notice against more than one poor rate (c). The quarter sessions may allow amendment of an imperfect or incorrect ground of appeal (d).

The giving of notice of appeal does not excuse payment, on account of the rate appealed against, of a sum equivalent to that at which the appellant was assessed to the last effective rate (e).

SECT. 4.

Remedies of Ratepayers:

Liability notwithstanding notice.

Costs of assessment committee.

118. The assessment committee is entitled to appear as respondent to the appeal, in the name of the guardians and with their consent, given at an ordinary meeting, after notice has been sent to every guardian (f). If it so appears, costs ordered to be paid by it may be recovered from the guardians (g). If it does not so appear it is not liable for costs (h), but the overseers, or the body substituted for them for the purpose of receiving notice of appeal (i), are so liable, whether they appear or not (j). If the assessment committee appears without the consent of the guardians, it cannot recover costs (k).

As to legal proceedings affecting boards of guardians, see title POOR LAW, Vol. XXII., pp. 539 et seq. If there are several appeals by the same appellant, raising the same issue, a consent is, nevertheless, required in the case of each appeal (R. v. Essex Justices, [1895] 1 Q. B. 38, C. A., affirmed sub nom. West Ham Union v. Essex Justices and London County Council, [1896] A. C. 443).

(i) See p. 62, ante.

(j) R. v. Cambridge Justices (1834), 2 Ad. & El. 370. The committee need not actively contest the appeal unless it sees reasonable ground for doing so (R. v. Fouch (1841), 2 Q. B. 308). Under certain circumstances parishes and unions may combine to defend a group of appeals in which some common point is raised (Poor Law Audit Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 91), s. 11, Poor Law Amendment Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 122), s. 29).

Production of

appeals.

sessions.

When

119. Upon the hearing of an appeal to quarter sessions overseers must produce the rate-book (l) and the valuation list (m).

120. The quarter sessions regulate their own practice on these appeals (n). On the question whether, in appeals against rates, appellants or respondents should begin, the practice is not uniform (o).

121. The quarter sessions may, if they allow the appeal, either amend the entry as to the hereditament affected, or insert a hereditament the omission of which is complained of (p), or quash the rate (q). They have no power to increase the assessment alleged by the appellant to be too high (r); and if, even at the hearing, an appellant accepts the gross value appearing in the rate, the quarter sessions must find the proper statutable deductions and fix the rateable value by making the deductions so found from that gross value (s).

If the rate is quashed, the money charged by the rate must be paid and credited against the next effective rate (t). But, if the appellant's assessment is amended or struck out by the quarter sessions, a refund by the overseers of the amount overpaid must be ordered by the quarter sessions (u) which makes the final order in the appeal (a). Credit may, however, be given by the overseers against subsequent rates although the quarter sessions have made no such order (b). If the gross and rateable values appearing in the valuation list are accepted, and the only ground of appeal is that the overseers have not amended the rate so as to correspond with an amendment made by the assessment committee (c), the quarter sessions must amend the rate and order repayment of any money paid after the notice of objection was given (d). Where the rate has been made payable in instalments (e), an order for repayment must be made applying to the whole of the rate (f).

SECT. 4.
Remedies of Ratepayers.

122. A guardian who, though not a member of the assessment committee, takes an active part in getting up its case, is disqualified from sitting upon a rating appeal to which the assessment committee is respondent (g). A member of an adjoining assessment committee is not as such disqualified (h); nor is a member of a county council who took an active part in promoting a tramway undertaking owned by the council thereby disqualified for hearing a rating appeal brought by the lessees of that undertaking (i), but a justice cannot sit at county quarter sessions to hear an appeal against a rate made for a parish in which he is a ratepayer (k).

Disqualification of justices.

A judge of the High Court or Court of Appeal is not disqualified from taking part in any judicial proceeding with regard to a rate (l) by the fact that he is a person affected by that rate (m).

SECT. 5.—Remedies of Overseers.

123. The overseers (n) of a parish may object to the valuation list of any parish in the union (o) before it is finally approved.

SECT. 5.

Remedies of Overseers.

Right of appeal.

The overseers (p) also have a right of appeal to quarter sessions, upon questions of value, against a new or supplemental valuation list made for their own or any other parish in the union; and such an appeal is brought to the first quarter sessions held more than a month after the final approval and deposit of the list; fourteen clear days' notice of appeal is required (q).

SECT. 6.—Collection.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Method of Collection.

Collection of rate and arrears.

124. The poor rate is collected under the superintendence of the overseers by the collector or assistant overseer (r), if there is one (s), if not, by the overseers themselves (t). Arrears of a rate may be collected after the period of the rate has expired and by the successors of the overseers who made the rate (u).

Necessity for demand.

125. The obligation to pay the poor rate arises whether it is demanded or not (v). But proceedings for recovery (a) cannot be taken unless there has been a demand and a neglect or refusal to pay (b). Except in certain very small parishes, the demand must ss. 18, 21; see pp. 46, 47, ante. The right of objection "at any time" after the valuation has been finally approved, which is conferred by the Union Assessment Committee Amendment Act, 1864 (27 & 28 Vict c 33), s. 1 (see p. 57, ante), does not extend to overseers as such.

(p) See note (n), p. 65, ante.

(q) Union Assessment Committee Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict c 103), ss. 32—34. Owing to the limit of time indicated, the overseers have no right of appeal against a valuation list of old standing; and it is doubtful if they have any direct means of securing the making of a new valuation list for their own parish, or of a supplemental valuation list for any other parish in the union. As to the making of such lists, see pp. 47 et seq., ante. The right of appeal described is rarely used; for the procedure, see ibid., and for an instance of such an appeal, see Sunderland-near-the-Sea Overseers v. Sunderland Union Guardians (1865), 18 C. B. (N. S.) 531.

(r) The assistant overseer is not the servant of the overseers, but of the parish; see Hornchurch Overseers v. London, Talbury, and Southend Railway (1912), 76 J. P. 385.

(t) Compare R. v. Gwyer (1834), 2 Ad & El. 216.

(u) Arrears of poor rates may be collected by or under the direction of the overseers for the time being (Poor Relief Act, 1743 (17 Geo. 2, c. 38), s. 11; East Dean Overseers v. Everett (1861), 3 E. & E. 574; and see R. v. Blenkinsop, [1922] 1 Q. B. 43.

(v) There may be a breach of a covenant to pay rates which have not yet been demanded (Davis v. Burrell (1851), 10 C. B. 821); and see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., p. 492, note (k).

(a) For a full account of these, and, as to the objections which may be raised on such proceedings, see title DISTRESS, Vol. XI., pp. 210 et seq. As to appeals to quarter sessions against the issue of a distress warrant, see ibid. p. 214. Recognisances to appear at quarter sessions are not required (R. v. Lincolnshire Justices, [1912] 2 K. B. 413); compare title MAGISTRATES, Vol. XIX., p. 644. It should be noted that where actual occupation is not contested the question whether that occupation is or is not beneficial cannot be raised upon such proceedings (R. v. Bradshaw (1860), 2 E. & E. 836; Mersey Docks v. Cameron (1861), 9 C. B. (N. S.) 812; R. v. Sinclair and London Exhibitions Co. (1896), 12 T. L. R. 466).

be in writing and in a prescribed form (c). It may be served by any person having authority from the overseers or collector (d).

SECT. 6.
Collection.

126. The accounts of collection of the rate are kept in the rate-book (e), which is balanced half-yearly (f). Closed rate-books are kept by the overseers (g).

Accounts of collection.

127. Except in very small parishes, a rate-receipt check-book in a prescribed form must be kept, and a receipt taken from the book, dated and stamped in the usual manner, must be given to the person paying the rate or an instalment thereof if the rate is payable in instalments; but no receipt is given from the book until the whole rate or instalment has been paid (h).

Receipts.

128. If, at any time before commitment, a defaulter tenders the rate, with costs to the date of the tender, the tender must be accepted and distress proceedings stopped (i). If a part of the rate is tendered, the justices may nevertheless issue a distress warrant for the whole (k); but they need not do so, even if the tender of the part is made in court for the first time (l). The acceptance of a bill of exchange (m), or a payment made, without the authority or consent of the overseers, before the rate is made (n), is not a payment of the rate.

Tender.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Change of Occupation. Inability to Pay.

129. Where a person comes into or goes out of occupation during the period of a rate, he is only liable to pay a sum bearing the same proportion to the whole of the rate as the length of his occupation within the period of the rate bears to that period (o).

Change of
occupation.

(g) Like other parochial accounts (Poor Relief Act, 1743 (17 Geo. 2, c. 38), s. 1); but where there is a vestry clerk for the parish he has custody of the closed rate-books unless otherwise ordered (Vestries Act, 1850 (13 & 14 Vict. c. 57), s. 7). Payment of rates by a person who is not the person rated and has no authority from him to pay them is not a payment for the purposes of the franchise (R. v. Bridgnorth (Mayor) (1839), 10 Ad. & El. 66), or of pauper settlement (R. v. Benjeworth (Inhabitants) (1854), 3 E. & B. 637); but it is probably sufficient to prevent distress proceedings being taken.

New house.

Recovery
from representatives of deceased or insolvent
parties.

Where a new house or building comes into occupation for the first time during the currency of a rate, a proportion only of the rate can be recovered from the occupier (p).

The period of the rate begins with the day on which the rate was allowed (q) and ends with the day shown in the heading of the rate (r) as the date to which the expenses for which the rate is made have been estimated (s).

130. Upon proof of the inability of any person to pay the rate, and upon his application, made with the consent of the overseers, two justices having jurisdiction in the parish may excuse payment and strike the person's name out of the rate (t).

131. It is uncertain whether a poor rate is recoverable from the representatives of a person dying solvent after the rate is made (u). The law as to recovery from a person dying insolvent after the rate is made is the same as with regard to other insolvents (a). The poor rate is among the debts which have priority in bankruptcies (b), and in winding-up by the court (c), and upon the appointment of a receiver on behalf of debenture-holders, or upon possession being taken by them (d). The liquidator or receiver may become liable for rates accruing due after he enters upon the management, and may in certain circumstances be distrained upon with leave of the court (e).

A distress warrant may issue in such a case for the smaller sum found to be due from an outgoing occupier, although the only demand has been for the whole rate (*Mansel v. SUB-SECT. 3.—Collection from Owners.

132. Where an owner who has become (h) liable to pay the poor rate omits or neglects to pay, before the 5th June, any rate or instalment which became due before the preceding 5th January and has been duly demanded, he becomes liable to pay the rate or instalment in full, and forfeits any commission or allowance to which he would otherwise have been entitled (i).

The poor rate may be recovered from an owner so liable in the same way as from an occupier (j), but it may also be recovered from the occupier to the extent of the rent due from him, provided it has been demanded from him fourteen days previously (k). If the owner fails to pay a poor rate which he has in any way become liable to pay, the occupier may pay the rate (l). In either case the occupier who pays or has the rate recovered from him may deduct from his rent the amount paid or recovered (m).

A county council raises money required for general county purposes by a levy on all the parishes in the county, and money required for any special county purpose by a levy on any parish or parishes liable to be assessed for the purpose in question (n). County Rate.

County

on each parish (o) liable to contribute (p), and the sum to be levied from any parish in accordance with such rate is called a "county contribution" (q).

County contributions may be made retrospective so far as to raise money for the payment of costs incurred or which have become payable at any time within six months before the demand of the contributions (r).

Precepta.

134. The demand for county contributions is made by means of precepts. A precept may include, but must show as separate items, contributions required both for general and special county purposes (s). It is addressed to the guardians of the union which includes the parish liable to the contribution, or to the guardians of the parish if it is not in union; the guardians in their turn include the amount of the contribution required from them in a precept to the overseers of the parish (t), and the overseers levy the sum thus required from them as part of the poor rate (u).

The county rate as part of the poor
rate.

135. When demanded of the ratepayer, a county rate (or contribution) thus forms part of the poor rate; and the liability of promoters, under the Lands Clauses Acts (a), to make good a deficiency in the poor rate extends to that portion of the rate which is raised for county purposes (b).

(o) This apparently includes parishes in liberties and franchises which were formerly exempt (Local Government Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict c 41), s 48 (1), (2)). For the meaning of the term "county rate," see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol XIX., p. 369, note (n).

It has been thought that it is sufficient for the county council to issue precepts without the previous formality of making a rate; but it is submitted that this view is inconsistent with the sections last cited. The county rate, being paid out of the poor rate, is a "parochial" tax (R v. Aylesbury with Walton (Inhabitants) (1846), 9 Q B 261).

Where a parish is partly within and partly outside a borough, the borough not being subject to the county rate, the precept must be sent direct to the overseers, who raise the money required by a separate rate (ibid., ss 32—35); but such cases must now be extremely rare; see the Local Government Act, 1894 (56 & 57 Vict c 73), ss. 1 (3), 36 (2). It is only in these cases that a county rate, as such, is demanded directly from the individual ratepayer.

SUB-SECT. 2.—The County Rate Basis

SECT. 1.

County
Rate.

136. The amounts required for general or for special county purposes are assessed on the various parishes liable to contribute for such purposes in proportion to the values shown in respect of each such parish in the "county rate basis" (c).

General
purpose.

137. The basis must show, in respect of each parish in the county, a sum which in the opinion of the council represents the total value of all property, including empty hereditaments (d), in the parish rateable to the poor, such value being estimated on the same principles as rateable value for poor rate purposes (e); and the total value of the agricultural land in the parish must be stated separately from the total value of the buildings and other hereditaments (f).

Particulars
specified.

138. The basis is usually prepared by a committee of the county council, called the "county rate basis committee" (g). Apparently a new basis may be prepared at any time (h).

By whom prepared.

139. The committee may require from overseers and rate collectors returns in writing of the value of property within their parish and of certain particulars regarding the last valuation of such property; but, before presenting these returns, overseers must lay them before the vestry meeting or before the body which exercises the functions of a vestry meeting (i). The committee may also require overseers and any other persons to produce rates, valuations and other documents in their possession, relevant to the value of the property assessable, and may examine such persons on oath (k); and the committee may even call for private accounts and documents and examine private persons on oath (l). The committee may also obtain copies of the total amount assessed in each parish in respect of imperial taxes from the clerk to the Commissioners (m) of those taxes (n), but may not call for any document relating to the income tax upon profits with respect to concerns in the nature of trade which are chargeable under Schedule A (o) of the Income Tax Acts (p). Penalties are enacted for refusing to comply with these provisions, except that relating to imperial taxes (q). The clerk of each assessment committee (r) must send every December to the county rate basis committee copies of the totals of the gross estimated rental (s) and rateable value (t) of the property included in the valuation list in force in each parish of the union (u), and the total rateable value of the agricultural land in each parish must be stated separately from the total rateable value of buildings and other hereditaments (v). The county rate basis committee may at any time by order in writing direct a valuation of the whole or any part of a parish, and may appoint persons to make the valuation, who may enter and survey the assessable property (w); and the expenses of such a valuation may in certain circumstances be imposed upon the parish (x). The making of the county rate basis is not subject to any of the provisions as to procedure which apply to a poor rate valuation list (y).

(e) County Rates Act, 1852 (15 & 16 Vict. c 81), ss 6, 21. The council need not accept the poor rate assessments; consequently the value shown in the county rate basis is not necessarily equal to the total of the actual poor rate assessments in the parish, and in practice there are often wide divergences. As to what property is rateable to the poor, see pp 3 et seq, ante; and, as to the principles for ascertaining rateable value, see pp 25 et seq., ante

(g) The power and duty of preparing the basis are vested in the county council (Local Government Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict c 41), s. 3 (i)), but it may delegate these to a committee (ibid, s 28 (2)), and usually does so in practice. The procedure is therefore described in the text, supra, on the assumption that this is done. Where no such delegation is made, the county council as a whole performs the functions ascribed in the text to the county rate basis committee. As to committees of the county council, see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol XIX, pp. 348 et seq.

Allowance
and confirmation of county rate
basis.

140. When a new basis has been prepared in which the total value of the property in any parish is altered a copy must be sent to the overseers of each parish, who must submit the copy to the vestry (z), or the successors of the vestry (a). With the copy a notice must be sent of a time, not less than a month after the date of the notice, within which objections against the basis may be forwarded by the overseers or by any person affected (b). The copy of the basis, while it is in the overseers' possession, must be open to the inspection of every ratepayer (c). Before the basis is allowed and confirmed, notice must be published in one or more local newspapers that the basis will be taken into consideration (d), and it is submitted that any objections which have been forwarded to the committee must be considered on this occasion (e). alteration is made, fourteen days' notice must be sent to the parish affected before confirmation (f). The basis becomes valid when allowed and confirmed, notwithstanding any irregularity in procedure, but is subject to appeal; it remains in force until a new basis has been allowed and confirmed (g). After confirmation, a copy of the basis and a list of the parishes assessed, with the amount upon which each parish is assessed, must be sent to the overseers of every parish in the county. This must also be done on the confirmation of any alteration in an existing basis (h).

From time to time the committee may revise an existing basis in order to meet partial changes in the value of the assessable property, the provisions as to procedure in this case being somewhat similar to those already described (i).

Revision of county rate
basis

141. Any overseer (j) or inhabitant of any parish, having reason to think that the parish is aggrieved by the basis, may appeal to quarter sessions against it at any time after it has been confirmed, but only upon certain specified grounds, namely, (1) that some parish is wrongly omitted from the basis; (2) that the aggrieved parish is over-assessed; and (3) that some parish, other than the aggrieved parish, is under-assessed (k).

Appeal
against basis

In any case, twenty-one days' notice in writing previous to the first day of quarter sessions must be given. The notice must state the cause or matter of the appeal; and, if the appeal is on ground (1) or (3) notice must be given to the overseers of the parish which is alleged to be omitted or under-assessed (l); if on ground (2), then to the clerk of the peace (m).

of the provisions for procedure contained in the County Rates Act, 1852 (15 & 16 Vict c 81), s 15, is somewhat difficult in view of the transfer of powers from quarter sessions to county councils by virtue of the Local Government Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict c 41), s 3 (1) (see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol XIX., p. 368), but it appears still to be necessary that the basis should be allowed and confirmed, though apparently the county rate basis committee may exercise this function, if delegated to them by the county council.

(j) Where there is a parish council, the overseers' power of appealing against the basis is now vested in that council (Local Government Act, 1894 (56 & 57 Vict c 73), s. 6 (1) (c) (1)). This power of the overseers may also be among those conferred upon a parish meeting under ibid., s 19 (10), or upon a borough or urban district council under ibid., s 33 (1); see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol XIX., pp. 252, 258, 267, 311.

(l) Ibid., s 17. It is submitted that in these cases notice should be given to the clerk of the county council also. As to the body which may, in the particular parish, be entitled to notice instead of the overseers, see p. 62, ante.

affected, and, upon the hearing, the quarter sessions can only confirm this part, or correct proved inequalities or omissions (n). They cannot order that any alteration made by them shall date back so as to affect a county rate made before the notice of appeal against the basis was given (o). There is no power to order a refund of any sum already paid (p). A valuation may be ordered by the court on the application of either party (q), and the court may order costs to be paid by either party, except where an appeal brought upon ground (2) is successful, in which case the appellant's costs are borne by the county fund (r).

SUB-SECT. 3 — Making of the Rate

When made.

143. A county rate may be made by the county council (s) at any time when it is required to raise money for general or special purposes (t).

Assessment.

144. The rate must be made equally upon each parish liable, according to a certain pound rate, fixed and publicly declared, upon the total values as shown in the county rate basis in force (u), reduced by half the amount there shown as the rateable value of the agricultural land in the parish (u).

145. The rate should show the rate in the £ according to which it is made, the names of the parishes assessed, the total value of the property in each parish, the total value of the agricultural land in the parish, the two last-mentioned terms being taken from the basis in force, and the amount to be demanded from each parish.

Separate rate.

In practice, a separate county rate is made to provide for the expenses of a special county purpose.

Alteration
by county

or smaller than is necessary, the council may alter the rate accordingly (b).

Rate.

SUB-SECT 4—Appeal against the Rate

147. The churchwardens and overseers (c) of any parish who have reason to think that the parish is aggrieved by a county rate may appeal against the rate to quarter sessions (d).

Who may
appeal

This appeal may proceed on any just cause of complaint (e). The appeal is only against that part of the rate which affects the parish alleged to be over-rated or under-rated or wrongly omitted from the rate (f).

Nature of
appeal

148. It must be brought to the next practicable sessions after the cause of appeal has arisen (g), that is to say, after the rate complained of has been made (h). Fourteen clear days' notice must be given before the first day of the quarter sessions (i); consequently fourteen clear days, together with a reasonable time for the appellants to make up their mind (k), must elapse between the making of the rate and the sessions to which the appeal has to be brought.

Court to which appeal lies

The notice of appeal must be in writing, and must be given to the clerk of the peace, and, if the ground of appeal is the under-rating or omission of another parish, to the overseers of that parish, or to the body in whom their powers are vested (l).

Notice of
appeal

(d) County Rates Act, 1852 (15 & 16 Vict. c. 81), s. 22 Note that this right of appeal against the rate is entirely distinct from the right of appeal against the basis, described on p. 73, ante. The right of appeal given by the County Rates Act, 1852 (15 & 16 Vict. c. 81), s. 22, to an inhabitant of a parish, where there is no churchman or overseer, is now practically obsolete whole rate (n). If they reduce the rate they must order any amounts over-paid subsequently to the notice of appeal to be refunded by the county (o). The court has a discretion to award costs (p), including costs against persons who have given notice of an appeal which they have failed to prosecute (q).

SUB-SECT. 5—Collection and Recovery

Consequence of default of guardians.

150. The county rate is collected by means of precepts for contributions addressed to guardians of the poor (r). If the guardians fail to pay within the time limited in the precept, the county council may address a warrant to the overseers of the parish for the amount of the rate together with an addition of one shilling in every ten (s).

Consequence
overseers.

If the overseers make default in paying the amount so required, any justice may, on the complaint of the clerk of the county council or county treasurer, issue a warrant for the levy of that amount by distress and sale of the offender's goods (t).

SECT. 2.—County Police Rate.

Purpose of the rate and its collection.

151. The expenses of maintaining a county police force are paid out of a special county account (u) which is replenished (a) by means of a county police rate made by the county council upon the parishes liable (b). The rate is collected by precepts in the same way as the county rate, the amount required being ultimately levied from the ratepayers as part of the poor rate (c).

whether a reduction of the value shown in the rate affects the county rate basis automatically; but no doubt the county council would alter its basis in consequence of a successful appeal against the rate

(n) County Rates Act, 1852 (15 & 16 Vict c 81), s 22, last proviso. The existence of this doubt is due to the transfer of powers from the quarter sessions by virtue of the Local Government Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict c 41), s 3 (1); see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol XIX., p 368.

(o) County Rates Act, 1852 (15 & 16 Vict c 81), s 23; and see Glamorgan County Council v Barry Overseers, [1912] 2 K B 603. Over-payments made before service of the notice of appeal cannot be ordered to be repaid (Glamorgan County Council v Barry Overseers, supra).

153. No county police rate can be levied in any part of a county which contributes to the expenses of the police in any other county, in any part of a county which forms part of the Metropolitan Police District (f), or in a municipal borough which maintains its own police force (g).

154. The amount required from each parish is ascertained according to a certain rate in the £ on the total value of the parish as shown in the county rate basis (h), reduced by one-half of the rateable value, as there shown, of agricultural land in the parish (i).

Assessment.

155. The procedure for the making and collection of the county police rate is practically the same as in the case of the county rate (j).

156. Where certain only of the bridges are repairable by the county at large, and certain others by the hundreds in which they are situate, the expenses of repairing and maintaining the bridges in a hundred are raised by means of a separate rate, called a hundred rate, made on the hundred (k) by the county council (l). This occurs chiefly, if not solely, in Lancashire.

bridges

In any such county, the county council may declare that each hundred shall bear half the expense of repairing and maintaining the main roads situate within it; and the hundred's share of the expense is then raised by a hundred rate (m).

Authority.SECT. 4.—*Borough Rate.*SUB-SECT 1.—Nature and Purposes.

157. A borough rate is made by a borough council (n) (including the council of a county borough (o)) under powers derived from the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (p). As a rule, it is made upon each parish liable to pay it, in a lump sum, and the share required from each ratepayer is levied from him, by the overseers, as part of the poor rate (q). In such cases the borough rate becomes a charge on, or part of, the poor rate (r), but may still be spoken of as "made and levied by" the council (s). In certain boroughs, however, the borough council collects the borough rate directly by its own officers (t).

the rate.

158. The rate is made for the purpose of replenishing the borough fund, out of which the expenses of the general administration of the borough are met (a), and may be applied to all purposes to which the borough fund is by law applicable (b). It

(n) As to borough councils, see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol XIX., pp. 302 et seq. Many borough councils have local Acts which empower them to levy borough rates and regulate the method of levy; the general law only is discussed in the present title. Where the special Act in force in the town or district incorporates the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict c 34), ss 167, 168, 170—197, or the Town Police Clauses Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict c 89), s 70, rates may be levied under these provisions, but this is not a common case.

(q) This is the procedure wherever a parish is wholly within a borough and an order is made under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c 50), s 145; see p. 80, post. In a divided parish, the borough rate may be raised by a separate rate (Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict c. 50), s 146); but such a case is very rare. As to the duty of the overseers to fix the rate per £ to be demanded from each ratepayer, see p 80, post. As to collection of the poor rate, see pp. 66 et seq., ante.

(a) Ibid., s 141 (1) In many boroughs the expenses incurred for sanitary purposes are met by means of a general district rate; see p 82, post. Certain classes of property, such as railways, enjoy a three-fourths exemption from general district rate (see p 85, post), but do not enjoy any corresponding exemption in respect of the borough rate. It is often, therefore, a matter of moment whether expenses are properly charged to the borough rate rather than to the general district rate; the answer frequently depends on the provisions of local Acts. Certain rates for special purposes may also be levied by virtue of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict c. 50), s 123; see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., p. 321.

may be made retrospectively in order to pay charges and expenses incurred or which have come in course of payment within six months before it is made (c).

SECT. 4.
Borough.
Rate.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Basis of Assessment.

159. The borough rate is assessed on the parishes, or parts of parishes, liable to it in proportion to the total rateable value of the hereditaments in the parish, or part of a parish, which are rateable to the poor rate, or in respect of which a contribution is made to the poor rate (d).

Assessment
on parishes.

160. The total rateable value must be taken from the valuation list in force (e), or, if there is none, from the last poor rate (f), unless the borough council causes an independent valuation to be made, as it may do if it does not consider the list or rate to be a fair criterion (g). Where the parish contains agricultural land, the total rateable value for the purpose of apportioning the borough rate must be reduced by an amount equal to one-half the rateable value of the agricultural land (h).

Total rateable
value.

An order which is in force for the rating of owners instead of occupiers under the statutory provision before referred to (i) applies to the borough rate (j).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Making of the Rate.

161. The borough council may order a borough rate to be made from time to time, according as the state of the borough fund requires it (k).

When made.

162. For the purpose of assessing the rate, the borough council may call for any books of assessment in the hands of the overseers, and for copies of the totals of the assessments to imperial taxes (l). Where the borough rate is to be levied by means of an order to the SUB-SECT. 4.—Appeal against the Rate.

Grounds of
appeal.

163 If overseers think that their parish is aggrieved by a borough rate by reason of unequal assessment, the omission of another parish, or any just cause (o), they may appeal against such part of the rate as affects their parish to the recorder of the borough (p), or, to the county quarter sessions (q) if the borough has no recorder (r). The appeal goes to the next practicable quarter sessions (s).

appeal

Fourteen clear days' notice of appeal must be given to the borough council through the town clerk; and the notice must specify the grounds of appeal and be signed by the appellants or their attorney (t).

Powers of
quarter

164. The court has no power to quash the whole rate, but it may correct inequalities or omissions (u); and may order costs to be paid by such parishes or persons and in such proportions as it thinks fit (v). The borough council cannot, by failing to defend an appeal, avoid an adverse decision (w).

SUB-SECT. 5 — Collection and Recovery.

Liability of,

overseers

The penalty for failure on the part of the clerk to the Commissioners to make the required copies is a fine not exceeding £20, recoverable summarily (ibid, s. 144 (13)). As to procedure for recovery of the fines, see title MAGISTRATES, Vol. XIX, pp. 589 et seq. As to the Commissioners, see note (m), p. 71, ante.

If they make default, the amount may be levied by distress on their goods under a warrant signed by the mayor and sealed with the corporate seal, or signed by two of the borough justices (b). SECT. 5.—Watch Rate.

166. A watch rate may be levied by the council of any borough in which such rate might be levied at the 31st December, 1882 (d), within such parts of the borough as are watched day and night and as are declared by the council liable to watch rate (e). The money raised is paid into the borough fund (f).

Boroughs in may be levied

167. The watch rate is levied upon the occupiers of all hereditaments in the parts affected (g); but it is levied from owners instead of occupiers in the same circumstances as those in which the poor rate is so levied (h). Exemptions established by local Acts are perpetuated (i).

Assessment.

The rate is made upon an estimate of the annual value of the hereditament assessed (k). The total amount of the rate in the year must not exceed 8*d.* in the £ on the net annual value of each hereditament rated (l).

The circumstances in which a watch rate may be levied are, however, somewhat restricted by the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 50), s. 197 (6), (7). Provisions as to a watch rate in a divided parish are contained in ibid., s. 198.

The rate may be made yearly, half-yearly, or otherwise (m); and the council has the same powers for making it as it has with regard to the borough rate (n).

Collection
and recovery.

168. The council and the overseers have the same powers with regard to collection as they have in respect of a borough rate; the watch rate is therefore usually collected as in the case of a borough rate by means of an order to the overseers, who raise the money required as part of the poor rate (o), but it may also be collected by the borough council through its own officers (p). Any warrant required for the collection of the watch rate may be signed by the mayor and sealed with the corporate seal (q).

SECT. 6.—General District Rate.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Nature and Purposes.

Purpose of
the rate.

169. The general district rate is a rate levied by an urban authority, that is, the council of a borough or urban district (r), for the purpose of defraying expenses incurred in the execution of the Public Health Acts (s), or expenses directed to be defrayed in the same manner.

Rating authority and districts.

Such a rate may be made by the authority at any time when its district fund requires to be replenished (t). In ordinary cases one uniform rate is levied throughout the borough or district, but the (l) Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 50), s. 197 (3). The rate cannot be levied at a higher rate in the £ in order to compensate for a number of hereditaments being unproductive; compare Re Liverpool Library Act, Ex parte Brown (1862), 26 J. P. 389.

(n) Ibid., s. 197 (4). It is submitted, however, that the borough council must specify the rate in the £ at which the watch rate is to be levied (see ibid., s. 197 (1), (3)), and that, to this extent Durham Corporation v. Fowler (1889), 22 Q. B. D. 394 (cited in note (n), p. 80, ante), does not apply.

(o) Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 50), s. 197 (4), read with ibid., s. 145. As to collection of the borough rate, see p. 80, ante. As to collection of the poor rate, see p. 66, ante.

The Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 207, provides that certain authorities may levy these expenses by means of general district rates, and that certain other authorities are to levy them by means of other rates; and the application of these provisions may be modified in certain circumstances by the Local Government Board under ibid., s. 208. For a detailed account of these provisions, see titles LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., pp. 280 et seq.; PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION, Vol. XXIII., pp. 380 et seq.

authority may divide its district into parts and make a separate general district rate on any part (u)

General .

Rate.

Prospective and retrospective effect

170. Besides being made prospectively the rate may be made retrospectively to raise money for the payment of charges and expenses incurred at any time within six months before the making of the rate (r). It is, however, legitimate to make a general district rate for the purpose of meeting expenses incurred more than six months before the making of the rate, where the amount of such expenses was not definitely ascertained until judgment had been obtained in an action, provided there has been no undue delay in bringing the action (w). On the other hand, an urban authority cannot, by borrowing from its bankers or from anyone else within six months before the making of the rate, give itself jurisdiction to make a rate for the payment of debts incurred a substantial time before the six months period began (r).

171. Any limit imposed by a local Act upon the amount of a rate to be made by an urban authority does not apply to a general district rate (a).

Croydon Rural Council*, [1908] 2 Ch. 321, C. A., cited in note (p) p. 95, post. The Public Health Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 63), s. 89, contained a similar provision, and in the following cases where the circumstances were more or less comparable to those in Wolstanton United Urban Council v. Tunstall Urban Council, supra, rules for mandamus ordering the making of the rate were granted.—R. v. Rotherham Local Board (1858), 8 E. & B. 906; *Suire v. owners apply (b), the rate is made upon the occupier of all kinds of property for the time being by law assessable to any rate for the relief of the poor (c). Consequently, the principles which determine rateable occupation for the purposes of poor rate also apply to the question who is the rateable occupier for the purposes of the general district rate (d); and the total exemptions which apply to the poor rate also apply to the general district rate (e).

Exempted property under local Act.

Where any kind of property is exempt by any local Act from rating in respect of any of the purposes for which general district rates can be made, the exemption applies also to the general district rate, but not so as in any way to enlarge the scope of the exemption (f).

Exemptions
from separate highway rate.

Exemptions formerly applying to particular properties in respect of a separate highway rate appear to apply in respect of that part of a general district rate which is raised for the purpose of repairing highways (g).

Rating of owner instead of occupier.

173. At the option of the urban authority the owner (h) may be rated instead of the occupier in certain cases, the owner himself having no option in the matter. Such cases are — (1) where the rateable value of the premises does not exceed £10, (2) where the premises are let to weekly or monthly tenants; (3) where the premises are let in separate apartments; (4) where the rents become payable or are collected at any shorter period than quarterly. The urban authority may at its option, in any of these cases, rate the owner whether the premises are occupied or not (i). An owner who is rated under these provisions is rated upon a reduced amount (j); but they do not apply where the owner is himself the occupier (k).

obligation

The provisions of the Public Health Act, 1875 (l), do not affect any lease, contract, or agreement between landlord and tenant (m). Consequently, notwithstanding those provisions, any covenant between landlord and tenant providing that either party

General
District
Rate.

174. The general district rate is assessed on the full net annual value ascertained by the valuation list for the time being in force, or, if there is no such list (o), by the last poor rate (p). The "full net annual value" has the same meaning as "rateable value" in the statutes applying to the poor rate (q).

Meaning of "full net annual
value."

If the assessment appearing in the valuation list in force at the time of the making of the general district rate is subsequently reduced as the result of an objection or of an appeal against the poor rate, the reduction applies to the general district rate also (r).

By reason of the existence of certain partial exemptions (s), the provisions of the Agricultural Rates Act, 1896 (t), do not apply to a general district rate (u).

(2) Partial Exemptions.

175. In respect to property of certain special classes, the general district rate is made, not upon the whole, but upon one-fourth part only of the net annual value (b). Such classes of property are — (1) tithes and tithe commutation rentcharge (c), (2) land used as arable, meadow, or pasture ground only (d); (3) land used as woodlands (e); (4) land used as market gardens or nursery grounds (f);

They apply to the filter beds of a water company, although these are, in the course of business, left dry from time to time, and to a canal used for conveying water to those filter beds, but not to adjoining land; thus, where a hereditament consists only in part of land covered with water the exemption applies to that part only (East London Waterworks Co. v. Leyton Sewer Authority (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 669, decided under the Sewage Utilization Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 113), but held in Smith's Dock Co., Ltd. v. Tynemouth Corporation [1908] 1 K. B. 948, 955, 956, C. A., to govern the interpretation of the words in the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55). These words also apply to land fronting a river and excavated so that the waters of the river flow over the land, while floating pontoons for the repairing of ships are held in position over it (Smith's Dock Co., Ltd. v. Tynemouth Corporation, [1908] 1 K. B. 315, 948, C. A.). The same expression appearing in the Local Government Act, 1858 (21 & 22 Vict. c. 98), s. 55, has been held to apply to the basin or reservoir of a wet dock, but not to the warehouses, cranes and other appurtenances (Newport Dock Co. v. Newport Local Board of Health (1862), 2 B. & S. 708).

Wakefield Corporation*, supra), to a railway constructed for public conveyance under the powers of a special Act, although described in the Act as a tramroad (*Blackpool and Fleetwood Tramroad Co. v. Where the owner is assessed in respect of tenements whether occupied or unoccupied, the urban authority must assess him upon one-half only of the net annual value (b).

None of these cases were decided under the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict c. 55); but upon provisions closely analogous. In Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail Co. v. Liverpool Corporation, supra (which dealt with goods stations), it was held that the decision in London and North Western Rail Co. v Llandudno Improvement Commissioners, supra, earned the exemption beyond the true principle laid down in the earlier cases; and that the exemption must be limited to land used as a railway, as distinguished from land used for works and conveniences, or for the purposes of a railway company, which include the business of a carrier. As to goods-yards and wharves in special circumstances, compare Williams v London and North Western Railway, [1900] 1 Q B. 760, C. A.; R v. Taff Vale Rail Co (1857), 22 J. P. 21. of the rate in the £. After approval by the urban authority, the estimate is entered in the rate-book, and is open to public inspection. It is not part of the rate, and does not affect its validity (d); but, if the rate is challenged upon appeal, as having been made for an improper purpose, the estimate may be looked at in order to make out a prima facie case against the rate (e). The estimate may be inspected in the same way as the rate (f).

intention to make the rate

* Further, the urban authority must give public notice of its intention to make the rate and of the time when it intends to do so, and of the place where a statement of the rate may be inspected (g). This notice must be given in the week preceding the making of the rate and at least seven days previously thereto, but the notice need not be proved in any proceedings for recovery of the rate (g).

Inspection of valuation list or poor rate

For the purpose of assessing general district rates, any person appointed by the urban authority may inspect and take copies or extracts from any valuation list or poor rate within the district (h).

Making and publication

179. The rate is made in writing under the common seal of the urban authority (i), and it may commence at such times as the urban authority thinks fit (h). No allowance by justices is necessary.

The form of the rate is appointed by the urban authority from time to time (h). If the authority does not know the name of the person who is liable to be rated, he may be described as "owner" or "occupier" of the premises assessed (i).

The rate must be published in the same manner as a poor rate (m), but, unlike the poor rate, does not appear to be rendered invalid by want of publication (n). Any person interested in, or assessed to the rate, may inspect it, and take copies or extracts free of charge (o).

The production of the rate-book is prima facie evidence of the making and validity of the rate (p).

Amendment

his name inserted and who makes a claim, or by inserting the name of any person who ought to have been assessed, or by omitting the name of any person who ought not to have been assessed, or by raising or reducing the assessment of any person who has been under-rated or over-rated (a). The power of raising or reducing the assessment may, it would appear, be exercised in the following cases:—where the rate does not correctly follow the poor rate valuation, or where the poor rate valuation has been altered on objection or appeal since the rate was made, and so as to affect the rate (b); or where effect has not been given in the rate as originally made to the three-fourths exemption allowed by the statute (c).

SUB-SECT 5—Remedies of Ratepayers

181 As the general district rate follows the poor rate valuation of the premises and is assessed upon the same premises as the poor rate (d), a person, assessed to a general district rate, whose grievance is either that the valuation of his premises is too high, or that he ought not to have been assessed at all, must make an objection against the valuation list for poor rate, and, if he does not get sufficient relief by that means, he must appeal against the poor rate itself (e).

Objection against valuation list

Any ground of appeal against the general district rate which does not also affect the poor rate valuation may be raised upon appeal against the general district rate, as, for instance, that the three-fourths exemption (c) has not been allowed (f), or that the rate is bad because made retrospectively for more than six months (g).

Appeal against the rate.

182. A person who deems himself so aggrieved may appeal against the rate to the next court of quarter sessions holden not less than twenty-one days after the demand of the rate (h)

Court to which appeal lies

(b) Ibid., s. 211 (1), makes it necessary for the general district rate to follow the poor rate valuation (see pp. 46 et seq., ante), except in cases of partial exemption. Sheffield Waterworks Co. v. Sheffield Corporation (1885), 50 J. P. 6, decides that the general district rate must be altered when the poor rate valuation is altered on objection (see the text, infra), and this appears also to be the effect of an alteration of the poor rate on appeal, compare Keeton v. Sheffield Coal Co., [1901] 2 K. B. 26; and see p. 64, ante. As to rights of appeal against the amendment, see p. 90, post; and as to the collection of an amended rate, see p. 92, post.

(e) If the person aggrieved thus obtains a reduction or omission of his assessment, he will get the same relief in respect of the general district rate affected (Sheffield Waterworks Co. v. Sheffield Corporation, supra, Keeton v. Sheffield Coal Co., supra, see p. 85, ante), and see note (b), supra.

Notice of
 appeal.

He must give notice of appeal to the urban authority within fourteen days after the demand of the rate (i). The urban authority is entitled to fourteen clear days' notice (k); consequently, in order to give notice in time to the proper court of quarter sessions, the appellant will often find that he must give his notice much less than fourteen days after the demand. If the rate is made in respect of property situate in a quarter sessions borough, the appeal goes to the recorder; if not, to the quarter sessions for the county, division, or riding (l).

Form and service of notice.

The notice must state the ground of appeal (i), and should specify the premises concerned in exactly the same way as they are numbered and described in the general district rate. The notice may be given by serving the clerk to the urban authority; and it may be served by post, in which case it is deemed to have been served at the time when it would be delivered in the ordinary course of post (m). Proof of the letter being properly addressed, prepaid (n), and put into the post is sufficient proof of service (m).

Recognisances.

Immediately after giving notice, the appellant must enter into recognisances with two sureties before a justice of the peace, unless the justice allows some other security (o).

Powers of the court

183. The court may amend or quash the rate and award costs in the same way as upon an appeal against the poor rate, and the costs awarded may be recovered in the same way (p).

Resisting the making of an other rate or tax (i). A demand for the actual sum due, so far as ascertainable when the demand is made, must be made in writing (s). It may be served by delivery to, or at the residence of, the person assessed, or may be sent by post by a prepaid letter, in which case proof of the posting and prepayment (t) of a properly addressed letter is sufficient proof of service (u). If the person assessed is described in the rate merely as the "owner" or "occupier" of the premises, he may be so described in the demand note, which may be served by delivery to some person on the premises, or, if there is no such person, by being affixed thereon (v).

No time is limited for the demand.

Rate.

186. If any person assessed fails to pay the rate when due and for the space of fourteen days after it has been demanded of him as above mentioned (a), any justice may summon the defaulter to appear before a court of summary jurisdiction (b) and show cause why the rate should not be paid (c). A similar summons may issue at any time after the demand on a person who quits or is about to quit any premises without payment of the rate due from him in respect thereof and who refuses to pay (c). The summons in either case must be issued within six months of the demand, but if the amount due has been reduced in consequence of an appeal against the poor rate, and a reduced demand is made for that reason (or, it is submitted, for any other legitimate reason), the six months run from the date of the reduced demand (d). The summons may be for arrears of poor rate as well as of general district rate (e), and the complaint and summons may be in respect of several sums (f).

SECT. 6.
General
District
Rate.

Meaning of "sufficient cause for non-payment."

188. It is not possible to give any exhaustive definition of a "sufficient cause for non-payment," for, though the person summoned may probably take any objection that would be open to him upon proceedings for distress for poor rate, so far as those objections apply at all to the general district rate, it may be that the words quoted allow him to raise other objections also in answer to a summons for arrears of general district rate (h). At the same time it does not appear that every ground that would be open to him in an appeal against a general district rate is open to him in proceedings for recovery of that rate. Thus, he cannot in such proceedings take the ground that the rate is retrospective beyond six months (i), or is made for improper objects (j), or that there is a concurrent rate, previously made, in existence relating to the same property (k), or that (if the premises in respect of which the rate is made are within the district of the rating authority) an exemption created by a local Act attaches to those premises (l), or that he is not in occupation of all the property rated if the description in the rate is satisfied by property which he does occupy (m). On the other hand, where the exemption is created by a public Act of which the whole world has notice, that exemption is a sufficient cause for non-payment, and may be taken as a ground of objection in these proceedings (n).

the court.

(h) It was formerly thought that the jurisdiction of the justices was the same in proceedings for recovery of general district rate as in those for recovery of poor rate (L v Hannam (1886), 34 W. R. 355, (C. A.). As to the extent of their jurisdiction in proceedings of the latter kind, see title DISTRESS, Vol. XI. pp. 210 et seq. But more recently it has been held that the words quoted in the text, supra (which do not occur in the poor rate statutes), have the effect of making the jurisdiction somewhat wider in the case of general district rate (Dixon v. Blackpool and Fleetwood Tramroad Co., [1909] 1 K. B. 860, following Sheffield Waterworks Co v Sheffield Corporation (1885), 50 J. P. 6; Blackpool and Fleetwood Tramroad Co v. Baptham with Norbreck Urban Council, [1910] 1 K. B. 592). It should be noted that, publication not being essential (see p. 88, ante), and allowance by justices not being required at all in the case of a general district rate (see p. 88, ante), neither of these matters can be raised in proceedings for recovery of such a rate.

(n) This principle was laid down in R v Hannam, supra, by BOWEN, L.J., at p. 356, and has now been applied to a case where the rate was a rate authorised by a local Act, in the nature of a general district rate, and the exemption was created by the same local Act, in which Act the words "sufficient cause for non-payment" appeared (Dixon v. Blackpool and Fleetwood Tramroad Co., supra, at p. 872). It appears to follow from this decision that a partial exemption under the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 211 (1) (b), is a matter which can be raised in answer to a summons for recovery of the general district rate itself; see also E. v Shuttleworth, Ex parte Tickle (1908), 72 J. P. 329.

rating authority (o); the fact that, although the valuation list, which the general district rate is bound to follow, has been altered upon objection, the general district rate has not been amended accordingly (p); where the owner is rated instead of the occupier, the question upon what proportion of the rateable value he ought to be assessed (q); and the fact that the urban authority has in its hands moneys overpaid in respect of previous rates by the persons summoned (r).

Upon default of distress, and upon formal proof of means given upon a summons issued for the purpose as in the case of a civil debt, and upon proof that the defaulter has refused or neglected to pay, the court may commit the defaulter, but, unless all these matters are proved, the court has no such power (c).

If any such premises are afterwards occupied during any part of the period for which the rate was made, and before the rate has been fully paid, the name of the incoming tenant must be inserted in the rate, and when inserted he is liable for a part of the rate calculated in the same proportion as the time from the commencement of his tenancy to the end of the period bears to the remainder of the period (e). There is also a provision imposing, mutatis mutandis, a proportionate liability on an owner or occupier who is assessed or liable to the rate when it is made, and who ceases during the period of the rate to be owner or occupier of the premises; and if a fresh owner or occupier comes in to the premises during the period he is liable for his proportionate part of the rate (f). A person who, though not assessed when the rate was made, becomes liable under these provisions, is subject to all the incidents of the rate as if he had been assessed in the first instance (g).

193. The urban authority may reduce or remit the payment of any rate on account of poverty (h).

SECT. 7.—Special Expenses Rate.

Nature of the
rate.

194. A special expenses rate is a rate made in a contributory place by the overseers of the parish in order to satisfy precepts in respect of contributions for "special expenses" addressed to them by the council of the rural district within which the contributory place is situate (i).

(e) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 211 (2). This provision appears to apply to an owner rated instead of an occupier, except in cases where the owner is rated whether the premises are occupied or not. As to the calculation of the period of the rate, and as to the method of apportionment, compare Cheney v Tallowin, [1904] 2 K. B. 763, and the other cases cited in note (s), p. 68, ante, in reference to the somewhat similar provisions for apportionment of poor rate.

(f) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 211 (3). The owner is expressly mentioned in ibid., s. 211 (3). Further, in the case of an owner or occupier who comes in to premises which were occupied at the time when the rate was made, there is no direction that his name should be inserted in the rate, as in the case of premises previously unoccupied.

(g) Ibid., s. 211 (2), (3); see also ibid., s. 221; and see pp. 88, 89, ante. As to the effect of bankruptcy on the provisions of the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 211 (3), see Re Thomas, Ex parte Ystradgynog Local Board (1887), 57 L. J. (Q. B.) 39 (see p. 11, ante); and of winding-up, see Re Wearmouth Crown Glass Co (1882), 19 Ch. D. 640 (see p. 11, ante); see also titles BANKRUPTCY AND INSOLVENCY, Vol. II., p. 217; COMPANIES, Vol. V., pp. 516, 535, 537, 579.

(i) "Special expenses" and "contributory place" are defined by the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 229; see also titles LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., pp. 335, 336; PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION, Vol. XXIII., pp. 381, 382. The contributory place is continuous

195. The rate is levied upon the contributory place, or upon such part of it as lies within the parish, as a separate rate (k) in the same manner, subject to one exception (l), as a poor rate (m).

There is no special provision in any statute prohibiting a special expenses rate from being made for retrospective purposes or allowing it to be so made. Although it is to be levied in the same manner as a poor rate, the principles which apply to a poor rate in this respect (n) have not been applied strictly to a special expenses rate. Thus, a special expenses rate can be made in any year to pay a debt incurred previously to that year, if the amount of it has only been ascertained by a judgment given in that year (o); further, such a rate can be made several years after the debt has accrued due, if payment of the debt was demanded within the year in which it accrued due, so that a rate might have been made to meet it in that year, and if the delay in taking proceedings is properly explained (p).

196. The rate, being levied in the same manner as a poor rate, is levied upon the same persons (q).

It is also, and for the same reason, made upon the rateable value shown in the valuation list (r) for the poor rate exactly as a poor rate is made upon that value (s), subject to one exception, namely, that a three-fourths exemption in respect of a special expenses rate applies to property of the same classes as those which enjoy a similar exemption in respect of a general district rate (t). It follows from the existence of this partial exemption that the Agricultural Rates Act, 1896 (u), does not apply to a special expenses rate (v).

Apart from the above exception, the special expenses rate is with a parish, or is part of a parish, the precept is addressed to the overseers of that parish and the rate is made by them, if the contributory place lies partly in one parish and partly in another, a separate precept is addressed to the overseers of each parish, and a rate made in each parish to meet the precept (Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 230).

(k) If, however, the amount required to be raised in a contributory place is less than £10, or is so small that a rate required to raise it would be less than 1d. in the £, it is raised as if it were general expenses, that is to say, generally, by an addition to the poor rate (ibid, s. 230, proviso)

SECT. 8.—Highway Rate.

SUB-SECT 1 —In Urban Districts

Nature of the rate and exemptions.

197. In certain circumstances the cost of repair of highways in an urban district is borne not by the district fund and general district rate, but by a separate highway rate (a). The partial exemptions in respect of particular classes of property which apply to a general district rate do not apply to a highway rate (b), and a highway rate made by an urban authority is not subject to the limit imposed by the Highway Act, 1835 (c). A highway rate is made upon the occupiers of all property liable to be rated to the poor rate (d); consequently all exemptions applying to the poor rate (e) apply to the highway rate also; and a further exemption still attaches to any property which was legally exempt from the payment of highway rate before the 31st August, 1835 (f), as where the occupier of the property was liable ratione tenure to repair some highway in the parish and enjoyed in return an exemption from highway rates (g).

(y) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 230. The provisions of ibid., s. 269 (see p. 80, ante), as to appeals appear thus to be rendered inapplicable, but the matter is not quite free from doubt. The "other incidents" referred to appear to include the collection and recovery of the rate; and want of publication would appear to be a good ground of objection in proceedings for recovery; compare Beeson v. Derby Overseers (1903), 67 J. P. 282.

The Agricultural Rates Act, 1896 (59 & 60 Vict. c. 16), does, however, apply to a highway rate (ibid., ss. 1 (2), 9); but such classes of property as railways, docks etc. derive no benefit from the last-mentioned Act.

This exemption continues to apply to such property, even after the liability of the holder of the property to repair any highway in the parish has been determined by an order made under the Highway Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 61), s. 35 (Dalton Overseers v. North Eastern Railway, [1900] A. C. 345).

SMCT. 8.
Highway
Rate.

199. The highway rate is made upon the rateable value appearing in the valuation list for the time being in force (l).

200. The highway rate must be made in such manner and form and for such period as the urban authority may appoint (l). The rate does not require its signature; nor need it be allowed by justices, nor be laid before the inhabitants in vestry (m); but it must be published in the same manner as a poor rate (n). Where the name of the owner or occupier is not known to the urban authority, he may be described as "the owner" or "the occupier" (o).

collection.

The highway rate is collected by such persons, either separately or together with any other rate, as the urban authority may appoint (l). Proceedings for recovery may be taken in the same way as in the case of a general district rate (p).

201. The provisions with regard to appeal against a highway rate are the same as with regard to appeal against a general district rate (q).

It appears to follow that the system of rating owners to poor rate under the Poor Rate Assessment and Collection Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict c 41), s. 3 (see p 20, ante) does not apply to a highway rate (k) Highway Rate Assessment and Expenditure Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict c. 27), s. 4, which also provides that, if the list in force is amended upon objection, the urban authority is to have notice and to alter its current rate. If the valuation list is altered as the result of a successful appeal against the poor rate (see pp 59 et seq., ante), no doubt the highway rate based on that list must be amended also. SECT. 9.—Private Improvement Rate.

SUB-SECT. 1—In Urban Districts.

Nature of the rate.

203.* Certain expenses incurred by urban authorities, or for which they have become liable, are, or may be declared by the authority incurring them to be, private improvement expenses (t), and may be levied upon the occupier of the premises in respect of which they have been incurred by means of private improvement rates (a). Such rates are calculated so as to discharge the expenses incurred, together with interest at 5 per cent, in a period to be determined by the urban authority, but not exceeding thirty years (a).

Liability of occupier and owner.

204. The private improvement rate is made upon the occupier of the premises concerned; but if they are out of occupation for any period the rate becomes for that period a charge on the owner (b). In certain circumstances the occupier has a right of deduction against his landlord in respect of a part of the rate, and the landlord has a similar right against any superior landlord (c).

Redemption of rate.

The owner or occupier may at any time during the period for which the rate is made redeem the rate by paying the balance of the expenses referred to (d).

Applicability of provisions relating to general district rate.

205. The provisions as to the preparation of the rate, appeal, and collection and recovery are the same with regard to private improvement rates as to general district rates (e), with the exception, that in the case of a private improvement rate no publication is required (f).

land, the rate in the £ is to be three times as great as the rate in the £ in respect of land (s); and for this purpose any poor rate assessment which relates to property of both classes must be separated, but so that the assessment of the whole shall not be greater than in the last poor rate (t), courtyards, yards and gardens, other than market gardens or nursery grounds, being included with the houses, buildings or other property to which they are attached (u). "Land" for this purpose includes tithe and tithe rentcharge (a); a canal with its appurtenances (b); a railway line with signal boxes etc (c); a brickfield with accessory buildings which cannot be rated separately therefrom (d); and water-mains (e). "Property other than land" includes coal-mines (f) and docks (g).

Limit of

209. The sum to be raised by the lighting rate in any one year must not exceed the sum agreed upon for this purpose by the parish meeting (h).

Making

The lighting rate is made and allowed in the same manner as a poor rate (i), and must be published in the same manner (j).

Appeal and objections.

The rate may also be appealed against in the same manner as a poor rate (k), but objections against a poor rate valuation list and appeals against a poor rate, if successful, operate to reduce the assessment to lighting rate (l).

210. The rate is collected by the overseers from the ratepayer in the same manner as the poor rate (m); and overseers succeeding those to whom the order for the levy is addressed may raise the sum required and collect arrears of rates (n). Upon a summons for a distress warrant against a ratepayer, the overseers need not prove that the Lighting and Watching Act, 1833 (o), has been properly adopted (p), nor can the ratepayer dispute its due adoption (q).

The overseers must pay the amount required by the order to the treasurer appointed under the Act (o) within three months from delivery of the order (v). In default of such payment, the amount required may be levied from the overseers by distress warrant signed by two justices (s); but, upon a summons for such a warrant, it is open to the overseers to show that the Act (o) has not been properly adopted (t).

SECT. 11.—Parish Improvement Rate.

211. Where the Public Improvements Act, 1860 (u), has been adopted in any parish, a separate rate may be made for the parish called the "— Parish Improvement Rate," if agreed to by a two-thirds majority of the parish meeting in a rural parish, or of a meeting of ratepayers in an urban parish (v). The rate is levied to defray part of the expenses of a public improvement made under the Act (u), but cannot be levied unless at least half the cost of the proposed improvement has been raised privately, and it is limited to 6d. in the £ (a).

called (b). They are rates levied by Commissioners of Sewers (c) and by drainage boards (d) for the purposes of those bodies, which include the drainage of fens and marshes, the construction and maintenance of cuts, dykes, and other drainage channels, the reclamation and protection of lands from rivers and from the sea, the construction and maintenance of embankments and sea walls, and similar objects. • The expenditure which is met out of these rates is not primarily incurred for purposes of public health, though indirectly the public health may sometimes derive benefit therefrom.

Commissioners of Sewers.
Statutory
powers

213. Many of the bodies styled "Commissioners of Sewers" have existed for centuries. It may be said generally that their authority is derived from the Bill of Sewers, 1531 (e), but no confident account can be given of the particular powers of any of such bodies without a minute examination of the commission (f) under which it acts and of any special Acts applying to it. Moreover, the diversity of practice among bodies of Commissioners of Sewers is believed to be very great; and as, in the case of many of them, their practice has been unchallenged for centuries (g), it may well be that such practice would not on all points stand the test of comparison with the actual powers conferred by commission or statute.

legislation.

A number of enactments (h) dealing with their procedure were passed in the nineteenth century; but these are usually of an enabling nature, and only occasionally impose definite limitations on powers.

The present treatment of sewers rates is confined to a statement of so much of the law relating to sewers rates as is contained in the general statutes above referred to.

Drainage boards.

214. Drainage boards are bodies constituted under the Land Drainage Act, 1861 (i), and have the same powers, including powers with regard to rates, as are by that Act (i) or by any other Act of

(b) Moneys for these purposes are raised by means of rates levied under the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55) (see pp. 82 et seq., ante), or under local Acts obtained by borough councils etc (see, e.g., the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 34), s. 29; Sutton Urban District Council v. Uppohn (1910), 74 J. P. 314, decided thereon), or, in certain cases, out of the borough rate. see also the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 207; title SEWERS AND DRAINS.

(f) Some commissions are in the original form attached to the Bill of Sewers (stat. (1531) 23 Hen. 8, c. 5). But in many cases the original commissions have been recalled and fresh commissions granted from time to time.

(g) The standard account of the early practice is contained in Calles, Reading upon the Statute of Sewers, but this work is not always reliable as an exposition of law.

Parliament, law or custom, vested in or exercisable by Commissioners of Sewers (k). The right of appeal against orders and rates made by drainage boards is, however, somewhat wider than against those made by Commissioners of Sewers (l).

SECT 12.

Sewers
Rate.

215. As their powers are practically identical, drainage boards are often spoken of as Commissioners of Sewers; and the term "Commissioners" is hereafter used as including bodies of both kinds, except where drainage boards are specifically mentioned.

Use of the term "Commissioners."

216. Sewers rates are of two classes, namely, general sewers rates (m) and special sewers rates (n).

Classification of sewers
rates.

A sewers rate is not imposed directly by Act of Parliament, and is not therefore a "parliamentary tax" within the meaning of these words as used in such documents as leases (o).

SUB-SECT 2—General Sewers Rate .

(1) Purposes

217. By the statutory form of commission (p) the Commissioners are empowered to construct and maintain such works as walls, ditches, banks, and sewers, and to perform numerous duties of similar kinds. They may levy rates for defraying all expenses lawfully incurred by them (q). Rates levied for such purposes are general sewers rates, except where the expenses are those of any improvements in existing works or of any new works involving an expenditure of more than £1,000, in which cases the expenses are to be defrayed out of special rates (r).

Power to defray expenses
by rate

Where an individual is under a prescriptive liability to execute or maintain works, for example, where the owner of a piece of land fronting a river is liable to keep up that portion of the river bank which adjoins his land, the expense of doing any work which is within the prescriptive liability cannot be defrayed by means of a rate; but a rate may become necessary to defray the expenses of such work as repairing a bank damaged by an extraordinary storm, although some individual is liable by prescription to carry out all ordinary repairs to such bank (s).

SECT. 12.

Sewers
Rate.

Miscellaneous expenses met by general
rate.

218. The following are miscellaneous expenses which may be defrayed out of general sewers rates—expenses of jurymen (c), expenses of obtaining the issue of a commission of sewers, if it is issued, expenses of obtaining an Act to confirm a provision, order (u), expenses of instituting or defending legal proceedings (v), expenses of opposing a Bill in Parliament (u), expenses of the preliminary proceedings for executing works chargeable on special rates where the works cannot be carried out owing to the dissent of the proprietors (a).

borrowed.

219. Money borrowed by the Commissioners on the credit of the rates, together with interest thereon, may be paid out of the rates (b). It is payable out of the general sewers rate unless it has been borrowed to meet expenditure which can only be properly charged on a special sewers rate, in which case it is of course paid by means of a special rate.

Retrospective

220. There is no general rule of law which prevents a general sewers rate from being made to defray expenses which have been incurred previous to the making of the rate (c)

(n) Areas in which the Rate may be levied

areas

221. The Commissioners can, of course, only levy the rates within the geographical limits of the jurisdiction conferred upon them by their commission or local Act (d).

Separate
rates.

Where the whole area within their jurisdiction is not benefited by the works maintained and constructed by them, or where different parts of that area are benefited by different works, it is competent for and, it is submitted, incumbent upon the Commissioners to divide that area and to make separate rates for the various parts of it, so that the rate for each part will defray the expenses incurred for the works which benefit that part (e).

Expenses of separate
areas.

They may, and, it is submitted, must, fix the limits of the various "levels, valleys, or districts" so formed, and keep separate accounts for each such part of their area, so that each part bears its own expenses, and any expenses incurred in respect of two or more such parts must be apportioned among them (f). Apparently, however, each part so formed and separately rated must be itself a single geographical area, and the Commissioners cannot select a number of unconnected pieces of land standing above a certain level and make a separate rate in respect of them (g).

SECT. 12.
Sewers
Rate.

222 The Commissioners have also power to partition their districts into sub-districts, fixing the boundaries of the latter, and to unite any separate districts or sub-districts within their commissions, and generally to re-adjust such districts and sub-districts (h). This power can only be exercised at a court specially holden for the purpose, of which ten clear days' notice must be given (i), and it may be that this restriction applies also to the previously existing powers of a similar character. It is submitted that any district or sub-district so formed must be a definite geographical area (l).

Partition into sub districts
and readjustment of areas.

For every district or sub-district the Commissioners may, and, it is submitted, must, make a separate and distinct rate (j). It is probable that a separate account must be kept of the expenses incurred in respect of every such district or sub-district, and that any expenses common to two or more such districts or sub-districts must be apportioned among them (m).

Rating of districts and
sub-districts

223 There is also power to make a rate "in gross" on each parish, township, or place within the jurisdiction of the Commissioners, so that the lands therein shall be rated in proportion to the benefit received by them as compared with the other places within the jurisdiction. Such a rate is made in a lump sum on the parish, township, or place, and is then apportioned among the individual occupiers of lands therein who are rateable to the general sewers rates. Ten days' notice in writing of the apportionment must be given to each such occupier before the next court of sewers to be held within the limits where the lands are situate. If no complaint is made at such next court the apportionment becomes conclusive; if there is any complaint, the Commissioners decide upon it (n), but their decision appears to be subject to appeal (o).

SECT. 12.
Sewers
Rate.

Such a rate in gross may, it is submitted, be made for any purpose for which a general sewers rate can be made (p).

(iii.) Persons Rateable.

Property in respect of which persons are assessed.

224. The Commissioners are empowered to tax and assess any person "who hath or holdeth any lands or tenements or common of pasture or profit of fishing or hath or may have any hurt, loss or disadvantage" in the area within the commission which requires drainage or protection (q).

The general sewers rate is therefore leviable in respect of any lands or tenements, within the area of the commission, which are benefited by the works constructed or maintained by the Commissioners (r). The benefit may be direct or indirect, small or great (s). If the works for the maintenance or repair of which the rate is made will, or do, benefit the land in question, it is immaterial that when first constructed they did not benefit it (t).

A general sewers rate is not leviable in respect of title or tithe commutation rentcharge (a).

Liability of owners and occupiers.

225. The taxing words of the original form of commission (b) are wide enough in themselves to include both an owner and an occupier (c), and a mortgagor in possession by his tenant (d). But general sewers rates are now as a rule made only upon the occupiers of the hereditaments benefited, and the modern enactments (e) appear to take it for granted that these are the proper persons to be rated to these rates. Accordingly, the general sewers rate has been held to be a tenant's rate or tax within the meaning of those words in the definition of rateable value for poor rate purposes (f). Apart from any contract, an occupier who pays the general sewers rate appears to have no right to be reimbursed by his landlord (g).

Commissioners' decision is final, but the Land Drainage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 133), s. 47, appears to give a right of appeal.

(p) The purposes for which such a rate could be made were expressly limited by the Sewers Act, 1841 (4 & 5 Vict. c. 45), s. 1, read with the preamble; but the Land Drainage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 133), s. 38, First Regulation, if it applies to such a rate, appears to give it a wider scope.

Rate.Rateable

property.

The general sewers rate is, however, expressly made leviable in respect of property owned by the Crown, whether actually occupied by the Crown or its servants, or by tenants paying rent therefor (i). A fortiori, the rate is leviable in respect of land not actually belonging to the Crown, but used for the purposes of the general administration of the country (k).

(iv.) Basis of Assessment.

227. A general sewers rate must be made at an equal sum in the £ upon the annual value of all the hereditaments in respect of which it is to be levied, and this annual value must be ascertained on the same principles as the rateable value for poor rate (l).

BASIS OF

In ascertaining the annual value, houses or other improvements existing upon the lands rated must not be left out of account (m); and the amount at which any hereditament should be rated to any particular rate is in no way affected by the extent of the benefit which it derives from the works of the Commissioners (n). Where different hereditaments within the jurisdiction of the Commissioners receive different degrees of benefit from the works, any differentiation of rating must be effected by the making and levying of different rates for different portions of the Commissioners' area in the manner and subject to the limitations already described (o).

(o) See pp. 104, 105, ante. In spite of the decisions cited, it is believed that some bodies of Commissioners still make rates by which lands benefited in various degrees are rated at different rates in the £; while others make rates by which the lands rated are rated at so much an acre, irrespective of value. The latter practice is said to rest on the authority of Callis, Reading upon the Statute of Sewers (1824 ed.), pp. 127, 128, and of Sewers Commissioners v. Outwell (Inhabitants) (1649), Sty. 178, 184, 191; Sewers Commissioners v. Newburg (1677), 3 Keb. 827; and the Hull Level Case (1740), 2 Stra. 1127. But even if these cases support that practice,

(v.) Making of the Rate.- Sewers Rate.Statutory directions.

228 The following are the only statutory directions bearing upon the method of preparing or making a general sewers rate.—

Persons appointed by the Commissioners may inspect and take copies of or extracts from the poor rate for these purposes, and the officer having custody of the poor rate must permit this to be done under a penalty not exceeding £5, recoverable summarily (p).

If the Commissioners do not know the name of an "owner or occupier" liable to the rate, he may be designated in the rate simply as the "owner or occupier" of the land in respect of which the assessment is made (q).

A presentment of a jury is not necessary in order to enable the Commissioners to levy a rate (r).

* (vi.) *Remedies of Ratepayers*Appeal against rate.

229. When the rate has been made by Commissioners of Sewers, properly so called (s), without the presentment of a jury (t), or when it has been made by a drainage board (u), any person aggrieved by the rate may appeal against it to quarter sessions (v). The appeal must be made within four months next after the making of the rate (u).

Notice of
appeal.

The Commissioners or the drainage board, as the case may be, are entitled to ten days' notice in writing; and the notice must state the nature and grounds of the appeal. Within four days after the service of the notice, the appellant must enter into recognisances, with two sureties, before a justice, to prosecute and abide the order of the court on his appeal (a).

If this provision is construed strictly considerable injustice may result, for there is no direction that a sewers rate is to be published in any way, and, consequently, a person aggrieved may find that his time for appealing has gone by before he has even heard that a rate has been made upon him. It will be safest to assume that by making the appeal is meant the entry of the appeal on the first day of the sittings at quarter sessions.

As in the case of a poor rate, a number of matters which a person rated to a general sewers rate may raise upon appeal may also, it is apprehended, be raised in answer to proceedings for distress, or in actions for illegal distress (f).

may be made to a single Commissioner, who may issue a summons to the person to show cause why he refuses to pay. The summons is returnable before any two (l) of the Commissioners. Upon the appearance of the person at the time and place specified in the summons, or, if he fails to appear, upon proof of service, and upon proof of the making of the rate and of the demand and refusal to pay, the Commissioners may issue a warrant to levy, by distress and sale of the person's goods, the arrears, and also the costs of obtaining the warrant, which must be specified, and the costs of executing it. A single summons and warrant may be issued for any number of rates (m), or against any number of persons (n). The warrant may be directed to the collector or other officer of sewers and to any other person, and may be executed by any one of the persons to whom it is addressed (o). The amount of the costs of executing the warrant by distress and sale is limited by statutory scale (p).

In the case of a rate made by a drainage board, it would appear that the summons and the warrant must be issued by a majority of the members present at a meeting of the board, of which three members form a quorum (q).

234. Besides proof of the making of the rate and proof of the default, proof is necessary before a distress warrant is issued that the rate was made by persons having jurisdiction to make it (r), that the person against whom the warrant is applied for was in occupation of the lands in respect of which the rate was made (s), and that those lands were in fact benefited by the works of the Commissioners (t).

And this is so even where a jury has presented that the lands are benefited by the works (Stafford v. Hamston (1821), 2 Brod. & Bing. 691). These decisions have generally been given in actions of illegal distress or of trespass, but the same principles must apply to proceedings under the Sewers Act, 1849 (12 & 13 Vict. c. 50). In Metropolitan Board of Works v. Vauxhall & Aldge Co. (1857), 7 E. & B. 904, it was held that the question of existence or non-existence of benefit was not open in distress proceedings; but there were special provisions for appeal in the Metropolitan Sewers Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 112), now repealed; and it is submitted that Any one of these matters may therefore afford a good ground of objection on the part of the person summoned to show cause why he refuses to pay (a).

SECT. 12.

Sewers
Rate.

It is apprehended that the issue of a distress warrant is an act or order which may be appealed against in the same way as the rate itself (b).

Grounds of objection to warrant.

235. Any overplus arising from the sale after satisfying the distress warrant must be returned on demand to the party whose goods have been distrained (c).

Overplus from sale.

236. There does not appear to be any power to commit in default of distress for sewers rates; but, if no distress can be found to satisfy the distress warrant, there is a provision for raising the sums specified in the warrant, together with the costs of raising them, out of the lands of the defaulter within the jurisdiction of the Commissioners (d).

Proceedings in default of distress.

237. Sewers rates made in respect of lands of the Crown may be recovered by distress in the same way as rates made in respect of lands in private ownership or occupation (e); but no distress may be levied in a royal palace which is occupied as the residence of the Sovereign, or which might be so occupied (f).

Crown lands.

238. Any person who comes into occupation of lands after the making of the rate is liable to pay in respect of the rate a sum calculated in proportion to the time during which he occupies the lands. A person, occupying lands at the time of making the rate, who subsequently goes out of occupation, and is succeeded by another occupier, is liable to pay a sum calculated in proportion to the time during which he occupied the lands. Any dispute between the parties as to the proportion is decided by the Commissioners. An outgoing occupier cannot claim (whether against the Commissioners or against a succeeding occupier is not clear) a larger amount than has been actually paid by him, and has not been repaid by his landlord (g).

Successive

the decision on this point is of no general authority as against the series of cases just cited. It has already been pointed out that the quantum of benefit is immaterial, see p. 106, ante.

(a) Compare the cases cited in title DISTRESS, Vol. XI., pp. 210 et seq., and at pp. 66 et seq., ante, with regard to objections which may be raised in answer to a summons for a distress warrant for poor rate. In respect to both rates the principle appears to be that only such matters can be raised in these proceedings as go to the jurisdiction to make the rate on a particular person rated. It seems clear that in respect of sewers rate, as in respect of poor rate, the amount upon which the person has been rated cannot be questioned in such proceedings; and see title DISTRESS, Vol. XI., pp. 212, 213.

(b) Land Drainage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 133), s. 47; see p. 108, ante. The question depends on whether the issue of the warrant is an "order made" or "act done" within the meaning of the Land Drainage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 133), s. 47.

SUB-SECT. 3—*Special Sewers Rate.*Sewers Rate.(i) Purposes

Definition.

239. A rate levied by the Commissioners to defray the expense of any improvements in existing works or of any new works, where the improvements or new works involve an expenditure of more than £1,000, is a special sewers rate (h).

Meaning of
"improvements."

By the term "improvements" is meant deepening, widening, straightening, or otherwise improving any existing watercourse or outfall for water, or removing milldams, weirs, or other obstructions to watercourses or outfalls for water, or raising, widening, or otherwise altering any existing wall or other defence (i).

Meaning of
"new works"

By "new works" is meant making any new watercourse or new outfall for water, or erecting any new defence against water, erecting any machinery, or doing any other act, not described in the Land Drainage Act, 1861 (j), as "maintenance" or "improvement" of existing works, required for drainage, the necessary supply of water for cattle, warping or irrigation; but where any old work is so much out of repair or so inefficient as to make it expedient to construct a new work in place thereof, the substituted work is not to be deemed a "new work" (k).

(ii) *Conditions Precedent*Preparation and publication of plans, estimates, and list of proprietors

240. A special sewers rate cannot be made unless certain preliminary requirements have been complied with. The Commissioners must cause to be made—(1) plans of the proposed improvements or new works, (2) an estimate of the expense, (3) an estimate of the area within which a rate will be required to levy the expense, and (4) a list of the names and addresses of the reputed proprietors of land within that area, showing the number of acres of which each is the reputed proprietor. A notice explaining the nature of the works, the expense, and the area, and stating where the above-mentioned documents may be inspected, must be published by advertisement in a newspaper circulating within the jurisdiction of the Commissioners once a week for two months before the improvements or new works are commenced, and on the church doors for three successive Sundays (l). During those two months any person interested may apply to have the list of reputed to appear to be the time of occupation within the period of the rate; compare as to this point, and as to the method of apportionment generally, R v Tempest, Ex parte Townend (1898), 14 T L R. 199; Davis v. Woodfield (1900), 81 L. T. 782; Cheney v. Tallwin, [1904] 2 K. B. 763. Where a person in occupation at the time of making the rate goes out of occupation and is not succeeded during the period of the rate by another occupier, he appears to get no relief, but to be liable for the whole of the rate.

proprietors corrected (m). If within those two months the proprietors of one half of the area within which the notice shows that it is proposed to levy the rate give to the Commissioners notice in writing of their dissent, the proposed improvements or new works cannot be carried out (n). Otherwise the works may proceed, and the expenses are raised by special sewers rates, but such expenses must not exceed the originally published estimate (o).

(iii) Areas in which the Rate may be Levied

241. It would seem (p) that a special sewers rate may be levied in any geographical area, within the jurisdiction of the Commissioners, which will be benefited by the proposed improvements or new works, and that such area need not be continuous with any division of the Commissioners' district that has been made for other purposes; and may include the whole of their district.

Areas liable to be rated.

(iv) Persons Rateable

242. A special sewers rate is, it is submitted, only leviable in respect of lands benefited by the improvements or new works the cost of which it is levied to defray (q), the mere fact that lands are situate within the area mentioned in the preliminary notice (r) not justifying a levy upon them if they are not in fact benefited.

Leviable in respect of lands
benefited.

The special rate is levied upon the owner of the lands in respect of which the rate is made, that is, on the person for the time being entitled to receive the rack rent, or who would be entitled to receive it if the land were let at a rack rent. The term "rack rent" includes any rent which is not less than two-thirds of the net annual value of the land out of which the rent issues (s). The owner, if his name is unknown to the commissioners, may be described as "owner" in the rate, without more (t).

Upon owners of the lands

A special sewers rate is not therefore, like a general sewers rate (u), a tenant's rate or tax within the meaning of the definition

Not a tenant's
rate

(n) Ibid, s 31. In this case any expenses incurred in the previous proceedings are met out of a general sewers rate (Griffiths v London Drainage Board (1871), L R 6 Q B 738 see p 104, ante)

(o) Land Drainage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict c 133), s 31 Even if the expenses are met in the first instance out of loans raised under ibid, s 40 (see p 104, ante), the money necessary to repay the principal and interest is raised by special sewers rates.

(p) This seems to follow from the facts that the provisions as to the proceedings preliminary to the making of a special rate (see pp. 112, 113, ante) are largely concerned with the area within which the rate "will be required to be levied," and that these provisions do not refer to those enactments (see pp 104, 105, ante) by which the Commissioners are empowered to make divisions for other purposes

(q) The cases to this effect in respect of general sewers rates are cited in note (v), p. 106, note (z), p 110, ante, and there is nothing to suggest that special rates are to be made on a different principle of rateable value to the poor (a); but it appears to be an "expense necessary to maintain the hereditament in a state to command the rent" within the meaning of that definition, and to be therefore deductible from the gross estimated rental in arriving at the rateable value (b).

(v.) Base of Assessment

Principles of
assessment

243. A special sewers rate should, it is submitted, be assessed on the same principles as a general sewers rate (c), namely, at an equal sum in the £ upon annual value, and not differentially according to the degree of benefit enjoyed by the lands in respect of which the rate is made (d).

(vi.) Making of the Rate.

Making of the
rate.

244. The statutory provisions as to the making of general sewers rates (e) apply to special sewers rates also. But the conditions precedent already described (f) must be fulfilled before a special sewers rate can be made.

Remedies of
ratepayers.

245. Persons rated to special sewers rates have, it is apprehended, the same remedies as persons rated to general sewers rates (g).

(viii.) Collection and Recovery

General
provisions.

246. The provisions already stated (h) in respect of the collection and recovery of general sewers rates apply also to special sewers rates, with the exception of the provisions as to change of occupation (i).

Recovery
from occupier.

In addition, the Commissioners have power (j), when the owner of any land, who is the person actually rated, makes default in paying any rate due from him, to levy the rate upon the occupier of the land, in the same way (k) as if the occupier were the person

No occupier can be required to pay on account of the owner more than the rent due, or that may accrue due from the occupier during the period of his occupancy; and the occupier may deduct the sum so paid from his rent, in the absence of any agreement to the contrary; and the Commissioners' receipt for any rate so paid by the occupier is a sufficient discharge (l). This provision does not apply unless the rate has been demanded from the owner and he has made default (m).

Part V.—Rates and Rating in the Metropolis.

SECT. 1.—The Metropolis.

247. For rating purposes the "Metropolis" means the unions and parishes not in union for the time being situate within the jurisdiction of the London County Council (n). It includes the City of London.

Definition of
"Metropolis"

SECT. 2.—Basis and System of Valuation.

SUB-SECT. 1.—The Valuation List in Force.

248. The rates levied in the Metropolis (o) are based upon rateable value, as in the rest of England. The definitions of "rateable value" and "gross value" in force in the Metropolis (p) are in somewhat different language from those in force outside (q); but the effect of the definitions is practically the same. Maximum rates of deduction between gross value and rateable value are, however, prescribed for various classes of property (r).

Meaning of
"rateable value" and
"gross value"

249. For the purposes of metropolitan rates, the valuation list in force is conclusive evidence of rateable value; and no hereditament not appearing in the valuation list in force can be inserted in any rate(s). That list is also conclusive evidence of the total rateable value of a parish for the purpose of county rate and other contributions (t).

The valuation list in force is the current "quinquennial" list subject to any alteration made therein by any "supplemental" or "provisional" list; it is altogether superseded in its turn, when a new quinquennial list comes into force (u).

A "quinquennial" list is made in every fifth year (a), and comes into force on the 6th April in the year succeeding that in which it is made (b); a "supplemental" list is made, unless one is unnecessary, in each of the first four years following the making of a quinquennial list (c), and any alteration made by a supplemental list becomes part of the valuation list in force on the 6th April in the year succeeding that in which such list is made (d). These lists come into force, unaltered, although there may be appeals against them pending on the 6th April (e).

A "provisional" list may be made at any time; it has operation from the date when the occupier concerned is served with a copy of the list and a prescribed notice (f); and it continues in force until the first quinquennial or supplemental list comes into force, which is finally approved by the assessment committee, subsequently to the date of such service (g).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Quinquennial List

250. The quinquennial list is made and signed by the overseers of each parish (h) in the prescribed form (i), and is deposited by them in the place in such parish where rate-books are deposited, notice

(a) The quinquennial list now current was made during 1910, and came into force on the 6th April, 1911. It, and any supplemental or provisional lists amending it, will be superseded on the 6th April, 1916, by a new quinquennial list made during 1915.

(e) Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 67), s. 4, 44. Ibid, s. 44, contains a provision for adjustment, upon the decision of the appeal, in respect of amounts overpaid or underpaid, this provision applying even where the appeal is allowed upon a question of occupation (*Burton v. A provisional list does not, however, affect the total values of the parish, or any contribution based on them (Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 67), s. 47 (10)). of deposit being given as in areas outside the Metropolis (j), but stating also the time and mode of making objections (k). The making and deposit should be carried out before the 1st June (l). At the time of deposit the overseers must send a duplicate of the list to the surveyor of taxes (m).

SECT. 2.
Basis and System of Valuation.

Overseers may require returns from owners and occupiers to help them in making the list (n). The list should contain all hereditaments capable of being rated, whether occupied or not (o), and should probably contain the gross and rateable values of any hereditament which enjoys a total or partial exemption from rates (p). The hereditaments shown are to be divided into classes (q). The total annual value on which the Crown pays a contribution in lieu of rates must be shown (r).

Returns and
for list.

Immediately after deposit the overseers must, in all cases where a hereditament is inserted in the list for the first time, or at an increased gross or rateable value, serve a notice on the occupier, or on the owner if he is liable to pay any rate or tax instead of the occupier (s).

The assessment committee, who within fourteen days of receipt must give a prescribed notice to railway and certain other companies interested (d), must then proceed to revise the list (e). The assessment committee must hear and decide upon objections at a meeting for the purpose, which must be held not less than sixteen days after the transmission of the list to the committee, and of which it must give not less than sixteen days' notice (f) ; and it may also make such alterations as it thinks fit, irrespective of any objection being made (g). The revision should be completed before the 1st October (h).

Objections to

253. Objections may be made by any person who is aggrieved by reason of any of certain specified matters (i). If a ratepayer, he must give notice before the expiration of twenty-five days after the list is deposited (k) ; a notice by the surveyor of taxes or the overseers must be given not less than seven days before the meeting for hearing objections (l). The notice may be served by post or otherwise (o). In hearing the objection, the assessment committee cannot, without the consent of the overseers, deal with any ground not raised in the notice (p). Generally, the powers of the assessment committee in regard to these matters are the same as outside the Metropolis (q).

SECT. 2.
Basis and System of Valuation.

254 When the assessment committee has completed its revision it approves the list, and within three days sends it to the overseers for re-deposit (r). Notice of re-deposit is given by the overseers in the same way as notice of deposit (s), and, where a hereditament has been (apart from objection) inserted for the first time, or at an increased assessment, the overseers must give notice to the occupier, or to the owner, if he is liable to pay a rate or tax in place of the occupier (t).

Approval and re-deposit of list

The assessment committee must appoint a day, not less than fourteen nor more than twenty-one days after re-deposit, for hearing objections to the alterations; and seven days' notice of objection must be given (a).

Hearing objections to alterations

After hearing the objections made on re-deposit and making any further alterations in the list, the assessment committee finally approves the list (b) and causes the gross and rateable values to be totalled, the list being signed by three members present at the meeting at which it is finally approved; and duplicates of the list are sent to the London County Council and to the overseers (c). This should be done before the 1st November (d). The overseers

SUB-SECT 3 — *Appeals against the Quinquennial List*Nature of
appeal.

256. A ratepayer, the overseers, or the surveyor of taxes may appeal to special sessions, but only if aggrieved by a decision of the assessment committee on an objection with regard to value (h).

sessions.

Special sessions for hearing such appeals are held by the justices for every petty sessional division at any time after the 30th November, which will enable them to determine all appeals, if they can do so, before the ensuing 1st January (i). Notice of the time of sitting must be given to the overseers to be published (k).

Notice of
appeal

Notice in writing of the appeal, specifying the corrections desired, must be given on or before the 21st November to certain specified persons (l).

Jurisdiction and powers of special

The special sessions may not hear an appeal touching any matter in respect of which notice of appeal has already been given to quarter sessions, and may only decide on questions of value. If they so decide, they may alter the value stated for the particular hereditament in the valuation list, but such an alteration does not affect the totals of the values therein appearing (m). Subject to the limitations just stated, then powers as to the order in which they hear appeals, as to adjournment, amendment of notice of appeal, confirmation or alteration of the list, and costs are the same as in the case of quarter sessions hearing an appeal against the list (n). 257. An appeal lies to the County of London Quarter Sessions (q) against a decision of the assessment committee, on an objection made before them to which the appellant was a party, or against a decision of the special sessions, whether the appellant was a party or not (r). Such an appeal is open to any ratepayer (s) and to any surveyor of taxes (t), as well as to a metropolitan borough council, and to the Common Council of the City of London, as overseers of the parish (u).

Appeal to county
sessions.

Sittings of quarter sessions for the purpose of hearing these appeals may not be held until after the 1st February in the calendar year following the making of the list, and should be held if possible at a time which will enable them to determine the appeals before the 31st March (v), ten days' notice of the first day of meeting being given by the clerk (w).

Sittings.

An appeal to quarter sessions against the decision of an assessment committee may be brought on any ground taken on objection before the committee (b). An appeal against the decision of special sessions may only be brought upon a question of value (c). The same appeal may include more than one hereditament separately assessed in the same valuation list of which the appellant is or is deemed to be the occupier or ratepayer (d). If the appellant accepts the gross value appearing in the list, the respondents cannot show that it is too low (e).

appeal.

Notice of appeal in writing, specifying the correction desired, must be served on or before the 14th January (f) upon the assessment committee in every case, and also upon the surveyor of taxes, whenever the gross value is challenged (g). The appeal must be entered by lodging a copy of the notice with the clerk of the court on or before the same date; recognisances must then be entered into or security deposited, and the appellant must, where the rateable value appealed against exceeds £300, state his "case" on or before the 1st February (h).

Appearance on appeal.

The assessment committee may appear on any appeal (i) with the consent of the borough council or of the guardians, whichever of these bodies appoints the committee (j). Respondents must give notice of their intention to appear as such on or before the 28th January, and must state their "case" as above (h).

Powers of

258. The quarter sessions have power to appoint the order in which they will hear the appeals, to adjourn the hearing from time to time, and to confirm the valuation list or alter it in any manner not in contravention of the Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869 (l). In certain circumstances they may allow notice of appeal to be given out of time, or to be amended (m). On the application of either party they may appoint a person to make a valuation of the hereditament concerned (n). The court hearing the appeal may award costs to be paid by any of the parties as they think just (o), but cannot order the assessment committee to pay costs, if it appears without the consent of the borough council or guardians, as the case may be (p). As to procedure generally, the quarter sessions hearing these appeals have the ordinary powers of quarter sessions (q).

The appeals may be heard by the chairman or deputy-chairman sitting alone (r). A member of an assessment committee of one union is not, as such, disqualified from sitting to hear an appeal from a different union (s). The court may state a special case for the opinion of the High Court (t).

259. An appeal against the total of the gross or rateable values shown in the valuation list for any parish on the ground that it is too high or too low may be brought to quarter sessions (a) by any ratepayer, by an assessment committee, by overseers (b), or by any other body which levies rates or contributions out of rates (c). Such an appeal is necessary whenever the valuation of a particular hereditament has been altered on appeal by special sessions or quarter sessions (d). It may also lie on other grounds (e), but cannot be brought on the ground that particular hereditaments are under-assessed (f).

SUB-SECT. 4.—Supplemental List

260. In each of the first four years of the quinquennial period (i) a supplemental list is made showing all alterations which have taken place in any of the matters stated in the valuation list in force in the preceding twelve months, but containing only the hereditaments affected (k). certificate to that effect is sent by the overseers to the assessment committee (l).

261. An alteration, to justify its insertion in a supplemental list, must be one specifically affecting the value of the hereditament in question; a general rise, or fall, in values is not sufficient (n); nor is an increased premium paid for a new lease sufficient (m).

A structural alteration is not necessary (n); where rateable value is based upon the power to earn profit, an increase (o) or a decline (p) in the capacity of the hereditament for earning profit (shown by an actual reduction of receipts) is sufficient, provided it is not due to a merely temporary cause (p); and a decline in the value of licensed property due to the imposition by Act of Parliament of higher licence duties is sufficient (q).

The hereditament inserted is not to be revalued, but a deduction or addition is to be made showing the effect of the alteration upon the value shown in the valuation list in force at the commencement of the twelve months (r).

262. The duties and procedure for the making, revision, and approval of, and appeals against, a supplemental list are the same as in the case of a quinquennial list (s), and the rights of objection and appeal are similar, and are regulated by the same provisions (t). A ratepayer who is aggrieved by the omission to insert his hereditament in a supplemental list has also similar rights of objection and appeal to quarter sessions on that ground (a).

SUB-SECT. 5 — Provisional List.

Procedure with regard to provisional list.

264. The overseers may send a provisional list to the assessment committee of their own accord, and must do so if requisitioned by the assessment committee, or any ratepayer in the union, or the surveyor of taxes (e). If a requisition is sent to the overseers, the person making it must send a copy to the assessment committee; and if the overseers make default within fourteen days after the requisition has been served on them and a prima facie case of diminution is made out, the assessment committee must appoint a person to make such a list, and can be compelled by mandamus to do so (f). On receipt of the list, the assessment committee must serve a copy on the surveyor of taxes, and on the ratepayer concerned, together with a notice of the date and mode of making objections (g), and the list is, in practice, treated as having operation from the date of the service on the ratepayer (h). Objections may then be made within the time stated in the last-mentioned notice, either on the ground that the hereditament ought not to appear in the list or on grounds available in the case of a quinquennial list; and they are determined in the same way as objections to a quinquennial list (i). If no objection is made in

(c) Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict c 67), s 47, Ellis v. Camberwell Assessment Committee, [1900] 1 Q B 68, 74, C A. These causes have been already described, and certain of the cases cited in notes (n), (p), p. 124, ante, were decided with reference to provisional lists. There is some doubt as to whether a provisional list can be made if the increase or decrease has taken place in the previous year (R v St. Mary, Bermondsey, Overseers (1884), 14 Q B D 351, 357).

(d) A provisional list is a temporary measure, designed to give the increase or reduction an immediate effect on the rates, and there may be as many such lists for the parish in the year as there are hereditaments affected.

The speech of Lord ATKINSON in Metropolitan Water Board v Phillips (1912), 18th November, H L (not yet reported), throws some doubt on the correctness of the view that is taken in practice. As to the incorporation of the provisional list in the valuation list in force, and as to its continuance in operation, see p 116, ante.

(i) Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict c 67), s. 47 (4)—(6). It is doubtful whether the committee has power to make any alteration in the list, otherwise than on objection. For notices of objection and appeal, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XI., pp. 224—264.

time, or when any objection made has been determined, the assessment committee causes a copy of the list to be made, with any alterations made in it by the committee, and returns the list and copy, signed and dated by its clerk, to the overseers (k).

No appeal lies against a provisional list (l).

Effect on current
 rate.

265. The current general rate (m) is affected by the provisional list from the date of its coming into operation (n). Entries are made in the rate by the overseers, and the occupier of the hereditament affected is liable, as from that date, for the rate assessed upon the rateable value appearing in the provisional list (o). If, when the next revision of the valuation list takes place, the quinquennial or supplemental list as approved and altered on appeal contains a lower rateable value, the amount overpaid is repaid or allowed (p).

SECT. 3.—Rates Levied in the Metropolis.

SUB-SECT. 1 —The Metropolitan Boroughs: General Rate.

Duty as overseers
 with regard to poor rate

266. The council of each metropolitan borough acts as the overseers of every parish within the borough (q).

It is the duty of the borough council as overseers to levy a poor rate in order to raise certain sums which the council is required by precepts or orders to pay to other authorities and which must be raised by means of the poor rate (r). These authorities are—the London County Council, which issues precepts to satisfy the county rate (s); boards of guardians (t); and the Receiver of the Metropolitan Police District (u). The poor rate is, however, made and levied together with the general rate as one rate, which is called the general rate (b).

In the Metropolis, the county rate includes the whole of the expenses of education, the London County Council being the local education authority for the whole county (Education Act, 1902 (2 Edw 7 c 42), s 1; Education (London) Act, 1903 (3 Edw. 7, c. 24), Sched. I. (1)); and there is no limit to the amount which 267. The London County Council issues from time to time to the borough council precepts to satisfy the county rate in respect of each parish in its borough (c). The amount required in respect of each parish is calculated upon the total rateable value of the parish as shown in the valuation list for the time being in force (d).

SECT. 3.
Rates Levied
in the Metropolis.

The county rate includes, besides general county contributions (e) and special county contributions (f), an "equalisation charge" (g), which is levied, as a separate item, on the parishes from which it is due. Its amount is calculated as follows—a contribution of 6d. in the £ on the rateable value of each parish is charged against each parish for the year; the whole amount of these contributions is called the "equalisation fund." Every half-year half the fund is apportioned among the parishes in proportion to their population, the amount apportioned to each parish being called "the grant." If the grant due to the parish is less than its contribution, the difference is levied from the borough council as above stated, in respect of the particular parish. If the grant is more than the contribution, the difference is paid to the borough council out of the fund and credited to the particular parish for certain specified expenses. Where a borough contains two or more parishes, and the aggregate of the contributions of those parishes is less than the aggregate of the grants due to them, the difference is paid to the borough council from the fund, and no equalisation charge is levied from any of those parishes. A separate account of the county fund is kept for the equalisation fund (h).

(c) The powers of the London County Council in respect of the making of county rates and the issue of precepts to satisfy them are the same as those of a county council in the country, see pp. 69 et seq. ante, and Local Government Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 41), ss. 3 (1), 40 (9). The precepts are issued to metropolitan borough councils by virtue of the London Government Act, 1899 (62 & 63 Vict. c. 14), s. 11 (2). As to the form of the precept, see London (Financial Arrangements) Scheme, 1900, Stat. R. & O., 1900, p. 392.

No county rate basis is prepared in the Metropolis (Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 67), s. 77 and Sched. I). In parishes in the Metropolis in which there is agricultural land, the amount required is calculated in proportion to the rateable value of the parish reduced by one half the rateable value of the agricultural land in the parish (as shown in the valuation list) (Agricultural Rates Act, 1896 (59 & 60 Vict. c. 16), s. 3).

Treasury contribution together is limited to 11*d.* in the £ on the rateable value of the parish (k), subject to a correction in respect of the pension fund (l).

269. Boards of guardians in the Metropolis issue precepts to the metropolitan borough councils for the sums required from each parish in the borough to meet the expenses of the boards, in the same way that boards of guardians outside the Metropolis issue precepts to overseers (m). The expenses of boards of guardians in the Metropolis include, however, besides expenses incurred by the boards themselves, the amounts required in precepts issued to the boards of guardians by the Local Government Board on behalf of the Metropolitan Common Poor Fund (n), and on behalf of the managers of the metropolitan asylums (o).

Expenses
 payable out of general
 rate.

270. All the expenses of a metropolitan borough council, incurred in the discharge of its own duties, are met out of the general rate (p). These expenses and any sums payable as such expenses are divided among the parishes in the borough, if there is more than one, in proportion to the rateable value of the parish, subject to the adjustment of local burdens (q). Rateable value for this purpose includes the value of Government property, upon which a contribution in lieu of rates is paid (r). Contributions are required from metropolitan borough councils to the fund out of which the expenses of the Central Body established in the Metropolis under the Unemployed Workmen Act, 1905 (s), and expenses of distress committees incurred with the consent of the Central Body, are defrayed. These contributions are part of the expenses of a metropolitan borough council, and are paid on the demand of the Central Body in proportion to the rateable value of the borough, but must not in any year exceed the amount produced by a $\frac{1}{2}$ d. rate on that rateable value (t). council under any of the adoptive Acts, or under any local or other Act, which does not extend to the whole of any parish in the borough, are levied as an additional item of the general rate over that part of the parish to which the Act in question extends; and, if the Act extends to the whole parish, the expenses are included in the general rate for the parish (u).

SECT. 3.
Rates Levied
in the Metropolis.

271. The general rate is assessed, made, collected and levied as if it were a poor rate, and in general all enactments applying of referring to the poor rate apply or refer also to the general rate (v). But the promoters of an undertaking under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (w), are only liable during the construction of works to make good any deficiency in that part of the rate which represents the poor rate or sums chargeable on it (r).

Making and collection of general rate

The general rate is assessed upon the rateable value appearing in the valuation list in force when the rate is made (u).

Basis of
assessment

The general rate is made in a prescribed form and entered in a rate-book, and a prescribed declaration must be signed by the town clerk before the rate is presented to justices for allowance (b). Special provisions are made for showing additional items and exemptions (c). A clerical or arithmetical error in the rate may be amended upon an application by the person aggrieved to two justices or a police magistrate (d), and, if a person is omitted or misdescribed, the error may be corrected on a similar application by the overseers (e). When a hereditament becomes rateable in parts, the value shown in the valuation list may be apportioned by the overseers (f).

Demand note.
 Persons
 assessed.

The demand note is in one of two prescribed forms, and shows, among other details, the several purposes of the rate, including the equalisation charge, if any, and the amount in the £ required for each (g).

272. Subject to any special exemptions, the persons rateable are the same as those rateable to the poor rate outside the Metropolis, and the provisions for the rating of owners instead of occupiers apply equally (h). But any total or partial exemptions which existed in the Metropolis at the time of the passing of the London Government Act, 1899 (i), also apply (j). A tenant who was entitled at that time to deduct against his landlord any sum paid on account of sewers rate is still so entitled (k).

Appeal against general rate.

273. There is no appeal against the general rate in the Metropolis in respect of matters upon which the valuation list is conclusive (l), but upon such grounds as non-occupation (m) or total (n) or partial (o) exemption, or upon the question whether owner or occupier should be rated (p), an appeal lies against the general rate to the county quarter sessions, in the same way as an appeal lies against a poor rate outside London, except that objection to the list is not a condition precedent and no notice is given to the assessment committee (q). An appeal does not lie against a rate based on a provisional list on the ground that there had been no

SUB-SECT 2.—The City of London

274. The Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens of the City of London acting through the Common Council are the overseers for the parish of the City of London (s).

275. As such overseers the Common Council make a poor rate (t), which includes, besides certain expenses of the Common Council itself, sums required by the authorities who levy their money by precept, namely, the London County Council and the guardians of the City of London union (t); and they also make a separate and distinct general rate (a), which includes sums raised for the purposes of the old sewers rate, consolidated rate, police rate (b), trophy tax (c), and certain miscellaneous expenses. An appeal against the latter rate lies to the quarter sessions for the City of London (d).

Part I.—Introduction.

SECT. 1.—The General Nature of Real Estate and Chattels Real.

SECT 1
The General
Nature of Real Estate and Chattels
Real.

Meaning of
"property"

276. The term "property" is used to denote either rights in the nature of ownership or the corporeal things, whether lands or goods, which are the subjects of such rights. This dual meaning of the word arises from a natural tendency to identify the corporeal thing with the aggregate of rights which make up the entire right of ownership, including the right of exclusive possession or enjoyment; and it is confined to cases where the right involves possession. Thus, where a person is entitled to land in fee simple in possession, the term "property" is equally appropriate to describe the land itself and his interest in the land, and this usage is extended to limited interests, such as a life estate, in possession. But when the right does not involve possession of a corporeal thing, where, for example, it is an easement or a rentcharge, the term "property" denotes a right only (a).

277. The term "real" denotes that the thing itself, or a particular right in the thing, can be specifically recovered (b), and since, speaking generally, such specific recovery was originally only allowed in the case of land to which the claimant was entitled for his own or another's life or a greater estate (c), the term "real property" denotes, first, land and things attached to land so as to become part of it, and, secondly, rights in the land which endure for a life or are inheritable (d), whether these involve full ownership or only some partial enjoyment of the land or its profits (e).

(a) This confusion between the thing and the subject of rights and the rights themselves has been frequently commented on, see Austin's Jurisprudence, 4th ed., pp 371, 804; Williams, Law of Real Property, 21st ed., p. 4, and as to corporeal hereditaments, see, further, p 160, post; but in practice it is not productive of inconvenience.

(b) This follows from the division of actions into real and personal, a division which is quite distinct from that between actions in rem and actions in personam and see the Law Quarterly Review, Vol IV, p 394. As to real actions, see title ACTION, Vol I, pp 32 et seq.

(c) See Pollock and Matland, History of English Law, Vol II, p 179, where it is pointed out that this incident of specific recovery has no actual connection with the nature of the right of property, and see title PERSONAL PROPERTY, Vol. XXII. pp 387 et seq, 392 et seq, 398. A more substantial distinction is that "things real are such as are permanent, fixed and immovable, which cannot be carried out of their place, as lands and tenements; things personal are goods, money, and all other moveables, which may attend the owner's person wherever he thinks proper to go" (2 Bl. Com 16). But this only suits tangible forms of personal property, and not the most important modern forms, such as shares and other choses in action; and see, further, title PERSONAL PROPERTY, Vol. XXII, p 387, note (c).

(d) Leasehold interests were not originally specifically recoverable and have long been described as chattels real; see p 138, post.

real.

278. Proprietary rights involving possession of real property in its corporeal sense are called "estates" and these estates are divided into real estate and chattels real. Real estate includes estates in land which are of freehold (f) or customary (g) tenure, and also any rights in land, such as a rentcharge (h), which admit of being limited in the same manner as freehold estates (i). The chief result of an interest being classed as real estate is that, unless its duration is restricted to a life or lives, it is capable, apart from the Land Transfer Act, 1897 (j), of descending to the heir (k). An interest for a term of years is classed as a chattel, and on the death of the termor it goes with his goods and chattels to his personal representatives (l); but being carved out of the realty, it is known as a chattel real (m).

SECT. 2.—The Feudal System and Feudal Tenure.

No absolute ownership in land.

279. Technically, land is not the subject of absolute ownership, but of tenure. According to the doctrine of the common law there is no land in England in the hands of a subject but is held of some lord by some service and for some estate (n); and this tenure is either

Cas. 555, 571, and for the definition of real estate, see p. 162, post. The fact that copyholds could formerly not be devised at law without a surrender to the uses of the will led to the rule that "real estate" in a will did not include copyholds in the absence of evidence of intention to include them; see Car v Ellison, supra. Such evidence was supplied by a surrender to the uses of the will (Tendril v. Smith (1740), 2 Atk 85; Dod v. Dod (1755), Amb. 274, Torre v. Browne, supra); and, without such surrender, an intention was inferred when the testator had copyhold, but no freehold, estate (Smith v. Baker (1737), 1 Atk 385, Ithell v. Beane (1749), 1 Ves Sen 215; Church v. Mundy (1808), 15 Ves. 396), but in the latter case it was further necessary for equity to supply the surrender, and this was only done in favour of a wife, children, or creditors (Byas v. Byas (1751), 2 Ves Sen 164; Judd v. Pratt (1808), 15 Ves. 390; see Seaman v. Woods (1857), 24 Beav 372). The necessity for a surrender to the uses of the will was abolished by stat. (1815) 55 Geo 3, c 192, repealed, and in effect re-enacted, by the Wills Act, 1837 (7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict c 26), and therefore evidence of intention to devise copyholds, other than the mere use of the term "real estate," became unnecessary (Doe d Clarke v. Ludlam (1831), 7 Bing 275; Torre v. Browne, supra, at pp. 573, 574); and copyholds may pass under a devise of freehold and leasehold estates and all other property (Edwards v. Barnes (1835), 2 Bing (N. C.) 252, and see, further, title WILLS), or of freehold and personal estate (Reeves v. Baker (1854), 18 Beav. 372, 382). under the King directly, or under some mesne lord, or a succession of mesne lords, who, or the last of whom, holds of the King. Thus the King is lord paramount, either mediate or immediate, of all land within the realm^(o). The tenure of land is based upon the assumption that it was originally granted as a "feud" ^(p) by the King to his immediate tenant on condition of certain services, and, where there has been subinfeudation, that the immediate tenant in turn regranted it ^(q); and although for most purposes this system, known as the "feudal system," has lost its practical importance, it still determines the form of property in land ^(r).

allodial land (Co Litt 1 b : 2 Bl Com 47); and a system of allodial ownership appears to have preceded the feudal system in England, the land then owned being termed, according to the mode of acquisition, bookland or folklund (Co Litt. 65 a, Hargrave's note; Pollock and Maitland, History of English Law, Vol I, pp 37 et seq . Digby, History of the Law of Real Property, 5th ed , pp 11 et seq) Such ownership is assumed to have been—at any rate as to bookland, or land received by grant—absolute ownership, and the term "allodium" is used to denote land owned absolutely. The term survived the institution of the feudal system, and was applied to land held of a lord, so that a man was sometimes said to hold in allodio, but the allodium and the beneficium were then becoming transformed into the feodum (Pollock and Maitland, History of English Law, p 49; Digby, History of the Law of Real Property, 5th ed , p 26)

(p) "Feudum," "feodum," "fief," "fee"; these appear to be all forms of the same word; as to their derivation, see Digby, History of the Law of Real Property, 5th ed , p 31, n; compare 2 Bl Com 45. The hypothesis is that the land was granted by a chieftain to his follower; in Latin as a beneficium, in the Teutonic languages as a fief, or fee—Latinised into feodum, feodum—or their equivalents. The English terms were feodum and fee (Pollock and Maitland, History of English Law, Vol. I, p 214, n (2)). The grant assumed and perpetuated the relation of lord and vassal; and the interest of the donee came to be hereditary. The leading idea in "feud," as used in the expression "feudal system," is that of vassalage; in the form "fee" the hereditary nature of the vassal's interest is most prominent (see Pollock and Maitland, History of English Law, Vol. I., pp 44 et seq); and as to the theory that the title to all land is derived ultimately from the King, see 2 Bl Com 51. The term "feu" is in everyday use in Scotland. Feu is there the prevailing tenure of land, and is now of the nature of a perpetual lease.

(r) It has been said that the practical consequences of tenure at the present day are (1) escheat (see title DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, Vol XI., pp. 23 et seq); (2) the lord's rights in respect of copyholds (see title COPYHOLDS, Vol VIII., pp 22 et seq.); (3) the rights of lord and commoners (see title COMMON AND RIGHTS OF COMMON, Vol IV., pp. 499 et seq) in respect of waste lands of a manor (Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p 3).

certain services (a). The nature of these services varied according as the tenure was in chivalry or in socage. Tenure in chivalry furnished the basis of the military organisation of the Teutonic races after the fall of the Roman Empire (b). Tenure in socage, supplemented by tenure in villenage, provided for the practical requirements of agriculture (c). In addition, lands might be granted to the Church, and, if no services were reserved, this was tenure in frankalmoin (d).

chivalry

281. The usual form of tenure in chivalry was tenure by knight's service (e). The personal relation of lord and tenant was constituted by homage and fealty (f), and the essential service was the providing of one or more knights according to the size of the fee (g). This service came to be generally commuted for a money payment known as "escuage" or rent (h). The tenure imposed upon the tenant the

(b) See 2 Bl Com 52

(c) Probably the principle of tenure by military service was recognised in England before the Conquest, but, according to the current view, its definite establishment took place in the reign of William I (compare 2 Bl Com 48), to whom is due the feature which distinguished it from military tenure on the Continent, namely, that the military service of undertenants was due directly to the King, and not to the mesne lord. It flourished during the century succeeding the Conquest, and its various incidents, including relief, wardship, and marriage, became more or less definitely ascertained. But, as a system of military organisation, it had only a short existence. Personal service for forty days in the year, accompanied sometimes with the claim that the service must not be outside the realm, did not supply the King with the kind of army he required. Money payments (see the text, infra) to some extent replaced personal service; but from the time of Edward I neither personal service nor its money equivalent appears to have been available, and the Crown forces had to be raised by other means. As to the speedy decay of feudalism as a military system, see Pollock and Maitland, History of English Law, Vol I, p 231. As to the modern relation between the Crown and the Royal Forces, see title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol VI., pp 417 et seq.

(g) 2 Bl Com. 62. But the knight's fee did not represent any fixed extent of land; as to this, and as to the apportionment of the number of knights as between the King and his tenants in chief, see Pollock and Maitland, History of English Law, Vol I, pp 235 et seq, and, as to the introduction and size of knights' fees, Round, Feudal England, pp 225—236. The definite allotment of military service appears to have been commenced by William I and to have been complete under Henry II (Pollock and Maitland, History of English Law, Vol I, pp. 236, 238). An estate held of the King, consisting of many knights' fees held of the tenant in capite, came to be known as an honour or barony. Thence may have arisen the distinction between peers and commoners (Pollock and Maitland, History of English Law, Vol. I, p 259); and see, further, title PEERAGES AND DIGNITIES, Vol. XXII., p. 264, note (c).

(h) This was so in the case of tenants not holding directly of the King, and homage, fealty and escuage (or scutage) were a sufficient test of tenure burdens known as relief and aid, and gave the lord the rights, if the tenant had died leaving an infant heir, of the wardship and marriage of such heir (v).

282 Homage was not required in socage tenure (k), but the tenant did fealty, and usually rendered services such as plough service or the payment of fixed escuage or money rent, and it was essential to this tenure that any services should be certain (l). There might be relief payable in money, such as one year's rent, or in kind (m), but the lord was not entitled to the rights of marriage or wardship (n). The wardship of an infant heir until fourteen years went to his nearest relation to whom the inheritance could not descend (o). Services in money or labour, however, were not a necessary incident of socage tenure (p).

283. Where the land was held by personal service, the tenant was a "serjeant" (q), and his tenure was known as "tenure in serjeanty." This tenure was ordinarily a tenure in chivalry and carried by knight's service (Littleton's Tenures, s. 103; see Pollock and Matland, History of English Law, Vol. I, pp. 251, 253, note (1); 2 Bl. Com. 74). Strictly the escuage was due to the immediate lord, but on various occasions, chiefly between 1190 and 1240, it was levied directly by the King (Pollock and Matland, History of English Law, Vol. I, pp. 232, note (1), 249, 253). This system enabled knights' fees to be cut up into fractional parts in a manner which would have been impossible had the service been really military. To what extent the service of the tenants in capite of the King was changed to a money payment seems doubtful. Perhaps the commutation was a matter of special arrangement, and in the absence of arrangement the tenant had to furnish military service or pay a fine for his default (ibid. p. 247). Blackstone declines to recognise tenure by escuage as tenure by knight service, and sees in it, as was indeed the fact, the destruction of the advantages of the feudal constitution, leaving only its hardships (2 Bl. Com. 75).

As to relief, re, a sum to be paid by the tenant on succeeding to the fee, see Littleton's Tenures, ss. 112, 113; Pollock and Matland, History of English Law, Vol. I, p. 288. The relief for a knight's fee was 100s.; for a barony it was not fixed (ibid., p. 289). As to the origin of reliefs and their connection with heriots, see ibid. p. 293, and as to heriots, see title COPYHOLDS, Vol. VIII, pp. 37 et seq. As to aids, see Pollock and Matland, History of English Law, Vol. I, pp. 299, 330. The recognised "aids" were to ransom the lord, to marry his eldest daughter, and to knight his eldest son; there might also be an aid to assist the lord in paying his own relief. As to wardship and marriage, see Littleton's Tenures, ss. 109, 110, 114, 115. Pollock and Matland, History of English Law, Vol. I, pp. 299 et seq. In the case of tenants in chief there was an additional relief known as "primer seisin" (ibid. p. 292). As to all these incidents of tenure in chivalry, see also 2 Bl. Com. 63 et seq.

(k) Homage was peculiarly an incident of military tenure, though it was occasionally rendered by socage tenants (Pollock and Matland, History of English Law, Vol. I, p. 286). As to its nature, see Co. Litt. 64 a—67 b.

with it relief (r), wardship, and marriage, but the personal nature of the service forbade its commutation for escuage (or scutage). Ultimately, a distinction was drawn between service of an honourable or important nature, which constituted the tenure of "grand serjeanty" (s) and existed only under the King immediately, and the tenure known as "petty serjeanty" (t), where the service was the rendering of some small matter incident to warfare; but petty serjeanty did not carry wardship or marriage, and was in effect a socage tenure.

284. Every freehold tenure which was not in chivalry or in frankalmoin (u) came to be classed as socage; and a freehold tenure, where only fealty was due, was of this nature (a). Where the main feature of a grant of land on freehold tenure was the payment of a rent in money, the tenant was frequently said to hold in "fee farm," and the rent was called a "fee farm rent," but the tenure was a socage tenure (b).

(a) Littleton's Tenures, s. 131 The association of socage tenure with agriculture suggested the old derivation of socage from "soc" (French, ploughshare) More probably it has the same root as "seek," and denotes that the tenant was subject to the jurisdiction of a manor or other local court (compare the use of the words "sac and soc" in grants of private jurisdiction, see Pollock and Matland, History of English Law, Vol I, pp. 20, 60, and as to the derivation of "socage," see ibid., p. 274, Digby, History of the Law of Real Property, 5th ed., p. 45, n) Socage tenure probably existed before the Conquest, and it has been called a relic of Saxon liberty (2 Bl Com. 81) At the Conquest, many manors—especially manors of ancient demesne (see p. 150, post)—had tenants known as sokemen ("soemanns"), who were distinct from villeins, and were sometimes divided as free and bond sokemen. But, while the free sokemen may have given their name to tenure in socage, this arose also under other circumstances—by tcoffments where fixed rents or services were reserved; by ancient tenure at fixed rents or services where no charter existed; and generally every free holding that was not in chivalry, or serjeanty (see the text, supra), or frankalmoin, was classed as socage. Since socage was not liable to uncertain escuage, wardship and marriage, there was doubtless a tendency for it to increase at the expense of military tenure by the gradual conversion into socage of holdings as to which the evidence of military tenure had been lost, see Littleton's Tenures, s. 118, Vinogradoff, Villainage in England, pp. 178—210, Pollock and Matland, History of English Law, Vol I, pp. 271—277, 343, Vol II, p. 268; Holdsworth, History of English Law, Vol I, pp. 10 et seq. With socage tenure were sometimes associated special incidents so as to constitute particular species of this tenure; see p. 148, post there were several free tenants holding under the same lord, the lord, as an incident of this system of tenure, had rights of civil jurisdiction over them; and by special grant from the Crown or by prescription he might have rights of criminal jurisdiction. He might also have villein, or unfree, tenants holding land at his will—afterwards copyholders (d) holding at his will according to the custom of the manor—and over these, also, he had jurisdiction (e). In addition he might retain lands—his demesne lands—in his own occupation. An estate large enough to have these various incidents—free tenants, villein tenants, demesne lands, and a local court—was known as a manor (f).

Manors.

286 Either originally or at an early date the tenant had power to alienate the entirety of his holding so as to substitute the grantee for himself as tenant to the immediate lord (g); but, since he could not require the lord to accept an apportionment of the services, he could not alienate in this way a part of his holding (h). If he wished to make an effective grant of a part, he could do so only by subinfeudation (i). But subinfeudation prejudiced the superior lord in the enjoyment of his feudal dues (j), and it was first checked (k) instance of eight successive subinfeudations is given) The actual tenant of the land held in dominio, the mesne lord in servitio. The tenants of the Crown were usually known as tenants in capite, but this was in fact a relative term (2 Co Inst 501), and each tenant held in capite of the lord immediately above him (Pollock and Matland, History of English Law, Vol I., p. 212, note (1)).

(e) Private jurisdiction was an essential element in feudalism (Pollock and Matland, History of English Law, Vol I., pp 20, 21); and, as to such jurisdiction, see ibid, pp 558 et seq. Originally there was, perhaps, only one court for free and non free tenants (ibid, p. 581). Subsequently there were two courts—the court baron for the freeholders, and the customary court for the copyholders (Digby, History of the Law of Real Property, 5th ed., pp 52 et seq), and see titles COPYHOLDS, Vol. VIII., p. 11; Courts, Vol IX., p. 216.

(f) Pollock and Matland, History of English Law, Vol I., pp 584 et seq. But the term was at first indefinite, and a manor did not necessarily require all these incidents (ibid). As to honours and manors, see title COPYHOLDS, Vol VIII., pp. 1 et seq. Except in Ireland and in a few cases in the North of England, honours are practically extinct.

(g) Bract lib. ii., c 35, fol. 81; Co Litt 43 a; see Digby, History of the Law of Real Property, 5th ed., p. 157. Blackstone, however, following Wright (Tenures, 155), perhaps with more regard to theory than history, considers that the fee could not be alienated without the consent of the lord, such an alienation being opposed to the nature of the feudal relation of lord and vassal (2 Bl. Com 57, 287); see the discussion of the question in Pollock and Matland, History of English Law, Vol I., pp. 310 et seq. It seems that the lord could, after alienation by the tenant of his holding, still require the services from the original tenant (2 Co. Inst. 500).

(1290) 18 Edw. 1 (Quia Emptores), c 2: see Digby, History of the Law of Real Property, 5th ed., p. 133; Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p 19. The words of the statute are not clear, but it seems to have been aimed at subinfeudation, and not alienation (2 Bl. Com.

and then entirely abolished by statute, while, on the other hand, the right of alienation by substitution of another as tenant was confirmed and extended to alienation of a part only of the holding (l).

287. The chief cause of damage to lords by subinfeudation was in the loss of the profits of escheats, marriages, and wardships (m). The statute Quia Emptores (n) recites to this effect, and provides that from thenceforth it should be lawful for every freeman to sell at his will his land or tenement or part thereof, so however that the feoffee should hold the land or tenement of the next superior lord by the same services and customs by which the feoffor previously held them (o). Where a part only of the land is sold the services are apportioned according to the value of the land sold (p). The statute (n) does not authorise the sale of land into mortmain (q) contrary to the statutes in that behalf, and applies only to lands held in fee simple (a): hence it does not prevent the grant of an estate for life or in tail to be held of the grantor (b). But, although the

289) As to a feoffment in breach of the statute, see Co Litt 43 a; 2 Co Inst 66, it seems that it could be avoided by the heir of the donor and also by the donor's lord (Pollock and Maitland, History of English Law, p 313, Digby, History of the Law of Real Property, p. 157), and the practical effect of the statute was to enable the lords to exact a fine for licence to assign (Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed, p 21). In regard to lands held of the King, a prerogative right was asserted and gradually established that the lands could not be alienated without his consent, as to the growth of this right, see Pollock and Maitland, History of English Law, Vol. I, pp. 316 et seq, and see Co Litt 43 b.

(o) Stat. (1290) 18 Edw 1, c 1. The word "customs" is here synonymous with "services" (2 Co Inst 502). The statute rendered unnecessary a licence for alienating from a mesne lord, but did not affect the Crown, and hence the Crown tenants still required a licence. By stat (1327) 1 Edw 3, st 2, c 12, it was provided that the penalty for alienation without licence should be a reasonable fine and not forfeiture, and such fines continued till stat (1660) 12 Car 2, c 24 (see Pollock and Maitland, History of English Law, Vol I., p 318, Co Litt 43 b).

That is, if the services were apportionable, otherwise the services might, according to the circumstances, be due, after alienation, from each tenant or from one only; and in the latter case the one who did the service might be entitled to contribution from the others. As to whether services would be multiplied on alienation of part or not, and as to contribution, see Bruerton's Case (1594), 6 Co Rep. 1 a; Talbot's (John) Case (1610), 8 Co Rep 104 b. In these respects there was no difference between annual services and occasional services, such as heriots (Talbot's (John) Case, supra), and as to the effect of a purchase by the lord of a part of the land in extinguishing the entire services, see Bruerton's Case, supra, Talbot's (John) Case, supra. The apportionment of services was according to "quantity," but this referred to value (2 Co Inst 503).

(b) Consequently, an estate for life or in tail can be granted reserving a rent (Littleton's Tenures, s 214). If the grant is for life or in tail only, the statute speaks only of the sale of land, it has been construed as extending to grants of land generally (c), and since the year 1290 it has been impossible for a tenant in fee simple to convey his land to a grantee in fee simple so as to create a tenure between himself and the grantee. Any rents or other services incident to tenure, and due from an owner in fee simple to a lord other than the Crown, must have been created before that year (d).

SECT. 2.
The Feudal System and Feudal
Tenure.

288. Under the feudal system, the grant of a fee conferred an interest which was capable of being inherited (e), and this was so distinctive a feature of such grants that the word "fee" came to denote heritability (f). The grant might be restricted to the life of the grantee, but, in most cases, the tenant held "in fee," and on his death the land devolved upon his heirs. When the grant was recorded in a charter or deed, the heritability was expressed by making the grant to the donee and his "heirs" (g); and the rule came to be established that a reference to "heirs" was necessary to give a heritable fee and that a grant to the donee without such reference gave only an estate for life (h). The interest of the grantee, considered in respect of its duration, was known as his estate in the land (i).

inheritance

An estate in fee was capable of unlimited duration, but if in fact it came to an end by failure of heirs of the donee or his grantee, the land went back to the lord, who was then said to take by escheat (k). This was the necessary result of the want of a tenant.

Escheat and

reversion in fee simple remaining in the grantor, the tenure is necessarily of the grantor, but if the remainder in fee is also granted nothing remains in the grantor, and the persons claiming under the grant hold of the superior lord (Littleton's Tenures, s 215; 2 Co Inst 565, Anon (1578), Dyer, 362 b (19), Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed, p. 22, Digby, History of the Law of Real Property, 5th ed, p. 237, note (2)).

(c) See 2 Co Inst 500—"Vendere is here not only taken for a sale, but for any alienation by gift, feoffment, fine, or otherwise; but sale was the most common assurance."

(d) Inasmuch as no fresh mesne tenures can be created since 1290, and existing tenures are from time to time extinguished, "the seigniorship of all freehold lands held for a fee simple tends to become concentrated in the Crown" (Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed, p. 22, and as to the effect of the statute, see Digby, History of the Law of Real Property, 5th ed, p. 235). (i) But this was not till the end of the thirteenth century, when the feudal system was ceasing to serve its original purpose, and interests in land were being made the subject of conveyancing. "Thus were established the first elements of that wonderful calculus of estates which even in our own day is perhaps the most distinctive feature of English private law" (Pollock and Maitland, History of English Law, Vol II, p. 11).

The Feudal System and Feudal Tenure.

Tenure in villanage.

Proprietary and possessory actions reserved for freeholders.

Origin of leasehold
tenure.

An estate for life was in its nature limited, and on the death of the donee the land went back to the donor in accordance with the intention of the gift. This was described not as escheat, but as reverter (l).

289. The difference between free and unfree tenures corresponded in the main to differences in status between free men and villeins. Tenures in chivalry and free socage were the tenures of free men, and the tenant had a free holding (m). Tenure in villanage was the tenure of an unfree man, though a free man might hold it (a). The value of a right depends on the protection which the law gives it, and the proprietary and possessory actions allowed in the King's courts were reserved for freeholders (b). The tenant in villanage had originally only such protection as he could obtain in the manorial court, which, however, may have been effective enough as against everyone except the lord (c). Ultimately the custom of the manor so confirmed him in his holding that the King's courts allowed an action of trespass against the lord (d). The villen tenant had by this time become the copyholder (e), and his tenure came to be as well protected as freehold tenure (f).

290. At an early date, leases for terms of years became common (g), but they formed no part either of the feudal system, which was based on military tenure, or of the original agricultural system, which produced socage and villein tenure. They were, perhaps, introduced as a means of raising money (h), and they became one of the ordinary means of securing a substantial rent from the land (i). But in their legal incidents terms of years differed from other interests in the land. They conferred no freehold (k), and they did not entitle the termor to the ordinary possessory remedies, these being only available for freeholders (l). The termor's remedy at first was a personal one against the lessor—in covenant, if he was ejected by the lessor; on the warranty, perhaps, if he was ejected by a stranger (m). Ultimately the law allowed him the legal advantages of possession. "Seisin," which had been used indifferently for any possession, was confined to the freeholder; "possession" was ascribed to the termor (n); and, if the latter was dispossessed, he could recover possession in an action of ejectment (o).

(b) The proprietary action was commenced by writ of right, and, though in the first instance within the jurisdiction of the manorial court, it might be removed into the King's court. The actions merely possessory were the assize of novel disseisin, introduced in 1166, and the assize of mort d'ancestor, introduced somewhat earlier. These gave a remedy for actual disseisin by the defendant, or for entry by a stranger on the death of the tenant. The writ of entry sur disseisin and other writs of entry were introduced for the purpose of extending the possessory remedies for disseisin and of making them available against persons claiming under the disseisor; and they tended to become proprietary without subjecting the claimant to the inconveniences of proprietary procedure. But all these actions, including even the writ of right, were possessory in the sense that the question at issue was not whether the claimant was entitled against all the world, but whether he had better right (major jus) than the defendant. As to these actions, see Pollock and Maitland, History of English Law, Vol. I., pp 124, 575; Vol II, pp. 47 et seq, title ACTION, Vol I., pp. 32 et seq.

(c) Pollock and Maitland, History of English Law, Vol I, pp. 342, 576. The assize of novel disseisin was expressly restricted to disseisin of the freehold—the plaintiff complained that the tenant "injuste et sine iudicio disseisavit eum de libero tenemento suo"; and in Magna Carta of 1217 the words "de libero tenemento suo" were inserted apparently for the purpose of affording the remedies for disseisin to freeholders (Pollock and Maitland, History of English Law, Vol. I, p 340, note (3)).

SECT. 2.
The Feudal System and Feudal
Tenure.

291. The term of years, being thus fully protected, conferred an estate in the land, and the analogy of freehold estate was followed so far that fealty was said to be due from the lessee to the lessor (p); hence it became technically correct to speak of leasehold tenure (q). But the analogy did not prevail as to devolution on death, and terms of years went to the executor or administrator, and not to the heir (r).

Nature of leasehold
tenure.

SECT. 3.—Abolition of the Feudal System.

292. By the fourteenth century tenure by knight service had ceased to serve its original purpose (a), but its casual pecuniary fruits—in particular wardship and marriage, and, as regards

Conversion
of knight service into socage tenure.

(h) For examples of this, see Pollock and Maitland, History of English Law, Vol II, p 111

(i) In this respect they were analogous to tenancies at fee farm rents, but these latter were estates of freehold and became merged in socage tenure; see p 142, ante

(k) I.e., liberum tenementum. see Bract lib ii c 9, fol 27; Pollock and Maitland, History of English Law, Vol II, p 112, Digby, History of the Law of Real Property, 5th ed., p 176

(m) Pollock and Maitland, History of English Law, Vol II, p 106

(n) Ibid., pp 36, 109 et seq., and see ibid., p 114, where it is suggested that the former refusal of possession to the termor was by analogy with the Roman law, which refused possessio civilis to the lessee (conductor) of land. But the English feeling in favour of the protection of possession was too strong for this refusal to last.

(o) As to the evolution of the termor's remedies, see Pollock and Maitland, History of English Law, Vol II, pp 106 et seq., Digby, History of the Law of Real Property, 5th ed., p 176. Ultimately the termor had in the de ejectione firmæ the better remedy, and freeholders adopted it by a series of fictions; see p 325, post., and see Doe d Poole v Errington (1834), 1 Ad. & El 750, 755—757 title ACTION, Vol I, p 34

(r) The reason for this does not seem to have been clearly traced; possibly it was because the action on the covenant, which originally formed the termor's remedy, was a personal remedy; possibly, because the term was purchased for money and represented money; see Pollock and Maitland, History of English Law, Vol II, p 116 tenants of the Crown, fines on alienation—kept it alive for some three hundred years longer. In 1541, it was made more oppressive by the establishment of the Court of Wards and Liveries (b); but it was abolished by resolution of Parliament in 1645, and the abolition was confirmed by statute in 1656 and more formally in 1660 (c). The statute of 1660 (d) provided that the Court of Wards and Liveries and the special incidents—wardships (e), liveries, primer seisin, and value of marriages—of tenure by knight service, whether held under the King or a mesne lord, and also fines for alienation and homage, should be taken away and discharged; that such tenure should be turned into free and common socage (f); and that all future tenures upon the grant by the King of hereditaments for an estate of inheritance should be in free and common socage, and should be discharged from the incidents of tenure by knight service (g). The incidents of tenure by knight service which were suitable to socage tenure—fealty, rents certain, heriots, and suit of court—were, however, preserved, and also relief, which was directed to be paid in the same manner as in socage tenure (h); and the abolition of fines on alienation only applied to lands held in capite of the King, not to fines for alienation due by the custom of particular manors and places (i). The statute (d) did not interfere with tenure in frankalmoin, or tenure by copy of court roll, and, as regards grand serjeanty, it abolished only wardship, marriage, and other burdens incident to the tenure as a military tenure, and did not take away the honorary services (k). Tenure in frankalmoin and tenure by grand serjeanty have, however, ceased to be of practical importance, and the effect of the statute (d) is that, apart from leaseholds, all lands are either of socage or of copyhold tenure.

 tenures.

293. Tenure in common socage is, in general, subject to uniform rules, recognised by the common law or introduced by statute, as regards alienation, descent, the rights of husband and wife, and other matters. but, without ceasing to be common socage, it is capable of having special incidents attached to it by the custom of particular manors or districts. Hence have arisen the varieties of tenures known as ancient freeholds (l), tenure in ancient demesne (m),

SUB-SECT 2 — Ancient Freeholds.

294. In ordinary copyhold tenure, the tenant is expressed to hold at the will of the lord according to the custom of the manor (c); his title is evidenced by copy of court roll (d); and he alienates his land by surrender to the lord followed by the admittance of the alienee (e). The land remains parcel of the manor and the freehold is vested in the lord (f).

Copyholds.

In customary freeholds, the tenant is not expressed to hold at the will of the lord, but only according to the custom of the manor (g), and the land may be alienable by deed of grant or bargain and sale in addition to or in lieu of surrender (h): the title of the alienee, however, is completed by admittance (i). In this case, also, though the tenant has an interest analogous to an estate of freehold, his tenure is of the nature of copyhold tenure and the freehold is in the lord (h). This tenure has been called "privileged copyhold" (l); in the north of England, where it is more common than elsewhere, it is known as "tenant right" (m).

Sir E Coke seems to have regarded such lands as "copyhold of frank tenure" (see Coke, Compleat Copy-holder, s 32), ie, of freehold tenure; but this was contested by Blackstone (see Considerations on Copyholders, Law Tracts, p 220), and in accordance with his argument the view has since prevailed that, while there is a freehold interest in the tenant, he has no freehold tenure (Co Litt 59 b, note (1), see Bingham v Woodgate, supra, at p 38, where, however, LEACH, M R., considered that the freehold interest vested the "freehold" in the tenant; but this is opposed to the other modern authorities)

(l) See Blackstone, Considerations on Copyholders, Law Tracts, pp. 207, 217 et seq. Blackstone treats this, under the name of "villein-socage," as confined to manors of ancient demesne (2 Bl Com 98). 295. Where land held of a manor is subject to customary incidents as regards alienation or otherwise, but the tenure is not expressed to be at the will of the lord, and admittance is not necessary to complete the title of the alienee, the land is usually of freehold tenure, and is known as "ancient freehold" (n).

Since the freehold is in the tenant, the seigniori of the land is parcel of the manor, but the land itself is not (o). The tenure of land is presumed to be freehold held directly of the King, if there is no evidence to the contrary (p).

SUB-SECT 3—*Ancient Demesne.*Tenure in ancient demesne.

296. Manors of ancient demesne, that is, manors which belonged to the Crown in the time of Edward the Confessor or William I. (q), may include freehold, customary freehold, and copyhold tenants. The freehold tenants are known as tenants in ancient demesne, and formerly they were entitled to certain immunities, and they could only sue and be sued in respect of their tenements by action in the lord's court—the court of ancient demesne—commenced by writ of right close (r). But the immunities are (n) Passingham v Pitty (1855), 17 C B 299 (where the tenants in fee held of the lord "by free deed, fealty, suit of court," and a nominal yearly rent, and could alienate by ordinary assurances without licence or enrolment; but the new owner could be compelled by distress to come in and acknowledge free tenure) For a form of assurance of such freeholds, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol XII, p 795. It is essential to the existence of a manor that there should be at least two freehold tenants to constitute the court baron, see titles COPYHOLDS, Vol VIII, p. 11; COURTS, Vol IX, p 216. As to heriots due from freehold tenants, see title COPYHOLDS, Vol VIII, p 39.

(p) Busher v Thompson (1846), 4 C B 48.

(q) 2 Co Inst 542, 4 Co Inst 269; Hunt v Burn (1701), 1 Salk 57. The evidence of Domesday Book is both necessary and conclusive to prove that a manor is ancient demesne, but whether particular land is parcel of such a manor is a matter for ordinary evidence (Scriven, Law of Copyholds, 7th ed., pp 35, 36, 479). Customary freeholds have been said to exist most usually in manors of ancient demesne (Coke, Compleat Copyholder, s. 22).

(r) In a sense all the tenants of a manor of ancient demesne, freehold, customary, and copyhold, are tenants in ancient demesne (Scriven, Law of Copyholds, 7th ed., p 38). But the term is confined to socage tenants, and hence it does not include mere copyholders (4 Co. Inst 269). In early times ancient demesne manors appear to have included both free and unfree socage tenants as well as villein tenants (Pollock and Maitland, History of English Law, Vol I, p 373), and the unfree socage tenants, or villein sokemen, who were gleba adscripti in the sense that they could not be removed from the land at the lord's will, and who did villein, though fixed, services, would seem to be forerunners of the customary freeholders of a later day. The term "tenant in ancient demesne" perhaps includes both freeholders and customary freeholders, but the current tendency is to restrict it to freeholders (Real Property Commissioners' Third Report, p. 12, Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p. 32). The essential feature in tenancy in ancient demesne was that suits respecting the tenements so held could only be brought and defended in the manor court; the suit was commenced by little writ of right close directed to the lord or bailiff of the manor (Fitz Nat Brev, p 11); and if the action was commenced in the King's court it was a good defence that the land was held in ancient demesne. Originally the process was available for the privileged villein tenants (Bract lib. i, fol 7, Pollock and Maitland, History of English Law, Vol I, obsolete (s), and this local procedure has been abolished (t). Consequently tenure in ancient demesne has ceased to be of practical importance, though in ancient demesne manors, as elsewhere, it may still be necessary to distinguish between freeholds and customary freeholds or privileged copyholds, and to ascertain the customs affecting either kind of holding.

SUB-SECT 4—The Customs of Gavelkind and Borough-English.

297. The term "gavelkind" is not, properly speaking, the name of a tenure, but it denotes certain special customs which affect lands of socage tenure in Kent and elsewhere (a). The chief of

p 372), subsequently it was available for sokemen of free tenure, but not for sokemen of base tenure who held at the will of the lord (Anon (1413), Y B 14 llen 4, fol 34), and the rule became settled that the writ of right close was for tenants in ancient demesne who held by charter in free simple, or in fee tail, or for life, or in dower, but not for tenants who held in ancient demesne by copy of court roll at the will of the lord (Fitz Nat Brev, pp 11 F, 12 B). But between these two lie the villen sokemen—afterwards the customary freeholders—and it does not appear how they lost the use of the little writ. Blackstone assumed that they had it, and treated this as a distinguishing mark of customary freeholds (Considerations on Copyholds, Law Tracts, p 231). But if their tenure was really copyhold, they were within the jurisdiction of the King's courts (Smith v Frampton (1694), 3 Lev 405; Brittel v Bade (1695), 1 Ld Raym 47), and possibly on this ground their right to sue and be sued by the little writ was lost. Moreover, the effect of an ancient demesne tenant suing in the King's courts was to make the land "frank fee," that is, to discharge it from the incidents of tenure in ancient demesne (Jacob, Law Dictionary, sub voce), and cause it to be held in free and common socage, and this is intelligible as to tenements which were already freehold in their nature, but not as to tenements which were copyhold, though privileged copyhold. Hence in later times the writ of right close was probably restricted to freehold tenants. In addition to freeholders holding by the tenure of ancient demesne, there might be tenants of an ancient demesne manor holding in frank fee, and, in the case just put of a tenant in ancient demesne being party to an action with respect to his tenement in the King's court, he simply passed from one class of tenants to the other. The most usual case of land being thus turned into frank fee seems to have been when the tenant in ancient demesne levied a fine or suffered a recovery in the Court of Common Pleas, but the lord could restore the original tenure by writ of disceit. In Mertens v Hull, [1901] 1 Ch. 842, COZEN-HARDY, J., at p. 853, following the Real Property Commissioners' Third Report, p 12, treated the use of the writ of right close as a mark of free tenure. This would be so in later times, but not in the earliest times. In Mertens v Hull, supra, the tenants in question represented sokemen mentioned in Domesday Book, who were called free tenants in very early documents, so that the matter did not rest on the use of the writ. As to courts of ancient demesne, see title COURTS, Vol IX, p 217.

(s) As to these, see 4 Co Inst. 269; Scriven, Law of Copyholds, 7th ed., p. 39.

(t) The writ of right close and writ of disceit were abolished with most other real actions by the Real Property Limitation Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c. 27), s. 36; see title ACTION, Vol. I., p 33. Since the lord thus lost his remedy for restoring the tenure of ancient demesne where it had been turned into frank fee, the Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c. 74), ss. 4—6, preserved the tenure notwithstanding any fine levied or recovery suffered.

(a) See Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p 14. It is a species of socage tenure modified by the custom of the country (2 Bl Com. 85). "Gavelkind"—according to Sir E. Coke's simple mode of etymology, "gave all kinde; for the custome giveth to all the sonnes alike" (Co. Litt.

these customs relates to descent. On the death of the owner intestate, primogeniture is excluded, and there is equal division of descendible estates among all the sons or other male heirs (b). Other customs still existing are as follows:—(1) tenancy by the curtesy is in one-half the lands, does not depend on birth of heritable issue, and ceases on remarriage (c); (2) dower is in one-half the lands and continues while the widow remains chaste and unmarried (d); and (3) an infant can alienate his land by feoffment after attaining fifteen years (e), but it is necessary to show that he received full consideration, and he must make the feoffment in person.

Presumption

298. It is presumed that all land in Kent is subject to the custom of gavelkind unless the contrary is proved (f): hence in 140 a)—is derived from gafol (rent), and meant originally rent-paying land (Pollock and Matland, History of English Law, Vol II, pp 269 et seq.; Robinson, Gavelkind, 5th ed, pp 1 et seq.; Digby, History of the Law of Real Property, 5th ed, p 47, note (2)). Before the Conquest the equal partibility of land among sons was the general custom of the realm, and at first continued as to socage lands after the Conquest (Clement v Scudimore (1704), 6 Mod Rep 120; Robinson, Gavelkind, 5th ed, p 16). Primogeniture was introduced to suit the supposed necessities of military tenure (Robinson, Gavelkind, 5th ed, p 17), and, save in Kent and certain other places, socage lands became subject to this rule, but in Kent the original custom survived (2 Bl Com 84). The custom of gavelkind does not apply to land purchased by the Crown (Co Litt 15 b, Willion v Berkley (1562), Plowd 223, 227, 247). In Kent the term “frank fee” has been applied to freehold lands not subject to gavelkind (Robinson, Gavelkind, 5th ed, p 49). As to the effect of purchase of freehold land by the lord, see ibid, p 64.

(b) Littleton's Tenures, ss 210, 265. Sir E COKE, antedating the introduction of military tenure into England, speaks of knight's fees as descending in King Alfred's time to the eldest son; though socage fee was divided between the heirs male (Co Litt 14 a), and as to descent in gavelkind, see title DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, Vol XI, p 15. As to the descent of estates in reversion or remainder, see Robinson, Gavelkind, 5th ed, p 79.

(e) See title INFANTS AND CHILDREN, Vol XVII, pp 80, 81. Other customs were that the land was not forfeited for capital felony, but passed on the execution of the father to the son—commemorated in the rhyme “the father to the bough, the son to the plough”—and that it was devisable by will, see Robinson, Gavelkind, 5th ed, pp 41, 176, 185; 2 Bl Com 84. The former custom has been rendered obsolete by the general abolition of forfeiture for felony (Forfeiture Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict c 23)), see title CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol IX, pp 428 et seq., and the latter has been obsolete since lands generally became devisable under stat. (1539) 32 Hen 8, c 1, explained and amended by stat. (1542-3) 34 & 35 Hen 8, c 5 (now repealed), though the statutes themselves did not abolish the custom (Co Litt 111 b, 115 a). There was also a special procedure known as gavelot, corresponding to the writ of cessavit, for recovering the land on default in render of services (Robinson, Gavelkind, 5th ed, p 193). Under general statutory provisions authorising exchange of lands gavelkind land may be exchanged for land held in common socage (Minet v Leman (1835), 7 De G M & G 340, C. A.).

(f) Wiseman v Cotton (1663), 1 Sid 135, 138; Burridge v Sussex (Earl) (1709), 2 Ld Raym. 1292. “The customs of gavelkind differ from the customs of a particular fee, to say on evidence lands are in Kent puts the other side to prove they are not departable, but in particular fees the party must plead that the lands within that fee are time out of mind gavelkind partibilia and partita” (Randall v Writall (1673), 3 Keb 214, per HALES, pleading it is sufficient to allege that the lands are in Kent and are subject to that custom; it is not necessary to prove the existence of the custom, or that the particular lands have ever been in fact divided according to the custom (g).

As to lands elsewhere, which are alleged to be subject to the custom, proof of the allegation must be given (h).

299. Moreover, the custom of gavelkind differs from special customs in that it is not necessary to allege and prove the nature of the custom as regards descent (i). This is a matter of law (h). The incidental customs relating to curtesy, dower, and alienation should be specially alleged (l), but in Kent do not require to be proved (m), though they would require to be proved if alleged to be incident to gavelkind land elsewhere (n).

Judicial recognition
of gavelkind.

300. There have been various statutes disgavelling particular lands in Kent (o); but these operate only as to the mode of descent, and not as to the other incidents of gavelkind (p). It is difficult, however, to identify the lands comprised in the statutes, and hence the disgavelled lands tend to fall within the custom again (q). When gavelkind lands pass into the ownership of the Crown the custom is suspended, not extinguished, and revives if they are

301. The custom of gavelkind attaches not only to estates in fee, but also to estates in tail (b) and to other estates of a descendible nature (c); and it is not restricted to common law estates in land of which the owner is actually seised: it applies to every legal interest in the land, such as a contingent remainder (d) which can be claimed by an heir (e); to estates arising under the Statute of Uses (f); to estates arising in equity, such as trusts and equities of redemption, since in such matters equity follows the law (g); and

(r) Wiseman v Cotten (1663), 1 Sid 135, 138 Similarly, before the abolition of military tenures, upon gavelkind land escheating to a lord holding in chivalry, the gavelkind custom was suspended only, and not destroyed (ibid). But the Crown on regranting lands cannot create the custom of gavelkind, see May and Bannister v Street (1588), Cro Elz. 120, as to burgrave tenure

(t) Thus, when a fine of ancient demesne lands levied in the Common Pleas turned the tenure into frank fee (see p. 151, ante), this did not, if the lands were gavelkind, get rid of the custom (Anon (1549), Dyer, 72 b (4)); and if the tenure of socage lands was changed to military tenure, this also did not affect the custom (Dickson's Case (1627), Het 64, 65, *Doe d. But a custom in borough-English lands (see p 155, post) for estates in fee to go to the youngest son, and estates tail according to the common law, is good (*Chapman v. 302. The heirs in gavelkind are entitled to the remedies of co-owners for partition or sale of the lands (l). In this respect they stand on the same footing as co-parceners at common law.

Partition.

303. Borough-English is a custom whereby the youngest son inherits to the exclusion of his elder brothers (l). It resembles gavelkind in that it affects lands held in socage. It was sometimes associated with burgage tenure—that is, the tenure by which the inhabitants of certain ancient boroughs held their tenements of the King, or some other lord, by a fixed annual rent (m)—but the custom was not confined to boroughs; it was (n) and still is found in rural manors (o). The law takes notice of the nature of the custom so far as regards descent on the youngest son (p), and generally the same considerations apply to borough-English as to gavelkind (q); but any extensions of the custom to other relatives, or any incidental customs, must be proved.

As to burgage tenure and its connection with the growth of boroughs, see Pollock and Maitland, History of English Law, Vol I, pp 275, 629. “Regarded merely as a tenure, the chief characteristic of burgage is its subjection to local custom, but what is exceptional in their case is normal in the case of burgage” (ibid., p 276). The term has been attributed to the fact that the custom is exclusively English (Co Litt 110 b), but it has been suggested that it came from Nottingham, where there were French and English boroughs side by side, and to have arisen from the necessity of distinguishing the customs of the English borough, which included the custom in question, from those of the French borough. Hence the custom was called “borough-English” (Pollock and Maitland, History of English Law, Vol I, p 631; Robinson, Gavelkind, 5th ed, p 230).

(o) As to where the custom prevails, see Robinson, Gavelkind, 5th ed, pp 238 et seq. It is said to prevail in Leicester, Derby, Stafford, and Gloucester, and at Kendal (Johnson v Clark, [1908] 1 Ch. 303), but to be extinct in Nottingham.

of tenure is primarily land in the physical sense (s). Where by subinfeudation, prior to the statute Quia Emptores (t), the tenant became a mesne lord, he retained the seigniorship of the land, and this became, as between him and his lord, the subject of tenure in lieu of the land (u). The seigniorship was usually identical with the lordship of a manor, and when it existed over a number of manors was known as a land barony or honour (a). Thus tenure exists in land, seigniorships, and territorial honours, and also in advowsons in gross (b), because, apparently, the advowson is in lieu of the land on which the church is built (c). But other incorporeal interests in land, such as rentcharges and easements, though they may fall within the extended meaning which has been given to tenements (d), are not the subject-matter of tenure (e).

SUB-SECT 1 — Land

Meaning of
"land"

305. The term "land," in its legal signification, includes any ground, soil, or earth, such as meadows, pastures, woods, moors, waters, marshes, and heath, houses and other buildings upon it; the air above it, and all mines and minerals beneath it (f). A grant of all the profits of land passes the whole land—hebage, trees, mines and whatever is parcel of the land; but a grant of a particular profit of or right in the land does not extend beyond such

(s) Where a statute refers to "property of whatsoever nature, tenure, or kind," the word "tenure" shows that realty is included (Wilson v Hood (1864), 3 H & C. 148, decided on the Solicitors Act, 1860 (23 & 24 Vict c 127), s 28)

(u) See p 142, ante.

(a) See Madox, Baronia Anglica (published in 1741), pp 5 et seq A barony in this sense is annexed to the land As to titles of honour, see title PEERAGES AND DIGNITIES, Vol XXII, pp. 261 et seq

Challis, Law of Real Property, pp 38 et seq As to easements generally, see title EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE, Vol. XI, pp. 233 et seq.

(f) Co. Litt. 4 a; 2 Bl Com 18; and see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol XVIII, pp 411, 412 "Land" appears to have been originally restricted to arable land (Co Litt 4 a. Shep Touch (ed Preston) 91; Pollock and Maitland, History of English Law, Vol II, p 147) The extent of its legal signification has usually been expressed in the maxim opus est solum, ejus est usque ad cælum, but the strict right of property does not extend skyward without limit so as to entitle the owner to sue in trespass (Puckering v. Budd (1815), 4 Camp 219), and the advent of airships has shown that this would be impracticable. The extent of the right of ownership seems to be limited by the power of control—that is, ownership cannot extend beyond possible possession; and probably the ownership is limited to the air space required for the erection of buildings; see 56 Sol. Jo., p. 730; and see titles STREET AND AERIAL TRAFFIC; TRESPASS.

profit or right (g). For the purposes of ownership, land may be divided horizontally as well as vertically, and either below or above the ground. Thus separate ownership may exist in strata of minerals (h), in the space occupied by a tunnel (i), or in different storeys of a building (k).

SECT. 6
Definitions.

306. The meaning of "land" may be extended for the purpose of a particular instrument when this is required by the context (l); and it is extended for the purpose of statutes. In statutes generally, passed after 1850, unless the contrary intention appears, it includes messuages, tenements, and hereditaments, houses and buildings of any tenure (m). In the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (n), it includes messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments of any tenure, in the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (o), it includes land of any tenure, and tenements, hereditaments, corporeal and incorporeal, and houses and other buildings, also an undivided share of land; in the Settled Land Act, 1882 (p), it includes incorporeal hereditaments, also an undivided share of land; and in the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Acts, 1888 and 1891 (q), it includes tenements and hereditaments, corporeal and incorporeal, of whatsoever tenure, and any estate and interest in land, but not money secured on land or other personal estate arising from or connected with land. Thus, under statutory definitions, the word "land" is usually extended to include not only land in the physical sense, with all that is above it or underneath it, but also all rights in the land (r).

SECT. V man can have an estate of freehold (s), and which is connected with Definitions. land (t), is a tenement. Thus the word includes not only land, as the corporeal subject of inheritance, but also all heritable rights issuing out of land, or concerning, or annexed to, or exercisable over, the same, though they lie not in tenure—such as rents, commons, and other profits à prendre and tithes (a)—and offices or dignities which descend to heirs, whether they relate to land or not (b). But it does not include a personal annuity, that is, an annuity not charged upon or issuing out of land, although granted to a man and his heirs, nor an office which concerns only chattels (c).

“Tenement” as meaning the estate

The word “tenement” is also used to denote not only the thing or right which is the subject of property, but also the estate in the thing. Thus, where a life estate is existing in land, both the land and the life estate are called tenements (d).

Popular meaning.

308. In popular language the term “tenement” means a house or part of a house (e) capable of separate occupation, and is

(s) “Tenement is a large word to pass not only lands and other inheritances which are holden, but also offices, rents, commons, profits à prendre out of lands, and the like, wherein a man hath any frank tenement, and whereof he is seised ut de libero tenemento” (Co Litt 6 a). Since these latter things are not the subject of tenure, it is clear that Sir E. Coke, in speaking of “frank tenement,” referred to the freehold interest of which they were capable. 2 Bl Com 17, treats permanent incorporeal rights as tenements, because they can be “holden”; and this is adopted in Beauchamp (Earl) v Winn (1873), L R 6 H. L. 223, 241. But here by “holden” must be understood that the right is actually possessed or enjoyed, not that it is held of a lord in the feudal sense. The technical meaning of “tenement” is not restricted by capacity for being the subject of tenure. This is clear from Sir E. Coke’s definition. To constitute a right a tenement it is sufficient that it should savour of, that is, be incident to, land (see Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p 43), and, as to the inclusion of incorporeal rights as tenements, although not “holden,” see Pollock and Matland, History of English Law, Vol II, p. 147.

(t) Or, as it is said, which savours of the realty (Co Litt 20 a) (1285) 13 Edw. 1, c. 1, commonly called the statute De Donis, which created estates tail (see p 241, post), refers only to tenements, and the extension of the term was perhaps due to the desire to make all heritable rights entailable under the statute. A rentcharge is a tenement within stat. (1429) 8 Hen. 3, c. 7, relating to parliamentary franchise (Dodds v. Thompson (1865), L R. 1 C. P. 133; Dawson v. Robins (1876) 2 C. P. SUB-SECT. 3.—Hereditaments.

309. Whatever may be inherited is a hereditament (h), and the term includes land as a physical object (i), money which is liable to

"hereditaments."

(f) See Yorkshire Insurance Co v Clayton (1881), 8 Q. B. D. 421, 423, C. A.; Grant v Langston, [1900] A. C. 383, London and Westminster Bank v. Smith (1901), 85 L. T. 747, C. A.; see title INHABITED HOUSE DUTY, Vol. XVII., pp. 192 et seq. A building divided into separate tenements constitutes separate houses within the meaning of a covenant not to erect more than one house on a site (Ilford Park Estates, Ltd. v. Jacobs, [1903] 2 Ch. 522; see Rogers v Hosegood, [1900] 2 Ch. 388, C. A.; Kimber v. Admans, [1900] 1 Ch. 412, C. A.)

(h) Co. Litt. 6 a; Winchester's (Marquis) Case (1583), 3 Co. Rep. 1 a, 2 b; Shep. Touch (ed. Preston) 91. The term signifies "all such things, whether corporeal or incorporeal [as] a man may have to him and his heirs by way of inheritance, and which, if they be not otherwise bequeathed," go to the heir, and not as chattels to the executor or administrator (Lloyd v Jones (1848), 6 C. B. 81, 90)—that is, heritable property (Prescott v Barker (1874), 9 Ch. App. 174, 190). Under the existing law, title by inheritance means the beneficial title of the heir-at-law after the purposes of administration have been satisfied under the Land Transfer Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c. 65), Part I.; see title EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, Vol. XIV., pp. 236 et seq.

(i) See p. 160, post, and see also pp. 137, 156, ante. If there is nothing specially to define the meaning of "hereditament," it refers to land as the subject-matter of rights, and not to the quantum of the interest in the land. The settled sense of "hereditaments" is to denote such things as may be the subject-matter of inheritance, but not inheritance itself (Moor v. Denn & Mellor (1800), 2 Bos. & P. 247, 251, H. L.; Chew v Hoboyd (1852), 8 Exch. 249). Thus in the County Courts Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 43), s. 56, the phrase "corporeal or incorporeal hereditaments" includes leaseholds (Tomkins v Jones (1889), 22 Q. B. D. 599, C. A.; see title COUNTRY COURTS, Vol. VIII., pp. 430, 431). But on the construction of an Act of Parliament "hereditaments" has been held not to include copyholds (A.-G. v. Levern (1837), 8 Sim. 366, 370; Re Paddington Charities (1837), 8 Sim. 629 (on the Poor Relief Act, 1819 (59 Geo. 3, c. 12), s. 17); Stephenson v Raine (1853), 2 E. & B. 744, see title CHARITIES, Vol. IV., p. 257, note (q)). In the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 18), s. 3, "lands" extends to "hereditaments of any tenure" (see p. 157, ante), and these words, it has been held, imply a corporeal hereditament (Pinchin v. London and Blackwall Rail. Co. (1854), 5 De G. M. & G. 851, C. A.; compare Great Western Rail. Co. v. Swindon and Cheltenham Rail. Co. (1884), 9 App. Cas. 787; R. v. Cambrian Rail. Co. (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 422; title COMPULSORY PURCHASE OF LAND AND COMPENSATION, Vol. VI., p. 15).

be invested in land and is treated in equity as land (j), heirlooms (k), and certain rights in land and other rights (l). Hereditaments are either corporeal or incorporeal, real or personal (m). In general, a tenement is also a hereditament; but some tenements, such as an estate for life, are not hereditaments, and some hereditaments, such as personal annuities limited to heirs, are not tenements (n).

310. Land itself, and also such physical objects as are annexed to and form part of it, or are treated as forming part of it, are corporeal hereditaments; and strictly are the only corporeal hereditaments (o). But the term "hereditament" includes estates in land which are capable of passing by descent (p), and those estates, whether legal or equitable, which entitle the owner to present possession of the land or to receipt of rent and profits are classed as corporeal hereditaments (q).

Incorporeal hereditaments.

311. Incorporeal hereditaments include (1) estates and interests in land which are not accompanied by present possession or receipt of rents and profits—that is, reversions, remainders, and executory interests (r), and conditions (s); (2) rights in land which are never

(l) Thus, an inheritable dignity, whether it concerns land or not, is a hereditament (Re Riwett-Oarnac's (Sir J.) Will (1885), 30 Ch. D 136; Cowley v. Cowley, [1900] P. 305, 310, C A; affirmed, [1901] A C 405)

(m) Co. Litt 6 a

(n) See Co. Litt. 6 a; Shep. Touch (ed Preston) 91; Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed, p 44. In Stephenson v. Raine (1853), 2 E & B 744 (on the County Courts Act, 1846 (9 & 10 Vict c. 95), s 58 (corresponding to the County Courts Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict c. 43), s 56), see title COUNTY COURTS, Vol. VIII, p 431), it was decided that the office of parish clerk held for life was a hereditament, on the ground that it was a tenement, and every tenement was a hereditament; but this seems to overlook the real nature of a hereditament; and see Shep Touch (ed Preston) 91.

(o) "Corporeal hereditaments consist wholly of substantial and permanent objects, all of which may be comprehended under the general denomination of land only" (2 Bl Com 17); hereditus corporalis est, quæ tangi potest et videri, incorporealis, quæ tangi non potest nec videri (Co Litt 9 a)

(p) An estate pur autre vie is not a hereditament, since the heir, if he takes, takes as special occupant, and not by inheritance (see p. 180, post; Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed, p 43).

(r) Future interests in land are in fact incorporeal, and there is no reason, as in the case of present interests, to give them a fictitious nature and call them corporeal. The old modes of conveyancing under which an estate accompanied by possession passed by livery, while future estates and other rights in land passed by grant, gave a practical rule for distinguishing corporeal and incorporeal hereditaments. Corporeal hereditaments lay in livery; incorporeal hereditaments lay in grant (Co. Litt. 9 a, 49 a). The fact of possession still attracts present estates of inheritance into the class of corporeal hereditaments, although the conveyancing test is obsolete; and similarly future estates, since they carry no immediate right of accompanied by exclusive possession—these are seigniories, franchises, advowsons, rentcharges, rights of common and profits à prendre, and, possibly, easements(t), and (3) certain heritable rights not necessarily connected with land, such as offices(u) and personal annuities which pass to the heir(a).

possession, must, apparently, remain as incorporeal hereditaments. But there is a practical distinction between remainders and reversions and other incorporeal hereditaments, such as a rentcharge. A rentcharge is, like land, the subject of estates, a remainder or reversion is itself an estate, and may exist either in the land or the rentcharge. Hence the logically correct method might be to divide the subjects of estates into corporeal and incorporeal hereditaments, and to exclude estates themselves from the classification. But it is convenient and usual to speak of estates as hereditaments and this is in accordance with the fundamental definition. A remainder in fee may be inherited, but in the hands of any particular heir it may never fall into possession, and as regards him it is strictly incorporeal. For the opposite view, see Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., Mr Sweet's note, ibid, pp. 49 et seq.

(s) 2 Bl Com 17

(t) As to incorporeal hereditaments, see, generally, Co Litt 9 a, 47 a, 49 a, 169 a, 2 Bl Com, pp 20 et seq, Burton, Compendium of the Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., pp 338 et seq. "An incorporeal hereditament is a right issuing out of a thing corporeal (whether real or personal) or concerning, or annexed to, or exerciseable within, the same" (2 Bl Com 20; cited in Re Christmas, Martin v Iacon (1886), 33 Ch D. 332, C A, per COTTON, L J, at p 338). As to seigniories, see p 142, ante, title COPYHOLDS, Vol VIII, pp 3, 4, § As to franchises, see titles CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol VI, pp 489 et seq, COPYHOLDS, Vol VIII, pp 5 et seq, FERRIES, Vol XIV, pp 555 et seq, FISHERIES, Vol XIV, pp 569 et seq, MARKETS AND FAIRS, Vol XX, pp 1 et seq. As to advowsons, see title ECCLESIASTICAL LAW, Vol XI, pp 564 et seq (an advowson in gross passes by the words "tenements and hereditaments" (Westfaling v Westfaling (1746), 3 Atk 460)). As to rentcharges, see title RENTCHARGES AND ANNUITIES, pp 463 et seq. post. As to rights of common, see title COMMONS AND RIGHTS OF COMMON, Vol IV, pp 441 et seq, and as to easements, see title EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE, Vol XI, pp 233 et seq. It is customary to describe rights such as those last-named as incorporeal hereditaments, and this usage has been recognised by the courts as regards easements, see title EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE, Vol. XI, p 238, note (e). But it has been questioned whether, when appurtenant or appendant to land, they can be regarded as incorporeal hereditaments, since they pass with the land by livery; see Hood and Challis, Conveyancing and Settled Land Acts, 5th ed., p 197. At the present time, however, the mode of conveyance is of secondary importance in this connection, and, in their nature, easements are clearly within the meaning of the term, see, also, Co Litt 121 a, to the effect that things incorporeal which he in grant, as advowsons, commons, and the like, may be appendant to things corporeal, as a house or lands; and see title DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS, Vol. X, p 361. But in taxing and rating statutes "hereditaments" may not include a mere easement (Chelsea Waterworks Co v Bowley (1851), 17 Q B. 358; Southport Corporation v Ormskirk Union Assessment Committee, [1894] 1 Q.B. 196, C. A.), though it will include a railway tunnel (Metropolitan Rail Co. v Fowler, [1893] A.C. 416), or other tunnel (Holywell Union and Halkyn Parish v Halkyn Drainage Co, [1895] A.C. 117); and see titles LAND TAX, Vol XVIII, p. 308, RATES AND RATING, pp. 6 et seq. ante. Incorporeal hereditaments may be either appendant, as seigniories (b); appurtenant, as easements (c); or in gross, as rent-charges (d). Rights of common and profits à prendre may be either appendant or appurtenant or in gross (e). Adwosons may be either appendant or in gross (f), and seigniories may exist in gross (g).

312. Hereditaments are also divided into real and personal. Real hereditaments include land, and estates of inheritance in land, and also all heritable rights which are connected with or incident to land (h). Shares in companies possessing land, where the proprietors have a direct interest in the land, are real hereditaments (i). Heritable rights which have no connection with land are personal hereditaments (j). Of this nature are personal annuities granted to a man and his heirs (k). Personal hereditaments, notwithstanding that they are limited to heirs and pass to heirs on an intestacy, are personal estate and pass under a residuary bequest of such estate (l).

"estate."

(h) SIR E. COKE speaks of hereditaments as real, personal, and mixed (Co. Litt. 6 a). By mixed hereditaments he may have meant hereditaments which do not confer estates in land, that is, incorporeal hereditaments which never give possession of the land, see p. 161, ante. compare Co. Litt. 20 a, Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p. 45. But the distinction between real and mixed hereditaments has no practical result, and it is sufficient to treat both under the one head of real hereditaments. The practical distinction between real and personal hereditaments is that real hereditaments are entailable, personal hereditaments are not (Co. Litt. 19 b, 20 a).

"Real estate."

"Real estate" is a technical term, and is in general to be construed in its technical sense (o). It comprises all freehold and copyhold lands, tenements, and hereditaments, but not leasehold interests (p). Freehold estates are either estates of mere freehold, that is, estates for life or lives, or estates of inheritance (q).

SECT. 1 —Estate in Fee Simple.

SUB-SECT. 1 —Quantum of Estate

Nature of fee simple.

315. An estate in fee simple approaches as near to absolute ownership as the system of tenure will allow (c). It is capable of existing as long as there are heirs-at-law of the owner for the time being, and since the law does not expect that there will be a failure of heirs (d) the duration of the estate is, in theory, unlimited. If in fact the owner dies intestate and without heirs, the land, save so far as it is required for payment of his debts, escheats to the lord—usually the Crown—under whom it is held (e). But this is the only way in which the estate can now determine (f). Moreover, the tenant for the time being who transfers the fee simple transfers an interest which the law treats as exhausting the possible duration of the ownership of the land. Consequently, neither a reversion nor a remainder can be reserved or limited upon such a transfer, nor can there be any possibility of reverter (g). But a fee simple may be devised by will subject to an executory devise over, and such devise over, provided it is so limited that it must, if it takes effect, take effect within the period allowed by the rule against perpetuities (h), is effectual and cannot be defeated by the prior devisee (i). Consequently, an alienee from such devisee takes subject to the executory devise (k).

SECT 1.
Estate in Fee Simple.

316. Apart from statute, an estate in fee simple can only be created inter vivos by a limitation to the grantee "and his heirs" (l). It is not sufficient to use words implying the indefinite duration of the estate, such as a limitation to the grantee "for ever." The word "heirs" makes the estate of inheritance (m), and it is to the estate thus limited that the law attaches the incident of indefinite duration (n). But in deeds executed since the

Jac. 590, 592; Challis Law of Real Property, 3d ed., p 220 But this is so only where the estate is held by an individual under a limitation to him and his heirs, if it is held by a corporation, and the corporation is dissolved, there is no escheat, and the land, unless otherwise provided by statute, reverts to the donor (Co Litt 13 b, Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p 35, 174, 226; title CORPORATIONS, Vol VIII, p 373)

(h) See title PERPETUITIES, Vol XXII, pp 300, 301.

(i) Pells v Brown, supra

(k) But the devisee has the statutory power of sale of a tenant for life (Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict c 38), s 58 (i), (u), see title SETTLEMENTS; and, as to the avoidance of certain executory limitations, see p 237, post

(l) In practice the limitation is to the "heirs and assigns", but the words "and assigns" do not enlarge the estate; this is fully created by the limitation to "heirs"; they are only declaratory of the power of alienation which would exist without them and have no conveyancing value (Brookman v Smith (1871), L R 6 Exch 291, 306; affirmed (1872), L R 7 Exch. 271, Ex Ch, Milman v. Lane, [1901] 2 K B 745, C. A.); though in a will the word "assigns" may sometimes operate to give a power of appointment (Quisted v Michell (1855), 1 Jur. (N S) 488; see Brookman v Smith, supra, Milman v. Lane, supra) Originally the insertion of the word "assigns" was necessary in order to give the power of alienation (Pollock and Maitland, History of English Law, Vol II, p 14; and see p 288, post)

(m) The word "heirs" is construed as heirs general so as to give the fee simple, notwithstanding that the grantee cannot have any heirs except heirs of his body; e.g., if the grantee is a bastard (1 Preston, Abstracts of Titles, 272).

(n) Littleton's Tenures, s. 1; 2 Bl Com 107. It is apparently essential to use the word "heirs" in the plural (Co Litt 8 b; Chambers v Taylor (1837), 2 My & Cr 376); but this was doubted in Dubber d. Trollope v. Trollope (1734), Amb 453, 458), though in a will, when words of limitation were necessary to pass the fee, "heir" might be nomen collectivum, so as to imply the plural (Co Litt 8 b, note (4); and see the criticism of the note in Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p. 221). Perhaps the omission of "his" does not destroy the effect of the limitation, but in a limitation to two persons "and heirs," the omission of the word "their" makes the limitation void for uncertainty, and they have but an estate for their lives (Co Litt. 8 b) Apparently a limitation to A. "or his heirs" gives A only an estate for life (Mallory's Case (1601), 5 Co. Rep. 111 b, 112 a); though in a grant to A. "or his heirs to hold to him and his heirs," the

Estate in Fee Simple.

When the word "heirs" unnecessary.

31st December, 1881, an estate in fee simple can be limited by the words "in fee simple" (o). If the word "heirs," or, since such date, the phrase "in fee simple," is not used, the limitation creates only an estate for life (p).

The word "heirs" is not required in wills. In the absence of a contrary intention, a devise by a testator seised in fee simple passes the whole estate to the devisee without words of limitation (q). Moreover, an estate in fee simple may be created by reference to a limitation in another instrument or in another part of the same instrument where the word "heirs" is used, although it is not used in the referential limitation (r); and the word "heirs" is not required upon a release by one coparcener or joint tenant seised in fee simple to the others (s); nor upon the grant of a rent between such persons by way of equality of partition (t). Words implying word "or" is treated as an error and corrected (Wright v Wright (1750), 1 Ves Sen 409, 411; see Goodtitle d. Dodwell v Gibbs (1826), 5 B & C. 709, (Challis, Law of Real Property, 3d ed., p. 221).

(o) Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), s. 51. It has been decided in England that the exact statutory phrase must be used; "in fee" is not enough (Re Ethel and Mitchell and Builders' Contract, [1901] 1 Ch. 945), but in Re Otley's Estate, [1910] 1 I. R. 1, the word "simple" was added by the court to the habendum of a disentailing deed.

(p) Littleton's Tenures, s. 1, but by special custom a copyhold in fee can be granted without the word "heirs" (2 Preston on Estates, 67). Before 1882, even the words "in fee simple" did not create more than a life interest (Shep. Touch (ed. Preston) 106). In a grant to a corporation sole, the word "successors" is necessary to pass the fee simple (Co. Litt. 8 b), otherwise only a life estate passes (Co. Litt. 94 b); but when grants in frankalmoin were possible, a grant in fee simple in frankalmoin could be made to a corporation sole without mentioning successors (ibid.). In a grant to a corporation aggregate a fee simple passes without mentioning successors, "for that the body never dies" (ibid., 2 Bl. Com. 108; see title CORPORATIONS, Vol. VIII., p. 371). The limitation of an equitable estate is prima facie treated with the same strictness as that of a legal estate, and the word "heirs" is required to pass the equitable fee (Re Whiston's Settlement, Lovatt v Williamson, [1894] 1 Ch. 661; Re Iruin, Iruin v. Parkes, [1904] 2 Ch. 752), but this rule is not absolute, and if there is a clear intention that the fee should pass, effect will be given to it (Re Oliver's Settlement, Evered v. Leigh, [1905] 1 Ch. 191; Re Thursby's Settlement, Grant v. Litledale, [1910] 2 Ch. 181, 189, C. A.; and see title EQUITY, Vol. XIII., pp. 94, note (s), 95, note (c)).

(q) Wills Act, 1837 (7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 26), s. 28; and see title WILLS. Even before this statute a devise was not construed with the same strictness as a grant, and the entire fee simple passed if there were words to indicate such an intention (2 Bl. Com. 108).

(r) Co. Litt. 9 b; Garde v. Garde (1843), 3 Dr. & War. 435. But words of limitation are not supplied by reason of the grantee being defined so as to include his "heirs" (Re Ford and Ferguson's Contract, [1906] 1 I. R. 607).

(s) Co. Litt. 9 b. I.e., "when an estate of inheritance passeth and continueth"; and similarly upon a release, when an estate of inheritance passeth and continueth not, but is extinguished; when, for instance, the grantee of a rent in fee simple releases the rent to the tenant of the land, the rent is extinguished for ever, although the tenant's heirs are not mentioned (ibid., Shep. Touch (ed. Preston) 327).

(t) "Because the grantor has a fee simple in consideration whereof he granted the rent" (Co. Litt. 10 a); and on a bargain and sale for valuable consideration, and on a fine or recovery, the fee simple might pass without

(i.) Enjoyment.

317. Land subject to easements (b) or to restrictive covenants (c) cannot be used in a manner inconsistent with the proper enjoyment of the easements, or with the due observance of the covenants; and, in certain circumstances, the use of land may interfere to such an extent with the comfort of neighbouring owners or occupiers as to constitute an actionable nuisance (d); but, short of this, an owner in fee simple is subject to no restrictions as to the use to which he may put the land, and he may exercise over it acts of ownership of all kinds, including the commission of waste, such as the felling of timber, the opening and working of mines, and the pulling down of houses (e). If, however, his estate is subject to an executory devise over, he is in the same position as a tenant for life without impeachment of waste, and he may not commit equitable waste (f).

Rights of user.

(ii.) Alienation

318. The owner of an estate in fee simple has an absolute right to alienate the land inter vivos (g), and, subject to the provisions of

(c) See title SALE OF LAND.

(d) In accordance with the maxim, Sic utere tuo ut alienum non laedas; but there must be an injury recognised by law as actionable. A thing lawful in itself does not in general become actionable by being done with an intention to cause injury or annoyance, but this may be so if an owner with such intention does an act, such as burning limestone on a particular part of his land, when he might just as well do it elsewhere without causing annoyance (Bradford Corporation v. Pickles, [1895] A. C. 587, 598); and see title NUISANCE, Vol. XXI., pp. 524 et seq.

(f) Turner v. Wright (1860), 2 De G. F. & J. 234, 246. Previously the opinion seems to have been that the court would interfere to restrain waste in pursuance of the settlor's intention (Robinson v. Lutton (1744), 3 Atk. 209; Stansfield v. Habergham (1804), 10 Ves. 273, 278). But the will or settlement can expressly prohibit waste, which will then be restrained, notwithstanding that the prohibition is also enforced by a clause of forfeiture (Blake v. Peters (1863), 1 De G. J. & Sm. 345, C. A.). As to waste by tenant for life without impeachment for waste, see p. 176 post., title SETTLEMENTS

During the life of the owner in fee simple he is liable to be deprived of his estate by process of execution (m), or by the operation of the law of bankruptcy (n); and upon his death, except in the case of a legal interest in copyholds, it devolves in the first instance on his personal representatives (o). So far as the land is not required for payment of his debts, the beneficial interest devolves, if he has disposed of it by will, upon the specific or general devisee (p), otherwise, upon his heir-at-law ascertained in accordance with the Inheritance Act, 1833 (q).

Modified fee.

320 Estates in fee can be created subject to certain modifications, and these give rise to estates upon condition—sometimes called “fee simple conditional” (r),—determinable fees, conditional fees, and qualified fees.

(i) By the common law, land held in fee simple was not devisable by will, but by the custom of London and certain other cities and boroughs land was devisable (Littleton's Tenures, s. 167, Co. Litt. 111 a). Under stat. (1540) 32 Hen. 8, c. 1, explained and amended by stat. (1542—3) 34 & 35 Hen. 8, c. 5, tenants in socage (see p. 141, ante) could devise the whole, and tenants by knight service (see p. 140, ante) two-thirds of their lands, see Co. Litt. 111 b. Upon the abolition of tenure in knight service, and the conversion of that tenure into socage tenure (see p. 147, ante), the power to devise extended to all lands held in fee simple by lay tenure. The above statutes were repealed, and a new statutory power of devising land was given by the Wills Act, 1837 (7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 26), ss. 2, 3, see title WILLS; and, as to copyholds, see title COPYHOLDS, Vol. VIII., p. 109.

can re-enter and determine the estate, either by virtue of the condition merely, if it is suitably expressed, or otherwise by virtue of an express proviso for re-entry (s). Thus, if the land is granted in fee simple upon condition that a specified yearly rent shall be paid, a right of entry is implied, and the grantor can re-enter if the rent is in arrear (t). The same effect is produced where the grant, after reserving a rent, contains an express proviso that, if the rent shall be in arrear, the grantor and his heirs may re-enter (a). Similarly there may be a proviso for re-entry if the land ceases to be used for a specified purpose (b).

322. But an estate upon condition cannot be defeated without actual entry, or claim equivalent to entry; it is not ipso facto defeated by the happening of the critical event (c), and, since the grant of the

How

(s) Littleton's Tenures, s 325 Besides conditions expressed in the grant there may be conditions implied by law. Thus, before the Statute Quia Emptores (1290), 18 Edw 1, c 1 (see p 144, ante), the grant of an estate in fee simple to be held of the grantor implied a condition that the services should be performed (Ferne, Contingent Remainders, 9th ed., p. 332, n). As to such conditions, see Littleton's Tenures, s 378, Co. Litt 233 b. LITTLETON treats words of limitation as conditions in law (Littleton's Tenures, s 380).

(a) Littleton's Tenures, ss 325, 330, 331 Such a rent is not incident to a reversion, inasmuch as since the Statute Quia Emptores (1290), 18 Edw 1, c 1, no tenure is created between grantor in fee simple and grantee; see Doe d Freeman v Bateman (1818), 2 B & Ald 168, 170, and see p 144, ante.

(b) See Re Hollis' Hospital (Trustees) and Haque's Contract, [1899] 2 Ch. 540, where land was granted to trustees in fee for a charity in 1726, subject to a proviso that if at any time it should be employed for any other purposes, it should revert to the right heirs of the grantor. Originally mortgages were made by way of feoffment upon condition, the condition being that if the feoffor paid the debt on the agreed day he might enter (Littleton's Tenures, s 332; Co Litt 205 a, b; Seymour's Case (1612), 10 Co Rep 95 b, 97 b). LITTLETON says (Littleton's Tenures, s 350) that if a lease for years was made with livery of seisin, an estate in fee simple might arise by condition precedent, o g, if the lessee paid a certain sum within the term, but this was questioned (Co Litt 216 b, 217 a). In both the cases last mentioned the estate is called a fee simple conditional, but, to avoid confusion with conditional fees (see p 172, post), it is better to use the phrase "fee simple upon condition." Conditions precedent occur in the limitation of future estates; in the present connection only conditions subsequent are material. As to conditions precedent and conditions subsequent, see Re Greenwood, Goodhart v. Woodhead, [1903] 1 Ch 749, C A.

(c) Co Litt 214 b, 218 a; Leake, Law of Property in Land, 2nd ed., p. 169. But this only applies to an estate of freehold in corporeal hereditaments; it does not apply to incorporeal hereditaments (A.-G v Cummins, [1906] 1 I. R. 406, 408); and an estate for years can be made ipso facto void (Co Litt 214 b, and see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., p 530). So also can an estate of freehold under words operating as a limitation and not as a condition (Co Litt 214 b, Fitchet estate exhausts the fee, the right of re-entry cannot be limited by way of remainder (d); it can only be reserved to the grantor and his heirs (e), and it exists in their favour as a possibility of reverter (f).

Validity of condition.

323. Such a condition is called a common law condition, and is, apparently, subject to the rule against perpetuities (g). If this is so, it is invalid, unless it is confined within the limits allowed by the rule (h). The condition is invalid also if it is unlawful (i), and, since an estate in fee simple is in its nature alienable, a condition in restraint of alienation is repugnant and therefore void (j).

(ii) Determinable Fees

fee.

324. An estate in fee may be granted with words of direct limitation (k) so as to be prima facie a fee simple, but with further words—sometimes called words of collateral limitation (l)—whereby it is liable to be determined on the happening of some future event, provided that this is of such a nature that by possibility it may never happen at all (m). An estate so limited is called a “determinable fee” (n), and moreover it is no objection that the future

Adams (1740), 2 Stra 1128, see the text, infra) Upon re-entering the grantor is, in general, restored to his old estate (Littleton's Tenures, s 325), as to possible exceptions, see Co Litt 202 a. A condition under which the grantor is to enter for non-payment of rent and hold till the arrears are satisfied does not restore to him an estate of freehold (ibid, 203 a).

(h) It has been objected that common law conditions are older than the rule against perpetuities (see Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., pp 187, 207); but the tendency is to extend the application of the rule so as to cover future interests of all kinds. As to the reasons for which common law conditions may, perhaps, be excluded, see title PERPETUITIES, Vol. XXII., p. 315, note (g).

Where the event must happen, the estate is a freehold inferior in quantum to a fee simple, if the event is to happen at an uncertain time, e.g., on the falling of a life, so as to make the estate an estate pur autre vie, if the event is to happen at a fixed time, the estate is a chattel real (Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p 251; see Littleton's Tenures, s. 740).

(n) The possibility of such estates is generally assumed by the recognised authorities. Sir E. COKE calls the estate a fee simple limited and qualified (Seymour's Case (1612), 10 Co. Rep 95 b); Preston calls it a determinable fee (1 Preston on Estates, 443); and Butler calls the estate a limited fee (Fearn, Contingent Remainders, 9th ed., p. 382, n.), and the limitation a conditional limitation (ibid, p. 10, n.). But the term “conditional limitation” is more conveniently confined to shifting uses and executory devises in which the event may happen at a time beyond the limit allowed by the rule against perpetuities (o). But since the possible duration of the estate exhausts the fee, no remainder can be limited upon it; and the grantor retains only a possibility of reverter (p).

If the future event is such that it will always remain liable to happen (q), the determinable fee can only be enlarged into an absolute fee simple by release of the possibility of reverter. If the future event is such that it may become impossible to happen (r), then, upon such impossibility being ascertained, the possibility of reverter is extinguished, and the determinable fee is enlarged into an absolute fee simple (s). If the event happens, the estate is thereby determined by force of the collateral limitation, without entry by the grantor or his heirs (t).

ultimate limitation is really conditional, see Gray, Rule^a against Perpetuities, 2nd ed., p 24 Words suitable for introducing the collateral limitation are the English equivalents of "quandiu, dummodo, dum, quousque, durante" etc (Portington's (Mary) Case (1613), 10 Co Rep 35 b, 41 b, Co Litt 234 b, see Re Machu (1882), 21 Ch D 838, 843) A list of such limitations, actual or suggested, is given in Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed, pp 255—260 In modern times it has been suggested that a determinable fee is impossible since the Statute Quia Emptores (1290), 18 Edw 1, c 1 (see p 144, ante) (Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 5th ed, Vol I, p 208, Gray, Rule against Perpetuities, 2nd ed, p 31, Pollock, Land Laws, p 213, Leake, Law of Property in Land, 2nd ed., p. 25; and see the discussion as to determinable fees in trustees in Collier v Walters (1873), L R 17 Eq 252, 261) But this view has not been acquiesced in (Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed, p 437, Sir Howard Elphinstone, in the Law Quarterly Review, Vol II, p 394, and see Mr Gray's Reply, Rule against Perpetuities, 2nd ed, pp 556 et seq) In practice determinable fees are obsolete, the same object being attained by shifting uses and executory devises, and these are more effectual because the substituted estates can be limited to third persons The examples of determinable fees given by Mr Challis (Law of Real Property, 3rd ed, pp 255—260) include, as Mr Gray points out (Rule against Perpetuities, 2nd ed, p. 29, n (6)), many instances of shifting uses and executory devises, and the list is, perhaps, rather curious than useful; see also A-G v Cummins, [1906] 1 I. R. 406; Re Leach, Leach v Leach, [1912] 2 Ch. 422, 427.

(o) Gray, Rule against Perpetuities, 2nd ed, p 312, A-G v Cummins, supra The principle is either that possibilities of reverter are older than the rule against perpetuities and are subject only to the common law, or that the collateral limitation determines, but does not originate, an estate. The latter is probably the better reason. See, further, title PERPETUITIES, Vol XXII., pp. 300 et seq, 312 et seq, 335 et seq, 348 et seq, 353 et seq.

(t) It has been generally assumed that the determination is in favour of the grantor and his heirs, and this is implied in the phrase "possibility of reverter" But the view has been advanced that, since the Statute Quia Emptores (1290) (18 Edw. 1, c 1) (see p 144, ante), the absence of tenure between grantor and grantee gives the benefit of the reverter to the lord

SECT. 2.

Modified Fees.*Conditional fees.(iii) Conditional Fees

325. A conditional fee is an estate which has not been possible as regards freeholds since the Statute De Donis (a). The limitation of such a fee before the statute was the same as the limitation of an estate tail after the statute, that is, to the grantee and the heirs of his body, either generally, or restricted to a special class of heirs of his body (b). The grant was construed as a conditional gift in fee simple to this extent, namely, that if the grantee had issue born capable of inheriting according to the form of the grant, the condition was treated as having been performed for the purpose of enabling the grantee to alienate the land for an estate in absolute fee simple (c); but if the grantee did not alienate, the land descended to the class of heirs named in the grant (d); if, on the other hand, he died without having had issue capable of inheriting, the estate came to an end and the land reverted to the grantor (e).

Conditional fees were, as regards freehold lands, turned into estates tail by the Statute De Donis (a), but they may still exist as regards other hereditaments, since these are not within the statute (f); and it appears that in manors where there is no custom to entail, a grant of copyhold land to the grantee and the heirs of his body gives a customary fee, and is construed by the analogy of conditional fees at common law (g).

(c) Pollock and Maitland, History of English Law, Vol I, p 17. Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed, p 265. In addition to alienation the condition was performed for the purpose of forfeiture, and so as to enable the grantee to create incumbrances (Co Litt 19 a)

(d) Co. Litt. 19 a. But though the heirs general were not admitted to inherit, it seems that in a grant limited to heirs of the body of the grantee by a particular spouse, the birth of such an heir would, on failure of issue in that line, let in other heirs of the body of the grantee, in other words, birth of issue of the special class changed the estate from tail special to tail general (Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed, p 267)

ancestor whose heir he is. This, it has been suggested, may be done where it is required that the descent shall be traced from the ancestor (h), and such an estate has been called a qualified fee simple (i). But probably the limitation only controls the original course of descent, and does not place any restriction on the power of alienation; thus, the owner for the time being can alienate like the owner of an estate in fee simple absolute, and vest a fee simple absolute in the alienee (j).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Incidents of Estates.

327. There is no rule forbidding waste by the owner of an estate in fee simple which is liable to be determined for breach of condition or by virtue of a collateral limitation. Consequently, such an owner has the same rights of actual enjoyment as an owner in absolute fee simple, including the right to commit waste at his pleasure (k). He has also the same rights of alienation inter vivos or by will, save that the estate in the hands of his alienee is subject to determination in the same manner as in his own hands (l).

SECT. 3.—Estate for Life.

SUB-SECT. 1.—For the Life of the Tenant.

(1) How Arising

328. An estate for life is an estate of mere freehold as distinguished from estates of inheritance (m). The estate may be for the life of the tenant or for the life or lives of other persons. These estates are known as an estate for life and an estate pur autre vie, respectively.

Nature of life estate.

329. An estate for the life of the tenant arises (1) by express or implied limitation; (2) by operation of law, as in the case of tenant by the curtesy or in dower; and (3) by tenant in tail being reduced to the position of tenant for life in consequence of the possibility of issue in tail becoming extinct. The estates of tenant by the curtesy and tenant in dower are treated of subsequently (n).

How created

(h) Littleton's Tenures, s. 354. Possibly the limitation must be to the heirs of the ancestor in the paternal line (Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., pp. 269, 277). In considering the effect of the limitation, account must be taken of the Inheritance Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 106), s. 4, and of the Law of Property Amendment Act, 1859 (22 & 23 Vict. c. 35), s. 19. But such limitations, if not obsolete, are too rare to make it worth while to deal with them in detail here. They are fully dealt with in Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., ch. xix; and see title DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, Vol. XI, pp. 8, 9.

SECT. 3.

Estate for Life.

By express grant.

Determinable life estates

330. An estate for life arises expressly where land is granted to a person for his life (o). If the estate is given for life, but without mentioning whose life, it is presumed to be for the life of the grantee (p), unless the grantor has only power to grant an estate for his own life, and then the estate is for the life of the grantor (q).

An express estate for life may be limited so as to be determinable during the life on a specified event, such as a limitation to a woman during widowhood (r), and, although a clause merely prohibiting alienation is repugnant and void (s), yet the clause is effectual if it is expressed so as to make the estate determinable on bankruptcy or alienation (t).

Arising by implication.

331. An estate for life arises by implication where land is granted by deed to a person without specifying what estate he is to take, or without using words of limitation which are proper to confer an estate of inheritance, whether in fee simple or in fee tail (a). An estate for life may also arise by implication from the terms of a will in favour of a person to whom no estate is expressly devised (b), and, by way of resulting use, under limitations by way of use (c); but not under a deed (d).

Tenant in tail after possibility of issue extinct

332. A quasi-estate for life arises in the case of a tenancy in tail after possibility of issue extinct where lands are limited in special tail (e), and one of the persons from whom the issue is to proceed dies without issue of the specified class. Thus, where land is given to a man and his wife and the heirs of their bodies, and one

(o) The proper place for limiting the estate is in the habendum. As to variations between limitations in the premises and in the habendum, see title DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS, Vol. X., p. 474.

(p) Co. Litt. 42 a. This is upon the ground that the deed is to be taken most strongly against the grantor, an estate for a man's own life being treated in law as greater than an estate for the life of another (ibid., see titles DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS, Vol. X., pp. 440, 441, LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., p. 241, note (p)).

R. 515; Re Perkins' Settlement Trusts, Leicester, Warren v. Perkins (1912), 56 Sol. Jo. 412), or till it is taken in execution (Re Detmold, Detmold v. Detmold (1889), 40 Ch. of the spouses dies without issue, the survivor is tenant in tail after possibility of issue extinct (f). Similarly, where land is given to a man and his heirs by a specified wife, the husband has a tenancy of this nature if the wife dies without issue by him (g). And, although in either case there are at first issue surviving, the tenant in tail becomes tenant after possibility of issue extinct upon the death of the issue without issue (h). But the law does not presume impossibility of issue merely from the great age of the parties or one of them (i). The estate cannot arise by express limitation or by the act of the parties, but only as the legal result of facts not depending on the will of the parties (j). In quantity it is the same as an estate for life (k), but in quality it retains the nature of an estate tail so far that the tenant is not punishable for waste except equitable waste (l).

333. A tenant for life has the right to the full enjoyment (m) of the land during the continuance of his estate (n), subject to the duty of leaving it unimpaired for the remainderman; this duty is defined by the doctrine of waste (o). Waste is either voluntary, such as felling timber, opening mines, and pulling down houses, or permissive, such as allowing houses to fall into disrepair. A tenant for life is liable for voluntary waste (p), but not for permissive waste (q), unless his estate is expressly made subject to the condition of maintaining the premises (r). Liability

As to restraining waste, see title INJUNCTION, Vol. XVII, pp. 232, 233.

(p). At common law, liability for waste was incident only to life estates arising by operation of law, that is, dower and curtesy. The theory was that in estates otherwise arising the lessor or grantor should expressly provide against waste. But by the Statute of Marlbridge (1267), 52 Hen 3, c 23, lessees for life were made punishable for waste; see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol XVIII, p 498, note (b).

Estate for Life.

Estovers

The tenant for life is allowed, however, to take timber necessary for the enjoyment and repair of the premises; that is, housebote, for the repair of the house and for fuel; ploughbote, for the making and repair of agricultural implements; and haybote, for the repair of fences. These are called estovers (s) and must be reasonable (t), and they can only be used for the actual repairs required. Timber cannot be cut in advance (u), or sold to pay the wages of men employed in the repairs (a), or in order to purchase other timber with the proceeds (b).

Equitable
waste.

334. A tenant for life may, on the creation of his estate, be made disinclined for waste. This is done by limiting the estate to him for life "without impeachment for waste" (c), and such exemption may be either general, or may exclude a particular kind of waste (d). He is then liable only in respect of the excepted waste, if any, and also in respect of such waste—known as equitable waste—as in the view of a court of equity (e) is not properly within the exemption, that is, the wanton destruction of houses and the felling of timber planted or left standing for ornament or shelter (f). A tenant in tail after possibility of issue extinct, though unimpeachable for waste (g), seems to be under the same restraint as regards equitable waste (h).

title deeds.

335. The legal tenant for life is entitled to the custody of the title deeds of the estate (i), but he may be deprived of them if the

Estate for Life.

336. Where a tenant for life has sown the land for crops which usually repay the sowing within the year, and dies before he has obtained the advantage of his expense and labour, his personal representatives are entitled to take the crops as emblements (m); but he is not entitled to emblements if his estate determines in his lifetime by his own act (n). Emblements

337 On the death of the tenant for life his personal representatives are entitled to all articles brought on the premises by him which have not been attached to the land so as to become part of it, and, although the articles have become so attached and are fixtures, yet, if they have been affixed by the tenant for life for the more convenient or luxurious occupation of the premises, or for the purposes of trade, the personal representatives may remove them, provided the removal can be effected without substantial damage to the premises (o). (m) Alienation

338 Save under statutory powers, the tenant for life can dispose of the land only to the extent of his own interest. Hence, on a sale or gift of the land, whether expressed to be for the life of the tenant for life or any greater interest, the purchaser or donee takes an estate only for the rest of the life of the tenant for life (p), that is, Power of Litt. 327 b) A feoffment by a tenant in tail (Littleton's Tenures, s. 599) had a greater effect, since it caused a discontinuance and put the issue to his action, that is, on the death of the tenant in tail the issue could not enter, but had to bring a real action, an estate pur autre vie (g); and, on a lease of the land, the lessee takes a term which is liable to be determined by the death of the lessor (r). Under statutory powers, the tenant for life can dispose of the land by sale, exchange, partition, or lease; but any capital sum received on such transaction is paid to trustees or into court and follows the limitations of the land (s).

SUB-SECT 2.—Pur Autre Vie.

(i.) How Arising.

Nature of estates *pur
autre vie.*

339. Land may be held by the tenant for the term of another man's life, or for the term of several concurrent lives, and, in the latter case, for the term of the joint lives or of the life of the survivor (t). A term which is intended to be for the joint lives must be expressly so limited, otherwise it will be also for the life of the survivor (a). The estate of the tenant is an estate of freehold (b), and is called an estate pur autre vie, the person whose life measures the estate is called the cestui que vie (c).

How created

formedon in descender; in the case of default of issue, the remainderman had his formedon in reverter (Littleton's Tenures, ss 595, 597). But a grant of a life estate by deed, which might be made where the land was in the occupation of a tenant for years, had no tortious effect, and only passed the life estate (Littleton's Tenures, s. 609). A feoffment, like a grant, has now no tortious operation (Real Property Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 106), s. 4; p. 291, post). Hence, a conveyance by a tenant for life, in whatever form made, does not now operate to pass more than his interest, and does not cause a forfeiture. Formerly there was a distinction between tenant in tail after possibility of issue extinct and his assignee as to attainment to the remainderman (Ap-Rice's Case (1590), 3 Leon 241).

(t) Littleton's Tenures, s. 56; Co Litt 41 b; Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p. 356. There may be an estate to A for the term of his own life and the lives of B and C (Co Litt 41 b). On the death of A. in the lifetime of B and C. or either of them the estate does not determine, but continues, if A. has assigned it, in favour of the assignee, and otherwise in favour of a special or general occupant, until the death of the survivor of B and C (Uttly Dale's Case (1590), Cro Eliz. 182; Rosse's Case (1598), 5 Co Rep. 13 a; see Brudnel's Case (1592), 5 Co Rep. 9 a). Ordinarily an estate for a man's own life is greater than an estate for the life of another, and hence an estate to A. for the lives of A., B. and C. would be an estate for the life of A. only; but in this case the usual rule does not apply (Co. Litt 41 b; and see p. 174, ante). An estate pur autre vie may also be limited for the life of a person and the life of his heir (Re Amos, Currier v. Price, [1891] 3 Ch 159).

does not alter the quantum of the estate, though it affects the beneficial interest therein after his death (d). Moreover, the technical nature of the estate is the same whether it is granted by way of conventional lease at a rent (e), or whether it is created by way of settlement (f). In either case the seisin is in the tenant, but in the former case the lessor reserves the succeeding estate to himself as his reversion, and to this the rent is incident, in the latter the succeeding estate is either a remainder or reversion.

An estate pur autre vie also arises when a tenant for his own life assigns his estate to another (g); the assignee is then tenant pur autre vie, and the assignor becomes the cestui que vie (h). The estate thus assigned may be either an estate originally created for life, or an estate for life arising by operation of law, such as a tenancy in dower (i).

(ii) Enjoyment.

341. A tenant pur autre vie has the same rights of enjoyment as tenant for his own life (k); he is entitled, generally, to use the land as he pleases, subject to the restrictions imposed by the doctrine of waste (l), and he has the same right, notwithstanding waste, to take estovers (m). But his enjoyment of the land may be restrained by special agreement (n), and, in the case of conventional leases for lives at a rent, the lessee's covenants are usually similar to those in a corresponding lease for years (o). In the case where the tenancy arises under a settlement, the tenant takes the rents and profits, and has special statutory powers of disposing of the land (p).

(iii) Alienation Inter Vivos

342. A tenant pur autre vie, whether the estate is limited to him alone, or to him and his heirs, or his executors or administrators, has an absolute power of alienation during his life (q), and upon his death the estate of his assignee does not determine, but he continues to hold for the remainder of the life of the cestui que vie in the same manner in all respects and subject to the same incidents as the assignor held (r).

(iv) Devolution on Death.

Devolution at common law.

343. At common law an estate pur autre vie was not devisable(s), nor, although the heirs of the tenant were mentioned in the grant, did the heir take by descent (t). But since the land was granted away for the whole life of the cestui que vie, and the freehold must not be vacant, the estate was filled up by means of the doctrine of occupancy (u). If the heirs were named in the grant, this was not by way of limitation of the estate, but as a nomination of an occupant after the death of the grantee. The heir was thereupon entitled to enter and hold for the remainder of the life of cestui que vie, and he was called the special occupant (r); but, since he did not take by descent (w), the land in his hands was not assets for the payment of

(r) Uttly Dale's Case (1590), 110 Elz 182. An estate pur autre vie may be limited by way of remainder (11 Attorneys v Chappell (1714), 3 Bro Parl. Cas. 50), which, although contingent, does not, in the case of copyholds and leaseholds, require any prior estate to support it (Pickersgill v. Grey (1853), 30 Beav 352); and a remainderman, if not barred, takes as special occupant (Allen v Allen (1842), 2 Dr & War 307, 325). It cannot, however, be entailed, though a quasi-entail may be effected (Allen v Allen, supra, Pickersgill v Grey, supra, Re Barber's Settled Estates (1881), 18 Ch D 624, 628), which may be barred by deed and otherwise (Grey v. Mannock (1765), 2 Eden, 339, Lynch v Nelson (1870), 5 I R Eq 192), but not by will (Blake v Blake (1786), 1 Cox, Eq Cas 266, Doct Blake v Luxton (1795), 6 Term Rep 289 292; Campbell v Sandys (1803), 1 Sch & Lef 281; Hopkins v Damage (1820), Batt 365, Cresswell v Hawkins (1857), 3 Jur (N S) 407; Walsh v Studdert (1871), 5 I R C. L 478, Morris v Morris (1872), 6 I R C L 73; Re Barber's Settled Estates, supra) The power of alienation by successive takers is regulated by analogy to the rules governing similar limitations of an estate in fee simple. Thus, an executory devise cannot be defeated by a prior tenant in quasi-fee simple (Re Barber's Settled Estates, supra), and where such a tenant conveys his whole legal interest to trustees upon trusts which fail, there is a resulting trust of the beneficial interest to him, or to his heirs as special occupants (Northern v Carnegie (1859), 4 Drew 587)

Consequently the estate is not an estate of inheritance (ibid), and there is no dower (Low v Burron (1734), 3 P Wms 262, 263; Re Michell, Moore v Moore, [1892] 2 Ch 87, 97), or curtesy (*Stead v. (v) Northern v Carnegie, supra, at p. 590, and, similarly, the heir takes although the limitation is to the heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns (Atkinson v Baker (1791), 4 Term Rep 229). In a deed the special occupant must be expressly designated, but in a will the intention of the testator is enough (Re Sheppard, Sheppard v. Manning, [1897] 2 Ch. 67).

(w) Similarly, where an estate pur autre vie is limited to the grantee and the heirs of his body with remainders over, no true entail is created, but, if the tenant for the time being does not alienate in his lifetime, the heirs of the body and remaindermen in succession take as special occupants (*Low v. the tenant's debts (a). If the heir was not named in the grant, then, if the possession was vacant, any person might enter and clothe himself with the freehold as general occupant (b), if a tenant or other person was in possession, he became the freeholder by the same title (c); in either case the general occupant took without liability to pay the deceased tenant's debts (d).

occupant.

344 By virtue of the Wills Act, 1837 (e), an estate pur autre vie can be disposed of by will, whether there is or is not any special occupant, and whether it is of freehold, customary, or copyhold tenure, and whether the subject of the estate is a corporeal or an incorporeal hereditament (f). If no testamentary disposition is made, and if the estate comes to the heir as special occupant, it is chargeable in his hands as assets; but if there is no special occupant, it goes to the personal representatives of the tenant, and is assets in their hands and is distributable as personal estate (g). In the case, however, of the death of a tenant since the 1st January, 1838 (h), an estate pur autre vie, whether disposed of by will or not, devolves upon the personal representatives as though it were a chattel real, and is applicable, like other real estate in their hands, as assets for the payment of debts; although this does not disturb the beneficial interest in the property nor vary the order in which, as between real and personal estate, it is liable for payment of debts. Accordingly, where the heir is entitled as special occupant, he takes the land beneficially, subject to its liability for debts in case of the deficiency of the personal estate, and, apparently, a devisee takes it in the App 192, 198), and the personal representatives take it as an estate of freehold (Oldham v Pickering, supra, see S. C., Carth 376). A devisee does not take as occupant, but by his title under the will. On the death of the grantee pur autre vie of a rentcharge during the life of the cestui que vie, it goes to his executors, although executors are not named in the grant (Bearpark v Hutchinson (1830), 7 Bing 178; *Chatfield v. same way; but if there is no devise, and if the heir does not take as special occupant, the land becomes for all purposes personal estate (v).

Effect of assignment on devolution.

345. Where upon an assignment or devise of an estate pur autre vie the limitation is to the assignee and his heirs, or the devisee and his heirs, the heir takes as special occupant, although the original grant of the estate did not mention heirs (k); but the mere description of the estate as freehold, or an indication of an intention that it shall go as freehold, is not for this purpose equivalent to the mention of heirs (l); and the mention of heirs in the assignment of the legal estate to trustees does not supply the omission of the word in the estate of the cestui que trust (m).

(v) Determination

cestui que vie.

346. Any person having any claim in remainder, reversion, or expectancy may, upon affidavit that he has cause to believe that the cestui que vie is dead, and that his death is concealed, obtain an order of the High Court for his production by the tenant pur autre vie or his assignee (n); and if such order is not complied with, the cestui que vie is taken to be dead, and any person claiming any interest in remainder, or reversion, or otherwise may enter accordingly (o).

(k) There appears to be no decision on the relative liability of estates pur autre vie and personal estate to payment of debts, but it seems that in favour of the heir taking as special occupant, and of a devisee, they must rank as real estate. As to the order of application of assets, see title EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, Vol. XIV., pp 285 et seq.

(l) Re Michell, Moore v. Moore, [1892] 2 Ch. 87, 96. Sir E. COKE accordingly recommended an assignment to trustees and their heirs, so as to prevent general occupancy, where the mention of heirs had been originally omitted (Co. Litt. 41 b).

Remaindermen may apply notwithstanding that, in certain events, they are not immediately entitled on the death of the tenant for life (Ex parte Grant (1801), 6 Ves. 512). The order states the place at which, the time when, and the person before whom the cestui que vie is to be produced (Ex parte St. Aubyn (Sir John) (1793), 2 Cox, Eq. It appears that it is not necessary for the affidavit required by the statute to contain a statement that the death is concealed from the applicant (Re Dennis's Will (1860), 7 Jur. (N. S.) 230). The order for production will be made if the remainderman gives notice to the person in possession to produce the cestui que vie under the statute, and the notice is not complied with (Re Owen (1878), 10 Ch. SECT. 4.—Estate by the Curtesy.

SUB-SECT 1—Nature and Continuation of Estate.

349. Curtesy is the right of a husband to an estate for his life, expectant on the death of his wife, in the entirety of lands and hereditaments of the wife (r) of which she is seised for an estate of inheritance (s), subject to his having issue by her born alive who are capable of inheriting the property from her (t). If the property is subject to the custom of gavelkind (u), the curtesy is of a moiety only, the birth of issue is not necessary, and the estate ceases on the husband's remarriage (v). As regards tenure, tenant by the curtesy holds of the heir (a).

Judgments and Orders, 7th ed., p 1713); and, if this is not complied with, a final order is made that the cestui que vie is to be deemed to be dead (Re Pople, Ex parte Baker (1889), 40 Ch. D. 589; 2 Seton, Judgments and Orders, 7th ed., p 1713). As to extending the time for production, see Re St John's Hospital (1868), 18 L. T. 317. The court cannot give the tenant pur autre vie the costs of producing the cestui que vie (Re Isaac (1838), 4 My. & Cr. 11), nor will it give the applicant his costs, at any rate if the respondent had good reason for requiring him to come before the court (Re Pople, Ex parte Baker, supra, at p 593). The statute applies in cases where the title of the remainderman depends on the death of the cestui que vie without issue (Re Pople, Ex parte Baker, supra, see Ex parte Grant (1801), 6 Ves. 512); to cases where the estate is for ninety-nine years if the cestui que vie so long lives (Ex parte Grant, supra); and to cases where the person in possession has any interest determinable on a life—such as permissive occupation—although not an estate pur autre vie strictly so called (Re Stevens (Thomas) (1886), 31 Ch. D. 320); and as to procedure, see, further, Daniell's Chancery Practice, 7th ed., p 1886. The remainderman has of course to give up possession to the tenant pur autre vie if, after the order is made, the cestui que trust proves to be alive (Re Pople, Ex parte Baker, supra, at p. 592).

such as rents and advowsons (c); but not in a mere right, title or condition, or in a personal hereditament (d). It may exist in property limited to the separate use of the wife (e), and in statutory separate property (f), notwithstanding a restraint on anticipation (g), unless the right is barred by a disposition of the wife (h).

351. In the case of land, it is necessary that the wife shall obtain seisin in deed, that is, that she shall enter (i); seisin in law is not sufficient (k): but this rule has been departed from where the nature of the wife's title is such that it could not, during her lifetime, be clothed with seisin in deed (l). In the case of incorporeal

Possession by the wife ranks as equitable seisin, so as to make the estate attach (Parker v Carter (1844), 4 Hare, 400). Where an equitable estate for life and also an equitable remainder in fee are vested in the wife with an intervening power of appointment in her which is not exercised, she has an estate of inheritance on which curtesy attaches (Follett v Tyres (1844), 14 Sim 125, see Pitt v Jackson (1786), 2 Bro. C C 51; Roberts v Draxwell (1738), 1 Atk 607, but see, contra, Hearle v Greenbank (1749), 3 Atk 696). But the husband is not allowed curtesy in an equitable estate or interest contrary to the express provisions of the trust (Bennet v Davis (1725), 2 P Wms 316, where a devise to a wife for her separate use expressly excluded the husband's curtesy; the husband was tenant by the curtesy at law but held as trustee for the wife's heir-at-law), or to the clear intention of the settlor (see Steadman v. Fallong (1746), 3 Atk 423).

(k) Co Litt 29 a. Nor is it sufficient to obtain judgment in an action for the recovery of the land, if execution is stayed and the defendant remains in possession until the death of the wife (Parks v. Hegam, [1903] 2 L. R. 643, where a father granted land to his daughter in fee, but remained in possession; the daughter married and had a son, and she brought an action for the recovery of the land against the father. by consent, judgment was entered for her, with a stay of execution during the father's life, and she died while he was still in possession: held, no sufficient actual seisin to entitle the daughter's husband to curtesy, notwithstanding the judgment).

(l) B g., where there is a devise to a daughter in fee or in tail and she predeceases the testator leaving issue, the devise takes effect by virtue of hereditaments in gross, seisin in deed is necessary, if there has been an opportunity of obtaining it, but, if the wife dies before an installment of a rentcharge becomes due, or an advowson falls vacant, seisin in law is sufficient (m), although, if the rent is incident or the advowson appendant to a manor, seisin in deed of the manor is necessary to create the curtesy in them (n)

SECT. 4.
Estate by the Curtesy.

352. Inasmuch as seisin by the wife is necessary, there is no curtesy of a reversion or remainder expectant on a freehold interest which does not fall into possession during the marriage (o); but, since the possession of a tenant for years gives seisin in deed to the reversioner, the existence of a term of years does not prevent curtesy (p).

Reversions
and remainders.

353. The wife must be solely seised of the hereditaments or of an undivided share in them (q), thus curtesy attaches to a hereditament held by the wife as tenant in common or coparcener (r), but not where she is joint tenant (s). The entry of one tenant in common or coparcener is deemed to be the entry of all for the purpose of giving a title to curtesy (t).

SECT. 4. wife's own seisin is not disturbed, the husband has his estate by the curtesy, notwithstanding that her fee is defeated after her death by the estate by an executory limitation (a).

Necessity of birth of issue 355. As soon as a child capable of inheriting (b) is born, the husband acquires a vested interest in his estate by the curtesy, and this is not divested by the subsequent death of the child (c), whether during the wife's life or after her death (d). The issue must be born alive (e) during the marriage (f); and this may be either before or after the wife is entitled to or seised of the property (g).

Issue capable of inheriting 356. The issue must be capable of inheriting the property from the wife by descent. If the wife is seised in fee simple or in tail general and has issue by her first husband, a second husband is nevertheless entitled to curtesy on issue being born to her by him, because the issue by the first husband might die (h). But in the case of an estate in special tail, that is to say, limited to the wife and the heirs of her body by a particular husband, no other husband than the husband specified can in any circumstances be entitled to curtesy (i). If an estate is limited to the wife and the heirs male of her body, the child, to entitle the husband to curtesy, must be a son, and if to the heirs female of her body, must be a daughter (k).

SUB-SECT 2 — Incidents

SECT. 4.

Estate by the Curtesy.Rights of tenant by curtesy.

357. The incidents of an estate for life are, generally speaking, the same whether the estate arises by act of the parties or by operation of law (l). Hence, a tenant by the curtesy is under the same liability for waste as any other tenant for life impeachable for waste (m); and he must keep down the interest on incumbrances (n). On the other hand, he has the rights of a tenant for life in respect of the enjoyment of the property during his life, and on his death his personal representatives are entitled to emblements (o). In the case of a manor he is lord pro tempore (p), and in the case of an advowson he enjoys the same right of presentation as his wife would have enjoyed if living (q). If his wife was tenant in common or coparcener, he is entitled to the remedies of a co-owner for life to partition (r).

358. A tenant by the curtesy has the statutory powers of sale, exchange, and leasing of a tenant for life of settled land (s), his estate being deemed, for the purposes of the statutes, to be an estate arising under a settlement made by the wife (t). Apart from the statutory powers, a lease granted by a tenant by the curtesy is absolutely determined by his death (a).

Powers of tenant by curtesy.

359. Where both husband and wife take legacies under a will which disposes of her estate of inheritance, so that she has to elect between her estate and the legacies, and she elects to keep her estate, the husband is not also bound to elect between his right of curtesy in her estate and the legacy given to him (b). But an

A tenant by the curtesy was liable for waste at common law before the statutory liability was imposed on tenants for life generally (see note (p), p. 175, ante); and he remained under the liability even after he had assigned his estate (Walker's Case (1587), 3 Co Rep. 22 a, 23 b).

(q) Thus if his wife was coparcener and the eldest, he is entitled to the first presentation in preference to the other coparceners (Co. Litt. 166 b; Harris and Haies v. Nichols (1583), Cro. Eliz. 19); and see title ECCLESIASTICAL LAW, Vol. XI., pp. 571, 572.

But a lease by a tenant by the curtesy may be valid in favour of a lessee acting in good faith, notwithstanding that it does not purport to be granted in pursuance of the Settled Land Acts (Mogridge v. Olapp, [1892] 3 Ch. 382, C. A.). As to the powers of a tenant for life generally, see title SETTLEMENTS.

Estate by right of curtesy (c).
the Curtesy.

SUB-SECT 3.—How Defeated.

Defeated by wife's disposition.

360. The right of curtesy may be barred by a marriage settlement, or a contract between husband and wife(d), or by the husband joining with the wife in a disposition of the property by deed acknowledged(e), or by her election to relinquish the property(f); and in the case of property limited to the separate use of the wife(g), the right may be barred in equity by her sole disposition, either inter vivos or by will, if she is not restrained from anticipation; and even if she is restrained from anticipation, the right may be barred by her testamentary disposition(h).

Women married on or since the 1st January, 1883, may bar the right of curtesy, at law as well as in equity, by disposing of the property either by deed or will, and in equity by a contract to dispose thereof, and women married before that date may similarly bar the right with respect to any property the title to which has accrued on or after that date(i).

By divorce and judicial separation

361. The right of curtesy is defeated by a decree for dissolution of marriage(k). In the case of a decree of judicial separation, property acquired by or devolving upon the wife while the separation continues may be disposed of by her as if she were a feme sole, and if she dies intestate, it devolves as though her husband were dead, so that the husband has no right of curtesy in any such property as long as the separation lasts(l); but, in the event of a reconciliation and the resumption of cohabitation, the right of curtesy revives, save that all property to which she is then entitled is held to her separate use, subject to any agreement entered into between her and her husband while living apart(l), and is therefore subject to her power of disposition. granted by a court of summary jurisdiction, has the same effect in this respect, during its continuance, as a decree of judicial separation (m).

SECT. 5.—Estate in Dower.

SUB-SECT 1—Nature and Condition of Estate.

362. Dower at common law (o) is the right of a wife on surviving her husband to an estate for her life in one third part of the freehold estates of inheritance (p) of which her husband was solely seised at any time during the marriage to which her issue by him might by possibility have been the heir-at-law (q). It is not necessary, as in the case of curtesy, that issue should be actually born in order to entitle the wife to dower; it is sufficient that issue capable of inheriting might have been born of her (r). (p) See Jones v Jones (1832), 2 Cr & J 601. By the common law, an alien woman marrying an Englishman is not entitled to dower (Wall's Case (1848), 6 Moo P C C 216, see title ALIENS, Vol I, p 306). The widow of a mortgagee or trustee was at law entitled to dower out of the mortgaged land or trust estate, but took subject to the right of redemption or to the trust (Noel v Jevon (1678) Freeman (n) 43, Bevant v Pope (1681) Freeman (n) 71, Flack v Longmate (1845) 8 Beav 420); but see Henley v Webb (1820), 5 Madd 407; see title EQUITY, Vol XIII, pp. 95, 96. But now such estates devolve on the personal representatives, see title EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, Vol XIV, p 233

(q) 2 Bl Com 131; Littleton's Tenures, ss 36—53. The right to dower out of foreign and colonial land depends on the law of the place where the land is situated (Re Rea, Rea v Rea, [1902] 11 R 451; and see title CONFLICT OF LAWS, Vol VI, pp 199 et seq, 218 et seq). The Court of Chancery did not recognise the right to dower out of equitable estates (see title EQUITY, Vol XIII, p 95, note (c)), though as to equities of redemption, see Palmer v Danby (1701), Prec Ch. 137, Hamilton (Duke) v Mohun (Lord) (1710), 1 P Wms 118, White v White (1804), 9 Ves. 554; in the case of persons married after the 1st January, 1834, this right is now given by the Dower Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c 105), ss 1, 2, and extends to gavelkind (Re Maskell and Goldfinch's Contract, [1895] 2 Ch 525) and borough-English lands (Farley v Bonham (1861), 2 John & H 177). As to customary dower, or freebench, in copyhold lands, see title COPYHOLDS, Vol VIII, pp. 78 et seq. As to a widow's interest in her deceased husband's undisposed of personal estate, see title DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, Vol XI, pp 16—18. A husband is not obliged to leave his wife any portion of his property

gavelkind, the dower extends to a moiety of the husband's estates of inheritance, but continues only so long as she remains chaste and unmarried (s). By the custom of borough-English it may extend to the whole (t).

363. The right of dower extends to land (u), and to all incorporeal real hereditaments which can be the subject of estates of inheritance, such as rents (v), common appendant or in gross (w), advowsons appendant and in gross (x) and franchises (a). have inherited; but, if the wife dies and the husband remarries, the second wife is not dowable (Littleton's Tenures, s 53; Paine's Case (1587), 8 Co Rep 34 a, 36 a). In considering the possibility of issue the law does not regard the age of the parties, save that the wife is not dowable unless she is above nine years at her husband's death (Co. Litt 40 a). A second wife is dowable out of an estate in fee simple or fee tail general notwithstanding there is a son by the first wife, since that son might die and her own issue inherit (2 Bl Com. 131).

Leigh* (1808), 1 Taunt. 402); and see p. 198, post.

(v) Co. Litt. 144 b. But if a rent is granted to the husband in tail without remainder over, and he dies without issue, the widow can have no dower, because the subject-matter has ceased to exist (Chaplin v. Chaplin (1734), 3 P. Wms 229). It is otherwise in the case of a grant in tail with remainder over, where the rent, by virtue of the remainder, continues in existence after the death of the tenant in tail without issue (Chaplin v. Chaplin, supra).

Phillips* (1832), 1 My & K. 649; see title PARTNERSHIP, Vol. XXII, p. 56); and the exercise of an option to purchase given by the husband before the right of dower has attached defeats the right

364. In order that the right to dower may attach at common law, the husband must during the marriage have been solely seised of the property, whether corporeal or incorporeal, for an estate of inheritance in possession (d); and such seisin may be either seisin in deed or seisin in law (e). There is no dower out of an estate which is still in remainder or reversion when the husband dies (f); but a reversion upon a term of years subject to a rent is treated as a freehold in possession, and the existence of the term does not prevent the dower attaching (g).

SECT. 5.

Estate in Dower.

whether the option is exercised before or after the death of the husband (Townley v. Bedwell (1808), 14 Ves. 591; see Lloyd v. Lloyd (1843), 2 Con. & Law. 592; title EQUITY, Vol. XIII., p. 111).

(d) Littleton's Tenures, s. 36, 2 Bl. Com. 131. Thus there is no dower out of an estate pur autre vie, since it is not an estate of inheritance (Re Michell, Moore v. Moore, [1892] 2 Ch. 87), see note (t), p. 180, ante). Nor at common law is there dower out of rights of entry or of action, since the husband is not seised. But dower is extended by statute to rights of entry on, or of action to recover, property itself subject to dower (Dower Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 105), s. 3); and, as regards equitable estates, to which the right of dower is also extended by the same statute (ibid, s. 2), it is sufficient that the husband is during the marriage either in beneficial possession, or entitled to such possession. See Re Michell, Moore v. Moore, supra, compare Lemon v. Mark, [1899] 1 I. R. 416, 435, C. A. (where an estate pur autre vie was held to have merged in an ultimate remainder in fee notwithstanding the interposition of a contingent estate). As to the old conveyancing devices to defeat dower, see pp. 192 et seq., post.

(e) For this purpose "seised" extends "as well to a seisin in law, as to a seisin in deed, which is a natural seisin, but the husband must be seised either the one way or the other during the coverture" (Co. Litt. 31 a; 2 Bl. Com. 131); and see p. 214, post.

(f) Co. Litt. 32 a; Duncomb v. Duncomb (1696), 3 Lev. 437; Boothby v. Vernon (1725), 9 Mod. Rep. 147, D'Arcy v. Blake (1805), 2 Sch. & Lef. 387. If before the marriage the husband grants a lease for life reserving rent to him and his heirs, and dies after the marriage before the tenant for life, the wife has no dower out of the reversion, because the husband was not seised, nor out of the rent, because the husband had no estate of inheritance therein (Co. Litt. 32 a); but she has dower out of a rent reserved on a grant in tail so long as the estate tail continues (Co. Litt. 32 a, note (4)).

(g) Bates v. Bates (1698), 1 Ld. Raym. 326; Hutchens v. Hutchens (1700), 2 Vern. 403; Stoughton v. Leigh (1808), 1 Taunt. 402. The widow is dowerable out of the land or the rent according as the lease was made during or before coverture (Stoughton v. Leigh, supra, at p. 410). As to the former effect of attendant terms as a bar to dower, see Radnor (Countess) v. Vandebendy (1686), Show. Parl. Cas. 69; Hill v. Adams (1741), 2 Atk. 208; S. C., sub nom. Swannock v. Lyford, Amb. 6; Mole v. Smith (1822), Jac. 490; Satisfied Terms Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 112); see p. 270, post, and see note (g), p. 192, post, and, as to relief in equity, see Radnor (Lady) v. Rotheram (1696), Prec. Ch. 65; Dudley (Lord) v. Dudley (Lady) (1705), Prec. Ch. 241; Williams v. Lambe (1791), 3 Bro. C. C. 264; Watkins v. Lynch (1830), Hayes, 98; and see title EQUITY, Vol. XIII., pp. 42, 77, note (d).

(h) Littleton's Tenures, s. 45. But if the husband severs the joint tenancy, or becomes by survivorship entitled to the whole, dower attaches in respect of the part or the whole, as the case may be, and, if partition takes place, dower attaches on the land assigned to the husband (Reynard v. Spence (1841), 4 Beav. 103).

SECT. 5.

Estate in Dower.Temporary seisin.

possession is joint, each tenant in common has a separate seisin of his undivided share and dower attaches (i).

It is not, at common law, necessary that the seisin should continue till the husband's death: a temporary seisin, however short, is sufficient to raise the right of dower (k); and formerly, if the husband alienated, he alienated subject to the right of dower (l). Moreover, if his seisin is defeated by re-entry for breach of condition, his estate is gone, and the right of dower also ceases (m).

Effect of executory gift over and escheat.

365. Since birth of issue is not essential, the right of dower attaches notwithstanding that the husband's estate in fee is defeated for want of issue; thus, where there is a devise to the husband with an executory devise over if he dies without leaving issue, the wife has her dower notwithstanding that the devise over takes effect (n); and, similarly, dower is not defeated by an escheat (o).

Litt 201 b; and see p 169, ante, and though under the doctrine of uses dower attaches to the use (see note (q), infra), yet it ceases if the use is determined. Thus, if land is limited to such uses as the husband shall appoint, and in default of appointment to himself in fee, dower attaches at once, because he is seised until the execution of the power (Cunningham v. Moody (1748), 1 Ves Sen. 174; Doe d. Wilks v. Martin (1790), 4 Term Rep 39; Smith v. Camelford (Lord) (1795) 2 Ves 698, Doe d. Collins v. Weller (1798), 7 Term Rep 478); but upon the execution of the power the right to dower is defeated (Ray v. Pung (1821), 5 Madd. 310)

(q) Ibid., s 4. The Act only applies to persons married since the 1st January, 1834 (ibid., s. 14). In the Act "land" extends to manors, advowsons, messuages, and all other hereditaments, whether corporeal or incorporeal (except such as are not liable to dower) and to any share thereof. For statutory definitions of "land," see p. 157, ante. Formerly a term of years (not subject to a rent), vested in a purchaser or mortgagee, might afford protection against dower (Anderson v. Piquet (1872), 8 Ch App 180; and see Wynn v. Williams (1799), 5 Ves 130, Maundrell v. Maundrell (1805), 10 Ves. 246, 271, 272). Since the right of dower is now placed entirely under the control of the husband, the former methods by which the right was barred are obsolete. This might be (1) by legal jointure, (2) by equitable jointure, and (3) by conveyance to the husband to uses to bar dower. The Statute of Uses (27 Hen. 8, c. 10), by turning uses into legal estates, made them liable to dower, and it was accordingly provided (ibid., ss. 6, 7) that estates might be conveyed by way of jointure, so as to bar the general right to dower. (1) Jointure was a competent livelihood of freehold to the wife of lands and tenements to take effect presently after the death of the devise of all his realty, without any declaration as to dower, is a sufficient disposition for this purpose, and dower is therefore now practically confined to property in respect of which the husband dies intestate (r). This extends to lands subject to husband for the life of the wife at least; and might be made either before or after marriage (Co Litt 36 b). A jointure under the statute, made before marriage, bound the wife though she was an infant (Buckingham (Earl) v. Drury (1762), 3 Bro Parl Cas 492), and see title DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, Vol XI, p 18. A jointure after marriage bound the wife, if she accepted it; otherwise she could elect between the jointure and dower (Co Litt 36 b; Butler and Baker's Case (1591), 3 Co Rep. 25 a, 26 a, b; Vernon's Case (1572), 4 Co Rep. 1 a, 4 a), and see, further, title EQUITY, Vol. XIII. pp. 120, 121, note (i). (2) There may also be equitable jointure. Any provision intended to be in lieu of dower and accepted by the wife, being of full age, in satisfaction thereof, is in equity a bar to the right of dower whether made before or after marriage, and whatever the nature of the provision (Dyke v. Rindall (1852), 2 De G M & G. 209; Thompson v. Watts (1862), 2 John & H 291), compare Gurly v. Gurly (1842), 8 Cl & Fin 743, 11 L (a provision in satisfaction of dower and "thirds" prevents her claiming under the Statute of Distributions, see title DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, Vol XI, p 18), see Caruthers v. Caruthers (1794), 4 Bro. C C 500, Fyan v. Henry (1840), 2 Dr. & Wal 556, Hervey v. Hervey (1739), 1 Atk. 561, Corbet v. Corbet (1824), 1 Sim & St 612. In Rose v. Reynolds (1580), 1 Swan 446, a term of years, and in Lacy v. Anderson (1582), 1 Swan 445, copyhold lands were a satisfaction of dower. The right of freebench may be barred in equity, though not at law, in a similar manner (Walker v. Walker (1747), 1 Ves Sen 54; see note (r), infra; title COPYHOLDS, Vol VIII, p 78); and as to the doctrine of satisfaction, see title EQUITY, Vol XIII. pp 128 et seq. An agreement by marriage articles to secure a jointure of a specified amount in lieu of dower operates as a bar in equity, though the husband may die before executing a settlement (Pennefather v. Pennefather (1872), 6 I R Eq. 171, see Hamilton v. Jackson (1845), 2 Jo & Lat 296), but where by marriage articles (Daly v. Lynch (1715), 3 Bro Parl Cas. 478; Caruthers v. Caruthers, supra), or other agreement before marriage (Lemon v. Mark, [1899] 1 I. R. 416), to which the wife was not a party, an agreement has been made for provision in lieu of dower, the wife has, as in legal jointure (Lemon v. Mark, supra), her election between jointure and dower. (3) The usual method, however, of defeating dower before the Dower Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c. 105), was for a purchaser on the purchase of lands to have the land conveyed to him to uses to bar dower: that is, to such uses as the purchaser should appoint by deed, in default of appointment, to himself for life, and in the event of the determination of the estate by any means during his life, to a trustee and his heirs in trust for him during his life, with an ultimate remainder to the purchaser, his heirs and assigns. Under these limitations the purchaser had at no time during his life an estate of inheritance in possession on which the right of dower could attach (Williams, Real Property, 21st ed., pp 390 et seq). Such a limitation is now needless, since the husband can defeat dower by alienation, and also useless, since the right of dower now attaches to estates, partly legal and partly equitable, which are equal to an estate of inheritance in possession (Dower Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c. 105), s. 2; Fry v. Noble (1855), 7 De G. M. & G. 687, C A).

Hill*, supra, Thompson v. Burra, supra; as to dower or freebench being barred in equity by other provision if so intended, see Walker v. Walker, supra; *Willis v. 367. Moreover, all partial estates and interests, and all charges created by any disposition or will of the husband, and all debts, incumbrances, contracts and engagements to which his land is subject, are valid and effectual against the right to dower (u). But dower still appears to have priority over creditors of the deceased husband who have not obtained a charge on the land in his lifetime (a).

Declaration barring
dower

368. The widow's right to dower out of particular property is barred if in the deed by which the property is conveyed to the husband (b), or by any deed executed by him, it is declared that his widow shall not be entitled to dower (c); or if by his will he makes a similar declaration (d); and the right is subject to any conditions, restrictions, or directions declared by his will (e).

Devise or bequest to widow.

369. The widow's right to dower may also be barred by any beneficial devise to her. Thus, where the husband devises any land or hereditaments, out of which the widow would be entitled to dower if they were not so devised, to or for her benefit, she is not entitled to dower out of any property of the husband, unless a contrary intention is declared by the will (f); but no gift or bequest by a husband to or for the benefit of his widow out of his personal estate, or out of land not liable to dower, defeats or prejudices her right to dower unless a contrary intention is expressed by the will (g).

(b) This is so, even if the husband dies without executing the deed (Farley v Tuck (1857), 6 W R 9). But where in a deed executed before 1834 the limitation of the property was expressed to be to the intent that the then present or any future wife of the purchaser should not be entitled to dower, it was held that that was not a sufficient declaration to exclude the dower of a wife to whom the purchaser was married after the commencement of the Act (Fry v Noble (1855), 7 De G, M & G 687, C.A.).

371. On the other hand, a wife may preclude herself from claiming dower by a contract with the husband during the marriage (i).

Agreement
not to bar

If a wife joins her husband in a mortgage of the property for the purpose of releasing her dower, her right is absolutely barred, in equity as well as at law, and she has no right of redemption, nor any right to have the value of her dower made good out of any surplus after payment of the mortgage debt (h).

A widow may also waive her right of dower, but, if she joins in a mortgage with the heir-at-law or other person entitled to the property subject to dower, for the purpose of extinguishing her right, she is prima facie deemed to extinguish it only for the purpose of the mortgage, so that on repayment of the debt the right of dower revives (l).

the dower and the annuity (Reynard v Spence (1841), 4 Beav 103, and see note (g), p 192, ante). The question of intention depended on the construction of the will as a whole and the circumstances of each particular case; compare Wetherell v Wetherell (1862), 4 Giff 51 (widow held entitled both to dower and the annuity). Where an annuity was given to the widow, and the lands of the testator were devised to trustees, it was held that the mere fact of the trustees being given power to lease and manage the lands was not of itself sufficient to raise an implication of an intention to exclude dower so as to oblige her to elect between dower and the annuity, and that the amount of the annuity was a material circumstance to be taken into consideration as indicating the intention (Warbulton v Warbulton (1854), 2 Sm & G 163, Parker v Sowerby (1853), 1 Drew 488; and see Bending v Bending (1857), 3 K & J 257). If a widow elects to take a legacy bequeathed to her in satisfaction of dower, the legacy has priority over other legacies (Bunulge v. Bradyl (1710), 1 P Wms 127; Blower v Morret (1752), 2 Ves Sen 420; see title EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, Vol XIV, p 276). continuance of the marriage, does not affect the right of the wife to dower or freebench (o).

373. The right of dower is forfeited by the adultery of the wife, in the absence of a subsequent reconciliation (p), even if she left her husband in consequence of his cruelty (q), or the adultery was brought about by his misconduct (r), or was committed after a separation by mutual consent (s).

SUB-SECT. 3—Assignment and Recovery.

Time of assignment.

374. A widow is entitled to be endowed immediately after her husband's death, and her dower ought to be assigned to her within forty days after that event, during which she is entitled to reside in her deceased husband's capital messuage or other dwelling-house, of which she is dowerable, and to be supported out of his estate (t). This right of residence is called the "widow's quarantine," and it determines if she marries or departs from the deceased husband's house during the forty days (u).

Person to make assignment

375. The person who has the right to assign dower is the heir or other person entitled to the freehold of the property subject thereto (a). A minor is competent to make the assignment (b), subject to a right, in the case of an excessive assignment, to have it corrected on his coming of age (c).

assignment.

376. The assignment may be made by parol (d). It must be unconditional and free from exception or reservation (e). One third in value of the property must be assigned, the value to be ascertained at the time of the assignment (f), and, where the husband died without leaving issue, after deducting the apportioned part of the £500 to which the widow is entitled as a first charge (g).

Assignment
by metes and bounds.

In the case of land, the assignment must be set out by metes and

Estate in
Dower.

With the consent of the widow, a rent issuing out of the lands subject to dower, or an undivided third, may be assigned in lieu of an assignment by metes and bounds (m), and she may, if she thinks fit, elect to take any other compensation offered in lieu of dower (n).

Substitution of rent.

377. The remedy for the recovery of dower is an action for the assignment thereof, which is commenced and proceeded with as an ordinary action in the High Court (o). Such actions may be brought either in the King's Bench Division or Chancery Division, but are usually brought in the Chancery Division (p), as being better adapted for the conduct of the necessary inquiries and proceedings (q).

Recovery
of dower

As a general rule, no costs are awarded in an action for assignment of dower, but they may be allowed where the defendant vexatiously and unreasonably disputes the widow's title (r).

Costs of action.

378. There is no statutory limitation on the widow's action for an assignment of dower, though if for twelve years she does not receive her share of the rents and profits, and makes no claim, she may be barred by her laches (s); but, after assignment, an action to recover the land assigned is subject to the twelve years' statutory limit (t), and arrears are only recoverable for the period of six years prior to the commencement of the action (u).

379. If, in an administration action, lands subject to dower are sold and the proceeds brought into court, the widow is entitled to be paid the capitalised value of her dower out of the fund (a); and, in certain cases, she has a similar right where the lands are compulsorily taken under statutory powers and the purchase-money paid into court (b).

Widow's estate after assignment

380. The effect of an assignment of dower, completed by the widow's entry, is to vest in her a freehold estate for life in the property assigned (c).

Rights and liabilities.

381. A tenant in dower stands on the same footing with regard to waste as other tenants for life impeachable for waste (d), and is therefore answerable for voluntary waste committed either by herself or a stranger (d), and may be restrained from committing such waste by injunction (e).

Minerals

If the lands assigned contain mines already opened, she may work them for her own benefit (f), but she may not open new mines, and she has the right to prevent the heir from opening them (g).

Timber.

She may not cut timber, but if timber was cut after the husband's death and before the lands assigned were set out by metes and bounds, she is entitled during her tenancy in dower to the income of one third of the proceeds (h).

Emblements

A tenant in dower is entitled to emblements, and to dispose of them, as in the case of a tenant for life (i), and, if not disposed of, her executors or administrators are entitled to them (h). But a widow having a right to freebench in copyhold lands, who forfeits the freebench by a second marriage, has no right to emblements (l).

Powers.

A dowress may demise the land assigned to her for any term not exceeding twenty-one years, to take effect in possession at or within one year after the making of the lease, provided that the lease is by deed, at the best rent reasonably obtainable, and without any fine or other benefit in the nature of a fine, the rent being incident to the immediate reversion (q). The lease must not be made without impeachment for waste, and must contain a covenant for payment of the rent, and a condition of re-entry on non-payment thereof for twenty-eight days after it becomes due, or any less specified period, and a counterpart of the lease must be executed by the lessee (q). Every such demise is valid against the dowress and all persons claiming through or under her deceased husband (a).

SUB-SECT 1 --In General

383. Land can be held by several persons having simultaneous interests, and these interests may be present or future. According to the nature of the interests, the co-owners are joint tenants (b), tenants in common (c), or coparceners (d); and there is a fourth form of co-ownership known as tenancy by entireties (e), confined to dispositions to husband and wife during coverture, where the wife's interest is not her separate property

Co-ownership.

SUB-SECT 2 --Joint Tenancy

(1) How Arising

384. Joint tenancy arises only by the act of a person creating the estate, never by act of law; but the act need not be lawful (f).

(m) Co Litt 211 a If the husband was a tenant in tail, and a rent was reserved to the donor of the estate tail, the dowress must pay a third of the rent, although the husband died without issue. The estate tail, although determined, being continued for her benefit, the rent to which it is subject is also deemed to continue for the benefit of the donor (ibid).

Thus the tenancy may arise by grant, devise, or disseisin. Where land is granted to two or more persons for the same estate, whether an estate of freehold or of leasehold, and no words are added indicating that the grantees are to take separate interests, they become joint tenants (g). Thus, a limitation to two or more persons for their lives makes them joint tenants during their joint lives; and a limitation to them in fee or for years makes them joint tenants in fee, or joint lessees (h); but a joint tenancy in fee tail can only be limited to a man and a woman who are capable of lawful marriage (i). A joint tenancy is created by similar limitations in a will (k). Further, two or more persons who enter into possession without title under such circumstances that the Statute of Limitations (l) runs in their can arise in chattels real and personal as well as in real estate (Littleton's Tenures, s 281): Morley v. Bird (1798), 3 Ves 628, 630, Shore (Lady) v. Billingsly (1687), 1 Vern. 482; *Barnes v. A gift may create a joint tenancy between parents and children (Mason v. Clarke (1853), 17 Beav 126; Jury v Jury (1831), 9 L. R. favour acquire a possessory title in joint tenancy (m), unless the circumstances are such as to show that they have several interests (n).

There are, however, special cases in which, notwithstanding the absence of words of severance, a court of equity will declare a tenancy in common (o).

SECT. 6.
Concurrent Estates.

Corporations as joint tenants.

385. At common law, a corporation aggregate cannot be joint tenant with an individual or another corporation aggregate, whether of freeholds (a) or of chattels real (b); nor can a corporation sole be joint tenant with an individual or another corporation sole of freeholds (c), though perhaps it is otherwise as regards chattels real (d). But by statute (e) bodies corporate are put on the same

(m) Ward v Ward (1871), 6 Ch App 789, Bolling v Hobday (1832), 31 W R 9; Smith v Savage, [1906] 1 I R 469. This corresponds to the old rule that a joint estate might be gained by disseisin (Littleton's Tenures, s 278; 2 Bl Com 181), provided the disseisin was to the use of the disseisors, but a disseisin to the use of one made that one sole tenant (Littleton's Tenures, s 278).

(n) Thus, where beneficiaries entitled as tenants in common acquire the legal estate by possession, they acquire it as tenants in common (Macdonnack v Courtney, [1895] 2 I R 97, Marten v Kearney (1903), 36 I L T. 117); but if some beneficiaries enter to the exclusion of the rest, they acquire the legal title in their own shares as tenants in common, and in the other shares as joint tenants (Smith v Savage, [1906] 1 I R 469). In Re Brown, Coyle v McFadden, [1901] 1 I. R. 298, this distinction was overlooked, and see title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, Vol. XIX, p 157. In a case where equitable tenants in common acquired the legal estate by grant it was held that the tenancy in common merged in the joint tenancy created by the grant of the legal estate (Re Selous, Thomson v Selous, [1901] 1 Ch 921); and see p 334, post.

(o) Thus, a conveyance to purchasers who provide the purchase-money in unequal shares may constitute them tenants in common, notwithstanding the form of the conveyance (Robinson v Preston (1858), 4 K & J 505, and see Taylor v Fleming (undated), cited Freem. (CH) 23; Rigden v Vallie (1751), 3 Atk 731, 735, Rea v Williams (circa 1730), Sudgen, Vendors and Purchasers, 11th ed, Appendix xxi (conveyance), Aveling v Knipe (1815), 19 Ves 441 (contract to purchase)). Parol evidence as to surrounding circumstances and subsequent dealings (Harrison v Barton (1860), 1 John 118, 287, Palmer v Rich, [1897] 1 Ch 134, 143), but not apparently as to statements of the parties (Harrison v Barton, supra), is admissible evidence of intention to hold as tenants in common. If an intention to create a tenancy in common appears on the face of the conveyance, contribution to the purchase money in equal shares does not convert such tenancy into a joint tenancy (Fleming v Fleming (1855), 5 I Ch R 129). As to the case of mortgagees, see title MORTGAGE, Vol. XXI, p 117, and, as to purchases by partners, see title PARTNERSHIP, Vol. XXII, pp 5 et seq, 52. Moreover, provisions for children under a marriage settlement are, if possible, construed as tenancies in common (Taggart v Taggart (1803), 1 Sch & Lef 84, 88, Rigden v Vallie, supra; Murray v Townly (1748), 1 Ves. Sen 102; Re Belliss' Trust (1871), L R. 12 Eq 218, Mayn v Mayn (1867), L R 5 Eq 150; Liddard v Liddard (1869), 28 Beav 266); and as to the nature of, and usual provisions contained in, such settlements, see title SETTLEMENTS.

SECT. 6. footing as individuals as regards the holding of real property in Concurrent joint tenancy.
 Estates.

(ii) Incidents

Nature of joint tenants'
 interests.

386 Each joint tenant has an identical interest in the whole land and every part of it. The title of each arises by the same act (f); the interest of each is the same in extent (g), nature (h), and duration (i); in the case of freeholds, the seisin, and, in the case of leaseholds, the possession, is vested in all; none holds any part to the exclusion of the others (h); and at common law the interest of each must vest at the same time (i). These are the four

(f) 2 Bl Com 180.

(g) That is, until severance, each has the whole, but upon severance each has an aliquot part—a half or less—according to the number of joint tenants. As to severance, see p. 204, post.

(h) There can be no joint tenancy between owners of a freehold and a term, or of a freehold in possession and a freehold in reversion (Co Litt 188 a).

(i) That is, the estates, so far as regards the joint tenancy, must be the same, though one joint tenant may have a further estate in severalty. Thus a grant to A and B for their lives, and to the heirs of A, gives a joint tenancy to A and B for their lives, and the remainder in fee to A (Littleton's Tenures, s 285; 2 Bl Com 181). Sir E COKE probably refers to such a limitation when he speaks of "two joint tenants, the one for life and the other in fee" (Co Litt 188 a). But in one case the effect of a severance is to give the joint tenants separate estates of different duration. Thus, if there are joint tenants for life, each has an estate for the joint lives, with the chance of taking as survivor an estate for the rest of his life—but upon a severance each has an estate in a moiety for his own life. Hence, unless they should die together, the severance must be to the advantage of the remainderman (Co Litt 191 a; 2 Bl Com 187), and it is the same if the limitation is to the joint tenants for their lives, and the life of the survivor of them, since this last limitation expresses no more than the law implies and is superfluous (Co Litt 191 a, 2 Preston, Abstracts of Titles, 63). In a limitation to two and the survivor of them in fee simple, the reference to the survivor turns the estate into a joint estate for lives with a contingent fee simple in remainder to the survivor (Co Litt 191 a, n 1; Van Grutten v. Foxwell, Foxwell v. Van Grutten, [1897] A. C. 658, 678), see note (a), p 222, post. Hence, where it is intended to limit a joint tenancy in fee these words must not be inserted (Co Litt 191 a, Butler's note, 1; Challus, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p 368).

(k) Joint tenants are seised of the land per mie et per tout (Littleton's Tenures, s 288), which is sometimes erroneously thought to mean by the half and by the whole. But the effect of "mie" is "not in the least" (see Murray v. Hall (1849), 7 C B 441, 455, note), and the true meaning is given by Sir E COKE: "each joint tenant holds the whole and holds nothing", that is, he holds the whole jointly and nothing separately" (Co Litt 186 a).

(l) Thus, if there is a grant to A. for life, remainder to the right heirs of B. and C., this is a contingent remainder to the heirs of B. and C. as tenants in common, since the heirs are not ascertained till the respective deaths of B. and C., and therefore vest at different times (Co Litt 188 a); and a grant to two persons who cannot marry and the heirs of their bodies gives them joint estates for life and several inheritances (Littleton's Tenures, ss 283, 284; Co Litt. 182 a et seq., Cook v. Cook (1706), 2 Vern 545, 546; see Fearn, Contingent Remainders, 36). As to a similar gift to two persons who can marry, see Co Litt 20 b, 26 b; and see Edwards v. Champion (1853), 3 De G. M. & G. 202, 215; Ex Tverton Market Act, Ex parte Tanner (1856), 20 Beav. 374; Huntley's Case (1573), Dyer, 326 a; Pery v. White (1778), 2 Cowp 777.

unities of title, interest, possession, and time (m). But in joint tenancy arising by limitations under the Statute of Uses (n), or under devises by will (o), the fourth unity is not essential, and the interests of the various joint tenants may vest at different times.

SECT. 6.
Concurrent
Estates.

387. From the fact that each joint tenant is seised of the whole it follows that the appropriate mode of conveyance when one joint tenant wishes to vest the entire interest in the other joint tenant or joint tenants is by release (p) and not by grant (q), and that in actions relating to the joint estate, one joint tenant cannot sue or be sued without joining the others (a). Moreover, the death of one joint tenant creates no vacancy in the seisin or possession, his interest is extinguished; if there were only two joint tenants, the survivor is now seised or possessed of the whole; if there were more than two, the survivors continue to hold as joint tenants. This incident, which is called the jus accrescendi, is the most important feature of joint tenancy (b).

Incidents
as regards interests of joint tenants

accrescendi.*

388 At common law no action of account could be maintained by a joint tenant against another joint tenant who had occupied the whole property unless he had constituted the occupying tenant

Account
between joint

(m) 2 Bl Com 180, 2 Cru Dig, tit 18, Joint Tenancy, c 1, s 11. Blackstone seems to have been the first to perceive the four unities, and he uses them to analyse the differences between the various forms of co-ownership with much ingenuity Chalmers's disparagement seems uncalled for (Chalmers, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed, p 367, compare 2 Preston, Abstracts of Titles, 62)

(n) 27 Hen 8, c 10, see Co. Litt 188 a, Hales v Risley (1673), Poll. 369, 373, Sussex (Earl) v Temple (1698), 1 Ld Raym. 310, Stallton v Best (1787), 2 Bro C C 233, Doe d Hallen v Ironmonger (1803), 3 East, 533, 2 Preston, Abstracts of Titles, 67. Blackstone brings all joint estates within the unity of time by making future uses relate back to the time of the original limitation. But in fact uses are not within this unity.

(p) Co Litt 9 b. In such a case the release operates by extinguishment of the estate of the releasor, and the entirety is then vested exclusively in the other joint tenant or joint tenants. But if the release is made by A, one of three joint tenants A, B and C, to another B solely, this operates to pass the estate (mitte l'estate) of A to B, and is a severance as regards that share, so that B holds the undivided third part as tenant in common with himself and C, and the undivided two third parts are held by B and C as joint tenants (Littleton's Tenures, ss 304, 312). As to severance, see p 204, post.

(q) A grant will, however, be construed as a release (Chester v Willan (1670), 2 Saund 96, Eustace v Scawen (1624), Cro Jac. 696), see title DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS, Vol. X, p 440.

(a) Littleton's Tenures, s 321; 2 Bl Com. 182

(b) Littleton's Tenures, s 280; Co Litt. 181 a, 2 Bl Com 183, 2 Preston, Abstracts of Titles, 57. But it does not follow that the chance of survivorship is always of the same value to each joint tenant. Thus, upon a joint estate to A and B for the life of A, if B dies A has the whole by survivorship, but if A dies there is nothing for B. to take (Co Litt. 181 b).

SECT. 6. his bailiff, so as to make him liable to account as such(c); but a right to account as between joint tenants is given by statute(d); and an action of account lies under the statute where the joint tenant has been in sole occupation, as well as where he has been in receipt of the rents(e).

Contribution. A joint tenant cannot compel the other joint tenants to contribute to the cost of repairs(f); but, in a partition action, he is allowed sums properly spent on substantial repairs and improvements(g); and, in such an action, he can be charged with any excess of rents and profits received by him(h), or, if he has been in sole occupation, with an occupation rent(i).

No fiduciary relationship. Joint tenants are not in a fiduciary relation to one another so as to be under the disabilities or liabilities attaching to that relation(j).

(m) Severance.

Severance in title. 389. The continuance of the joint tenancy depends on the maintenance of the unities of title, interest, and possession; and the destruction of any of these unities leads to a severance of the tenancy, and to the creation either of a tenancy in common, or of several tenancies(l).

The unity of title is destroyed when one joint tenant assigns(l) or mortgages(m) his share to a third person, if there are only two joint tenants, this creates a tenancy in common between the assignee and the other joint tenant(l); if there are more than two, it creates a tenancy in common as between the assignee and the other joint tenants; although, as between the latter, the joint tenancy continues(n). The effect is the same where one joint tenant becomes bankrupt(o).

Grant for life Where one of two joint tenants in fee grants his interest to a stranger for life, the freehold is in the other joint tenant and the grantee by different titles, and consequently they are tenants in common (p). In such case, however, the joint tenancy is only suspended: if during the suspension either the grantor or the other quondam joint tenant dies, there is no right of survivorship, and the tenancy is permanently severed (q), but if the grantee dies during the joint lives, the joint tenancy revives (r).

SECT. 6.
Concurrent
Estates.

A lease for years by one of two joint tenants in fee of his share does not, it seems, sever the joint tenancy, and it is binding on the other joint tenant after the death of the lessor, whether the lessee enters during the life of the lessor or not (s); but, where a term of years is held in joint tenancy, a lease by one joint tenant for a term less than the residue severs the joint tenancy (t).

A mere contract to sell a share (a), or a covenant in a marriage settlement to settle a share (b), even where the title to the property accrues after the marriage (c), or even if the covenantor was an infant at the date of the settlement and has not avoided it at majority (d), effects a severance.

SECT. 6.

Concurrent Estates.Severance

ment.

Conduct.

390. The unity of interest is destroyed, and the joint tenancy severed, when there are joint tenants for life, and one of them acquires the entirety of the reversion (h); or where there is a tenancy for life, remainder to joint tenants in fee, and the tenant for life grants his estate to one of the joint tenants (i).

If joint tenants enter into a mutual agreement to hold as tenants in common there is a severance (k).

Subsequent conduct of all the joint tenants may effect a severance (l); but the mere fact that the joint tenants employ the land for the purposes of a partnership business does not sever the joint tenancy (m). The receipt of a share of the proceeds of sale of part of an estate does not sever the joint tenancy as to the rest (n).

Severance of possession

391. The unity of possession is destroyed, and the joint tenancy severed, upon a partition (a) of the land between the joint tenants, and this may be either by agreement or compulsorily (b).

SUB-SECT 3—Tenancy in Common.(i.) *How arising*Creation of tenancy in common.

392 A tenancy in common differs from a joint tenancy in that it requires neither unity of title, interest, nor time, but only unity of possession (c). It may be created (1) by express limitation, (2) by any severance of a joint tenancy or of a tenancy in coparcenary which leaves the unity of possession untouched; or (3) by a

(h) Wiscot's Case (1599), 2 Co. Rep. 60 b. The one, A, acquiring the reversion holds an undivided moiety in fee, the other moiety is held by the other joint tenant, B, for life, remainder to A in fee, this diversity of interest severs the joint tenancy (Co. Litt. 182 b).

(i) Thus if the limitations are to A for life, remainder to B and C. in fee, and A. grants his life estate to B, B is immediately entitled to one undivided moiety in fee, and to the other moiety for the life of A, with remainder to C in fee (Co. Litt. 182 b, 183 a). But if A surrenders his life estate to B, this enures to the benefit of both B and C, and they are joint tenants in fee in possession (Co. Litt. 183 a, note (2)).

An agreement by joint tenants for disposal of the property by then respective wills, followed by the making of wills accordingly, operates as a severance (Re Wilford's Estate, Taylor v. Taylor (1879), 11 Ch. D. 267).

A statutory right to partition was conferred on them by stat. (1540) 32 Hen. 8, c. 32; and see title PARTITION, Vol. XXI., p. 834, note (r).

limitation which in form creates a joint tenancy, but under which the ultimate estates will vest at different times (d)

SECT. 6.
Concurrent
Estates.

By express
grant.

393. A tenancy in common is created by express limitation when land is granted to two persons to hold, the one moiety to one in fee simple or for some other estate, and the other moiety to the other, whether for the same or a different estate (e); or, without expressly giving the land in moieties, it is sufficient to use words signifying that the grantees are to take divided interests; where, for instance, they are to hold equally between them (f), or to them and their respective heirs (g).

(d) There may also be tenants in common by prescription (Littleton's Tenures, s 310), i.e., in property a title to which can be gained by prescription. In regard to land, possession does not give a title positively by prescription, but negatively under the Statutes of Limitation. As to the acquisition of such a title in joint tenancy, see pp 200, 201, ante, and see title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, Vol XIX, p 130

(g) Fleming v Fleming (1855), 5 I Ch R 129 (a case of an annuity charged on land where the authorities are fully discussed). But in a grant to two persons jointly and severally, the word "severally," is void, and they are joint tenants (Slingsby's Case (1587), 5 Co Rep 18 b, 19 a). A conveyance of land to two persons in moieties creates a tenancy in common between them (Co Litt 199 b), and a grant of a moiety creates a tenancy in common between the grantor and grantee (Co Litt 190 b). So if a will directs that property is "to be divided" (Feat v Chapman (1750), 1 Ves Sen 542; Ackerman v Burrows (1814), 3 Ves & B 54), or "to be equally divided" (*Philips v. Eliz 443, Denn d Gaskin v Gaskin (1777), 2 Cowp 657), or "share and share alike" (Heathe v. Foreman (1800), 5 Ves 207), or "amongst" (Richardson v Richardson (1845), 14 Sim 526), or "between" (Lashbrook v Cock (1816), 2 Mer 70; A. G. v. Fletcher (1871), L. R. 13 Eq 128) the donees; or is given to them "respectively" (Stephens v Hude (1734), Cas temp Talb. 27, Hawes v Hawes (1747), 1 Ves. Sen 13; Marryat v. Townly (1748), 1 Ves Sen 102, *Folkes v. A gift to "next of kin according to the Statute of Distributions" will create a tenancy in common (Fielden v. Ashworth (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 410, *Re Richards, Davies v. Concurrent Estates.

By severance of joint tenancy.

Where co-owners' estates vest at different times.

394. A tenancy in common arises on the severance of a joint tenancy or tenancy in coparcenary, where there is no partition of the property (h).

395. A tenancy in common arises under the ultimate limitation in a grant to two persons, who are not capable of marriage, and the heirs of their bodies. The two grantees are joint tenants for life, but the titles of the heirs vest at different times, and they take as tenants in common in tail (i); and when, without such prior life estate, the limitation is to the heirs of two living persons, the heirs Coleman* (1853), 1 Sm & G. 169; but it is otherwise if the reference to the statute is merely for the purpose of indicating the beneficiaries (Withy v. Mangles (1843), 10 Cl. & Fin. 215, H. L., Elmsley v. Young (1835), 2 My. & K. 780; Tiffin v. Longman (1852), 15 Beav. 275, Eagles v. Le Breton (1873), L. R. 15 Eq. 148, compare Re Gray's Settlement, Akers v. Sears, [1896] 2 Ch. 802). Further, a reference to "shares" will convert what would otherwise be a joint tenancy into a tenancy in common (Gant v. Laurence (1811), Wight 395, Ive v. King (1852), 16 Beav. 46; Alloway v. Alloway (1843), 4 Dr. & War. 380, Jones v. Jones (1881), 44 L. T. 642, Kew v. Rouse (1885), 1 Vern. 353). As a question of construction, expressions apparently indicating a joint tenancy may be controlled by other expressions conferring a tenancy in common (Re Wilder's Trusts (1859), 27 Beav. 418; Booth v. Abington (1857), 3 Jur. (N. S.) 835; Oakley v. Wood (1867), 16 L. T. 450; Paterson v. Rolland (1860), 28 Beav. 347, Ryves v. Ryves (1871), L. R. 11 Eq. 539; see, however, Cookson v. Jones (1864), 33 Beav. 348; Yarrow v. Knightly (1878), 8 Ch. D. 736, C. A.). As to the effect of words of survivorship in a gift, see Russell v. Long (1799), 4 Ves. 551, Bindon (Lord) v. Adams (1866), 22 Beav. 266. On the other hand, expressions indicating a tenancy in common may be modified by a subsequent clear expression of intention to create a joint tenancy (Stephens v. Hade (1734), Cas. temp. Talb. 27, Malcolm v. Martin (1790), 3 Bro. C. C. 50, Armstrong v. Eldridge (1791), 3 Bro. C. C. 215; Daly v. Aldworth (1863), 15 I. Ch. R. 69, *Cranswick v. have contingent remainders as tenants in common, since their estates will not vest at the same time (h).

SMO. 6.
Concurrent
Estates.

(ii) Incidents

396. Inasmuch as tenants in common are not required to have unity of title, they have several freeholds, while joint tenants and coparceners have one freehold (l); and inasmuch as they are not required to have unity of interest, they may be entitled to the land in unequal shares, and for estates which are unequal in duration. Thus, the land may be limited in unequal shares on the creation of the tenancy, or, after limitations in equal shares, inequality may arise from several of these shares becoming vested in one of the tenants in common (m); and, although the entire fee in each share must be disposed of either in possession, remainder, or reversion, the different shares may be subject to different limitations (n). The separation of interests excludes the right of survivorship, and on the death of one tenant in common, his share passes according to its own limitation (o).

Nature of tenancy in common.

But tenancy in common resembles joint tenancy in matters depending on unity of possession. The occupation is undivided, and neither owner can claim a separate part save by obtaining partition (p). One tenant in common who receives more than his share of the rents and profits is liable to account to the others (q), and a tenant in common will be restrained by injunction from destructive waste (r).

possession

397. A tenancy in common may be determined by the union of the various interests, whether by acquisition inter vivos or by

In a limitation to the right heirs of husband and wife, the heir to both—that is, a child—takes, and if no preceding estate is given to the husband and wife, he takes as purchaser (Ross v. Nightingale v. Quartley (1787), 1 Term Rep 630); but such a limitation in a will may be construed to give an estate tail (Wright v. Vernon (1851), 2 Drew 439; (1858) 7 H L Cas 35).

(m) See Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed, p 370.

(n) This follows from the consideration that each share is a separate freehold (Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed, p 370), it can, accordingly, be limited in any way possible for a freehold independently of the other shares. As to limitations of cross-remainders in undivided shares, see ibid, pp 270 et seq., title SETTLEMENTS.

Concurrent Estates.

SUB-SECT 4 — Coparcenary.

(1) How Arising

Creation of coparcenary

398 Coparcenary arises where two or more persons take hereditaments by the same title by descent (t). This may be at common law, or by special custom (u). Coparcenary arises at common law where upon the death of a man seised of land in fee or in tail the land descends upon two or more females as heirs general or heirs in tail (t); it arises by custom where, according to the custom of gavelkind, the land descends upon two or more male persons (a). Such persons are called coparceners, they constitute but one heir to their ancestor, they have a joint seisin, and they have equal rights in the land as regards each other (b). But under a devise to the testator's right heirs, if the heirs are coheirresses they take as joint tenants and not as coparceners (c).

(2) Incidents

Incidents of coparcenary

399 As regards third persons, coparceners are treated as having a joint freehold in the land, and all of them must sue or be sued in actions affecting the land (d), and for some purposes they are regarded as having a joint interest inter se, so that one can convey her share to another by release (e). In general, however, their rights inter se resemble those of tenants in common. Each is entitled to an undivided share of the land, and that share can be transferred to another by assignment or devise or release (f); there is no jus accrescendi, and on the death of one coparcener her share devolves upon those who claim under her by devise (g) or by descent, or, in the case of an estate tail, under the entail; and the coparcenary then continues between her successors in title and the other coparceners (h). Coparceners have the same remedy for account between themselves as other co-owners (i) and will be restrained from destructive waste (k); and, on partition, they can obtain any necessary adjustments as regards inequality of receipt of rents and profits and expenditure (l).

SECT. 6
Concurrent
Estates.

(iii) Determination

400 Coparcenary is put an end to by partition, either voluntary or compulsory (m), by an alienation by one coparcener of her share (n), and by all the shares becoming vested in one coparcener (o).

How

SUB-SECT 5 — Tenancy by Entireties

401. Where before the 1st January, 1883 (p), lands were conveyed to or devolved upon husband and wife during the coverture (q) in such manner that, but for the marriage, they would take as joint tenants, they took as tenants by entireties (r). Inasmuch as they were regarded as one person, each was tenant of the whole and no less—per tout et non per me—and they could not sever the tenancy and have moieties, nor could the husband alone alienate the land (s). They could join to alienate it by a conveyance binding on the wife, but otherwise the survivor took the whole (a). The joint tenants (2 Preston, Abstracts of Titles, 74). But on a grant to two parceners of a rent for owelty of partition, they will hold it as parceners and not as joint tenants (ibid), and a rent created on an alienation “by parceners in fee in favour of them and their heirs,” is held in coparcenary (Co Litt 169 b, 2 Preston, Abstracts of Titles, 74).

(a) They are not expressly mentioned in stat (1705) 4 & 5 Anne, c 3, s 27, which makes joint tenants and tenants in common liable to account (see p 204, ante), but apparently they are within the Act, compare 2 Co Inst 403, on the construction of Statute of Westminster II (1285), 13 Edw 1, c 22, repealed by the Civil Procedure Acts Repeal Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict c 59), s 2.

(b) The reason for the intervention of equity is the same in the case of coparceners as of other co-owners (see p 209, ante). Coparceners were excluded from the remedy of Statute of Westminster II (1285), 13 Edw 1, c 22, for waste in corporeal hereditaments held in common on the ground that they could compel partition at common law (2 Co Inst 403), and a coparcener, like other co-owners, has no direct remedy to compel the other coparceners to join in repairing the property (see p 203, ante). As to the liability of a tenant for life for waste, see pp 175 et seq, ante.

SUB-SECT 1—Nature of the Estate

Particular estates and remainders.

402. The estate in fee simple in land can be divided into two or more successive estates (d). The first is the estate in possession, and is called the "particular estate" (e). This may be an estate for years, an estate for life, or an estate tail (f). If there is only one subsequent estate, it is still an estate in fee simple, but not in possession. If by one deed (g) the grantor grants the particular estate to one person and the subsequent estate to another, the subsequent estate is called a "remainder" (h); otherwise the subsequent estate continues in the grantor and is called a "reversion" (i). If a succession of estates are granted, all the estates between

(c) Thornley v Thornley, [1893] 2 Ch. 229, 233, and see, further, as to tenancy by entireties, 2 Preston, Abstracts of Titles, 39 et seq. A disposition in favour of husband and wife and a third party before the Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 75), was construed upon the footing of husband and wife being one, and they took only a moiety between them (Littleton's Tenures, s. 291, 2 Preston, Abstracts of Titles, p. 40), and apparently this has not been altered by the statute (Re Jupp, Jupp v Buckwell (1888), 39 Ch. D. 148; compare Re March, Mander v Harris (1883), 24 Ch. D. 222, reversed on another point (1884), 27 Ch. D. 166, C. A.); but it is only a rule of construction, and readily gives way to an indication of an intention that the husband and wife shall take separate shares (Re March, Mander v Harris (1884), 27 Ch. D. 166, C. A., per Cotton, L. J., at p. 170, Re Daxon, Byram v Tull (1889), 42 Ch. D. 306, 308; Re Gue, Smith v. Gue (1892), 61 L. J. (Ch.) 510; and see title HUSBAND AND WIFE, Vol. XVI., p. 354). Where the rule prevails, it seems that a conveyance or devise to husband and wife and a third party cannot now create a joint tenancy; the shares are one quarter, one quarter, and a half, and inequality of shares is incompatible with a joint tenancy; see p. 202, ante. Hence the tenancy must be in common.

(d) Similarly an estate less than a fee simple can be divided into an estate smaller than itself with remainders or reversion over; hence an estate for life (see pp. 173 et seq., ante) admits of a term being limited out of it, even for 1,000 years, since in law a freehold is a greater estate than a term of years (Co. Litt. 46 a; Derby (Earl) v Taylor (1801), 1 East, 502), and an estate pur autre vie (see pp. 178 et seq., ante) can be limited to persons in succession (Low v Burron (1734), 3 P. Wms. 262; Pickersgill v. Grey (1862), 30 Beav. 352).

(g) Fearne, Contingent Remainders, p. 302, Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p. 78; see 2 Bl. Com. 167.

(h) A remainder is "a residue of an estate in land depending upon a particular estate, and created together with the same" (Co. Litt. 49 a; see ibid., 143 a; 1 Preston on Estates, 90). But etymologically and historically it is so called not because it remains over, but because it remains out when the particular estate comes to an end (Pollock and Matland, History of English Law, Vol. II., p. 21).

(i) "A reversion is where the residue of the estate always doth continue in him that made the particular estate, or where the particular estate is derived out of his estate" (Co. Litt. 22 b). It is so called because the land returns to the grantor on the determination of the particular estate.

the particular estate and the ultimate estate are remainders. The ultimate estate is always an estate in fee simple, and is either a remainder or reversion, according as it is granted out or continues in the grantor (j). In a real estate settlement the land is usually limited (k) for one or more successive life estates, followed by succession of estates tail, with an ultimate reversion to the settlor and his heirs (l). The estate of the settlor is the original estate; the estates which he carves out of it are derivative estates (m).

SMOY. 7.
Remainders
and Reversions.

The grant of a fee simple, notwithstanding that it is determinable, is in law considered as the grant of the whole fee (n). Hence there is no remnant of the fee left for the grantor to grant as a remainder, nor is there any reversion in himself, but, in the case of conditional or determinable fees, he has an interest which is called a "possibility of reverter" (o). A fee simple absolute can only determine for want of heirs, and then it goes to the lord by escheat (p).

Possibility of
reverter.

403 At common law, a tenant in fee simple could not limit the fee so as to create an ultimate remainder in himself or his heirs, such a remainder was void, and the grantor retained the ultimate estate as a reversion (q); but now, under such a limitation, the grantor

Creation of remainder
in grantor

The effect is the same, whether the grant is silent as to the residue of the estate or reserves it to the grantor as a reversion or remainder. A reversion upon a term of years is for some purposes a true reversion. Rent service, when reserved, is incident to the reversion, and the lessee is said to hold of the lessor (see p 147, ante, and see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol XVIII, pp 464 et seq). Moreover, the lessor is not entitled to the actual possession of the land. But the species of possession known as "seisin" (see p 214, post) is in the reversioner, or, if a remainder is granted at the same time as the term, it is in the remainderman, and, as to matters depending on seisin, the reversion or remainder ranks as an estate in possession. In limitations after a term the remainder is created by immediate grant of the fee subject to the term (see Challis Law of Real Property, 3rd ed, p 100). A reversion cannot be subsequently turned into a remainder by being alienated, it still continues to be a reversion.

Remainders and Reversions.

REVERSIONS

404 An owner in fee simple who grants out the whole fee in successive estates divests himself entirely of the feudal tenure, just as if he granted the fee simple as a single estate; and the grantee of the particular estate holds of the superior lord and not of the remainderman; but, if the owner grants only a particular estate and keeps the reversion in himself, the grantee of the particular estate holds of him (s). Where rent is reserved, this is incident to the reversion and passes on a grant of the reversion unless excepted (t).

SUB-SECT 2 - Rules for Creation of Remainders in General

Freehold estates

405. Estates of freehold tenure are estates in fee simple, estates in fee tail and estates for life. The first two are estates of inheritance (a), the third is an estate of mere freehold (b).

Seisin of freehold

An owner in possession for an estate of freehold is said to be "seised" of the land, and his possession is called "seisin" (c). The word "possession," as applied to land, denotes, in its narrowest meaning, possession for a chattel interest, hence, as between the freeholder and the lessee, the freeholder is seised and the lessee

But, under an executory trust, such as a direction to convey in a certain event to the heirs of the grantor, the person who answers the description of heir at the time when the event happens may take as purchaser (Locke v Southwood (1831), 1 My & Cr 411, on appeal, sub nom Bush v Locke (1835), 3 Cl & Fin 721, H. L.)

(r) Inheritance Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c 106), s 3 (second part), and see title DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, Vol XI, p 8. The rule in question, under which the heir could not take as purchaser, was confined to cases of remainders and under an executory limitation (see p 232, post) the heir could take as purchaser (see Lloyd v Carew (1697), Pree Ch 72; Fearn, Contingent Remainders, pp 275, 276), and perhaps the statute operates only where the grantor would formerly have been in of his former estate, so that an executory limitation to the heirs of the grantor would still take effect in favour of the heir as persona designata and not in favour of the grantor.

(s) Burton, Compendium of the Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p 10, note 30. The Statute Quia Emptores (1290), 18 Edw 1, c 1 (see p 144, ante), did not apply to the grant of life estates and estates tail, hence upon such grants the donee holds under the donor, provided the donor does not grant the residue of the estate by way of remainder (Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p 22, see Littleton's Tenures, ss 214, 215, Co. Litt 143 a).

(c) Co Litt. 17 a. In early times "seisin" and "possession" were synonymous, and it was customary to speak of seisin of chattels as well as seisin of land (Maitland, "Seisin of Chattels," Law Quarterly Review Vol I., n. 324; and see p 147, ante). As to seisin generally, see Pollock and Maitland, History of English Law, Vol II., pp. 29 et seq, as to possession of chattels, see ibid., pp. 150 et seq.

possessed of the land. The possession of the lessee supports the seisin of the lessor (d). In a wider sense, possession denotes occupation under any title, whether of freehold or leasehold, or even without title (e), and it may include receipt of rent (f).

SECT. 7.

and Seisin in law and in deed

406. Seisin may be either seisin in deed or seisin in law (g).

A person in actual possession of land or in receipt of rent from the occupying tenant under a freehold title has seisin in deed (h). An heir-at-law becoming entitled to the freehold on the death of an ancestor who dies seised has seisin in law if the actual possession is then vacant (i). But, if a tenant is in possession, the possession of the tenant is credited to the heir, though no rent has been received by him, and the heir has an immediate seisin in deed (k). Similarly

(g) As to the distinction, see Co. Litt. 266 b, Butler's note (1), Engel v. Furnell (1881), 17 Ch. D. 115, 120, Leach v. Jay (1878), 9 Ch. D. 42, C. A. The distinction applies both to corporeal and incorporeal hereditaments (Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed. p. 233, Murray v. Thorndey (1846), 2 C. B. 217, 223, 224).

(h) This is the same as Sir E. Coke's "actually seised"; that is, either by entry, or by possession of the lessee for years or the like (Co. Litt. 243 a). And, as against an adverse claimant, exclusive occupation is not necessary to give seisin in deed. Entry on the land by the person entitled to the freehold vests in him, for legal purposes, the actual possession, and consequently the seisin in deed, notwithstanding that an adverse claimant is on the land (Reading v. Royston (1703), 1 Salk. 242, Jones v. Chapman (1849), 2 Exch. 803, 821, Ex. Ch.; Lowe v. Telford (1876), 1 App. Cas. 414, see Littleton's Tenures, ss. 417, 418, 701); and formerly, if he dared not enter, a claim made near the land was treated as an actual entry so as to give him seisin (Littleton's Tenures, s. 419, Co. Litt. 253 b); but the effect of such claim is abolished (Real Property Limitation Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27), s. 11. As to delivery of land to and recovery by lessors for years, see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., pp. 556 et seq.

(i) It is the same whether the ancestor was lawfully entitled or not. If he was actually seised, although as a disseisor, a seisin in law is cast upon his heir (Littleton's Tenures, s. 418). Sir E. Coke speaks of freehold in deed as natural seisin and freehold in law as civil seisin; but this is not the ordinary use of "civil" in relation to possession. Civil possession, —the Roman civilis possessio—is that which entitles the possessor to the civil remedies for the protection and recovery of possession, i.e., the possession of an owner or lessee as opposed to the possession of a servant. Seisin in deed is, in this sense, both civil and natural possession; seisin in law is not natural possession, though to a certain extent it corresponds to civil possession. In English law, the distinction is not of importance so much in regard to possessory remedies as in regard to the rights of property which depend on seisin. Thus seisin in deed is necessary to give curtesy; while seisin in law is sufficient for dower; see pp. 184, 191, ante, Pollock and Maitland, History of English Law, Vol. II., p. 433. Previous to the Inheritance Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 106), descent was traced from the person last seised, and this required actual seisin (Goodtitle d. Newman v. Newman (1774), 3 Wils. 516, 526; see title DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, Vol. XI., p. 8, note (g)). As to "actual seisin," see Tuthill v. Rogers (1844), 1 Jo. & Lat. 36, and see title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, Vol. XIX., p. 155. Seisin in deed, though wrongful, is a root of title; see p. 328, post.

a devisee has at once a seisin in law if the possession is vacant (l); and, apparently, a seisin in deed if a tenant is in possession. But while land is vested in the legal personal representatives of the deceased under the Land Transfer Act, 1897 (m), the seisin in law of the heir or devisee is no doubt excluded.

Abyeance of freehold.

407. Limitations of land operating at common law are subject to the rule that there must always be a tenant of the freehold; in other words, the freehold must never be in abeyance (n). Hence an estate of freehold cannot at common law be limited to commence from a future day save by way of remainder after a particular estate.

No limitation at common law in futuro.

408. A conveyance which divests the freehold from the grantor must at the same moment vest it in the grantee (o). This result is expressed by the rule that an estate of freehold cannot, at common law, be limited to commence in futuro (p). Similarly a

(n) Because there must, in theory, be always a person responsible for the services (see pp 138 et seq, ante) incident to the tenure of the land, and against whom a claimant to the land might bring a real action (Freeman d Vernon v West (1763), 2 Wils 165) The rule has survived these reasons, and it has now become an absolute rule that the immediate freehold cannot be placed in abeyance by any act of the parties (1 Preston on Estates, 216); though it may, in certain cases, be placed in abeyance by operation of law: where, for instance, a corporation sole is seised of land, the freehold is in abeyance between the death of one incumbent and the appointment of his successor Further, although the freehold must not be in abeyance, yet the inheritance may be Thus, it is sufficient if there is a tenant for an immediate life estate The freehold is full, though the inheritance may not have vested in an ascertained person (Cunmingham v Moody (1748), 1 Ves Sen 174, 177)

(o) Under the old law, a feoffment with livery of seisin took effect according to the terms of the feoffment, whether this was verbal (see title DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS, Vol X, p. 367, note (t)) or by deed Hence, where the feoffment purported to create a future estate, the livery was void A feoffor could not make present livery to a future estate, and nothing passed (Barwick's Case (1597), 5 Co. Rep 93 b, 94 b) But since the feoffment only took effect from the livery of seisin, it was good if the livery was not made till after the day fixed for the commencement of the estate (1 Preston on Estates, 222) Similarly, since a deed takes effect from delivery (see title DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS, Vol X, p 382), a grant of a future estate by deed under the Real Property Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c 106), s 6, is effectual if delivery of the deed is delayed till after the time for commencement of the estate (Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p 107) remainder cannot be limited so as to vest in possession at a date later than the determination of the preceding estate (q)

SECT. 7.

Remainders
and Reversions.

Nature of a remainder.

Comparison with execu-tory interest.

409. An estate in remainder must be so limited that it shall wait for the regular determination of the particular estate, and shall not take effect till that determination (v). For this purpose, the particular estate may expire either in accordance with a direct or a collateral limitation (s). In either case, the particular estate expires in accordance with its limitation, and the estate limited to follow it is a remainder (t). An interest limited to defeat an existing estate is an executory interest and cannot be created at common law by deed (u).

No remainder on a fee simple

410. Since a limitation in fee simple exhausts the possible duration of the tenure, at common law no remainder can be limited after a fee simple (a), and this, it seems, is so, whether the fee

applied, apparently by way of analogy (Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p. 112), to conveyances of existing incorporeal hereditaments (1 Preston on Estates, 217), and it applies to corporeal hereditaments now that they be in grant (see Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., pp. 109 et seq.); and see title DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS, Vol. X., p. 362 note (a). But an incorporeal hereditament, such as a rentcharge, can be limited to arise at a future time. It is the creation of the grantor, who may mould it in what form he pleases (Throckmorton v Tracy (1556), 1 Plowd. 145, 156, R v Kempe (1695), 1 Ld. Raym. 52; see Sutton's Hospital Case (1612), 10 Co. Rep. 23 a, 27 b). It follows that desultory limitations, that is, limitations creating estates or interests to arise at intervals, and not to exist continuously, are possible on the creation of incorporeal hereditaments, but not on the grant of corporeal hereditaments or existing incorporeal hereditaments (Corbet's Case (1600), 1 Co. Rep. 83 b, 87 a, The Prince's Case (1606), 8 Co. Rep. 1 a, 13 b, 17 a, Athins v Mounluque (1671), 1 Cas. in Ch. 214; Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p. 113).

(g) Such a limitation, as much as an original limitation, infringes the rule that the freehold must not be in abeyance. The existence of a gap between the particular estate and the remainder was the usual cause of failure of contingent remainders (Cunliffe v Branker (1876), 3 Ch. D. 393, C. A., White v Summers, [1908] 2 Ch. 256, 265).

(r) Colthurst v. Bejushin (1551), 1 Plowd. 21, 23, 24, arguendo; Fearn, Contingent Remainders, pp. 10, note (b), 261; Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p. 81.

(s) As to collateral limitations, see pp. 170 et seq., ante.

(t) Thus an estate granted to a man, while he continues unmarried, determines on his marriage, and admits of a remainder being limited upon it (2 Bl. Com. 155; Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p. 82).

(u) As to executory interests, see pp. 231 et seq., post. At common law an estate can be made defeasible on breach of condition, but only the grantor or his heirs can take advantage of the condition (see pp. 168, 170, ante), and if a particular estate is limited subject to a condition, a remainder cannot be limited to take effect on the happening of the condition (Colthurst v. Bejushin, supra, at p. 29, arguendo; Fearn, Contingent Remainders, p. 262). But if the remainder is limited on the regular determination of the preceding estate, without reference to the condition, it seems that this destroys the condition. An entry by the grantor would defeat not only the particular estate, but the remainder, and he cannot thus derogate from his own grant (Fearn, Contingent Remainders, pp. 270 et seq.; Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., pp. 81, 82).

SECT. 7. simple is absolute or determinable (b). The only interest that can exist after a fee simple is a possibility of reverter (c).

SUB-SECT. 3—Vested Remainders

Vested remainder.

411 Remainders are either vested or contingent (d), according as they are or are not ready for the time being to take effect in possession in the event of the determination of all the preceding estates, whether by natural expiration or otherwise. The remainder may in fact determine before the preceding estates, and thus never take effect in possession; but this does not prevent it from being vested. The present capacity of taking effect in possession, if the possession were to become vacant, and not the certainty that the possession will become vacant before the estate limited in remainder determines, universally distinguishes a vested remainder from one that is contingent (e).

Distinguished from contingent remainder.

Remainder on term of years

412. A vested remainder may be limited upon a preceding term of years. The seisin is immediately in the remainderman, who holds

(b) Stafford (Earl) v Buckley (1750), 2 Ves Sen. 170, 180. As to modified fees, see pp 168 et seq., ante. It is a question whether, prior to the Statute De Donis, 1285 (13 Edw 1, c 1), it was the practice to limit remainders upon conditional fees, but apparently it was not, though when that statute turned such fees into estates tail—that is, into particular estates of inheritance (see p 172, ante)—a remainder could be limited upon them (Co Litt 22 a, b; Willion v Berkeley (1562), 1 Plowd 223, 248, Winchester's (Marquis) Case (1583), 3 Co Rep 1 a, 3 b). And it appears that remainders, if so limited on conditional fees, were limited in error, and that they have never been recognised by way of limitation after determinable fees (see Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed, pp 83--85, Appendix II, p 428).

(c) See p 213, ante, and see p 237, post, and, as to limiting alternative fees after a particular estate, see p 219, post.

(d) As to what words will create a contingent gift, see title WILLS.

(e) Fearne, Contingent Remainders, p 216, (Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed, p 74, see Parkhurst v. Smith d. Dormer (1742), Willes, 327, 337, H L. By "present capacity" it must be understood that the capacity is already existing before the determination of the previous estate, and does not arise at the same instant as that determination. Thus, under a remainder to an "heir" of the tenant for life by purchase is contingent, since the heir is not ascertained till the determination of the preceding life estate, although there is an heir presumptive always ready to be heir-at-law (see Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed, p 74). It was formerly a question whether in a limitation to A for life, followed by a remainder to B during the life of A, the remainder was vested or contingent. This limitation was used in the estate of trustees to preserve contingent remainders in the form:—after the determination of the precedent life estate by forfeiture or otherwise during the life of the tenant for life, to the use of the trustees and their heirs during his life in trust for him and to preserve contingent remainders, but the reference to the premature destruction of the life estate was not essential. This was the only manner in which the remainder could take effect, and hence the reference was implied. The utility of the limitation depended on its being a vested estate, inasmuch as, if contingent, it was liable to be destroyed. Since the actual vesting of the estate depended on a contingency, it had the aspect of a contingent remainder. On the other hand, it was always ready to come into possession on the premature determination of the life estate, and it had the essential feature of a vested remainder. This, accordingly, it was held to be (Smith d. Dormer v. Packhurst (1740), 3 Atk 135, H L., Fearne, Contingent Remainders, pp 217 et seq.; Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed, pp 142 et seq.).

subject to the term (f); consequently the limitation does not place the freehold in abeyance (f). Where the limitation is for a term of years if A. so long lives and after the death of A. remainder over, the remainder is primâ facie contingent, because if A survives the term it will not be ready to vest in possession on the expiration of the term (g); but if the term is so long that A cannot by any reasonable probability survive it, the remainder is treated as vested (h). A term of eighty years is sufficient for this purpose (i).

SECT. 7.
Remainders
and Reversions.

413 A remainder may be vested notwithstanding that there are contingent remainders limited between it and the particular estate (h), provided none of the contingent remainders is a remainder in fee. Thus, on a limitation to A. for life, remainder to an unborn person in tail, remainder to C. in fee, C. has the first vested estate of inheritance, but, upon a tenant in tail coming into existence, his estate vests by interposition between the life estate, if then subsisting, and the remainder in fee (h). If, however, the contingent limitation is in fee simple, no estate limited after it can be vested (i), though different contingent remainders can be limited alternatively on the same particular estate (m).

(i) Fearn, Contingent Remainders, p 21. Apparently the length of the term should depend on the age of the specified person, thus, if he were forty at the date of the conveyance, a sixty years' term should suffice. But this is not so, and the term must be at least eighty years, whatever the age of the life (see Beverley v Beverley (1690), 2 Vern 131). It is assumed that the remainder is vested in other respects. Thus, under a devise by A to B for life, remainder to C for ninety-nine years, if he should so long live, remainder to the heirs of the body of C, the last remainder being, on C surviving B, the next freehold to A's estate, and being contingent until the heirs of the body of C were ascertained by his death, was, on C surviving B, defeated owing to the absence of a particular estate to support it (Doe d Russell v Morgan (1790), 3 Term Rep 763; Cunliffe v Branker (1876), 3 Ch D 393 C A).

(k) Fearn, Contingent Remainders, p 223. This is important in case of waste by the tenant for life (see pp 175, 176, ante), since the owner of the first vested estate of inheritance is entitled to the proceeds of the waste (Udal v Udal (1648), Aleyn, 81; Bowles' (Tewks) Case (1615), 11 Co. Rep 79 b); and see title SETTLEMENTS.

(l) Loddington v Kyme (1697), 1 Salk 221; Fearn, Contingent Remainders, pp 225, 229. Fearn suggests that a contingent determinable fee, limited to trustees for a special purpose, will not prevent a subsequent limitation to one in esse from being vested (Fearn, Contingent Remainders, p 225); but this appears to be opposed to the rule that a remainder cannot be limited after a determinable fee (ibid), p 226, Butler's note (d); see p 171, ante).

Remainder
 subject to power of
 appointment.

414. Where the estate in the land expectant on a particular estate is subject to a power of appointment, and there is a remainder limited in default of appointment, the remainder, when otherwise ready to vest, is not prevented from doing so by the existence of the power. The remainder is vested, but is liable to be divested by an exercise of the power (n); and this is so notwithstanding that the power extends to an appointment in fee simple (o).

SUB-SECT 4 — Contingent Remainders

Nature.

415. A contingent remainder is a remainder limited so as to depend on an event or condition, which may never happen or be performed, or which may not happen or be performed till after the determination of the preceding estate (p).

Classification

416. Contingent remainders are divisible into four classes (q):—

(1) Where the remainder depends entirely on a contingent determination of the preceding estate itself (r);

and see Re White and Hindle's Contract (1877), 7 Ch D 201. Of such fees, each is a remainder in regard to the particular estate, but none is a remainder in regard to any other of them (Challis, Law of Real Property, 3d ed., p. 80).

(n) Cunningham v. Moody (1748), 1 Ves Sen 174, per Lord HARDWICKE, L. C., at p. 177. "Nor does the power of appointment make any alteration therein"—that is, as to the fee not being in abeyance—"for the only effect thereof is, that the fee which was vested was thereby subject to be divested if the whole were appointed"; Doe d. Willis v. Martin (1790), 4 Term Rep 39, 64. Fearn, Contingent Remainders, pp. 226 et seq. As to powers of appointment, see, generally, title POWERS, Vol. XXIII., pp. 1 et seq.

(q) Fearn, Contingent Remainders, p. 5. Fearn's classification has been generally accepted, subject to the observations in the following notes.

(r) Fearn, Contingent Remainders, p. 5. For instance, in a limitation to A till a specified event which may or may not happen, and on the happening of the event to B in fee (Boraston's Case (1587), 3 Co Rep 19 a, 20 a). A has by implication a life estate determinable on the happening of the event, and B's estate is contingent on the happening of the event during A's life. In this kind of contingent remainder the particular estate is originally so limited that it may expire on more than one event, or at more than one time, and the remainder is to become vested only if the particular estate determines on one of the events or at one of the times; see Butler's explanation of Fearn's definition (Fearn, Contingent Remainders, p. 5, note (d)). The peculiarity is that the remainder cannot become vested during the continuance of the particular estate, because the event which vests the remainder also determines the particular estate. "The remainder can only become vested, if at all, eo instanti with the determination of the particular estate" (Challis, Law of Real Property, 3d ed., p. 127). In the other classes (see notes (s), (t), (a), pp. 221, 222, post) the contingent remainder can vest during the continuance of the particular estate.

Contingent remainders of this class are similar to executory limitations (see p. 231, post), but the distinction is that, in a contingent remainder, though the particular estate will determine on a contingency, yet this is part of its direct limitation. The next estate waits for its determination, and is a remainder, but, by reason of the contingent nature of this mode of determination, it is a contingent remainder. But an executory limitation is so framed as not to wait for the regular determination of the preceding estate. It interrupts and destroys that estate and substitutes another estate in its place. The limitation instanced above is an example of a contingent remainder, since the contingent determination of the estate is incorporated in its original limitation. In a conveyance to A. for life, with a proviso that if a specified event happens the estate shall go to B. in fee, the interest of B. is not a remainder, but an estate arising by executory limitation, sometimes called conditional limitation; see Egerton v Brownlow (Earl) (1853), 4 H L Cas 1, 186. Such limitations are not valid at common law, but may be good in wills as executory devises, and in conveyances operating under the Statute of Uses as shifting uses (see pp 231, 232, 279, post). Contingent remainders came to be allowed at common law, but only by relaxation of the original rule that on a grant by deed of a particular estate and remainder the remainder must immediately vest in the grantee of that estate (Littleton's Tenures, s 721; Co Litt 378 a (where exceptions from the strict rule are stated); Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p 75, n).

(2) Where the contingency is independent of the determination of the preceding estate (s);

(3) Where the contingency is certain to happen, but may not happen till after the determination of the particular estate (t);

The definition of the first class of contingent remainders appears to include the limitation of estates to preserve contingent remainders (see note (e), p 218, ante), which were formerly inserted in real settlements, and these, it is settled, are vested remainders. A modification of the definition was proposed by Challis to meet this case (Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p 146), but the matter has ceased to be of practical importance.

(s) Where, for example, the limitations are to A. for life, remainder to B. for life, and, if B. die before A., remainder to C. for life (Boraston's Case (1587), 3 Co Rep 19 a, 20 a). The remainder to C. is contingent on the death of B. before A., and this is independent of the determination of A.'s estate (Fearne, Contingent Remainders, pp 6, 7). If B. survives A., C.'s remainder can never take effect. The remainder to C. is, in fact, substitutional if that to B. fails. A limitation of successive life estates to A., B. and C. would give C. an immediate life estate on the death of A. after B., and a postponed life estate on the death of A. before B.; see Denn v Radclyffe v Bagshaw (1796), 6 Term Rep 512; Doe d Gilman v Elvey (1803), 4 East, 313, Cole v Sewell (1848), 2 H L Cas. 186; Price v Hull (1868), L R. 5 Eq 399 (devise to A. for life, remainder to children of B. if he leaves any him surviving; the event remains contingent during the life of B.).

The determination of the life estate may itself ascertain the event on which the remainder vests, and then the remainder vests in interest and possession at the same time. Where, for instance, there is a limitation to A. for life, remainder to B. in fee if he survives A., the remainder is contingent during the joint lives of A. and B., and if A. dies first it thereupon vests in interest and possession in B. (Doe d. Planner v. Scudamore (1800), 2 Bos & P 289); so, also, in the case of a limitation to A. and B. for their joint lives as tenants in common and to the survivor for life (Whitby v. Von Luedecke, [1906] 1 Ch 783). So, if the limitations are to A. in tail, and, if he dies without leaving issue living at his death, to B. in fee, A.'s death without leaving issue, and without having barred the estate tail, vests the remainder in interest and possession (Fearne, Contingent Remainders, p 7 Butler's note).

(t) Where, for instance, the limitations are to A. for life, and after the death of B. to C. in fee: B.'s death is certain, but it may not happen till after the death of A., and hence C.'s remainder in fee is contingent. So, also, where the limitations are to A. for twenty-one years if he shall so long live, and after his death to B. in fee. The term may expire in the lifetime of A., but the remainder to B. will not then be ready to come into possession. If, however, the term is so long as to exceed A.'s probable life, the remainder is vested (see p. 219, ante). The defect of these remainders is, not that the contingency may never happen, but that it may happen too late,

SECT. 7.

and Reversions.Supported by

(4) Where the person to whom the limitation is made is not ascertained or is not in being (a).

417. Wherever an estate of freehold is limited as a contingent remainder, some vested estate of freehold must precede it—in other words, a contingent remainder must have a vested particular freehold estate to support it (b). But there is no necessity for a

that is, after a period uncovered by any preceding estate of freehold (Fearn, Contingent Remainders, pp 7, 8, Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., pp 128 et seq.)

(a) Where, for example, the limitations are to A for life, remainder to the right heirs of B, there can be no right heirs of B until his death, for nemo est heres viventis (Co Litt 378 a); and hence, until that event, the remainder is contingent (Challoner and Bowyer's Case (1587), 2 Leon 70; Tonstons's Case (1587), 3 Co Rep 19 a, 20 a; Archer's Case (1597), 1 Co Rep 66 b). Or where a remainder is limited to the first son of B, who at that time has no son (Fearn, Contingent Remainders, p 9, Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p 132), or to several for life with remainder in fee to the heirs of the survivor, here there is a joint tenancy for lives with a contingent remainder in fee to the survivor (Co Litt 191 a Butlcr's note (1), Quarm v Quarm, [1892] 1 Q B 181; see Re Ashforth, Sibley v Ashforth, [1905] 1 Ch 535, note (d), p 223, post). Limitations to unborn persons furnish in practice the most usual cases of contingent remainders. Remainders which are primò facie limited to heirs of a living person, and are, therefore, contingent within this rule, may be excepted on two grounds—(1) because the ancestor takes a preceding estate of freehold, so that the words referring to his heirs are words of limitation and not of purchase under the rule in Shelley's Case (see p 226, post), in this case the remainder is a vested remainder in the ancestor, or (2) because, on the construction of the instrument, the description of "heir" refers to a particular person (persona designata) existing at the date when the instrument takes effect, and not to the person who will ultimately be the heir. In these cases the remainder vests in the person so designated, notwithstanding the maxim quoted above (Fearn, Contingent Remainders, pp 209 et seq, Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p 132); where, for instance, there is a limitation to "the heirs male of the body of A now living" (Burchett v Durdant (1690), 2 Vent 311), since "heirs" is nomen collectivum, this gives an estate tail (ibid; S C, sub nom James v Richardson (1678), 2 Lev 232); or a limitation to heirs male of A, and the testator in his will takes notice that A is living (Darbishon d Long v Beaumont (1713), 1 P Wms 229, (1714), 3 Bro Parl Cas 60, Goodright d Brooking v White (1775), 2 Wm Bl 1010). As to these last cases, which are cited by Fearn in support of the exception, see Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., pp 132, and see Cholmondeley (Marquis) v Clinton (Lord) (1817), 2 Mer 171, 232; Doe d Winter v Peiratt (1843), 9 Cl & Fin 606, 690 et seq, H L. Under a limitation to a special heir, such as heir female, by purchase, it seems that the person to take must be both actual heir—that is, heir general—and also heir special (Co Litt 24 b; Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p 132; Co Litt. Hargrave's note (3); Fearn, Contingent Remainders, p 213, and cases there cited).

(b) Hence, under a limitation to A for years, remainder to the heirs of A in fee, the remainder, which is contingent during A's life, is void as a remainder, for want of a preceding estate of freehold (Goodright v Cornish (1694), 1 Salk 226; see White v Summers, [1908] 2 Ch 256). The freehold passes out of the grantor at the time of the grant, and, if there is not an estate of freehold preceding the contingent remainder, the first vested estate of freehold in remainder becomes at once an estate in possession and the contingent remainder cannot afterwards arise (Fearn, Contingent Remainders, p 282). But under a limitation of a term of ninety-nine years to A if he should so long live, remainder to B and C (trustees to preserve contingent remainders) for the life of A, remainder to the heirs of A, in fee, B and C's estate is a vested estate of freehold (see p 219, ante), preceding estate of freehold to support a contingent remainder for years (c).

SECT. 7.

Remainders
and Reversions.

When a remainder
must vest.

418. The preceding freehold estate must continue until the time when the contingent remainder vests; for, if it determines earlier, the freehold goes to the next vested remainderman, or if there is none such, to the reversioner, and, at common law, the contingent remainder can never arise. Hence it is a rule that, apart from statute, every remainder must vest either during the particular estate or else at the instant of its determination (d). But a posthumous child, becoming entitled under a contingent remainder after his father's life estate, is treated as being born in his father's lifetime so as to make the remainder vest in time (e).

and it supports the contingent remainder to the heirs of A (see Egerton v. Brownlow (Earl) (1853), 4 H. L. Cas. 1) Contra, if the limitation is to trustees for 120 years, if A, the wife of B, so long lives, and subject thereto to B for life, remainder to trustees for his life to preserve contingent remainders, remainder to the children of A and B living at the death of the survivor of A and B. If B dies first, the contingent remainder to the children fails (Cunliffe v. Branker (1876), 3 Ch. D. 393, C.A.) It is said that the preceding estate of freehold necessary to support a contingent remainder must arise under the same instrument as that which creates the contingent remainder (Key v. Gamble (1678), T. Jo. 123; Moore v. Parker (1695), 1 Ld. Raym. 37; Fearne, Contingent Remainders, p. 302). But this cannot refer to the necessity of keeping the freehold full, the feudal requirement is satisfied however the immediate estate of freehold is created. The future interest, however, unless created by the same instrument, is not strictly a remainder on the particular estate, thus it will not coalesce with it under the rule (see p. 226, post) in Shelley's Case (Snowe v. Cutler (1664), 1 Lev. 135, Moore v. Parker, supra, Doe d. Ponnereau v. Ponnereau (1780), 2 Doug. (K.B.) 487, 508, see p. 229, post), and, not being a remainder, it can take effect as an executory interest, if created by devise or under the Statute of Uses (27 Hen. 8, c. 10), see ibid. (Halliwell, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p. 120, and see Weale v. Lower (1673), Poll. 54, 66 (6th point), where the postponement of the estate to the death of the survivor of the tenant for life and another was held not to import a contingency, but only to direct the time of possession. It seems that, in a conveyance under the Statute of Uses (27 Hen. 8, c. 10) an estate of freehold resulting to the grantor by way of resulting use arises under the same instrument, and will support subsequent contingent remainders. The principle is the same as where a resulting life estate joins with a remainder to the grantor in fee simple or fee tail to give an estate in fee or in tail (see Hopkins (alias Dare) v. Hopkins (1738), 1 Atk. 581, 596, p. 228, post); but such an estate will not result to the grantor where an inconsistent estate, such as a term of years, is expressly limited to him (Fearne, Contingent Remainders, p. 49; see pp. 278, 279, post).

(c) Fearne, Contingent Remainders, p. 285

(d) Fearne, Contingent Remainders, pp. 307, 310. It follows that when the particular estate is limited to tenants in common the contingent remainder may (apart from statute) fail as to part, if not vested on the determination of the particular estate as to that part, but be good as to the rest, if vested on the determination of the particular estate in the remainder (Fearne, Contingent Remainders, p. 310). A devise to A. and B. "to be equally divided between them" during their lives, and after their decease to the heirs of A, though prima facie a tenancy in common for lives, has been held to be a joint tenancy in order to save the contingent remainder (Tuckerman v. Jefferies (1707), 11 Mod. Rep. 108). As to joint tenancy, see pp. 199 et seq., ante.

Destruction of contingent
remainders.

419. Consequently, until recent statutory changes, contingent remainders in freeholds (f) were liable to be destroyed, not only by their being still contingent at the time of the natural expiration of the preceding freehold estate in possession (g), but also by the premature determination of such estate (h); which might take place by forfeiture, surrender, or merger, and in other ways now obsolete (i). But this liability to destruction did not exist where

(f) Contingent remainders in copyholds were protected by the estate of the lord, see title COPYHOLDS, Vol. VIII., p. 77.

(g) Where, for instance, the limitations are to A. for life, remainder to the heir of B., and A. dies before B. (Co. Litt. 378 a; Doe v. Mussell v. Morgan (1790), 3 Term Rep. 763, compare Fuller v. Chamier (1866), L. R. 2 Eq. 682); or to A. for life, remainder to the children of B., if he leaves children surviving him, and A. dies in the lifetime of B. (Price v. Hall (1868), L. R. 5 Eq. 399), or to A. for life, remainder to the first son of B. who attains twenty-one in fee, and A. dies before a son of B. has attained twenty-one (White v. Summers, [1908] 2 Ch. 256).

(h) Chudleigh's Case (1695), 1 Co. Rep. 120 a; Archer's Case (1697), 1 Co. Rep. 66 b; Egerton v. Massey (1857), 3 C. B. (N. S.) 338 (merger). In settlements thus liability to destruction was avoided by the insertion of limitations to trustees to preserve contingent remainders (Ferne, Contingent Remainders, pp. 325 et seq., 2 Bl. Com. 171; Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., pp. 142 et seq.).

(i) Ferne, Contingent Remainders, pp. 316 et seq., and, as to these modes of determining an estate, see pp. 330 et seq., post. When feoffments had a tortious operation, a feoffment in fee by a tenant for life was a forfeiture of his estate and destroyed any contingent remainders (Chudleigh's Case, supra, and see ibid., at p. 135 b, Archer's Case, supra; see note (p), p. 177, ante). For this purpose an entry by the first vested remainderman was not required. But the tortious effect of alienations has been abolished (see p. 291, post). A forfeiture by the tenant for life in other ways did not ipso facto determine his estate, and thus remained in existence and supported contingent remainders until entry by the next vested remainderman (Ferne, Contingent Remainders, p. 323). Formerly, also, a disseisin of the freeholder might destroy the contingent remainder. For this purpose it was not enough that the particular estate was turned to a right of entry; but, on the death of the disseisor and descent of his right to his heir, the right of entry of the disseisee was turned to a right of action (Co. Litt. 237 a, b; and see title ACTION, Vol. I., p. 33), and the contingent remainders were then destroyed; though the right of entry might still be kept alive, notwithstanding descent cast (see title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, Vol. XIX., p. 105, note (d)), and the remainders preserved, by continual claim (Littleton's Tenures, s. 422); and it was also kept alive, by stat. (1540) 32 Hen. 8, c. 33, until the disseisor had had five years' peaceable possession; see Ferne, Contingent Remainders, pp. 286 et seq., and Butler's note (e). A right of entry is not now liable to be turned to a right of action (Real Property Limitation Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27), s. 39; see title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, Vol. XIX., pp. 104, 105), but continues until the owner's title is extinguished by the statute (see ibid., pp. 105, 106), and such extinction does not destroy contingent remainders. These have the usual period of limitation allowed for future estates; see title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, Vol. XIX., pp. 116 et seq.

This liability of contingent remainders to destruction by failure of the preceding freehold estate in possession existed whether the limitation took effect at common law or under the Statute of Uses (27 Hen. 8, c. 10) (Chudleigh's Case, supra, Ferne, Contingent Remainders, p. 324); but there was the distinction that, in limitations to uses, if the cestui que use in possession was disseised and his estate turned to a right of entry, an entry either by him or the feoffees to uses was required in order to restore to the feoffees that possibility of seisin which was necessary to serve the contingent uses when they were ready to vest (Chudleigh's Case, supra, the contingent remainders were equitable, whether by reason of the legal estate in fee being vested in trustees by the settlement itself (j), or by reason of the legal estate being outstanding (k)

Remainders
in favour of a class

420 Where contingent remainders are limited in favour of a class the members of which become capable of taking at different times the entirety vests in those who first become capable, and as others become capable during the continuance of the particular estate, the remainder is divested to the extent necessary to let in the later members (l). But, apart from statute, those who do not become capable during such continuance are excluded (m).

421. It is now provided by statute (n) that a contingent remainder existing at any time after the 31st December, 1844, shall be, and, if created before the 4th August, 1845 (o), shall be deemed to have been, capable of taking effect, notwithstanding the determination, by forfeiture, surrender or merger, of any preceding estate of freehold, in the same manner, in all respects, as if such determination had not happened, and to ensure against the failure of contingent remainders by the natural expiration of the particular estate it is further provided (p) that every contingent remainder

(j) The legal estate in the trustees prevents the freehold from being in abeyance, and the equitable contingent remainder requires no preceding equitable estate to support it (Fearne, Contingent Remainders p. 294, Berry v. Berry (1873), 7 Ch. D. 657, Re Finch, Abbess v. Burney (1881), 17 Ch. D. 211, 229, C. A.; Worsfold v. Giggell (1882), 21 Ch. D. 490, Re Brooke, Brooke v. Brooke, [1891] 1 Ch. 43). Similarly a conveyance in fee by an equitable tenant for life had no tortious operation (see note (i), p. 224 ante), and did not affect the equitable contingent remainder (Fearne, Contingent Remainders, p. 321). But where the limitations were, on the ordinary rules of construction, legal, the same did not depart from them in order to make the limitations equitable and so preserve the contingent remainders (Qualite v. Bracken (1876), 3 Ch. D. 393, C. A.). Equitable estates did not, apparently, become liable to devolution by being clothed with the legal estate (Re Fenn, Fenn v. Fenn, [1891] 3 Ch. 167).

(k) Where, for instance, the legal estate is outstanding in a mortgagee (Asley v. Micklethwait (1880), 15 Ch. D. 59, see Fearne, Contingent Remainders, Butler's notes at pp. 305, note (m), 321 note (e)).

(n) Real Property Act 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 106), s. 8.

(o) The date of commencement of the stat. (1844) 7 & 8 Vict. c. 76 Ibid., s. 8, provided against the failure of existing contingent remainders by the premature determination of the particular estate, and, in order to preserve them if not ready to vest on the regular determination of that estate, purported to turn future contingent remainders into executory interests. The provision was repealed by the Real Property Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 106), which substituted the provision stated in the text, supra, as regards premature determination, failure by the regular determination of the estate was not again provided against till the statute next mentioned; see note (p), infra. The abolition of contingent remainders has not been again attempted.

created by any instrument executed after the 2nd August, 1877, or by any will or codicil revived or republished by any will or codicil executed after that date, in tenements or hereditaments of any tenure, which would have been valid as a springing or shifting use or executory devise or other limitation, had it not had a sufficient estate to support it as a contingent remainder, shall, in the event of the particular estate determining before the contingent remainder vests, be capable of taking effect as a springing or shifting use or executory devise or other executory limitation (q).

protection.

Thus, contingent remainders arising under deeds or wills executed after the 2nd August, 1877 (r), are not liable to be defeated by the determination of the particular estate before they vest; and it is immaterial in what way the particular estate determines (s). But so long as there is a possibility of the contingent remainders taking effect, vested remainders are not accelerated by the determination of the particular estate, and the intermediate income passes, under a will, by the residuary devise, or, if undisposed of, to the heir-at-law (s).

Rule in Shelley's
Case.

422. In general, the particular estate and the remainders limited after it are separate estates, and the person or persons defined by the limitations as the owners of each estate take it directly by virtue of the respective limitations. They are then said to take by purchase, as distinguished from taking by descent (t). But when the persons to take a remainder are described as the "heirs" or "heirs of the body" of a person who takes a previous estate, this principle is departed from, and the words are construed as words of limitation. The remainder does not go directly to the heirs, but is treated as a continuation of the estate previously limited to the ancestor; and this is the case whether the remainder to the heirs immediately follows the ancestor's estate or not.

Example of
by the rule.

Thus, if an estate for life limited to the ancestor is followed immediately by a remainder in favour of his heirs, the two estates coalesce, and the ancestor has no longer an estate for life, but an estate of inheritance in possession, either in fee simple or in fee tail according to the description of his heirs: in this case the estate in fee simple or in tail is said to be executed in him. If another remainder is interposed between the life estate and the remainder to the heirs of the life tenant, and such remainder is vested, the two estates do not coalesce, but the ancestor has two separate estates—his life estate in possession, and his estate of inheritance in remainder (u). If the interposed remainder is contingent the estate of inheritance is executed sub modo. The life

(q) As to executory limitations, see pp. 231, 278, post.

(r) An equitable contingent remainder created before the 2nd August, 1877, which becomes clothed with the legal estate after that date, does not thereby become liable to be defeated by failure of the prior particular estate (Re Freme, Freme v Logan, [1891] 3 Ch. 167).

(s) Thus the statute extends to determination by disclaimer (Re Scott, Scott v. Scott, [1911] 2 Ch. 374).

(t) See Littleton's Tenures, s. 12; and see note (c), p. 244, post.

estate and the remainder coalesce for the time, but they open out and let in the contingent remainder so soon as it vests (a).

The rule just stated is known as the rule in Shelley's Case (b), and is shortly expressed as follows:—Where, under a conveyance or devise, the ancestor takes an estate of freehold, and in the same instrument an estate is limited by way of remainder, either mediately or immediately, to his heirs or to his heirs in tail, the word “heirs” is a word of limitation and not of purchase, and the ancestor takes a fee simple or in tail, as the case may be (c).

The rule applies not only to freehold estates at common law, but also to estates arising under the Statute of Uses (d), to equitable estates (e), to limitations of copyholds (f), and to estates pur autre vie (g).

Van Gullen*, supra, per Lord MACNAGHTEN, at p. 668. It has been variously referred to the desire to protect the lord in the enjoyment of the rights of lordal tenure (Fearn, Contingent Remainders, p. 83, 1 Preston on Estates, 2nd ed., p. 295), and to the desire to facilitate alienation (Perrin v. Kynock, supra, Collins v. Walters (1873), L. R. 17 Eq. 252, 260; title TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES. But where the trust is executory, as in a will containing a direction to settle, the rule does not necessarily apply, and, in a conveyance made in pursuance of the trust, an estate for life, followed by estates tail, can be limited as in a strict settlement, if such appears to have been the intention (Leonard v. Sussex (Earl) (1705), 2 Vern. 526; Glenorchy (Lord) v. Bowell (1753), Cas. temp. Talb. 3, see Jervoise v. Northumberland (Duke) (1820), 1 Jac. & W. 559 compare *Blackburn v. and applicable.

423. In the application of the rule, the following points require to be noticed:—

(1) The estate limited to the ancestor must be an estate of freehold (h), but the estate need not be expressly limited, it may arise by implication (e);

(2) The estate limited to the ancestor may be determinable in his lifetime; although, in accordance with the maxim, nemo est hæres viventis, he can have no heir existing on such determination, nevertheless the rule applies (h);

(3) The remainder may be in favour of the heirs general of the ancestor, or of the heirs of his body or any special class of such heirs, and he will, according to the limitation, take an estate in fee simple, an estate in fee tail, or an estate in special tail (l);

(1) The rule is not excluded by the limitation of the remainder to the heirs or heirs of the body of the ancestor having further words of limitation added to it (m), provided that the course of descent under the additional words is not inconsistent with that defined by the previous words (n);

(h) Shelley's Case (1781), 1 Co Rep 93 b, 104 a, Co Litt 319 b, 376 b, 1 Pieson on Estates 256, 309. Thus it does not apply where only a term of years is vested in the ancestor (Topping v Piggot (1713), 1 Eq Cas Abr 385 (2), cited 1 P Wms 358; Harris v Barnes (1768), 4 Burr 2157), nor to personal property; see title PERSONAL PROPERTY, Vol XXII. p 414, note (l)

(e) Where e q, the conveyance is by way of use, and the use is undisposed of during the life of the settlor (Pybus v Miford (1674), 1 Vent 312), including the case where the use thus resulting is itself an intermediate remainder (Wills v Palmer (1770), 5 Burr 2615, see Crope v Arnold, Arnold v Crope (1855), 4 De G M & G 574, 589), or where the estate for life to the ancestor is implied on the construction of a will (Hayes d Foarde v Foarde (1760), 2 Wm Bl 698; see Fearne, Contingent Remainders, pp 41 et seq)

(n) See Fearne, Contingent Remainders, p. 183, and the case put by Anderson in argument in Shelley's Case, supra, at p 95 b. The rule is only excluded in cases where the additional words describe an estate descendible in a different course, and to different persons as special heirs, from the course indicated by the first words; e q, in a limitation to A for life, remainder to his heirs and the heirs male of their bodies (see Doe d Bosnall v Harvey (1825), 4 B & C 610) or to A for life with an ultimate remainder to her heirs "as if she had died sole and unmarried" (Brookman v Smith (1871), L R 6 Exch 281, 305; affirmed, on different grounds (1872), L R 7 Exch 271, Ex Ch.; Re Hall, Hall v Hall, [1893] W N 24, C A). The rule applies where the first words give an estate tail general, and the words engrafted thereon are words serving to limit the fee (Fearne, Contingent Remainders, p 183; see Denn d Webb v Puckey (1793), 5 Term Rep 299, per BULLER, J., at p 306; Goodright d Lusle v Pullin (1726), 2 Str 729, Wright v Pearson (1758), 1 Eden. 119, Kinch v Ward (1825), 2 Sm & St 409, see also *Denn d Geering v. (5) The estate of the ancestor and the estate to his heirs must be either both legal or both equitable(o),

(6) The rule does not apply where the remainder arises under an executory limitation(p); but it applies to contingent remainders, subject to the qualification that, so long as the remainder is contingent, the ancestor has the particular estate and the remainder as separate estates, and the contingent remainder does not coalesce with the particular estate until it vests(q),

(7) The estate of the ancestor and the remainder to his heirs must both arise under the same instrument(r); an estate subsequently limited by virtue of a power contained in the instrument limiting the ancestor's estate is for this purpose treated as arising under the same instrument as that estate(s),

(8) The meaning of the limitations contained in the instrument has to be ascertained according to the ordinary canons of construction(t), but, when it has been so ascertained, the rule in

B.) 487, Coupe v Arnold, Arnold v Coupe, supra A will and codicil are the same instrument for this purpose (Haynes d Foorde v Foorde (1760), 2 Wm Bl 698) Unless the estates arise under the same instrument, the ultimate estate to the heirs is not a remainder on the ancestor's estate, see p 212, ante

(s) Fearn, Contingent Remainders, p 74; Venables v Morris (1797), 7 Term Rep 342, 348 But this point was treated as doubtful before Fearn wrote (Co Litt 299 b, Butler's note), and was questioned afterwards (1 Preston on Estates, 310, 324)

(t) Thus, in a deed, the limitation must be in words proper to give an estate tail (see p 243, post), or in fee simple, as the case may be, but where the limitations are contained in a will the same strictness is not observed Thus the word "heir" attracts the rule (Blackburn v Stables (1814), 2 Ves & B 367, Fuller v Chamuel, (1866), L R 2 Eq 682), provided it is not followed by words of limitation These make it a word of purchase (Ircher's Case (1797), 1 Co Rep 66 b, Willis v Harcourt (1839), 4 My & Cr 197, Greaves v Simpson (1861), 10 Jur (N. at p 668) The word "son" or "issue" may be construed as a word of limitation or a nomen collectivum, in order to give effect to the limitations intended by the testator (Mellish v Mellish (1824), 2 B & C 520 (son), Re Buckton, Buckton v Buckton, [1907] 2 Ch 106 ("sons and their sons in succession"), Roddy v Fitzgerald (1858), 6 H L Cas 823, 872 (issue); Pelham Clinton v Newcastle (Duke), [1903] A C 111 (issue male and their male descendants)). On the other hand, the context may show that the words "heirs of the body" are not used as words of inheritance but to denote sons or children as personæ d. singularæ, in which case the rule is excluded, and they take by purchase (Goodtitle d. Suerly Herring (1801), 1 East, 264; North v Martin (1833), 6 Sm 266, Gumroc v Howe (1857), 23 Beav 184; see Fetherston v Fetherston (1835) 3 Cl & Fin 67 H L; Poole v Poole (1804), 3 Bos & P 620, 628, Green v Green (1849) 3 De G & Sm 480, East v Twyford (1855), 4 H L Cas 517). The question, so far as it depends on construction, is whether the expression requiring exposition, be it "heirs" or "heirs of the body," or any other expression which may have the like meaning, is used as the designation of a particular individual or a particular class of objects, or whether, on the other hand, it includes the whole line of succession (capable of inheriting) (Van Grutten v Foxwell, Foxwell v Van Grutten, [1897] A C 658, per Lord MACNAGHTEN, at p 677). If the first words of a devise give an estate tail, when construed in accordance with the rule, this will not be cut down to an estate for life by subsequent words, unless such subsequent words are equally clear (Jack d. Fetherston v Fetherston (1835), 9 P (N S) 27, H L; S C, sub nom Fetherston v Fetherston (1835), 3 Cl & Fin 67, H L).

(u) Van Grutten v Foxwell, Foxwell v Van Grutten supra at pp 662, 672. The rule is not, however, a strict technical rule (Bouen v Louis (1884) 9 App Cas 890, per Lord CAIRNS, at p 904).

424. At common law, future interests can only be created inter vivos as remainders or reversions, and they must comply with the rules already stated (g). But future interests, known as executory interests, which do not comply with the rules, can be created by limitations operating under the Statute of Uses (h), and by devise. When created under the Statute of Uses (h) they are either springing

3 Jo & Lat 47, considered in Van Grutten v Foxwell, Foxwell v. Van Grutten [1897] A C 658. So words of distribution and limitation added to "heirs" or "heir of the body" do not exclude this rule (Anderson v. Anderson (1861), 30 Beav 209, Mills v Seward (1861), 1 John & H. 733; Grimson v Downing (1857), 4 Drew 125, Van Grutten v Foxwell, Foxwell v Van Grutten, supra). In devises where the limitation is to "issue," which is a word of flexible meaning (Morgan v Thomas (1882), 9 Q B D 613, C A, per JESSEL, MR, at p 645), the mere addition of words of distribution does not by itself prevent the application of the rule (Doe d Blundford v Applin (1793), 4 Term Rep 82; Doe d Cock v. Cooper (1801), 1 East, 229, Roddy v Fitzgerald (1858), 6 II L Cas 823, 872, Woodhouse v Harbeck (1855), 1 K & J 352, Harrison v Harrison (1814), 7 Man & G 938, Kavanagh v Morland (1853), Kay, 16, 27); nor does the addition of words of limitation in fee or in tail exclude the rule unless the course of descent is thereby altered (Doe d Dodson v Grew (1767), 2 Wils 322; Denn d Webb v Puckey (1793), 5 Term Rep 239, Frank v Stora (1803), 3 East, 548, Gri피스 v Egan (1842), 5 Beav 241, and see note (n), supra), and, for the application of the rule, a gift over in default of issue is not essential (Fetherston v Fetherston (1835), 3 Cl. & Fin 67, H L; Williams v Williams (1884), 51 L T 779, and see note (n), supra). In Morgan v Thomas, supra, the gift over showed that the word "issue" meant "children" and was not a word of limitation, see Ryan v Cowley (1835), L & G Temp Sued 7, 10, and compare Dodd Cooper v Childs (1791), 4 Term Rep 294. Words of limitation and of distribution added to the word "issue" exclude the rule (Lees v Mosley (1836), 1 Y & C (ex) 39, Crozier v Crozier (1813), 3 Dr & Wat 373; Greenwood v Rothwell (1813), 5 Man & G 628, Slater v Danquith (1846), 15 M & W 263), whether the gift to issue is express, or is raised by implication from a power to appoint to them (Bradley v Cartwright (1867), L R 2 C P 511). In King v Burchell (1759), Amb 379, the word "issue" was treated as a word of limitation, but a restriction on alienation aided the construction; while in Tate v Clarke (1835), 1 Beav 100, the words of distribution were apparently referred to the parents and not the issue.

or shifting uses, and they can only be created in freeholds (i) Executory interests under wills can exist either in freeholds or in chattels real, and are similarly springing or shifting devises

425. While, both under the Statute of Uses (j) and by will, future interests can be created which do not comply with the rules applicable to remainders, they are distinct from remainders, and it is a fundamental rule that a limitation which in its inception can operate as a remainder shall not be allowed to operate as an executory limitation (k) Hence an executory limitation is a limitation of a future estate in land which does not comply with the rules for limitations at common law, and cannot in its inception take effect as a remainder, but which, nevertheless, is contained, as regards freeholds, in a conveyance operating under the Statute of Uses (j), and, as regards freeholds and chattels real, in a will (l). Executory devises, notwithstanding their freedom from common law rules, create, in effect, common law estates (m) and are treated of here. Shifting and springing uses do not create common law estates and are treated of subsequently (n)

426. The rule that a limitation in a will which can operate as a remainder shall not, apart from statute, operate as an executory devise, makes it necessary—though this is less important than formerly (o)—to distinguish between a contingent remainder and an executory devise. A remainder is limited to wait for and take effect upon the natural limitation of a preceding estate of freehold (p) other than a

(n) See pp. 279 et seq., post

(o) The importance of the difference between contingent remainders and executory interests lay, not only in the liability of contingent remainders to destruction by failure of the particular estate (see p. 224, ante), but also in the fact that contingent remainders could be barred by fine or recovery (as to fines and recoveries, see pp. 247 et seq., post), executory devises could not be barred by recovery (Fearne, Contingent Remainders, p. 418), since they did not depend on the estate of the person who suffered the recovery (Pells v Brown (1620), Cro. Jac. 590), but possibly they could be barred by fine levied by a tenant in fee and non-claim for five years (Romilly v James (1815), 6 Taunt. 263, 274), and executory limitations after an estate tail could be barred by a recovery suffered before the event on which the executory limitation depended (Page v Hayward (1704) 2 Salk. 670; Fearne, Contingent Remainders, p. 424), and see Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p. 177.

determinable fee (g). If a future interest does not wait for such determination, or if, in its inception, it cannot take effect at the determination of the preceding estate, it is an executory devise (r). But, in order that a future interest may be a remainder, it is sufficient that it can, in its inception, that is, according to the nature of its original limitation, take effect before, or eo instanti with, the determination of the particular estate; the improbability that it will actually thus take effect does not change it from a remainder to an executory interest (s).

SECT. 7.
Remainders
and

427. A future interest takes effect as a springing devise when it is so limited that it has no preceding estate of freehold to support it (t); or where there is a preceding estate limited, but there is necessarily a gap between the determination of the preceding estate and the vesting in possession of the future estate (u). The future interest may arise either at a time certain or on a contingency (a). The want of an immediately preceding freehold estate prevents the future interest from taking effect as a remainder, and accordingly it is valid as an executory devise, provided that it does not infringe the rule against perpetuities (b). life estate, and would have followed it in possession if it had vested by the death of C in B's lifetime, hence it was a contingent remainder, and failed by B's death in the lifetime of C (Doe d. Russell v. Morgan, supra), or where there was a devise to B for life, and after his death to his sons successively in tail male, and in default of such issue to the eldest son of C who should first attain twenty-one years. B died without issue while C's eldest son was under twenty-one, the estate limited to him was a remainder and, being limited by the will of a testator who died in 1817, failed (White v. Summers, [1908] 2 Ch. 256, 263; as to the reason for such failure, see p. 222 ante); and, as to remainders depending on double contingencies, see Holmes v. T. Scott (1864) 12 W. Cornish* (1694), 1 Salk. 226; see Harris v. Barnes (1768), 4 Burr. 2157); or to the first son of A and A has no son at the testator's death (Gore v. Gore (1722), 2 P. Wms. 28, Bullock v. Stones (1754), 2 Ves. Sen. 521), or to a specified son of the testator when he shall attain twenty-one, and he is under twenty-one at the testator's death (Doe d. Andrew v. Hutton (1804), 3 Bos. & P. 643, see Nicholl v. Nicholl (1777), 2 Wm. Bl. 1159). Formerly, in order that an executory devise should be good it must have been expressed in the future tense (Goodright v. Cornish, supra, Moore v. Parker (1695), 1 Ld. Raym. 37), but this is not necessary, unless perhaps where the testator, by his use of the present tense, clearly shows that he intended only an immediate gift, see Fearn, Contingent Remainders, p. 536.

(a) In springing devises "the devisor, without parting with the immediate fee, gives a future estate to arise either upon a contingency, or at a period certain, unpreceded by, or not having the requisite connection with, any immediate freehold to give effect to it" (Fearn, Contingent Remainders, p. 400).

 devise to a

devise takes effect in possession, devolves on the heir-at-law (c), or, under the Land Transfer Act, 1897 (d), on the personal representative, and thus the freehold is not in abeyance (e).

428. When after an estate for life the property is devised to such of the children of the tenant for life as attain twenty-one either before or after the death of the tenant for life, the express inclusion of children attaining twenty-one after such death shows that a gap between the life estate and the future interests is contemplated. Hence, since the future interests cannot, as to children attaining twenty-one after the death, take effect as remainders, they are all executory devises (f), and so, too, where the future devise is to children of a third person who are born before or after the death of the tenant for life (g). In both cases the devise is to a class so defined as to include persons who cannot be ascertained till after the determination of the particular estate (h).

Shifting
 devises.

429. A future interest takes effect as a shifting devise when it is so limited that it does not wait for the natural determination of the preceding estate, but vests in possession upon an event which determines that estate otherwise than in accordance with its direct limitation. Thus, estates limited upon the natural determination of a life estate are remainders; but if there is a clause of forfeiture of the life estate, and the next interests are in that event accelerated, they take effect, on the event happening, as executory interests (i).

Similarly, where an estate in fee simple absolute has been limited, the land may be devised in a different direction on a contingent event, and the happening of the event shifts the fee accordingly (j),

The heir-at-law takes the rents and profits until the birth of a person entitled to them, and, if by the death of such person they are again undisposed of, the heir takes them until another person becomes entitled (Hopkins v Hopkins (1734), Case temp Talb 41, (1738), 1 Atk 581, (1749), 1 Ves Sen 268, *Bullock v. (j) Pells v Brown (1629), Cro Jac 590 (devise by a testator to C, his son and his heirs, and if C died without issue during D's lifetime, then to D and his heirs; C had a vested fee simple, subject to a shifting devise in favour of D on C's dying without issue in D's lifetime). In such cases failure of issue refers to failure at the date of death of the first devisee (Porter v Bradley (1789), 3 Term Rep 113; Doe d Smith v Webber (1818), 1 B. & Ald 713, Doe d Kinn v Frost (1820), 3 B & Ald 546; Fearne, although at common law a fee cannot be limited after a fee(k), and an interest limited to take effect after a determinable fee, since it cannot be a remainder(l), is an executory interest(m).

An executory devise which puts an end to an estate tail and shifts the property to another person operates in defeasance of the estate tail, and is barred by a disentailing deed(n).

An estate pur autre vie may be the subject of an executory devise(o).

430 A shifting devise may, as in the case where it effectually disposes of the fee, defeat the prior estate altogether, but this is not necessary, and the prior estate is only interrupted to the extent required to give effect to the executory limitation. Thus, if the executory limitation confers a life estate, the life estate takes effect by way of exception out of the prior estate(p), and, if there is no person who can take the benefit of the executory limitation, the prior estate continues uninterrupted(q). But, if the form of the executory devise definitely puts an end to the prior estate, such prior estate will be defeated notwithstanding that the devise over fails to take effect(r).

Moreover, the executory limitation only takes effect on the happening of the prescribed event; this determines the prior estate and substitutes the executory devise. But the failure of the prior estate in some other manner does not let in the executory devise, the land goes instead to the heir-at-law or residuary devisee(s).

Contingent Remainders, pp 393, 400) There may also be an executory devise in defeasance of a contingent remainder, if it is to take effect after the remainder has become vested; e.g., devise to the first child of A (who at the testator's death has no child) in fee, and if he dies under twenty-one, to B in fee—see Gallagher v Barrett (1775), 1 W. R. 105.

and Reversions.

Executory
devises become remainders.

Nature of limitation determined by the event.

431. Whenever one limitation in a devise is executory, all subsequent limitations must also be executory; for the division of the fee into particular estate and remainders being interrupted by an executory limitation, the interruption affects all later interests (r). But if, by an event subsequent to the making of the will, though during the testator's life, it becomes impossible that an executory interest should take effect, the next succeeding interest, if limited so as in this event immediately to follow the particular estate, will, on the testator's death, be a remainder, either vested or contingent (a); and an executory devise may also be changed into a remainder by an event happening after the testator's death (b). But the converse does not hold to the same extent. A remainder which fails as such during the testator's lifetime can take effect as an executory devise (c), but a remainder cannot, at common law, be changed to an executory devise after the testator's death (d).

It is not necessary that a future interest should in its inception be fixed in its nature. It may be left uncertain whether it is a remainder or an executory interest, and it is then one or the other according to the event (e).

B to take (Tarbut v Tarbut (1835), 11 J (en) 129, Brookman v Smith (1872), L R 7 Exch 271, Fx (h)). The strict rule of construction, however, is not followed in the case of a determinable life interest, and the gift over may take effect on death, although in terms only given in the event of determination during the life (Re Seaton, Ellis v Seaton (1912), 107 L T 192). As to the construction of executory devise, see O'Farrell v Burdell (1874), L R 7 H L 388, and see title WILLS.

(a) Doe d Harris v Howell (1829), 10 B & C 191, 200, 2 Preston, Abstracts of Titles, 173, giving as an example, a devise to A for life from next Michaelmas, remainder to his next and other sons in tail. If the testator lives beyond Michaelmas, and A's estate takes effect, the limitation in tail is no longer executory, but a contingent remainder.

(b) Doe d Harris v Howell, supra. But this appears to mean no more than that if, after the testator's death, the event happens which shifts the estate, and the executory limitation takes effect as a fixed future interest to follow the particular estate, it takes effect as a remainder, see Hopkins (alias Dore) v Hopkins (1738), 1 Atk 581, 589.

(c) Where, for instance, a devisee for life dies in the testator's lifetime, and this leaves, at the testator's death, interests limited as contingent remainders, none of which are vested, they will become executory interests (Hopkins v Hopkins (1738), 1 Atk 581, 589, cas temp Talb 44, (1738) 1 Atk 581, Doe d Solt v Rouch (1816) 5 M & S 482, 492, FEARNE Contingent Remainders, p 525, 2 Preston Abstracts of Titles, 154). In such cases, the court leaned in favour of an executory devise, in order to give effect to the testator's intention.

(d) 2 Preston, Abstracts of Titles, 172. Mogg v Mogg (1815), 1 Mer 654, 701, arguendo. If this had been possible, contingent remainders could always have been saved from destruction by treating them as executory devises, and this in fact is the mode in which they are now by statute saved from destruction, see p 225, ante.

(e) Thus, under a limitation to A in tail, if he shall attain twenty-one or have issue, but if he shall die under twenty-one or without issue to B in fee. If A dies without issue under twenty-one, no estate vests in him, and B takes by way of executory devise, if A attains twenty-one, the estate tail vests in him, and the future devise to B, in the event of his now dying without issue, is a remainder on the estate tail (Brownson v Edwards (1751), 2 Ves Sen 243, FEARNE, Contingent Remainders, p 526, Doe d

Where a future interest is given on two independent events, one of which makes it a remainder, and the other an executory interest, an illegality affecting the future interest in one contingency does not prevent it from taking effect in the event of the lawful contingency (f).

432. A restriction is placed by statute on the creation of executory interests to take effect on failure of issue. Where, under an instrument coming into operation after the 31st December, 1882 (g), there is a person entitled to land for an estate in fee, or for a term of years absolute or determinable on life, or for a term of life, with an executory limitation over on default or failure of all or any of his issue, whether within or at any specified period of time or not, the executory limitation becomes void as soon as any issue of the class in question has attained the age of twenty-one years (h).

SUB-SECT. 6 -- Possibility of Reverter

433 When a limited estate is carved out of the fee simple, what remains of the fee is a remainder or reversion (i). When the fee simple itself is not absolute, but is liable to be determined either by a collateral limitation or a breach of a condition, the chance that this may happen is a possibility of reverter (k). Thus the limitation of a determinable fee simple (l), or of a fee simple subject to a condition (m), carries with it as an incident a possibility of reverter (n). It is the same with a conditional fee in copyhold lands (o).

(k) Under a fee simple absolute the chance that the lord will get back the estate depends on its failure for lack of heirs of the tenant for the time being. SUB-SECT 7—*Spes Successionis*Remainders
and
successionis.*

434. No one can have any estate or interest, at law or in equity, in the property of a living person to which he hopes to succeed as his heir-at-law or next of kin; and it is the same where there is a limitation by will or settlement of real or personal property to the heir or statutory next of kin of a living person; or where the limitation is not to the actual heir or next of kin at the death, but to the persons who would be heir or next of kin if the ancestor were to die at some future time (p). Such mere expectation, known as a spes successionis, confers no actual interest in the property, not even a contingent interest (q), or an interest in expectancy (r), since nemo est heres viventis, and, as long as the ancestor is alive, there is no person in whom the right to take by descent resides. Hence spes successionis is not a title to property (s), nor does it confer a right to sue for the preservation of the property (t).

SECT. 8.—*Chattels which Descend as Real Estate.*SUB-SECT 1—*In General.*Devolution on heir.

435. In general, chattels personal devolve upon the death of the owner on his personal representatives, to be disposed of by them as personal estate (a); but, in certain cases, they are so associated with real estate that they follow its quality as regards inheritance, and, in case of intestacy, they devolve on the heir-at-law, subject to the rights of the personal representatives under the Land Transfer Act, 1897 (b). Such chattels are either title deeds or heirlooms.

It confers no interest at all, either vested or contingent, but only an expectation of an interest (Clives v. Hubbard (1877), 4 Ch D 413, 416). Similarly, a wife's jus relictæ under Scots law is, during her husband's life, a mere spes successionis, and is not "an estate or interest" in property coming to her "during the coverture" within the meaning of the usual covenant for settlement of after acquired property (Re Simpson, Simpson v. Simpson, [1904] 1 Ch. 1, C A)

SUB-SECT. 2.—Title Deeds.

436. The title deeds of land are of use only to the owner of land in order to enable him to maintain his title (c), and it is the general rule that whoever is entitled to the land has also a right to all the title deeds affecting it (d). Accordingly, the owner of land is entitled to the custody of the title deeds relating to it, and can maintain an action for them notwithstanding that the conveyance to him contains no express grant of the deeds (e).

Owner's right to custody

Variations of the rule.

This rule is necessarily varied: first, where the deeds are common to the titles of the owners of different lands; and, secondly, where the land is subject to different simultaneous or successive interests. In the case of common title deeds, arrangements are usually made upon sales or other dispositions of land as to the owner who shall hold them, and he gives an acknowledgment for production and for delivery of copies to the other owners, and also, unless he is a trustee or other fiduciary owner, an undertaking for their safe custody (f). But, without such express stipulations, any owner of land comprised in the title deeds appears to have the right to require their production (g). Questions of the right to title deeds arise between persons having partial interests in the land, that is, co-owners, tenant for life and remainderman; trustee and cestui que trust, mortgagor and mortgagee; and landlord and tenant. As between co-owners, whoever obtains the deeds is entitled to hold them, but he must produce them to the others (h); as between a legal tenant for life and remainderman, the tenant for life is entitled to the deeds (i); as between trustee and cestui que trust, the cestui que trust, if he is entitled to possession, although he is only tenant for life, may be given the custody of them by the court (j); as between mortgagor and mortgagee, the possession of the deeds by the mort-

It has been said that upon a conveyance under the Statute of Uses, 27 Hen 8, c. 10, the grantee to use is entitled to the deeds and not the cestui que use (1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 5th ed., p. 117), but the legal estate which vests in the cestui que use carries with it the right to the deeds, see Co Litt 6 a, note (4), Malone v Minnoughan (1862), 11 1 C L R 540, Williams, Law of Personal Property, 16th ed., p. 128.

gagee is an essential part of the security (h); and, as between landlord and tenant, the tenant has no right to the deeds relating to the freehold interest (l), but he is entitled to those relating to the term (m).

437. Apart from modern statutory enactment (n), deeds, court rolls, and other evidences of title to land, pass on the death of the tenant in fee simple intestate to the heir-at-law and not to the executor; and so also does a box or chest exclusively appropriated to them (o); but the tenant in fee simple can dispose of the deeds in his lifetime (p)

SUB-SECTION 3—Heirlooms

438. Heirlooms (q) are articles which, either from their connection with real estate or by special custom, pass, on the death of the ancestor, to the heir (r). They are connected in this manner with real estate when they are an incident of the tenure of land, or are necessary for maintaining the dignity of the owner of land or the possessor of a title. An ancient horn, where the tenure is by cornage (s), the garter and collar of a knight (t), the ancient jewels of the Crown (u), and a patent creating a dignity, are all heirlooms (b). Chattels may, possibly, also be heirlooms on the ground that they are an essential feature in the ordinary enjoyment of the land, as, for example, wild deer in the park (c), assuming that they can be the subject of property at all. If they are so far value as to be under control, they go to the executor (d)

By special custom, such articles as the best bed and utensils, and other household implements, may be heirlooms, but the custom must be strictly proved (e).

439. The tenant in fee simple can dispose of heirlooms during his life, but if he does not do so, and permits the land to descend, he cannot devise the heirlooms in a different direction (f).

440. Chattels which are not heirlooms at common law can be settled in a manner corresponding to the uses or trusts for a settlement of land so as to be inseparable from the land until a tenant in tail in possession becomes entitled to them. They then become his absolute property. These so-called heirlooms are in fact the only heirlooms which usually occur in modern times (g).

SUB-SECT. 1 — In General

442. Estates tail arise from the operation of the Statute De Donis (i) on conditional fees at common law (a)

At common law a limitation to a man and a special class of heirs, such as the heirs male of his body by a specified wife, was a conditional fee simple (b). The condition was performed by the birth of issue of the prescribed class, and thereafter the grantee had a fee simple absolute for the purpose of alienation (c); but, if he died without having alienated the land, the form of the gift was observed, and it followed the prescribed course of descent (d). The Statute De Donis (e) enacted that the will of the grantor according to the form of the grant should thenceforth be observed, so that the grantee of the land under such a condition should have no power to alienate the land (f), but that it should remain to the issue after the death of the grantee, or should revert to the grantor or his heirs on failure of the prescribed issue of the grantee, whether because there was no such issue, or because, after issue born, the line of issue failed. The statute (c), therefore, prevented the estate from ever becoming a fee simple absolute, and converted it into an estate of inheritance of a restricted nature, whence the estate was called feudum talliatum, or an estate tail (g).

(c) Co Litt 18 b, 2 Bl. Com 428; Williams, Law of Executors and Administrators, 10th ed., p. 545. It would seem, however, that the custom need not be a custom in the strict sense so as to require proof of immemorial use (see title CUSTOM AND USAGE, Vol. X, p. 222), but that it would be sufficient to show the custom of the family for several generations. It is doubtful, however, whether any such customs now exist. Articles which are so attached to land or buildings as not to be removable without damage have been said to be heirlooms by general custom (2 Bl. Com 428), but they are in fact fixtures and follow the land because they are in law actually part of it, see titles EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, Vol. XIV, p. 220, LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII, pp. 416 et seq. Such fixtures may even include movable articles if they are essential to the scheme of a building (ibid, p. 418).

SUB-SECT. 2 — the situation

Estate in tail
general.

443 An estate in tail in its widest form is where lands or tenements are limited to a man and the heirs of his body without restriction as to the wife of whom the heirs are to be born or of the sex of the heirs (h); and similarly where the limitation is to a woman and the heirs of her body (i). Such an estate is called an "estate in tail general." However often the donee in tail is married, his or her issue of every such marriage, whether male or female, are, in successive order, capable of inheriting under the entail; so that elder sons and their issue will inherit in order before younger sons; sons and their issue will inherit before daughters and their issue; and daughters will inherit equally inter se, the issue of each daughter taking her share (j).

Estate in tail
male or tail female

444. An estate in tail general may be restricted to heirs male or heirs female, and is called, accordingly, an "estate in tail male general" (k), or an "estate in tail female general" (l). Under a limitation in tail male general only male issue claiming continuously through male issue can inherit; and under a limitation in tail female general only female issue claiming continuously through

(c) He had a fee simple also for the purpose of forfeiture, and for the purpose of charging the land with rent, common, or the like (Co Litt 19 a). If the grantee aliened before issue born, this barred the issue afterwards born, but it did not bar the grantor's possibility of reverter, and he could re-enter if the issue died without issue (ibid).

(g) Littleton's Tenures, s 18, Co Litt 22 a. But an estate tail still resembles a fee simple in that it is exempt from liability for waste, see Boules' (Lewis) Case (1616), 11 Co Rep 79 b, fourth resolution.

(h) Littleton's Tenures, s 14.

(i) Ibid, s. 15.

(j) 2 Bl Com 113. With regard to descent to heirs, the same rules apply as in the case of descent of an estate in fee simple, subject to the restriction of the line of inheritance to heirs of the body (see title DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, Vol XI, pp. 1 et seq); as to descent to daughters, see p. 210, ante).

(k) Littleton's Tenures, s 21.

female issue can inherit(m). But the latter limitation does not occur in practice, since a limitation in tail male followed by a remainder in tail female does not exhaust the possible issue(n), the appropriate remainder after a limitation in tail male is a limitation in tail without restriction of sex(o).

SECT. I
Estates
Tail.

445. An estate in tail may be restricted to the heirs of the body of two specified persons, and then it is known as an "estate in tail special"(p). This may be, first, where the limitation is to a single donee and the heirs of his or her body by a specified wife or husband; and, secondly, where the limitation is to a man and woman who are either married or are capable of lawful marriage. In the first case, the donee has an estate in tail special(q), in the second case, the donees have a joint estate in tail special(r). An estate in tail special may be further restricted in the same way as an estate in tail general to male heirs of the body or female heirs of the body(s).

Estate in tail
special

446. Hence estates tail may exist in the following forms(t) -

Classification
of estates tail.

- (1) Tail general: unrestricted as to spouse and as to sex.
- (2) Tail male general: unrestricted as to spouse; restricted to male issue
- (3) Tail female general: unrestricted as to spouse, restricted to female issue
- (4) Tail special: restricted to two defined spouses, unrestricted as to sex
- (5) Tail male special: restricted to two defined spouses and to male issue
- (6) Tail female special: restricted to two defined spouses and to female issue.

SUB SECT. II.—Creation

(1) At Common Law

447. The appropriate way of creating an estate tail is to limit

Heirs of the body

(m) Thus, under a limitation in tail male, the son of a daughter cannot inherit, nor, under a limitation in tail female, the daughter of a son (Littleton's Tenures, s. 24, Co Litt 25 a, b)

(n) Thus, in a limitation in tail male with remainder in tail female if the donee has issue a son, who has issue a daughter who has issue a son, neither of the last two is included (Co Litt 25 b)

(o) "The safest way, when a man will entail his lands to the heirs male and female of his body, is to limit the first estate to him and the heirs male of his body, the remainder to him and to the heirs of his body, and then all his issues whatsoever are inheritable" (Co Litt 25 b). But if lands are given to a man and to the heirs male or female of his body, this is an estate in tail general (ibid), see Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p. 287; and see note (r), p. 245, post

(p) Littleton's Tenures, s. 16

(q) Ibid, s. 29

(r) Ibid, s. 16, Co Litt 20 b; see p. 200, ante. If the gift is to husband and wife, and to the heirs of the body of the husband (the husband has an estate in tail general, and the wife an estate for life (Littleton's Tenures, s. 26), and see other similar cases (ibid, ss. 27, 28)

(t) The late Mr Challis suggested a classification under which general tail was opposed to special tail, and tail general to tail male and female (Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p. 290), but in fact general tail and tail general are used indifferently, and the suggested classification seems liable to lead to confusion.

the land to the donee and the heirs of his body (a). The use of the word "heirs," either expressly in the limitation of the estate or by reference to some other limitation in which it is used (b), was, before 1882, essential if the estate were created by deed. It cannot be supplied by other words, such as "issue" or "seed," which, though they denote the relation of ancestor and descendant, do not specifically point to capability of inheritance (c). But the use of the words "of his body" is not essential, and it is sufficient if any words are used which expressly or by implication denote that the heirs are to issue from the body of the donee, thus an estate tail is created by a limitation to the donee and "the heirs of his flesh," or "from him proceeding" (d).

(a) Or, more fully, "to the donee and the heirs of his body begotten." A limitation to A "and the heirs of his body" is as good as to "his heirs of his body" (Co Litt 26 a, see Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p 295, and compare note (n), p 165, ante). But the limitation is good without the word "begotten," and when this word is used it is indifferent in what tense it is expressed, thus, a limitation "to the donee and the heirs of his body whom he has begotten" extends to issue begotten afterwards, and a limitation to him "and the heirs of his body to be begotten" extends to issue already begotten (Co Litt 20 b, Hebbelthwaite v Cartwright (1734), Cas temp Talb 31, 32, Dee d James v Hallett (1813), 1 M & S 124 Gabb v Piendergast (1855), 1 K & J 429, 442), but earlier born issue are excluded if such an intention is shown (Leon (1844), 3 Leon 87, Locke v Dunlop (1888), 39 Ch D 387 (C A, see Dee d James v Hallett, supra). As to the effect of statutory provisions upon the common law rule, see pp 246-247, post.

(b) Thus, a limitation to A and the heirs of his body, remainder to B, in manner aforesaid, creates an estate tail in remainder in B (Co Litt 20 b, see Goodright d Burton v Rugby (1792), 2 Hy Bl 46, 62, as to confirmation by statute of an estate tail already created).

(c) Since fee tail is a fee simple at common law, the word "heirs" is as essential to the limitation in a deed as in the case (apart from statute; see pp 165, 166, ante) of a limitation in a fee simple (Co Litt 20 a b; Neel v Neel (1618), 1 Brownl 152, Seagood v Howe (1634), Cro Car 366, Makepiece v Fletcher (1734), Com 457, Wheeler v Duke (1832), 1 Cr & M 210, Dawson v Dawson (1850), 13 L R 472, Phillips v James (1865), 2 Drew & Sm 404, 411, affirmed 3 De G J & Sm 72, (C A). But a grant in frankmarriage—i.e., a gift to a man and his wife (a near relation of the donor) by the words "in frankmarriage," which were words of art—created an estate tail without the word "heirs" (Littleton's Tenures, s 17, Co Litt 21 b; Challis, Law of Real Property 3rd ed., p 293). Possibly, in the case of an estate tail, an exception is allowed to the rule applicable to estates in fee simple, namely, that in a deed (apart from statute, see pp 165, 166, ante) the word "heirs" in the plural is essential (Co Litt 22 a; Warwick v. Warwick (1740), 3 Atk 291; Dubber d Trollope v Trollope (1734) Amb 453, 457, Chambers v Taylor (1837) 2 My & Cr 376, 387), though in a will the singular number is sufficient (Richard v Berquenny (Lady) (1695), 2 Vern 324, White v Collins (1718), Com 289, Dubberd Trollope v Trollope, supra; and see p 165, note (n), ante); but in applying the rule in Shelley's Case (see pp 226, 229, ante), words of limitation added to the word "heir" make it a word of purchase (Archer's Case (1597), 1 Co Rep 66 b, Bayley v Morris (1799), 4 Ves 788, Chambers v Taylor, supra). And as to wills, see note (f), p 229, ante, title WILLS.

(d) Co Litt 20 b; Beresford's Case (1607), 7 Co Rep 41 a, Idle v Cook (1705), 2 Ld Raym 1144, 1153, Jack d. Westby v Felkenstone (1829), 2 Hud & B 320; compare Cotton's Case (1591), 1 Leon 211, S C, sub nom Smy v Jane, Cro Eliz. 219 (where there were no words equivalent to "of the body," and an estate tail was not created). An estate tail has been created by a limitation to "heirs male" without "of the body" where there were circumstances showing that these words should have formed part of the limitation (Gilmore v Harris (1693), Carth 292).

PART III — ESTATES IN LAND CREATED BY OR UNDER STATUTE.

448. A limitation to the grantee and his heirs, giving primâ facie a fee simple, is cut down to an estate tail if words are added which show that "heirs" means "heirs of the body," where, for example, there is a gift over if the grantee dies "without heirs of his body" (e); or, where the gift over is in favour of a person who is capable of being collateral heir, and it is to take effect if the first grantee dies "without heirs" (f), or where the event on which the gift is to take effect depends on the existence of a collateral heir of the first grantee on his death (g); and perhaps a gift over if the grantee dies "without issue" restricts his primâ facie fee simple to an estate tail (h).

449. The variations in the limitation of estates tail required to create estates in tail special, and estates tail male or female, whether in tail general or special, follow from the nature of these estates. The addition to "heirs" of the words "male" or "female" creates an estate in tail male or tail female (i), and the specification, in a limitation to the donee and the heirs of his or her body, of the wife on whose body they are to be begotten, or the husband by whom

(h) There are several authorities to this effect, see Canon's Case (1559), 3 Leon. 5, Beck's Case (1630), Litt. 344, and see ibid., pp. 159, 253, 285, 316; S. C., sub nom. Bonclon v. Nicholls (1634), Cro. Car. 363; Lough v. Brace (1695), Carth. 313, 5 Mod. Rep. 266, 1 Id. Raym. 101; 3 Salk. 137. According to the report in Carthew, the last decision turned on the limitation being by way of use, it being said that in uses, as in wills, the intention prevails, but this is erroneous, and the decision was given on the legal effect of the limitation, see Tapner d. Pechham v. Merlott (1739), Willes, 177, 181, Fisher v. Wigg (1701), 1 P. Wms. 14, 15, Dunfield v. Poplam (1703), 1 P. Wms. 54, per WRIGHT, Lord Keeper, at p. 57, note (2); Smith v. Smith (1856), 5 1 Ch. R. 88, Morgan v. Morgan (1870), L. R. 10 Eq. 99. But the construction is different where the words are "in default of such issue" (Idle v. Cooke (1705), 2 Ld. Raym. 1141, 1 P. Wms. 70), or if the grantee dies "without leaving issue" (Olivant v. Wright (1878), 9 Ch. D. 646); and, since there appears to be no substantial ground of distinction, it may be that the cases first cited would not now be followed. A reference to death without issue does not enlarge an express estate for life to an estate tail (Seagood v. Hone (1634), Cro. Car. 366). As to implication of an estate tail arising upon a devise over after a failure of issue of the first devisee, see, in the case of wills before the Wills Act, 1837 (7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 26), *Gardner v. R. 4 Exch. 141; and, in the case of wills since the Wills Act, 1837 (7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 26), see ibid., s. 29, title WILLS. As to implication of an estate tail upon a devise to the devisee and his children or issue, where he has no issue at the time of the devise, see Wild's Case (1599), 6 Co. Rep. 16b. A devise to A and his heirs with a proviso that neither he nor his heirs to the third generation shall sell or mortgage the land creates an estate tail (Mortimer v. Hurlley (1851), 3 De G. & Sm. 316, 6 Exch. 47, (1848) 6 C. B. 819; and see Hamilton v. West (1846), 10 L. Eq. R. 75. Dodds v. Dodds (1860), 11 L. Ch. R. 476).

(i) See p. 242, ante. A limitation to heirs of the body, males to be preferred before females, creates an estate in tail male in the first instance (Denn d. Oreswick v. Hobson (1770), 2 Wm. Bl. 695).

they are to be begotten, creates an estate in tail special (k). But the spouse who makes the entail special need not be particularly named. It is sufficient if he or she is defined as belonging to a class (l). Where the limitation is to a husband and wife as the donees, the estate tail vests in the husband or wife or both according as the issue are to proceed from one or both (m). An estate tail may be created by a limitation to the heirs of the body of a deceased person, the first of such heirs who becomes entitled taking by purchase (n), and by a limitation to an only son and the heirs of the body of his father who is then dead, the son taking an estate tail which on his death without issue will go to the next heir of the body of the father (o).

450 In a deed it is now sufficient, in the limitation of an estate in tail, to use the words "in tail" without the words "heirs of the body"; and, in the limitation of an estate in tail male or in tail female, to use the words "in tail male" or "in tail female," as the (k) Littleton's Tenures, s. 29. A limitation to the "right heirs" of a man by a particular wife "for ever" is the same as a limitation to the heirs of his body by the particular wife, and creates an estate tail, notwithstanding the words "for ever" (Wright v. Vernon (1854), 2 Drew 439, affirmed (1858), 7 H. L. Cas. 35).

(l) Page v. Hayward (1704), 2 Salk 570, more fully reported in Pigott on Recoveries, p. 176 ("devise to Mary Bryant and the heirs male of her body, provided she intermarries with and has issue male by one surnamed Searle"), Pelham Clinton v. Newcastle (Duke), [1902] 1 Ch. 34, C. A., affirmed, [1903] A. C. 411 (devise to "Charles, if he marries a fit and worthy gentlewoman, and his issue male"). In both cases an estate in special tail male was created, also in Hoque v. Martin, [1902] 1 I. R. 367, 370, C. A. (devise to A., and no person to inherit "unless a lawful issue of a male child got by marriage with a respectable Protestant female, of proper conducted parent.")

(m) In a limitation to husband and wife and to the heirs whom the husband shall beget on the body of the wife or to the heirs of the body of the husband and wife, there is no distinction between husband and wife as the source of issue, and the estate in special tail vests in both (Littleton's Tenures s. 28, Denn v. Trickett v. Gilby (1788) 2 Term Rep. 431, Williams v. Williams (1810), 12 East. 209). But where the limitation is to husband and wife and the heirs of the body of the husband, the husband has an estate tail general and the wife an estate for life (Littleton's Tenures, s. 26), and where the limitation is to the husband and wife and to the heirs of the husband which he shall beget on the body of the wife, the husband has an estate in special tail and the wife an estate for life (Littleton's Tenures, s. 27), and a limitation to husband and wife and to the heirs of the body of the wife by the husband begotten gives the wife an estate in special tail and the husband an estate for life (Littleton's Tenures, s. 28, How v. Trickett v. Gifford v. supra, Repps v. Bonham (1608), Yelv. 131, and see Gassage v. Taylor (1657), Sty. 325, Throgmorton and Robinson v. Wharney (1770), 3 Wils. 144). A limitation to A. and his heirs on the body of Jane S. begotten is an estate tail (Chudleigh's Case (1595), 1 Co. Rep. 120 a, 140 b, fifth resolution). This had been questioned on the ground that the heirs might be collateral and begotten on the body of Jane S. by another than A., but "begotten" necessarily means begotten by A. (Co. Litt. 26 b).

case requires, without the words "heirs male of the body" or "heirs female of the body" (p).

Estates
Tail.

SUB-SECT. 4 — Disentail

(1) In General

451 By the Statute De Donis (g) estates tail, so far as the legislature could effect its intention, were made inalienable. Under the provisions of that statute whatever disposition was made by the donee, the issue in tail could, on his death, defeat the disposition and recover the land. But the tendency of the courts was to favour free alienation (i), and, in the course of the next two centuries, they overrode the declared intention of the legislature, and it was established that the tenant in tail by using the fictitious legal process known as a "common recovery," could bar both the issue in tail and the remainders after the estate tail (s).

prior to 1834.

452 A recovery was a real action brought against the tenant of the freehold. This might be the tenant in tail himself, but more usually there was a preliminary conveyance of an estate of intermediate freehold by the tenant in tail to a nominal tenant who was known as the tenant to the praecipe (t). Against him the action was brought, and its efficacy depended on the doctrine of warranty (u). It was assumed that the estate tail had originally been granted with warranty and the benefit of this warranty would then be available for the issue in tail. The tenant to the praecipe vouched to warranty the tenant in tail, who in turn vouched the common vouchee (a). The common vouchee made default. Judgment for recovery of the land was given in favour of the demandant, who thereupon obtained the land in fee simple, while judgment for recovery of lands of equal value was given in favour of the tenant to the praecipe against the tenant in tail, who in turn had the same recompense from the common vouchee. In legal theory this recompense gave to the issue in tail what they lost by the demandant's recovery of the entailed land (b). The process was

(t) Where the land was let for lives at a rent, the lessee was the tenant of the immediate freehold; but to avoid bringing him into the recovery, it was provided by stat. (1740) 14 Geo. 2, c. 20, ss. 1, 2, that the person next in remainder or reversion might make the tenant to the praecipe.

(u) As to warranties, which Sir E. COKE refers to as "a curious and cunning kind of learning I assure you" (Co. Litt. 163 b), see Littleton's Tenures, s. 697, Co. Litt. 161 b, 365 a et seq.

(a) The common vouchee was usually the clerk of the court, selected because he was a man of no substance (Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p. 311). The courts allowed this transparent fiction in order to make land alienable (see note (h), p. 248, post), and the procedure came to be sanctioned by the legislature, see note (t), supra.

(b) For a fuller account of the proceedings in a common recovery, and the variations according as the recovery was with single, double or treble voucher, see 2 Bl. Com., p. 358; Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., pp. 310 et seq, and, for the practice in investigating titles founded on a completed by the demandant reconveying to the tenant in tail in fee simple or in such manner as he might direct.

The effect of a common recovery was to bar the estate tail, and the reversion or remainders, and all conditions and collateral limitations annexed to the estate, including executory interests still in futuro taking effect in defeasance of it, and to convert it into a fee simple, if the creator of the estate tail had the fee simple, or otherwise into a fee commensurate with his estate (c). The right of the tenant in tail to suffer a recovery was an inseparable incident of his estate which could not be prohibited by condition or any other device (d). The recompense in value was recognised to be a fiction, and it was no objection to a recovery that the judgment for the tenant in tail to have lands of equal value produced in fact no recompense (e). According to one view, this fictitious recompense was only required for the purpose of making the recovery good as against the issue in tail. The remaindermen were barred by the assumed continuance of the estate tail (f). But according to another opinion, more reasonable, though perhaps less technically correct, the remainderman was barred because he was entitled to enjoy the recompense (g). In the result, recoveries came to be regarded not as actions, but as common forms of conveyance (h), but the recovery did not affect estates derived out of or incumbrances on the estate tail, although incumbrances on the remainder or reversion were barred (i).

Fine

453 An estate tail might also be barred by a fine. This, like a recovery was in form an action (j); but while a recovery was pursued to judgment and took its effect from the judgment, in a fine the proceedings were compromised by leave of the court. The fine was, however, equivalent to judgment, and it operated to bar the issue in tail immediately, and the claims of the remainderman at the expiration of five years from the time when their estates respectively

The reasons given in the books for the effectiveness of a common recovery are, however, as WILLES, C.J., observed, not consistent, and the real reason was that the courts were resolved to allow to tenants in tail the power of alienation.

454 Fines and recoveries were abolished (n), as from the 31st December, 1833, with the exception of fines levied or recoveries suffered under proceedings pending at that date, and the present mode of barring entails is defined by statute (o).

(11) Statutory Power

(a) In General

455. A complete disentailment is effected when land is set free from the claims both of the issue in tail and of estates and interests subsequent to, or in defeasance of, the estate tail. This result follows when the tenant in tail effectually disposes of the land in fee simple. A partial disentailment takes place when the tenant in tail effectually disposes of the land for an estate less than the fee simple, and then the claims of the issue in tail and of the remaindermen are overridden to the extent necessary to give effect to the disposition.

(k) Originally the fine had the same effect as a final judgment in a writ of right, that is, it operated immediately as an absolute bar to all claims (Cruse on Fines and Recoveries, Vol. I, p. 159, see Bract, Vol. VI, p. 438, fol. 435 b). Subsequently claims were allowed to be brought both against a judgment on a writ of right, and against a fine, within a year and a day, and a fine was used as a conveyance under which a purchaser's title became safe, after a short time, against every kind of claim (Cruse on Fines and Recoveries, Vol. I, p. 161). This was at common law, but the effect of fines was varied from time to time by statute. Puberty was required by stat. (1290) 18 Edw. I, stat. 4 (de modo levandi fines), but they still had too great an effect against persons ultimately entitled, and the Statute of Non-Return (1360), 31 Edw. 3, c. 16, confined their operation to the actual parties to the fine. This continued for a hundred years, and then by stat. (1453) 1 Ric. 3, c. 7, and afterwards by the stat. (1489) 4 Hen. 7, c. 24, fines were reintroduced as a means of limiting claims to land. Proclamations had to be made, and the period of limitation was five years. Against future rights the period ran from the time when the right fell into possession, and in case of disability, from the removal of the disability. Thus the rights of remaindermen were saved till they fell into possession. Apparently the fine was an immediate bar to the issue in tail (Anon. (1527), Dyer, 3 a), but the point was doubtful, and it was settled against the issue by stat. (1540) 32 Hen. 8, c. 36, s. 1. The stat. (1489) 4 Hen. 7, c. 24, continued to operate as a means of barring estates tail until 1833. As to these statutes, see Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., pp. 305 et seq.

(l) A fine was equivalent to a feoffment upon record, provided the person levying the fine had an estate of freehold, otherwise the fine had no effect whatsoever with respect to a stranger, and it operated as an estoppel only, and barred none but the parties to it and those claiming under them (Smith v. Dormer v. Packhurst (1742), 3 Atk. 135, 11 L. J., per WILLES, C. J., delivering opinion of judges in House of Lords, at p. 141).

(m) Thus the fine of donee in tail with proclamation barred his issue, whether he had an actual or vested estate tail, so that he was seised of the same, or a contingent, future or executory interest in tail (1 Preston's Abstracts of Titles, 402), and, as to fines as a species of assurance, see 3 Preston, Abstracts of Titles, 130 et seq. As to the advantage a fine might have over a recovery, see Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p. 313.

SECT. 1.
Estates
Tail.

Who can
disentail.

456. Every actual tenant in tail (p), whether in possession, remainder, contingency, or otherwise, has now, by statute, full power to dispose of the lands entailed for an estate in fee simple absolute, or for any less estate (q); and consequently he can effect either a complete or a partial disentailment of the lands, which term, for this purpose, includes hereditaments of any tenure, whether corporeal or incorporeal, and any undivided share therein (r). But the power is not exercisable by a tenant in tail after possibility of issue extinct (s); or by the tenant in tail of certain lands conferred for public services on the original grantees (t). The full power of barring the entail can only be exercised by a tenant in tail of full age in possession. Until he attains the age of twenty-one, he is subject in this respect to the ordinary disability of infancy (u); and, while his estate is future, his power depends on the consent of the protector of the settlement (v). Without this consent, he can only create a base fee (w).

No fetter on right.

As under the previous law, the right to bar the estate is a necessary incident of the estate and cannot be fettered by the settlor (x).

(b) Protector of the Settlement

Protector.

457. Where a tenant in tail who proposes to bar the entail is not immediately entitled in possession, the exercise of his power is subject to the consent of the protector of the settlement. The (p) I.e., the tenant of an estate tail which has not been barred, such tenant is deemed an actual tenant in tail, although the estate tail may have been divested or turned to a right (Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c 74), s 1). Formerly an estate might be turned to a right of entry, in which case the tenant was merely divested of possession and could regain the possession by re-entering or by a possessory action; this was the case where a tenant for life prior to the estate tail, alienated in fee; but an alienation by tenant in tail had a greater effect, it worked a discontinuance (see 1 Preston, Abstracts of Titles, 364), and deprived the issue in tail of his right of entry, leaving him with the right of property, which he could only assert in a proprietary action (Co Litt 327 b; Co Litt 239 a, Butler's note (1); see Goodright v Fowler v Forester (1809), 1 Taunt 578, Ex Ch; Preston's argument, ibid., pp 587 et seq). This distinction was abolished by the Real Property Limitation Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c 27), and a claimant to an estate, as long as he has a right of action, has also a right of entry; and see title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, Vol XIX, pp 104, 105. But in the present connection "divest" includes the case where the tenant in tail has ceased to have both possession and the right of possession; where, for instance, he has alienated the land without barring the issue, so as to pass a base fee, and where his property has been transferred to another person by operation of law. Hence the tenant in tail continues to be actual tenant in tail for the purpose of the statute (1) where he has been ousted by an adverse claimant, (2) where he has alienated in fee not under the statute: (3) where his estate has been transferred by operation of law, as upon its transfer to an administrator on conviction for felony (Re Gaskell and Wallers' Contract, [1906] 2 Ch 1, C A).

Appointment
of protector

458. The settlor may, by the settlement entailing the lands, appoint any number of persons in esse to be protector of the settlement in lieu of the statutory protector, and either for the whole or any part of the period of the statutory protectorate; and he may insert in the settlement a power enabling the donee of the power to fill up vacancies in the office of protector occasioned by death or retirement (y). If there is no other person then protector, the persons appointed under the power are protector; otherwise, they are protector jointly with the existing protector, but the number of persons composing the protector must never exceed three (y). The appointment of a protector under such a power, and also the retirement of a protector, must be by deed, and the deed is void unless enrolled within six months after execution. The person who would be statutory sole protector may be appointed protector and, unless otherwise directed by the settlor, may act as sole protector if the other persons constituting the protector shall have died or resigned and no other person shall have been appointed in their place (y).

459 Where several persons have been appointed protector, then, upon the death of any of them, the other survivors, and the survivors constitute the protector until the vacancy is supplied (a). Where all the persons constituting the protector die, the office devolves upon the statutory protector (b). The court does not favour the special appointment of a protector, and a trustee whose duty it is to make a settlement under the direction of the court in pursuance of an executory trust will not, in the absence of special circumstances, be required to appoint persons as protector (c).

The estates specified as sufficient to confer the office of protector are “any estate for years determinable on the dropping of a life or lives, or any greater estate (not being an estate for years).” The estate specifically mentioned refers to a form of settlement now practically obsolete. The first limitation was frequently to A for ninety-nine years if he should so long live, followed by a remainder to his first and other sons in tail. A had thus no estate of freehold, and his concurrence in a recovery was not necessary (Sugden, Real Property Statutes, 2nd ed, p 215). This form of limitation was adopted in order to keep the land in settlement as long as possible (see Bell v Holby, supra, at p 189). The Fines and protector.

461. The prior estate which constitutes the protector is by preference the beneficial estate. If there is a prior legal estate outstanding in a bare trustee, he cannot be protector (h). If, however, there is a prior legal or equitable estate in a trustee who is not a bare trustee, and there is no person beneficially entitled in respect of a concurrent prior estate, it seems that the trustee can be protector (i), but if there is a person beneficially entitled under a prior estate, he is the protector, notwithstanding that there is a concurrent legal estate in a trustee (k).

Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c 74), made his consent to disentailing necessary. A life estate is greater than an estate for years determinable on life (see p 219, ante), and is within the Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c 74), s 22, and so, a fortiori, is a prior estate tail (Re Blewitt (1856), 6 De G M & G 187, C A). But a lessee at a rent cannot be protector (Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c 74), s 29).

(c) The owner of an estate arising under a different settlement is not protector (Berrington v Seck (1875), 32 L T 125), but an estate confirmed or restored by a settlement is deemed to subsist thereunder (Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c 74), s 25).

(g) Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c 74), s 22. As to estates by the curtesy, see pp 183 et seq, ante. But a doweress cannot be protector (Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c 74), s 27).

(h) Ibid, s 27, and as to the meaning of "bare trustee," see title TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES. In a settlement created before the passing of the Act (28th August, 1833)—or perhaps before the 31st December, 1833 (see the discrepancy in dates in ibid, ss. 27 and 31, and compare Sugden, Real Property Statutes, 2nd ed, p 219)—a bare trustee (as to this term, see Re Cunningham and Frayling, [1891] 2 Ch 567, Re Howgate and Osborn's Contract, [1902] 1 Ch 451) can be protector, since formerly, in virtue of his legal estate, he would have been the person to make a tenant to the præcipe (Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c 74), s 31); see Smith v Dormer v Packhurst (1742), 3 Atk 135, II L), but he can insist on retaining the legal estate only so long as the purposes of the trust exist (Buttanshaw v Martin (1859), John 89). Where, however, the prior estate and also the estate tail are equitable, the equitable tenant for life would formerly have been the person to make the tenant to the præcipe in the equitable recovery, and he is now the protector notwithstanding the Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c 74), s 31 (Re Dudson's Contract (1878), 8 Ch D 628, C A, per COTTON, L J, at p 634).

463. Where the prior estate conferring the office of statutory protector is vested in two or more persons, each of them in respect of the undivided share of which he could dispose is deemed the owner of a prior estate, and is exclusively the protector of the settlement to the extent of such undivided share (n).

464. Where the prior estate belongs to a married woman, and is settled or agreed to be settled to her separate use, or (as to disentailments made after 1882) is her separate estate by statute (o), she is alone protector of the settlement ; otherwise she and her husband together constitute the protector and are deemed one owner (p).

465. If any person who is protector of a settlement is lunatic, idiot, or of unsound mind, whether found such by inquisition or not, the Lord Chancellor is substituted as protector (q), and his jurisdiction to consent to a disentail is exercisable by the judge in lunacy (r).

Persons under disability

In certain other cases of disability the High Court of Justice is substituted as protector. These are (1) where the person who is protector has been convicted of treason or felony, (2) where he is an infant, except where he is the owner of a prior estate under the settlement, (3) if it is uncertain whether he is living or dead ; (4) if the settlor has by the settlement excluded the statutory protector and has not made any appointment ; and (5) if there is a prior estate under the settlement sufficient to qualify a protector, but in fact there is for the time being no protector (s).

Hence an heir who takes in consequence of the failure of a trust for accumulation under the Accumulations Act, 1800 (39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 98) cannot be protector, notwithstanding that he takes by way of resulting use (compare Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74), s. 22 ; Re Hughes, [1906] 2 Ch. 642).

R. 20 Eq. 191, compare Oakley v Smith (1759), 2 Bro. C. C. ; Amb 368 ; Church v Edwards (1787), 2 Bro. C. C. 180 ; 3 Preston on Conveyancing, 90).

466. Where the Lord Chancellor or the court is substituted as protector, he or it has power, on the application of the tenant in tail, to consent to a disposition by the tenant in tail, but it must be such as he or it approves (t). If the Lord Chancellor or the court is protector jointly with any other person, such other person must consent in the statutory manner (u). In giving consent, the court will consider what, with reference to the interests of the family, it would be proper for the tenant for life to do, and will endeavour to protect the objects of the settlement rather than give any benefit to one member of the family to the exclusion of the others (a).

467. The owner of the prior estate continues to be protector of the settlement notwithstanding that such estate has been charged or incumbered by him or the settlor or otherwise, or that the whole of the rents and profits are exhausted in payment of charges and incumbrances; and the office of protector remains vested in the original owner of the estate after he has ceased to be entitled to it, whether by absolute disposition, or by bankruptcy or insolvency, or by any other act or default (b).

is supplied by implication (Re Warner's right (1843), 1 Ph 258, Re Gravenor (1847), 1 De G & Sm 700). The provision applies where a married woman, not entitled to her separate use, is protector jointly with her husband and the husband is convicted of felony (Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c 74), s 33). The reference to infants is intended apparently to make the Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c 74), apply where an infant has been specially appointed protector (for this seems to be possible notwithstanding the query in Gooden, 13 J Property Statutes p 206, note (1)), but not where an infant is protected by virtue of fee estate. In this case consent cannot be given, and see title INFANTS AND CHILDREN, Vol XVII, p 52.

In these cases consent was refused on the principle stated in the text, supra, but it has been given where the object was to advance the son of the lunatic (Re Fea Grant v. Fea (1834), 5 My & K 245), or to enable the tenant in tail to disentail for the purpose of securing repayment to the estate of the lunatic tenant for life of an allowance out of surplus income, but only so far as to let in the charge (Re Sparrow (a Person of Unsound Mind) (1882), 20 Ch D 320, C A.; Re Beralde (1881), 50 L T 653, C A.), and generally where the arrangement is one which might have been reasonably made by the lunatic (Re Blewitt (1856), 6 De G M & G 187, 198, C A.), and see title LUNATICS AND PERSONS OF UNSOUND MIND, Vol XIX, pp 418, 449.

But where an estate under a settlement was disposed of before the 31st December, 1833, the person who would under the old practice have made the tenant to the piece, that is, the owner for the time being of the first estate of freehold (see p 247, ante), was protector under the statute (Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c 74), s 29; see Corrall v. Cattell (1839), 4 M & W 734; Cattell v. Corrall (1839), 3 Y & C (ex) 413; 1 Hayes, Introduction to Conveyancing, 177, Sugden, Real Property Statutes, 2nd ed., p 203, note (2)). A disposition of lands (c) under the statute (d) can only be effected by deed, but subject to this it can be effected by any assurance which would be appropriate for making the disposition if the tenant in tail had an estate at law in fee simple absolute (e). A mere declaration by deed, and a fortiori a disposition by a tenant in tail resting only in contract, either express or implied or otherwise, and whether supported by valuable consideration or not, is of no force at law or in equity under the statute (d), notwithstanding that it is made or evidenced by deed (f).

of the life estate was protector of the settlement, and hence the intermediate estate tail could not be disentailed, and the remainder or reversion barred, without his consent. In the case of such a disposition made since the 31st December, 1833, the assignor remains protector, and can concur to bar the remainder as against his assignee (Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c 74), s 30; Sugden, Real Property Statutes, 2nd ed., pp 203, 204).

(e) Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c 74), s 40; and see title DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS, Vol X., p 365. No particular form of disentailing deed is necessary, it is sufficient that the deed would, if the grantor had been seised in fee simple have passed that estate (Nelson v Agnew (1871), 6 L. R. Eq 232). Hence a declaration of trust is not sufficient (Green v Paterson (1880), 32 Ch D 95, 103, C. A.; Carter v Carter, [1896] 1 Ch 62, 67, 69). For form of disentailing deed see Encyclopaedia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. V., pp 434 et seq., and see 1 Hayes, Introduction to Conveyancing, 154. If the deed conveys "unto and to the use of" a trustee, it operates as a grant at common law, and the trustee should execute it (see title DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS, Vol X., p 400); otherwise it may be avoided by his disclaimer (see ibid, p 409; Pearcock v Eastland (1870), L. R. 10 Eq 17, see Small Brothers, Ltd v Bethell, [1902] 2 Ch 523, 540, C. A.); though in such a case the legal estate might revert in the tenant in tail as an estate in fee simple (see Mallott v Wilson, [1902] 2 Ch 494). Where the deed operates under the Statute of Uses (1535) 27 Hen 8, c 10, it is not necessary that the grantee to uses should execute it (Nelson v Agnew, supra).

(f) Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c 74), ss 40, 47. Similarly, before 1834 the issue in tail was not bound to complete a contract made by his ancestor to bar the entail, since his claim was paramount per formam doni (1-G v Day (1749), 1 Ves Sen 218, 221; Hinton v Hinton (1755), 2 Ves Sen 631, 634; Frank v Marwood, [1839], 2 Bear 115, 126), notwithstanding that the ancestor had received the purchase-money and a decree had been made against him (Wile v Lower (undated), cited in For v. Crane (1693), 2 Vern. 304, 306, and apparently referred to in Powell v Powell (1709), Prec Ch 278, A-G v. Day, supra). An order for specific performance can still be made against the tenant in tail (Banks v Small (1837), 36 Ch D 716, C. A.), and he can be required to execute a disentailing deed, provided that this was really contemplated by the contract (Davis v Tollemache (1856), 2 Jur (N. S.) 1181; see Pryce v Bury (1853), 2 Drew. 11; and see also title SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE). A married woman who has covenanted to settle after-acquired property is not bound to execute a disentailing deed of an after-acquired estate tail (Hilbers v Parkinson (1883), 25 Ch D 200, 204. Re Dunsany's Settlement, Not v Dunsany, [1906] 1 Ch. 578, C. Where an infant is tenant in tail in possession, and a disentailing deed requires to be executed in order to carry out an order of the court, he is declared a trustee within the meaning of the Trustee Act, 1893(k), and a person is appointed to convey on his behalf(l). But this is only when, for some special reason, it is necessary to bind the infant's estate, and the court has jurisdiction to do so. Ordinarily, under a strict settlement, no disentail can be effected until the first tenant in tail has attained the age of twenty-one(m).

The committee or quasi-committee of a lunatic may be authorised by the court to bar the entail of lands of which a lunatic is tenant in tail(n). An alien can bar an entail(o), and so can a convict(p); but a bankrupt's estate can be barred only by his trustee(q).

(c) Consent of Protector

471 If at the time when a tenant in tail, who is not entitled to the remainder or reversion in fee immediately expectant on the estate tail, is desirous of disentailing the land there is a protector of the settlement, the consent of the protector is necessary to make the deed effectual to bar the remainders or reversion after the estate tail, but it is not necessary in order to bar the issue in tail or other persons claiming by force of the estate tail (g). But if the tenant in tail is himself entitled to the remainder or reversion in fee immediately following the estate tail, this is included in the disposition so far as is necessary to give effect to it without any consent of the protector (h).

Consent of

necessary.

472. No control or fetter can be imposed on the protector of a settlement in regard to giving his consent, and any agreement by him to withhold his consent is void. He is not a trustee in respect of his power of consent, and in giving or withholding it he is subject to no control of a court of equity (i). Nor can any transaction between him and the tenant in tail be impeached on the ground that it is a fraud on the power of consent (k).

be acknowledged before enrolment applies to deeds under the Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c 74) (ibid, s 73). If the disentail is by bargain and sale (see p 293, post), the enrolment takes the place of enrolment under the Enrolment of Bargains and Sales Act (stat (1536) 27 Hen 8, c 16), see the Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c 74), s 41, but such enrolment does not take the place of registration under the statutes relating to registration of deeds (see p. 301, post) or to registration of title (see p 308, post).

The consent of the tenant for life to the disentailment does not necessarily prevent his assenting to a subsequent exercise of powers under the settlement, such as a power of sale and exchange, which raise uses paramount to the estate tail (Hill v Pritchard (1854), Kay, 394) of the disentailing deed (l). In the latter case, the separate deed must be enrolled at or before the time when the disentailing assurance is enrolled (m); and it is treated as an absolute and unqualified consent, unless in such deed of consent the protector refers to the particular disentailing deed and confines his consent to that (n). A consent once given is irrevocable (o).

(l) Defects not made Good in Equity

disentail

474. No defects in the execution of the power of disposition given to tenants in tail, or of the power of consent given to protectors, can be made good in equity, nor in any circumstances can the want of execution of such powers of disposition and consent be supplied. When the estates are legal, the disentailment is not effectual unless it is good at law; and when the estates are equitable, all the steps must have been taken which would have been necessary if the estates had been legal (p). Hence, attempted dispositions by a tenant in tail, which fail to bar the estate tail under the statute through some defect, cannot be validated upon the principles applicable to defective execution of powers; and contracts to execute disentailing assurances cannot be treated in equity as being equivalent to actual disentailing deeds as against the issue in tail and remaindermen (q). But the court is not precluded from enforcing, as against the tenant in tail, a contract entered into by him which requires the estate tail to be barred (r); and the statutory prohibition of equitable interference does not extend to rectification, so that a disentailing deed, although completed by enrolment, can be rectified on the ground of mistake (s).

(t) Where the reversion was in the Crown, a recovery was a bar to the

or in defeasance of the estate tail; but the rights of persons in respect of estates prior to the estate tail are not affected (n). A shifting clause which, in a certain event, substitutes C. for B as tenant in tail in remainder expectant on the death of A, the tenant for life, takes effect in defeasance of, and not in priority to, B's estate; hence it is liable to be barred by a disentailing deed executed by B. with A's consent (i).

The disposition does not, however, operate to destroy the interest of the tenant in tail, his interest continues, although by virtue of his statutory power he is enabled to make it perpetual (n)

(n) interest of tenant in tail

The effect of the disentail is commensurate with the estate out of which the estate tail and the remainders were originally derived, and, if this was a determinable fee, the estate arising under the disentail cannot last longer than that fee (x).

476. Where a tenant in tail makes a disposition under the statute by way of mortgage, or for any other limited purpose, its effect in barring the issue in tail and remaindermen depends on whether an estate is created in favour of the grantee and the nature of the estate. The three statutory rules are as follows—

Dispositions for limited purposes

(1) If an estate is created, then, unless the estate is within rule (2), the disposition operates, to the extent of that estate, as an absolute bar at law and in equity both to the issue in tail and the remaindermen, and this cannot be prevented by any contrary intention, whether expressed or implied, in the disposition (a). Consequently

(1) creating an estate, issue in tail, but apparently not to the Crown (Anon (1536), Dyer, 32 a), though this was not clearly settled (Com Dig tit, Estates (B 31): see A-G v Richmond (Duke) (No 2), [1907] 2 K B 940, 974, and authorities cited in argument, ibid, at pp 963, 969). The Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c 74), s 15, expressly bars the Crown

(i) Ibid, s 15, Re Skerrett (1842), 2 Dr & War 585

(v) Milbank v Vane, [1893] 3 Ch 79, C. A., and as to a recovery under the old law, see Scarborough (Earl) v Doe d Savile (1836), 3 Ad & El 2, 397, Ex Ch. Generally, substituted estates tail will be barred by the disentailing deed if they take effect either after the determination or in defeasance of the original estate tail (Chidiquan (Lady) v Curzon Howe, [1901] 2 Ch 479, 486). But where a tenant for life joins with the tenant in tail in remainder to bar the entail, and the estate is resettled so as to restore the old life estate, the powers annexed to it take effect in priority to the estate tail and accordingly continue to be exercisable (Roper v Hallifax (1817), 8 Taunt. 845, Sugden, Powers, 8th ed., pp 71, 73, Hill v. Pritchard (1854), Kay, 394, Re Wright's Trustees and Marshall (1884), 28 Ch D. 93). A power of appointment which is intended to be precedent to the estate tail—e.g., a power to A. to appoint, and in default of, or until appointment, to B in tail—is apparently not affected by a disentail by B. (Sugden, Real Property Statutes, p 194)

(w) Lalford (Lord) v A-G (1867), L R 2 H L 63, 70, Northumberland (Duke) v A-G, [1905] A. C. 406, 410.

(x) In this respect the disentailing deed has the same effect as a recovery under the former law (see p 248, ante, Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p. 316). As to determinable fees, see pp 170 et seq, ante.

(a) Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 71), s 21. According to the equitable rule, a mortgage by a donee of a power, or by a husband and wife of the wife's non-separate estate, does not disturb the beneficial title further than is necessary to give effect to the object of the disposition (Jackson v. Innes (1819), 1 Bl 104, H L; Plomley v Felton (1888), 14

SECT. 1.
Estates
Tail.

a mortgage in fee simple made by a disposition under the statute operates as a complete disentailing deed, the reservation of the equity of redemption to the tenant in tail giving him an estate free from the claims of the issue in tail and the remaindermen; and if it is intended to preserve these claims, this cannot be done by declaration to that effect, but the equity of redemption must be limited so as to recreate them out of the enlarged estate of the tenant in tail (b).

(2) estate
pur autre vie or for years,

(2) If an estate is created, but this is only an estate pur autre vie or for years absolute or determinable, then the disposition, though effectual at law to bar the entail to the extent of the estate, is in equity a bar only so far as is necessary to give full effect to the mortgage or other limited purpose; and this is so notwithstanding any intention to the contrary, expressed or implied, in the deed of disposition (c).

(3) creating only an interest or charge.

(3) If an interest, charge, lien, or incumbrance is created without the support of any term of years, absolute or determinable, or any greater estate, then, as under rule (2), the disposition is in equity a bar only so far as is necessary to give full effect to the interest, charge, lien, or incumbrance, and this is so notwithstanding any intention to the contrary, expressed or implied, in the deed of disposition (d).

(iv) Estates Tail which cannot be Barred Tenant in tail after possibility of issue extinct

477. A tenant in tail after possibility of issue extinct (e) cannot exercise the statutory power of disposition (f). He has ceased to have an estate of inheritance, and is for purposes of alienation in the position of tenant for life (g), hence he cannot bar the remaindermen

App Cas 61, P. C.). But neither at law nor in equity was the effect of a fine or recovery by a tenant in tail as a bar measured by the declared purpose of the assurance (Hayes, Introduction to Conveyancing, 4th ed., p. 164). The statute excludes the equitable rule (see Sugden, Real Property Statutes, pp. 199, 200; Plemley v Felton (1888), 14 App Cas. 61, P. C.), and makes the estate the measure of the bar, save where the estate is such as to fall within rule (2) (see the text, supra).

(b) Hayes, Introduction to Conveyancing, 4th ed., p. 165

(c) Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c. 74), s. 21. Where, therefore, the conveyance is to A. for the life of B., or for ninety-nine years if B. shall so long live, or for 1,000 years, and the object is to effect a limited purpose such as a mortgage, the bar operates only to the extent of satisfying that purpose, and this resulting beneficial interest is subject to the entail (Hayes, Introduction to Conveyancing, 4th ed., p. 164). This provision has been used so as to create a mortgage of the estate tail of a lunatic without interfering further than is necessary with the remaindermen (Re Pares (1876), 2 Ch. D. 61, C. A., see Re Pares, Lillingston v. Pares (1879), 12 Ch. D. 333, C. A.).

(d) Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c. 74), s. 21. In this case no estate is created, but it is assumed that the incumbrance is created under the statute; hence there must be an enrolled deed, and it has been pointed out that the case is not likely to occur (Hayes, Introduction to Conveyancing, 4th ed., p. 165). As regards the creation of a lien, it does not appear how this can occur.

SECT 1 Estates Tail.

Estates
granted by the Crown

Estates limited by private Act

478 An estate tail which has been granted by the Crown in consideration of money or services, the reversion remaining in the Crown, cannot be barred (h). In certain cases where estates have been granted for eminent services, or where family arrangements are confirmed by Parliament, holders of the estates who are tenants in tail are forbidden by statute to bar the entail (i). In such cases the statutory power (j) of disposition is excluded.

and see p 175, ante. Women who were, at the passing of the Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c 74), tenants in tail ex provisione within stat (1495) 11 Hen 7, c. 20 (repealed by the Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c 74), s 16), were restrained from disentailing, except with the consent required by stat (1495) 11 Hen. 7, c 20, for a fine or recovery (Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c 74), s 16, see Carson's Real Property Statutes, 11th ed., p 277). The Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c 74), does not enable the issue in tail to dispose of his expectant interest; see ibid, s 20.

(h) Stat (1543) 34 & 35 Hen 8, c 20. After a preamble reciting that the Crown had given or granted or otherwise provided hereditaments for subjects for estates tail in order that the recompense for services might extend to the heirs in tail, and that questions had arisen whether feigned recoveries of such hereditaments, whereof the reversion or remainder was in the Crown at the time of recovery, should bind the heirs in tail, this statute provides that no such feigned recovery by assent of the parties against any such tenant in tail of hereditaments, whereof the reversion or remainder at the time of the recovery shall be in the Crown, shall bind the heirs in tail. The effect of the preamble is to confine the statute to cases where the grant is in consideration of services (Co Litt. 372 b; Perkins d Fowe v Sewell (1768), 1 Wm Bl 654, see Wiseman's Case (1585), 2 Co Rep 15 a), consequently, in the absence of consideration, the statute does not prevent the tenant in tail from barring the entail (Graydon (Duke) v London and Birmingham Rail Co (1838), 5 Bing (N C) 27), but, provided the grant is not on the face of it voluntary, consideration will be presumed at a distance of time (Perkins d Fowe v Sewell, supra, Robinson v Giffard, [1903] 1 Ch 865); and the statute extends to cases where, in consideration of services rendered, the Crown procures a third person to grant the estate tail, limiting the remainder to the Crown. This assumes that the Crown purchases the fee simple with a view to the estate tail being granted (Co Litt 372 b (sixth point); and see, generally, as to the statute Co Litt 372 b, 373 a; and notes to Perkins d Fowe v Sewell, supra, Carson's Real Property Statutes, 11th ed., p 278). All cases to which this statute applies are excepted from the statutory power of disposition under the Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c 74), see s 18.

SECT. 1.

(v.) *Base Fees.Estates Tail.

Nature of
estate.

479. A base fee is a fee which is limited in duration and admits of an absolute fee existing by way of remainder upon it; but during its continuance it is descendible, like an absolute fee, to the heirs general (k). It cannot be created by limitation, but arises from a disposition by a tenant in tail, which, though purporting to create an absolute fee, is ineffectual to bar either the remainders only, or both the issue in tail and the remainders (l).

Creation by ineffectual
disposition

480. Where, at the time when a tenant in tail makes a disposition in fee simple under the statute, there is a protector of the settlement, and the consent of the protector is not given in accordance with the statute, the effect of the disposition is to bar the issue in tail but not the remainders, and thereby to create in favour of the grantee a base fee (m). This base fee continues as long as there are issue in tail who would have inherited under the entail if they had not been barred, but on failure of such issue the base fee determines and the next estate in remainder takes effect in possession.

Power to enlarge to fee simple absolute.

481. After the tenant in tail has created a base fee he has power to dispose of the lands by assurance under the statute as against all persons, including the Crown, whose estates are to take effect after the determination or in defeasance of the base fee, and, if he does so, the base fee is thereby enlarged into a fee simple absolute (n);

see p. 250, ante. To exclude the statutory power of disposition the restraint imposed by the private Act must be clear. A restraint will not be implied because the object of the Act appears to forbid a power of alienation (A-G v. Richmond (Duke) (No 2), [1907] 2 K. B. 940, 981). A tenant in tail who cannot bar the entail can exercise the powers of a tenant for life under the Settled Land Acts (see title SETTLEMENTS), save where the land was purchased with money provided by Parliament in consideration of public services (Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 58 (1) (i), (iii.), (vii.)). As to the exception, see Re Marlborough's (Duke) Blenheim Estates (1892), 8 T. L. R. 582. As to estate Bills, generally, see title PARLIAMENT, Vol. XXI., pp. 759, 760.

(k) See Seymour's Case (1612), 10 Co. Rep. 95 b, 97 b, 98 a; Co. Litt. 18, Walsingham's Case (1579), 2 Plowd. 547, Ex. Ch. "A base fee is where A. has a good and absolute estate of fee simple in land, and B. has another estate of fee in the same land, which shall descend from heir to heir, but which is base in respect of the fee of A., as being younger than the fee of A., and not of absolute perpetuity as the fee of A. is" (ibid., at p. 557; see Challinor, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p. 325).

(l) For a list of possible base fees both under the old and the present law, see Challinor, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., pp. 326—330.

(m) Fines and Recoveries Act, 1533 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74), s. 34. For the purposes of the statute, the expression "base fee" means exclusively the estate in fee simple into which an estate tail is converted where the issue in tail are barred, but persons claiming by way of remainder or otherwise are not barred (ibid., s. 1).

(n) Ibid., s. 19. The tenant in tail can exercise this power notwithstanding that he has conveyed the base fee to a purchaser, and a covenant by him to do so can be specifically enforced against him (Bankes v. Small (1887), 36 Ch. D. 716, (C. A.)). In the event of the tenant in tail refusing to execute the deed it seems that a vesting order may be made under the Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 53), s. 31 (Re Montagu, Faber v. Montagu, [1898] 1 Ch. 549, see title TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES); or, perhaps, a person may be appointed to execute the deed under the Judicature Act, but so long as there is a protector of the settlement, he cannot exercise the power without the consent of the protector (o).

SECT. I.

Estates

Tail.

Enlargement
by union of
estates.

482. If a base fee in lands and the remainder or reversion in fee in the same lands become united in the same person, and there is no intermediate estate between them, the base fee is not merged, but is thereupon enlarged into as large an estate as the tenant in tail could have created under the statute, with the consent of the protector, if any, if the remainder or reversion had been vested in any other person; that is, the base fee is usually enlarged into a fee simple absolute (p). Hence the subsequent title to the fee simple is a continuation of the title to the estate tail, and not of the title to the reversion or remainder (q).

483. A base fee of a somewhat different character is also created where a tenant in tail purports to convey the whole of his estate by an assurance not made under the statute. The estate of the assignee is only effectual during the life of the tenant in tail, but he does not, on that account, take only an estate pur autre vie, he takes an estate of inheritance, which, however, is liable to be determined after the death of the tenant in tail by the entry of the heir in tail (r).

base fee by non-statutory disposition)

484. If a tenant in tail creates a voidable estate in favour of a purchaser for valuable consideration, and subsequently makes a disposition of the lands under the statute with the consent of the protector, if any, this latter disposition, whatever may be its object,

Where the tenant in tail is a married woman who has married since the 31st December, 1882 (see Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 75)), the deed enlarging the base fee does not require acknowledgment or the concurrence of the husband under the Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74), s. 40 (Re Drummond and Davie's Contract, [1891] 1 Ch. 524; see title HUSBAND AND WIFE, Vol. XVI, p. 381). As to the power of a trustee in bankruptcy to enlarge a base fee vested in the former tenant in tail who has become bankrupt, see Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74), ss. 57, 58, 60, 61, title BANKRUPTCY AND INSOLVENCY, Vol. II, p. 121. As to the enlargement of a base fee into a fee simple under the Statutes of Limitation, see the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 57), s. 6, title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, Vol. XIX, p. 136.

(o) Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74), s. 35.

(q) Under the old law a fine resulted in merger and let in incumbrances on the reversion (Shelburne (Earl) v. Buddulph (1748), 6 Bro. Pail. Cas. 356), a recovery enlarged the estate tail into a fee simple, and shut out incumbrances on the reversion. The statute adopts the latter course (Hayes, Introduction to Conveyancing, 4th ed., p. 168).

Stapilton* (1739), 1 Atk. 2, 8. This appears to be settled, but Littleton speaks of the assurance by tenant in tail as giving only an estate for the life of the tenant in tail, whether the assurance was by deed with livery of seisin (Littleton's Tenures, ss. 613, 650), or by grant only (Littleton's Tenures, ss. 668, 617), see Fines (Case of) (1602), 3 Co. and whatever may be the extent of the estate thereby intended to be created, has the effect of confirming the voidable estate to its full extent, except as against persons having claims prior to the estate tail; and, if there is a protector and he does not consent, the voidable estate is confirmed to the extent of the base fee which the tenant in tail could create without such consent. If, however, the statutory disposition is made to a subsequent purchaser for valuable consideration, who has not express notice of the voidable estate, the voidable estate is not confirmed against him and his successors in title (s).

SUB-SECT 5 -Devolution on Death.

Devolution
upon heir in
tail,

485. A tenant in tail has no power of testamentary disposition over the estate, and if he has not executed a disentailing deed, it devolves upon his death on the heir in tail designated by the nature of the estate. The heir is ascertained in accordance with the rules for ascertaining the heir general so far as these are consistent with the form of the limitation (t). The estate devolves immediately on the heir in tail, and does not vest in the first instance in the legal personal representatives of the deceased tenant in tail (a).

origin.

486. At common law an interest for a term of years did not originally confer an estate in the land. Between lessor and lessee there was only a relation of contract, with the result that, if the lessee was evicted, his remedy was to recover compensation from the lessor, and though it was afterwards held that he could recover the land itself, the interest in the land which he thereby acquired was liable to be defeated by a collusive recovery suffered by the lessor. This liability was partially removed by the Statute of

(s) Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c 74), s. 38. The proviso to ibid., s. 38, introduced a change in the former law under which the subsequent disentail necessarily confirmed a previous voidable assurance (Oapel's Case (1593), 1 Co Rep 61 b; and see the cases cited in Carson's Real Property Statutes, 2nd ed., p 294). Under the proviso, the rights of subsequent purchasers for valuable consideration without notice are preserved. The disposition referred to in the proviso need not be contained solely in the enrolled deed. The term covers that and all other instruments by which the arrangement with the purchaser is carried out (Grocher v. Wayne (1864), 5 B & S 697, and as to the previous law, see ibid., per BLACKBURN, J., at pp 718, 719). A disentailing assurance by the tenant in tail operates to confirm the voidable estate, notwithstanding his intermediate bankruptcy, if there have been no dealings by his trustee in bankruptcy inconsistent with this result (Hankey v. Martin (1883), 49 L. T. 560).

(t) See title DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, Vol. XI, p. 12.

(a) See Land Transfer Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c 65), s. 1. The term "real estate" used in ibid., s. 1, is wide enough to include estates tail, but the effect of the provision is limited by the words "notwithstanding any testamentary disposition" (see titles DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, Vol. XI., pp. 4, note (n), 12, note (c); EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, Vol. XIV., p. 238.)

Gloucester (b), and more completely by a later statute (c). The estate in the land which the termor thenceforward enjoyed is therefore in effect the creation of statute (d).

SECT. 2.
Estates for Years.

487. It is essential to the creation of a term of years that it should have a fixed beginning and a fixed ending (e), though, since the term does not confer an estate of freehold, it can be made to commence at a future date (f). To complete the estate of the termor, actual entry is necessary; until entry he has only an interesse terminum (g), and when he has entered his possession is concurrent with and supports the seisin of the person entitled to the immediate freehold (h). Consequently a limitation for a term of years, and subject thereto to an existing grantee for an estate of freehold, does not place the freehold in abeyance, but vests it immediately in the grantee (i).

Essentials:
(1) term;
(2) entry

488 Terms of years were created originally either under contracts of tenancy or contracts of mortgage (k). When they had come to confer an estate in the land, they were created also to serve the purposes of settlements (l). Theoretically the nature of the interest which they confer is the same, whatever is their object. Actually, however, the nature is quite distinct. Under a tenancy term the termor or lessee pays rent to the lessor; a mortgage or settlement term is intended to give the termor an interest in the ownership, and to enable him, if necessary, to receive the rent from the tenant. Tenancy terms may be either short occupation terms—twenty-one years or less—or longer terms for mining or building purposes, the length, in general, not exceeding ninety-nine years in the latter case, with shorter terms in mining leases; mortgage and settlement terms are for long periods—200 years or more—but they have usually served their purpose and ceased to exist before their natural expiration. Mortgage terms may be either terms created by the freeholder, this form of mortgage being now confined to a few special cases (m), or mortgages of terms created for raising portions and the like, or terms created by way of sub-demise of leasehold property (n).

Terms of years and mortgage and settlement terms distinguished.

SECT. 2.

Estates for Years.Personal estate.Limitation to persons in succession.

489. A term of years is personal estate, and, if it devolves upon death, necessarily passes to the executors and administrators of the lessee, and not to his heirs; and this is so notwithstanding that the term is expressly limited to the termor and his heirs (o).

490. Moreover, at law, the term cannot by assurance inter vivos be limited to persons in succession; an assignment of the term vests the entire term in the assignee, notwithstanding that it purports to be made to the assignee for his life only (p); nor can successive interests be created inter vivos by executory assurances, since the Statute of Uses (q) does not apply to leasehold interests (r). But, in equity, successive interests in chattels real are recognised, and, if the legal term is vested in trustees, trusts of the term can be effectually declared in favour of persons in succession (s). Such interests can also be created by will without the intervention of trustees, since the doctrine of executory devises applies to chattels real as well as to freehold property (t). Hence, upon a devise of leaseholds to one for life with remainder to another person, the remainder is well disposed of and takes effect by way of executory devise (u), and this is so also where the devise over is in favour of a person not in esse or ascertained at the date of the will or of the death of the testator (a). The union of the life interest in the term and the freehold reversion does not effect a merger so as to destroy the executory interest in the term (b).

But the rule that a term may be limited by way of trust,

(o) Littleton's Tenures, s. 740, and see titles EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, Vol. XIV, p. 230, LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII, pp. 598, 599.

(p) This follows from the consideration that at law personal property is regarded as the subject not of estates, but of absolute ownership only; hence, whatever limitation is placed on an assignment of a chattel real—e.g. an assignment of a term to A for life—the absolute interest passes (2 Preston, Abstracts of Titles, 5). But a lease may be granted originally to A for years, if he so long lives, and then to B, since B's remainder takes effect as a future lease (Wright d. Plowden v. Cartwright (1757), 1 Burr. 282), and see titles LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII, p. 460, note (v); PERSONAL PROPERTY, Vol. XXII, p. 413.

(a) Colton v. Heath (1638), 1 Eq. Cas. Abr. 191, pl. 2; see Fearn, Contingent Remainders, pp. 402–404. There was formerly a distinction between the bequest of the use of a chattel real for life with remainder over, which was good, and a similar bequest of the term itself in which the remainder was void, but this has long been obsolete (Fearn, Contingent Remainders, p. 402). As to the application of the rule against perpetuities, see title PERPETUITIES, Vol. XXII, pp. 313, 335, 336.

or of executory bequest to persons in succession is subject to the further rule that an interest analogous to an estate tail cannot be created in chattels real. Hence any words which, whether by express limitation or by implication, would create an estate tail in freeholds give an absolute interest in chattels real (c). The donee may accordingly dispose of them as he pleases, and, if he does not dispose of them they go to his executors and not to his issue (d).

Further, though the rule in Shelley's Case (e) does not in strictness apply to chattels real (f), yet the analogy of the rule is so far followed that a gift to A. for life, and after his death to the heirs of his body, vests in him the absolute interest (g). But if there are

Shelley's
Case

(c) Leventhorpe v Ashbie (1635), 1 Roll Abr 831, pl 1, Tudor, L. C. Real Prop, 4th ed., p 832, Seale v Seale (1715), 1 P Wms 291, Plitham (Lady C) v Gregory (1760), 3 Bro Parl Cas 204, Doncaster v Doncaster (1856), 3 K & J 26, Thorne (Earl) v Waterford (Marquis) (1560), 1 Do G F. & J 613, 625, C. A. Thus, a devise of a term to one and his offspring gives the absolute interest (Young v Davies (1863), 2 Drew & Sm 167). Hence leaseholds directed to be settled as nearly as possible in accordance with a strict settlement of realty cannot be settled beyond the first tenant in tail (Fordyce v Ford (1795), 2 Ves 536, 539, Re Johnson's Trusts (1866), L. R. 2 Eq 716), and see title PERSONAL PROPERTY, Vol XXII, p 414. Formerly the doctrine did not apply where the words of the devise would, as to freeholds, create an estate tail by implication only (e.g., where, before the Wills Act, 1837 (7 Will 4 & 1 Vict c 26), there was a devise over after failure of issue of the first devisee (Atkinson v Hutchinson (1734), 3 P Wms 258, Doe d Lyde v Lyde (1787), 1 Term Rep 593, 596, and, as to such limitations, see note (h), p 245, ante, Knight v Ellis (1789), 2 Bro C. C. 570, 578); but it was settled that it applied both to express and implied limitations (Simmons v Simmons (1836), 8 Sm. 22; Ex parte Wynch (1854), 5 Do G M & G 188, 208, C. A.; Webster v Parr (1858), 26 Beav 236, Re Andrew's Will (1859), 27 Beav 608). In this case a devise over after failure of issue was void, but if the failure of issue was restricted to the time of the death of the first devisee, the implication corresponding to an estate tail did not arise, the first devisee (unless the limitation was to him for life only) took absolutely in the first instance, but subject to a valid executory devise over if he died without leaving issue (Campbell v Harding (1831), 2 Russ & M 390, 401). Under the Wills Act, 1837 (7 Will 4 & 1 Vict c 26), s. 29, failure of issue is restricted to failure at the death of the ancestor, and an implied estate tail in freeholds, or absolute interest in personalty, cannot thus arise, but ibid, s. 29, does not apply to a gift over on failure of "heirs of the body," and to this case the old rule applies (Re Sallery (1861), 11 L. Ch. R. 236), and see Jarman on Wills, 6th ed., p 1204). As to successive limitations of personal estate, where the first legatee does not survive the testator, see Re Lowman, Devonish v Pester, [1895] 2 Ch. 348, C. A.; and see, generally, title WILLS, and, as to the effect of the rule against perpetuities, see title PERPETUITIES, Vol XXII, pp 347 et seq, 350, note (a).

D 146, 151, this was treated as an actual application of the rule in Shelley's Case; and see title PERSONAL PROPERTY, Vol. XXII, pp 414, note (l), 415. It is the same where the first devise is of the profits of the land for life (Butterfield v Butterfield (1748), 1 Ves. Sen. 154). The result is not prevented by the life estate indications in the settlement or will that the words "heirs of the body" are not words of limitation, but designate a particular person or persons, the donee takes for life only, and the persons so designated take by purchase (h); and, if, with like indications, the gift is to one for life and then to his issue, the result is the same, and the issue take as purchasers (i).

Rules governing limitations.

491. The executory devise of a term and the limitation of the trusts of a term are governed by the same rules (h); and, if real and personal property are devised by the same words, these rules are followed as to the personal estate, although the consequence is that the limitations of the personal estate may have to be construed differently from those of real estate (l).

SUB-SECT. 2.—*Enlargement of Long Terms*Nature of terms capable of being enlarged.

492. In certain cases the residue of a long term, whether the immediate reversion is the freehold or not (m), may be enlarged into a fee simple. For this purpose the following conditions must be satisfied (n).—

(1) The term as originally created must have been for not less than 300 years.

(2) The unexpired residue must be for not less than 200 years, but this may subsist either in the whole or only part of the land comprised in the original term.

(3) There must be no trust or right of redemption affecting the term in favour of the freeholder or other reversioner.

(4) Either there must be no rent at all or merely a nominal rent—that is, a peppercorn or other rent having no money value (o)— being given to a married woman for her separate use (Venulam (Earl) v. Bathurst (1843), 13 Sim 371).

(h) See Hodgeson v. Bussey (1740), 2 Atk 89, Fearne, Contingent Remainders, p. 495. The test is whether "heirs of the body" or other words, such as "sons" or "children," are to include all the heirs or sons successively or not; if all are included, the words define the interest of the first taker (Ex parte Wynch (1854), 5 De G M & G 188, 208, C A; Tynone (Earl) v. Waterford (Marquis) (1860), 1 De G F & J 613, C A ("children in succession"), Comfort v. Brown (1878), 10 Ch. D. 146 ("sons successively in tail")). But it may appear from the will—e.g., from a discretionary power of maintaining the heirs of the body—that there is a co-existing set of persons, and then the statutory next of kin descended from the first devisee may take as purchasers (see Pattenden v. Hobson (1853), 17 Jur 406, Re Jeaffreson's Trusts (1866), L. R. 2 Eq 276); similarly when there is a direction for division (Symers v. Jobson (1848), 16 Sim 267); and, where the context shows that the line of descent contemplated is incompatible with an estate tail, the limitations will give a life interest only to the first devisee (Dodds v. Dodds (1860), 11 I Ch R 374, C A).

(5) The term must not be either a term liable to be determined by re-entry for condition broken, or a term created by sub-demise out of a superior term itself incapable of being enlarged into a fee simple (q).

493. The power to enlarge the term into a fee simple can be exercised by any of the following persons in respect of the land to which he is entitled, whether he is entitled subject to incumbrances or not (r)

By whom
power to enlarge may be exercised.

(1) Any person beneficially entitled in right of the term to possession of any land comprised in the term.

(2) Any person in receipt of income as trustee, in right of the term, or holding the term in trust for sale.

(3) A personal representative in whom the term is vested

494 The power is exercised by the execution of a deed containing a declaration that from and after execution the term shall be enlarged into a fee simple. Thereupon the term is enlarged accordingly, and the person in whom the term was previously vested has a fee simple in the land instead of the term (s); but this estate in fee simple is subject to the same trusts, powers, executory limitations over, rights and equities, and to the same covenants and provisions as to user, and the same obligations, as the term would have been subject to if not enlarged (t). Such estate includes the fee simple in all mines and minerals which, at the time of apparently, Is. (Blalberg v. Keeres, [1906] 2 Ch 175), is a rent having a money value, but not a rent of "one silver penny, if lawfully demanded" (Re Chapman and Hobbs (1885), 29 Ch D 1007, where importance was attached to the words "if lawfully demanded")

(p) The reference to rents being barred by lapse of time appears to be a mistake. So long as the term subsists mere non-payment does not extinguish the rent; this can always be recovered with six years' arrears (Grant v. Ellis (1841), 9 M & W 113; Archbold v. Scully (1861), 9 H L Cas. 360, see title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, Vol XIX, pp 127, 128), but a release may be presumed from non-payment for a length of time (see Telford v. Walsh (1851), 11 C L R 311, Tennent v. Neil (1870), 5 L R C L 418, Ex Ch; Blalberg v. Keeres, supra)

(q) Conveyancing Act 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c 39), s 11.

(s) Ibid, s 65 (2), (3). It is presumed that this fee simple extinguishes the previous reversion in fee simple which existed in the land, and where the enlarged term is a sub-term it extinguishes both the leasehold and the freehold reversion, but it has been suggested that the statutory fee simple is only a base fee, and that the original fee simple subsists by way of remainder upon it (Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed, p 333). Such a base fee could only determine by failure of heirs general, and either the original fee simple would fall into possession, or there would be an escheat to the lord, according as the fee simple exists as a base fee or not.

(t) These covenants may, it seems, be either imposed on the creation of the term as between landlord and tenant, or be imposed on a subsequent assignment of the term as between vendor and purchaser, or otherwise. In the former case the suggested preservation of the original fee simple (see note (s), supra), might be important, since the tenant of such fee simple would be the person to enforce the covenants which are preserved by the statute (see Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed, p. 334)

enlargement, have not been severed in right, or in fact, or under an Inclosure Act or award, from the surface (u).

495. Where the land has been settled according to the same limitations as freehold land so far as the law permits, and no person has become absolutely entitled to the term (x), the fee simple acquired by enlargement of the term follows the freehold limitations; but without prejudice to any conveyance for value previously made by a person having a contingent or defeasible interest in the term (a).

SUB-SECT 3—Satisfied Terms

Nature and purpose of long terms.

496. Long terms of years are created for the purpose of securing the payment of money, usually in connection with the provision of jointure rentcharges and portions under settlements (b). The owner of the estate for the time being usually keeps down the jointure rentcharges out of the income of the estate, and pays off the portions by himself raising money on the estate or from other sources. But, if he fails to do so, the trustees in whom the terms are vested can enter into possession of the estate and themselves pay the rentcharges out of income or raise the portions by mortgage or sale of the term. In general it is not necessary to sell the term, and in due course the purposes for which it was created are satisfied (c), but formerly this did not necessarily mean that the term comes to an end. Provision for determination of the term may be made by a clause of cesser in the settlement, or the term may be intentionally destroyed by merger—that is, by the surrender of the term to the freehold reversioner (c). But under the old practice a term, after it had satisfied its original purpose, might be useful as a protection against incumbrances, and accordingly it was kept on foot with this object and, upon a sale of land, the purchaser had it assigned to a trustee for himself. Thereupon it became attendant on the inheritance, and in the event of any subsequent incumbrances being asserted, it might be set up to defeat them (d). Further, although the term was not assigned to a trustee to attend the inheritance, it was treated, so long as it did not merge, as being attendant on the inheritance for the benefit of all parties entitled, according to their respective estates and interests (e). A term not attendant on the inheritance was a term in gross (f).

(e) See Sugden, Vendors and Purchasers, p. 625. "In regard to terms attendant by implication, it is a general rule, that whenever a term would merge in the inheritance, if united, it shall attend, if in a different person without an express declaration, by implication of law founded on the Statute of Frauds"—that is, by virtue of an implied trust which may arise notwithstanding that statute (Scott v. Fenhoulell (1779), 1 Bro. C. C. 69).

497. The continued existence of satisfied terms is now prevented by statute (g). Every term of years becoming satisfied after the 31st December, 1845 (h), which, either by express declaration or by construction of law (i), becomes attendant upon the inheritance, thereupon absolutely ceases as to the land affected. But a term is not satisfied within the meaning of this provision so long as there remains any useful purpose beneficial to the owner of the term and consistent with the trust on which, at the date of the transaction, the term was held (h), and, though a mere attendant term is merged, it is not so if the termor has made it a security for money, and by the mortgage deed clothed it with an active trust in favour of the mortgagee (i). Where the term and the reversion would merge, the owner can still, by expressing his intention to that effect, keep the term alive as personal estate so that it will pass under a testamentary gift of all the owner's personal property (m).

(h) As regards terms which on the 31st December, 1845, were already attendant on the inheritance, the Satisfied Terms Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Viet c 112), provided that they should cease, but that, where attendant by express declaration, they should afford the same protection against incumbrances as if they had continued to exist after the 31st December, 1845. "The term does not become satisfied within the meaning of the Act of Parliament except the beneficial interest in the whole charge secured by the term and the beneficial interest in the whole estate are united and merged in the same person" (ibid, per JAMES, LJ, at p 189). A term expressly assigned in trust for parties supposed, by mistake, to be entitled to the inheritance is not extinguished by the statute; in such a case it is not attendant either by express declaration or by construction of law (*Doe d Clay v. use was defined to be a trust or confidence not issuing out of the land, but a thing collateral, annexed in privity to the estate and the person of the legal owner, and touching the land; the effect of the use being that the cestui que use should take the profits and that the legal owner should convey according to his directions (p).

(p) Chudleigh's Case (1595), 1 Co Rep 120 a, 121 b; Co Litt 272 b; 1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p 2; Sugden's Gilbert on Uses and Trusts, 3rd ed., p 1. As to the early history of uses, see Brent's Case (1575), 2 Leon. 14, per MANWOOD, J., at p 15; Co Litt 191 a, Butler's note vi. 11; Leake, Law of Property in Land, 2nd ed., pp 78 et seq., title EQUITY, Vol XIII., pp 88, 89. They were introduced for the purpose of avoiding the incidents of legal estates such as the inability of religious houses to accept gifts of land, the liability to forfeiture for treason, and the notoriety of conveyance, and also for defeating creditors. The facility they afforded for evading the Statutes of Mortmain (as to mortmain, see title CORPORATIONS, Vol VIII., pp 367 et seq.) was abolished by stat. (1391) 15 Ric 2, c 5 which enacted that uses should for the future be subject to those statutes, and be forfeitable like lands (1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p 17, see Brent's Case, supra, per DYER, C.J., at p 17). Forfeiture for treason was a common incident during the civil wars of the fifteenth century (Brent's Case, supra, per HARPER, J., at p 16), and to some extent the liability to forfeiture was extended by statute to uses (Brent's Case, supra, at p. 19) and attempts were made to check the disposition of lands to uses in fraud of creditors (stat. (1376—7) 50 Edw 3, c 6, stat. (1377) 1 Ric 2, c 9, stat. (1402) 4 Hen 4, c 7; stat. (1433) 11 Hen 6, c 3). By stat. (1433) 11 Hen 6, c. 3, the cestui que use for life or years was made liable for voluntary waste. But while the cestui que use was thus in various respects made subject to the liabilities of the legal owner, the legislature also intervened to give him the power of alienation, and by stat. (1483—4) 1 Ric 3, c 1, conveyances by cestui que use were made valid against the cestui que use and his heirs, and also against the feoffee to uses (see Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p 386); but the statute did not validate such conveyances against previous conveyances made by the feoffee to uses, and its effect was to introduce conflicts between purchasers under feoffees to uses and those under the cestui que use (1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p 23; Sugden's Gilbert on Uses and Trusts, p 51); moreover, the statute did not extend to uses of estates tail, or for life, or for terms of years (1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., pp 30 et seq.). This restriction continued to be of importance as regards terms of years, inasmuch as the Statute of Uses (27 Hen 8, c 10) applied only where an estate of freehold was vested in the feoffees to uses, and, if the stat. (1483—4) 1 Ric. 3, c 1, had applied to uses of terms of years, it would have remained operative as to these after the Statute of Uses (1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., pp. 32—45; Sugden's Gilbert on Uses and Trusts, p 34, note (2)). Since, however, stat. (1483—4) 1 Ric 3, c. 1, did not apply to terms of years, and uses declared on all other estates are turned into the legal estate by the Statute of Uses (27 Hen 8, c 10), the earlier statute though not repealed until 1863, became inoperative (1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p. 45). For other statutes affecting uses prior to the Statute of Uses (27 Hen 8, c 10), see 1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., pp 15—55. For the raising and continuing of such uses four things were necessary (ibid., pp 56 et seq.): (1) a person capable of being seised to a use, this required that the legal owner for the time being should be privy in estate to the original feoffee to uses, and privy to the confidence reposed in that feoffee, consequently a grantee from him for good consideration without notice was not seised to the use (Brent's Case, supra, per DYER, C.J., at p 19; Chudleigh's Case (1595), 1 Co. Rep 120 a. 122 a; see title EQUITY, Vol XIII., p 89); (2) a person capable of taking the use; as to this it was the rule that all persons capable of taking a conveyance of lands might take the same by way of use

The person seised of the land was complete owner of the land at law (q), and the use was only cognisable in equity, the use before the Statute of Uses (r) being the same as a trust after the Statute of Uses (s).

The Statute
of Uses.

499. The Statute of Uses (t) (in this section frequently referred to as "the statute"), which was passed in order to put an end to this division between the legal and beneficial interest in land and to join the legal estate in the land to the use (u), provides (v)

(see Brent's Case (1575), 2 Leon. 14, 17), and possibly also aliens (1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p. 60) but this was denied (Sugden's Gilbert on Uses and Trusts, p. 43), (3) either a consideration to raise, or a declaration of, the use, see ibid., pp. 45 et seq.; an express declaration of the use made on the occasion of a feoffment did not depend for its effect on the presence or absence of a pecuniary consideration, but where there was no express declaration, the use, if a pecuniary consideration was paid by the feoffee, went to him, otherwise it resulted to the feoffor, who thereupon was in of his old use (1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p. 61), this applied also to grants of existing incorporeal hereditaments; but on a grant of a rentcharge newly created though without declaration of use or payment of consideration, no use resulted. (4) a real hereditament in respect of which the use could arise for personal hereditaments, such as annuities, were not the subject of uses (1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p. 63)

(g) 1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p. 68. Leake, Law of Property in Land, 2nd ed., p. 79; and see title EQUIT, Vol. XIII, pp. 88, 89. The legal estate in the feoffees to uses supported contingent uses, notwithstanding that there was no preceding estate of freehold in the use (Chudleigh's Case (1595), 1 Co. Rep. 120 a, 135 a). But uses could not, before the Statute of Uses (27 Hen. 8, c. 10), be imposed on the estates of limited owners, whether in tail, or for life, or for years (1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., pp. 30 et seq.)

(i) 27 Hen. 8, c. 10

(s) 27 Hen. 8, c. 10. As to the exclusive jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery over uses, see 1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., pp. 5, 20. Leake, Law of Property in Land, 2nd ed., p. 79. Burgess v. Wheate, A-G v. Wheate (1759), 1 Eden, 177, per Lord MANSFIELD, C.J., at pp. 218, 219. A cestui que use, it was said, had neither jus in re nor jus ad rem, that is, neither any estate in the land, nor title to the same, but only a confidence or trust for which he had no remedy at the common law, but only by subpoena in Chancery (Chudleigh's Case, supra, at p. 121 b, 1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p. 66), but such an interest was at an early date treated as an estate in the land (Brent's Case, supra, per DYER, C.J., at p. 17). Uses were inheritable according to the rules of the common law, and were devisable, although, after the Conquest, land was not devisable at law till made so by the Statutes of Wills (1540), 32 Hen. 8, c. 1, (1542–3), 34 & 35 Hen. 8, c. 5 (Chudleigh's Case, supra, at p. 123 b, 1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., pp. 64, 65), and in equity the cestui que use could transfer the use, and at length, under stat. (1483) 4 Ric. 3, c. 1 (see note (p), p. 272, ante), could convey the legal estate.

(u) The King, it was said, being displeased for the loss of wardships and other injuries done—though stat. (1488–9) 4 & 5 Hen. 7, c. 17, had attached the incidents of wardship and relief to uses of lands held by knight service—complained to the judges, who told him that if the possession might be joined to the use all would go well (Brent's Case, supra, per HARPER, J., at p. 17); and as to the intention of the Statute of Uses (27 Hen. 8, c. 10), see, further, ibid., preamble; Chudleigh's Case, supra, at p. 124 a.

that where any person or persons (a) are seised of any hereditaments (a) to the use, confidence, or trust of any other person or persons, or of any body politic, by reason of any agreement, conveyance, or will (b), then every and all such person and persons and bodies politic that have any such use, confidence, or trust in fee simple, fee tail, or for term of life or for years, or otherwise, or in remainder or reverter, shall be deemed in lawful seisin, estate, and possession of the same hereditaments to all intents for the like estates as they have in use, trust, or confidence in the same; and that the estate (c) of a person or persons seised of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments to the use, confidence, and trust of any such person or persons, or of any body politic, shall be deemed to be in him or them that have such use, confidence, or trust in manner corresponding to the use, confidence or trust (d). Where several persons are jointly seised to the use, confidence, or trust of any of themselves, the person or persons that have the use, confidence, or trust are deemed to have in him or them the estate, possession, and seisin in manner corresponding to the use, confidence, or trust (e). The statute does not affect persons who are seised to their own use (f).

Conditions essential to the operation of the Statute
of Uses

(1) seisin to uses,

500 In order that the statute may operate the following conditions must be satisfied —

(1) There must be a person seised to a use or trust (g). Consequently there must be an estate of freehold (h) limited to the grantee to uses, and the statute does not apply where the grantee takes only a term of years (i), though the use may be limited for a

(a) The omission here of "body politic," and its inclusion subsequently (see the text, infra), shows that a corporation cannot be seised to a use (see title CORPORATIONS, Vol VIII, p 373), though it can take the benefit of a use. It is well settled, however, that it can be seised in trust; see Chalmers, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed p 388.

(a) The full words are, "honours, castles, manors, lands, tenements, rents, services, reversions, remainders, or other hereditaments." Copyholds are not within the Statute of Uses (27 Hen 8, c 10) (1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed, p. 241, title COPYHOLDS, Vol VIII, p 91; Baker v White (1875), L. R. 20 Eq 166), nor are personal hereditaments (Sugden's Gilbert on Uses and Trusts, p 485, see p 162, ante). In a devise of freeholds and copyholds (Baker v White, supra), or freeholds and chattels personal together (Re Brooke, Brooke v Brooke, [1894] 1 Ch 43), the statute may apply to the freeholds only. As to the application of the statute to wills, see note (b), infra, note (d), p 281, post.

(b) The full words are, "by reason of any bargain, sale, feoffment, fine, recovery, covenant, contract, agreement, will or otherwise." Wills, it is presumed, were included because a custom to devise existed in certain places, though the power of testamentary disposition was not general.

(i) Anon. (1580), Dyer, 369 a, 1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed, pp 89, 263. It seems that a grantee in tail or for life may be seised to the use of another within the statute (ibid., p. 89, Seymour's Case (1612), 10 Co. Rep. 95 b; but see Sugden's Gilbert on Uses and Trusts, p. 19), and if no use is declared the tenure between grantor and term (l). A grant of a vested remainder carries a sufficient seisin for uses declared of the remainder to be executed by the statute (l).

(2) There must be a cestui que use, and the cestui que use must be different from the grantee to uses. Hence a conveyance made unto and to the use of the grantee and his heirs operates at common law, and not under the statute, to vest the legal estate in the grantee (m); but the express declaration of the use to the grantee prevents a further use being raised in favour of any other person (n). Where the uses are split up into successive estates, and the use of one of them is declared in favour of the grantee to uses, the above rule in general applies, and the grantee takes his use at the common law and not under the statute. This is so where the grant is to one in fee to the use of himself for life or years, with remainders over in the use. The grantee takes his estate for life or years at the common law, and the remainders are executed by the statute (o). But the rule is departed from when special considerations of convenience or other circumstances require it, where, for instance, the uses are carved out into many estates, and the grantee's own grantee (see p. 144, ante) may be a sufficient consideration to prevent a resulting use to the grantor (Brent's Case (1575), 2 Leon. 14, 16; 1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p. 10; Leake, Law of Property in Land, 2nd ed., p. 84).

(2) cestui que use

(m) Samme's Case (1609), 13 Co. Rep. 54, 56; Gwam v. Roe (1693), 1 Salk. 90; Altham (Lord) v. Anglescy (Earl) (1709), Gilb. (en.) 16, 17; Long v. Buckridge (1718), 1 Stra. 106; Doe d. Lloyd v. Passingham (1827), 6 B. & C. 305; Orme's Case (1872), L. R. 8 C. P. 281; Savill Brothers, Ltd. v. Bethell, [1902] 2 Ch. 523, C. A.; 1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., pp. 91, 156. In a fine, no use resulted on want of consideration, and the words "and to the use of," were superfluous; and they were superfluous, too, in a feoffment made upon consideration, but, in a feoffment without consideration, they excluded a resulting trust, and they have the same effect in a conveyance without consideration at the present day. The grantor may himself be a cestui que use, and conveyances to uses might formerly be resorted to in order to enable the grantor to take a new estate in the use as a purchaser. He might thus take a limited estate—for life, for years, or in tail—and his heirs in tail, if they alone were mentioned, might take the use by purchase, but not his heirs general. Under a limitation of the use to the heirs general of the grantor, he himself took as of his old estate (Fennick v. Mitford (1589), 1 Leon. 182, Co. Litt. 22 a; 1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., pp. 131 et seq.), but now, under such a limitation, he is entitled by purchase (Inheritance Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 106), s. 3; see title DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, Vol. XI, p. 8, and see p. 214, ante).

(n) Although the grantee takes at the common law, and the use is to that extent ineffective, yet the use has been in fact declared, and this prevents any further declaration of use which can take effect under the statute (Tipping v. Cosins (1695), Comb. 312, 1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p. 92; and see Doe d. Lloyd v. Passingham, supra; Cooper v. Kynoch (1872), 7 Ch. App. 398). Moreover, the use thus declared can be displaced by a subsequent use limited as a shifting use; see Leake, Law of Property in Land, 2nd ed., p. 94, and authorities there cited.

use is in the midst of them, such as an estate for life placed under other estates, or where the use in favour of the grantee is an estate tail. In these cases the use is executed by the statute—in the former case, on grounds of convenience; in the latter case, because the issue in tail are interested (p).

(8) There must be a use, express or implied, actually created to take effect either immediately or in the future (q). When it is express it must be in writing (r), and it may be declared by the statutory words “use,” “confidence,” or “trust” (s), or by any other words showing an intention that the lands shall be held for the use of, or in trust for, another (t). When no use is expressly declared, a use results to the grantor according to his original estate if the conveyance is without consideration (a), and it results to

(p) Samme's Case (1609), 13 Co. Rep. 54; 1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p. 95 (where some other exceptions to the rule are mentioned). The exceptions have been based on the ground of “a direct impossibility or impertinency for the use to take effect by the common law” (Bacon, Reading upon the Statute of Uses, p. 63; see Chalmers, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p. 390).

(q) 1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p. 97. The declaration of the uses must be certain, and that especially in three things—in the persons in whom, in the lands of which, and in the estates by which, the uses are declared (Shep. Touch., 6th ed., p. 519). As to the construction of declarations of uses, see 1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p. 229; but in general this is according to the ordinary rules of construction (see title DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS Vol. X, pp. 443 et seq).

(r) By virtue of the Statute of Frauds (29 Car. 2, c. 3), s. 7, see title DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS, Vol. X, pp. 374, 422, 428, note (l), 1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p. 210, but the declaration may be by separate deed (ibid., p. 211. Sugden's Gilbert on Uses and Trusts, p. 104, note (7)), though this is not the case in practice. A use arising or resulting by implication or construction of law is excepted from the Statute of Frauds (29 Car. 2, c. 3) (ibid., s. 8).

(s) The common law makes no distinction between trusts and confidences, and uses (Altham (Lord) v. Anglesey (Earl) (1709), Gilb. (ch.) 16, 17), and all these words express the same idea. A conveyance to A. in fee in trust for B. in fee vests the legal estate in B. as much as if the words were ‘to the use of’ (Broughton v. Langley (1703), 2 Salk. 679; Eure v. Howard (1712), Prec. Ch. 338, 345; Rigold v. Phillippus v. Smith (1810), 12 East, 455, 461; Doe d. Leicester v. Biggs (1809), 2 Taunt. 109; 1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p. 97).

(t) Hummerston's Case (1575), cited Dyer, 166 a, note (9); Bettuan's Case (1576), 4 Leon. 22; 1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p. 98; Sugden's Gilbert on Uses and Trusts, p. 139, note (1). But a special trust, i.e., a trust imposing active duties on the grantee, does not operate as a use so as to vest the legal estate under the statute (1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p. 244). For the statute to operate, the cestui que trust must be entitled to possession or receipt of rents and profits, and to direct the disposal of the land (Symson v. Turner (1700), 1 Eq. Cas. Abr. 383; White v. Parker (1835), 1 Bing. (N.C.) 593). Under a limitation, however, by deed “unto and to the use of” trustees, the legal estate is vested by the statute in the trustees whatever be the nature of the trust (Cooper v. Kynock (1872), 7 Ch. App. 398); and, as to the estate taken by trustees under devises, see titles TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES; WILLS.

several conveying parties according to their respective interests in the old use (b); but in the case of a conveyance by a tenant in tail barring his estate tail, the use results to him in fee simple (c). Similarly, if only part of the use which the grantor is enabled to declare is disposed of, the part undisposed of results to him (d), unless the part disposed of is limited to himself, for example, to himself for life; for, in the latter case, if the remainder resulted to him, the life estate would merge and the express limitation would be defeated. In this case the remainder vests in the grantee (e). *

(d) The property of which the use is declared must be actually the property of the person creating the use at that time, the use cannot be created in property to be after-acquired (f).

501 The effect of the statute is exhausted by the first declaration of the use, the legal estate is executed in the cestui que use under that use, and any further limitation of the use takes effect by way of trust. Thus, a limitation to A. and his heirs to the use of B. and his heirs in trust for C. vests the legal fee simple in B. in trust for C. (g).

immaterial. The insertion of a nominal amount is sufficient to show an intention that no use shall result (Nutton's Hospital Case (1612), 10 Co Rep 23 a; Barker v. Keate (1680), 2 Vent 35; Shortridge v. Lamplugh (1702), 2 Ld Raym. 798), hence the former insertion in deeds of a consideration of 5s. The consideration need not be pecuniary. In covenants to stand seised the consideration was affection for a wife, child, or some blood relation (see Mildmay's Case (1581), 1 Co Rep 175 a; Bedell's Case (1607), 7 Co Rep 40 a).

(d) When one seised of land makes a feoffment in fee without valuable consideration to divers particular uses, so much of the use, as he disposeth not, is in him as his ancient use in point of reverter" (Co Litt 23 a; and see ibid, p. 271 b, 1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p. 103); and when a consideration is paid and only a part of the fee limited to the purchaser, the rest results to the grantor because the extent of the express limitation is the measure of the consideration, but, upon a conveyance to a purchaser for valuable consideration, creating a contract for purchase of the absolute fee simple, any part of the use unlimited vests in the purchaser (1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., pp. 104, 105).

(e) 1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., pp. 103, 104. But it is otherwise if the use is limited to the grantor for an estate tail and the remainder is undisposed of, for the remainder can result to the grantor without merging in the estate tail (ibid, p. 103; and as to merger, see p. 332, post).

(g) Cooper v. Ryknock (1872), 7 Ch App 398. The further use to C. is at law unexecuted (Tyrrel's Case (1557), Dyer, 155 a, *Haggerston v. Thus it was possible for equity once again to intervene, and this construction of the Statute of Uses (27 Hen 8, c. 10) was the occasion of the reintroduction of equitable uses under the name of trusts. The statute had, in Lord Hardwicke's somewhat exaggerated criticism, "no other effect than to add at most three words to a conveyance" (Hopkins

502. Estates in the use are subject as regards duration to the same rules as legal estates at common law, and they must be created by words appropriate for the creation of common law estates (h). Words limiting uses receive the same construction as at law (i).

503. Uses may be limited to take effect in the future, and this may be either by way of remainder, in which case the future use is subject to the rules relating to the creation of remainders at common law (j), or by way of executory interest, in which case the limitation takes effect without regard to such rules (k).

504. Where a conveyance made under the statute disposes, either expressly or by implication, of the uses of the entire fee by way of particular estate and remainder or reversion, each estate, so far as it is effectual, is a legal estate, and is subject to the rules applicable to common law estates. Consequently the uses themselves must supply the estates necessary to prevent the freehold from being in abeyance, no seisin for this purpose remaining in the grantees to uses (l). The particular freehold estate may arise either by express limitation of the use for an estate of freehold (m), or by a resulting use to the settlor for his life (n), but, if the first

Prior to the Statute of Uses (27 Hen 8, c 10), the legal estate in the feoffees to uses would have supported contingent uses (see p 224, ante), but the statute, by transferring the seisin to the cestui que use, left nothing in the feoffees which could have this effect (Chudleigh's Case (1595), 1 Co Rep 120 a, 135 a, per GAWDY, J., Buckley v Simonds (1620), Win. 59, 60; Sugden's Gilbert on Uses and Trusts, p. 165, n) limitation of the use is to the settlor for a term of years, followed by a contingent use by way of remainder, no life estate results to the settlor, since this would be inconsistent with the express limitation, and the contingent uses, apart from statute (o), fail (p).

505. When a use, not limited by way of remainder, does not defeat a previous estate expressly limited by the same conveyance, it is called a springing use; when it defeats such a previous estate, it is called a shifting use (q).

A springing use is effectual, notwithstanding that, if the estate were created by a common law limitation, it would be void for putting the freehold into abeyance (r). This may be because the use is the first use limited and is to arise at a future time (s), or (o) See p. 222, ante. And, as to the former liability of contingent uses to destruction, see Chudleigh's Case (1595), 1 Co Rep 120 a; 1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p. 232.

It seems, however, that in these cases, since the freehold could not be in abeyance, the fee resulted to the settlor and destroyed the term (Ferne, Contingent Remainders, p. 42, Butler's note). But they have been the subject of much criticism; see, e.g., 1 Sanders Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p. 142. It has been suggested that, in the absence of an express or resulting freehold use, the seisin remained in the trustees and should have supported the contingent remainder (see Mr Challis' contribution to the Law Quarterly Review, Vol 1, p. 412); or that since there was not in the beginning an estate of freehold capable of supporting the remainder as such, it should have been treated as a springing use (Gray, Rule against Perpetuities 2nd ed., ss. 59-60). Upon principle, it was open to the court to take the view that a use, although limited by way of remainder, should be construed as a springing use if, for want of any possible estate of freehold to support it, it would otherwise be void in its creation (Sugden's Gilbert on Uses and Trusts, p. 167), and under similar circumstances a remainder created by will is good as a springing devise (see p. 233, post). On the other hand, it seems that it might be incapable of taking effect even as a springing use for want of any seisin in the grantees to uses to feed the use (see Law Quarterly Review, Vol I., p. 412).

(q) Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., pp. 76, 174. If the use is limited by way of remainder, it must take effect as such (Sugden's Gilbert on Uses and Trusts, p. 172), and be supported by a preceding estate of freehold (see p. 222, ante). As to springing uses, see Sugden's Gilbert on Uses and Trusts, p. 161; as to shifting uses, ibid., pp. 153, 286, n., and see pp. 233, 234, ante.

(r) See p. 216, ante. The doctrine of resulting uses enables the future use to be created without putting the freehold into abeyance; hence, springing uses, though apparently limited in breach of the rule, are really consistent with it. The use results to the settlor until the event which gives effect to the springing use, and the freehold consequently is full; see Law Quarterly Review, Vol I., p. 412.

(s) Where, e.g., the conveyance is by A. to grantees to the use of B. to commence four years hence, or to the use of B. after the death of C. without issue if such event occurs within twenty years (Clere's Case (1599), 6 Co. Rep. 17 b; Darves v. Speed (1692), 2 Salk. 675); and, as to the common because it is to arise at an interval after the determination of a previous estate (t). A shifting use is effectual, notwithstanding that it does not, in accordance with the common law rule, wait for the regular determination of the previous estate (a), and, in breach of the common law, it may be limited so as to defeat a fee simple or to take effect after a determinable fee (b). It may be created either by words of limitation or of condition (c).

law rule, compare p. 216, ante. But it is essential that the grantees to uses should take an immediate seisin. A grant by A. to the grantees from a future date to the use of B. and his heirs is the grant of a freehold to commence in futuro and is void (Roe d. Wilkinson v. Tranmair (1758), Willes, 682; Lamb v. Archer (1693) 1 Salk 225; Goodtitle d. Dodwell v. Gibbs (1826), 5 B. & C. 709, 1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p. 137). The springing use may arise where the seisin remains in the grantor, as in a bargain and sale, or a covenant to stand seised (Roe d. Wilkinson v. Tranmair, supra; Doe d. Dyke v. Whittingham (1811), 4 Taunt. 20; Doe d. Stirling v. Prince (1851), 15 Jur. 632). As to such assurances, see pp. 282, 293, post.

(t) Where, e.g., the grant is to the use of B. for life, and after a year from his death to the use of C. in fee simple; and, as to the common law rule, compare p. 217, ante. The principle of resulting uses is that in a conveyance to uses without valuable consideration, so much of the use as is undisposed of remains in the grantor (Co. Litt. 23 a; and see note (n), pp. 278, ante); but this is not consistently applied. Where the springing use is to arise at an uncertain time, the use in fee simple (though a determinable fee) is undisposed of, and thus in a covenant to stand seised remains in, and in a conveyance by grant results to, the settlor. Similarly, where a use is to arise after the death of the settlor, the use results to him for his life (Pibus v. Milford (1674), 1 Vent. 372), unless there is an express limitation which excludes such resulting use (see p. 279, ante, Fearn, Contingent Remainders, p. 48), but the future use is in this case a remainder and not a springing use; and, where a use in fee simple is to arise after a fixed time, such as four years from the grant, the undisposed-of use is for four years only, and is an implied term in the grantor (Bacon, Reading upon the Statute of Uses, p. 63; 1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p. 139); so that the cestui que trust, if in existence, would take a vested fee simple in remainder expectant on the term, and not a springing use. In this case, however, it appears to have been assumed, contrary to strict principle, that the use in fee simple results to the grantor in the meantime, and that the future use is a springing use (Davies v. Speed (1692), 2 Salk 675, per Holt, C.J.; see 1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., pp. 106, 138; Sugden's Gilbert on Uses and Trusts p. 162, n.); and upon a grant to the use of C. and his heirs, after the death of A. and B., it has been said that this is no remainder, but a future (i.e., a springing) use (Weale v. Lower (1673), Poll. 54, 64), although there should apparently be a resulting use to the grantor for the lives of A. and B.

(a) See p. 217, ante. Thus, a grant to the use of A. for life, and if B. before a specified date shall pay £100 to the grantor, then to the use of B. for life, creates a good shifting use (Brent's Case (1575), 2 Leon. 14, 16; 1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p. 150). A shifting use which defeats a prior limited estate must be distinguished from a remainder upon a prior estate limited by reference to some intrinsic condition which also brings the remainder into possession (1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p. 150, where the latter is called a conditional limitation, and see note (v), p. 220, ante).

(b) 1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p. 143; Sugden's Gilbert on Uses and Trusts, p. 147; compare pp. 217, 218, ante. Thus, in the example given in note (a), supra, the uses may both be in fee simple

(c) For note (c), see next page.

506. For the statute to operate there must be an assurance by which a use can be created. Such assurance may either transfer the seisin and raise a use upon the seisin in the transferee, in which case it is said to operate by way of transmutation of possession; or without disturbing the seisin in the assurer, it may raise the use upon this seisin, it is then said to operate without transmutation of possession (d).

of Uses.

An ordinary grant to A in fee simple to the use of B. in fee simple is an assurance of the former kind (e). The effect of the statute is that the legal estate in fee simple which would vest in A is destroyed (f), and the estate of B., which, apart from the statute, would be only an equitable estate, becomes the legal estate in fee simple, with all the incidents of the legal estate (g), including all benefits and advantages inherent in the (Bio Abr. tit Feoffments al Uses, pl 30, 1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p 141) The second fee is not limited upon, but, in derogation of, the first. Where the first fee is a determinable fee, as in the first limitation in a strict settlement made on marriage, the next limitation is executory, it cannot take effect as a remainder, since it is subsequent to a fee (Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p 175); and compare pp 217, 218, ante

(c) 1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p. 153. A precedent tenant in fee simple cannot bar a shifting use, but a tenant in tail can (ibid., and see p 258, ante). As to shifting uses arising under the exercise of powers, see 1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p 151, Sugden, Powers, 8th ed., pp 140 et seq., title POWERS, Vol. XXIII, pp 1 et seq. As to the necessity of confining executory uses within the rule against perpetuities, see title PERPETUITIES, Vol. XXII, pp. 312 et seq. As to shifting uses under name and arms clauses, see 1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., pp 127, 199; and see title SETTLEMENTS

(d) 1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., pp 114 et seq. The Statute of Uses (27 Hen. 8 c 10) was passed before the Statutes of Wills (1540), 32 Hen 8, c 1, (1542-3), 34 & 35 Hen 8, c 5, and when, in general, lands were not devisable at law. Hence, perhaps, it does not operate directly on wills, but the use by a testator of expressions appropriate to a conveyance under the Statute of Uses (27 Hen 8, c 10) is an indication of his intention that the limitations shall be construed as if the will were a conveyance, and effect will be given to this intention (1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p 213; Sugden's Gilbert on Uses and Trusts, p 356; Co. Litt 272 a, Butler's note 1. viii 1; Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p 387. Baker v. White (1875), L. R. 20 Eq 166, 170; see title WILLS)

(e) Formerly the usual assurance operating by transmutation of possession was a feoffment with livery of seisin, and the transmutation of possession actually took place; under the modern grant, which has taken its place (see p. 294, post), there is not necessarily any change of possession, and the description is not strictly applicable. For other assurances, now obsolete, which formerly operated in the same way, see Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p 391

(f) It has been said that the grantee to uses retains the right to custody of title deeds (1 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 4th ed., p 119), but this right now goes with the legal estate, see note (e), p 239, ante. When, however, the legal owners are trustees, the court has power to give an equitable tenant for life the custody of the title deeds (Re Burnaby's Settled Estates (1889), 42 Ch D 621, Re Richardson, Richardson v. Richardson, [1900] 2 Ch 778, 784; Re Money Kyrle's Settlement, Money Kyrle v Money Kyrle [1900] 2 Ch 839), see *Re Wilkinson, Lloyd v. estate, and the benefit of covenants running with the land (h); and, generally, the cestui que use has the same estate at law as that limited to him in the use (i).

A bargain and sale (h), or a covenant to stand seised (l)—both of which forms of assurance are now practically obsolete,—are assurances of the latter kind. The seisin remained, but for the statute, in the vendor or settlor, but upon this seisin a use was raised in favour of the purchaser or donee, and the statute joined the possession to this use and turned it into the legal estate (m).

507. The statute only operates, however, to the extent of the estate of the person who is seised to the uses; if this is the fee simple, uses can be declared which exhaust the fee simple; if it is less than the fee simple, the effective uses are restricted accordingly (n). When, upon a grant in fee simple, uses are declared for a particular estate with a vested remainder, the uses are at once executed by the statute, and the legal estate is finally divided between the particular estate and the remainder; but when a use in remainder is contingent, it cannot be executed till the remainder vests, and it was formerly a question whether any and what interest remained in the feoffees to uses to serve the remainder when it vested. The same question arose when a future interest was limited by way of executory use. To meet the difficulty it was said that, while the whole seisin was by the statute carried over from the feoffees to uses to the cestuis que use who had vested estates, yet a possibility of seisin or a scintilla juris remained in them, which was sufficient to give effect, when necessary, to contingent or executory uses (o). It is now, however, provided by statute that all such uses shall take effect when and as they arise by force of, and by relation to, the seisin originally vested in the person seised to the uses; and the continued existence in him of any scintilla juris is not necessary (p).

(k) A mere contract for value would have passed the legal estate under the statute; but to prevent this the statutory requirement of an enrolled deed was introduced (see p. 294, post). The enrolment relates back so as to give the legal estate to the purchaser by virtue of the Statute of Uses (27 Hen 8 c 10), as from the time of execution (Sugden's Gilbert on Uses and Trusts, pp. 202, 209, n.)

Part IV.—Equitable Estates and Interests in Land.

510 The chief sources of equitable interests in land are trusts (u) and mortgages (x). Under a trust, the legal estate is vested in the trustee and the beneficial interest in the cestui que trust. In general, the equitable interest is subject, by way of analogy, to the same rules as the legal estate. Under a legal mortgage the legal estate is vested in the mortgagee, and an equitable interest, known as the equity of redemption, in the mortgagor. The incidents both of beneficial estates under trusts and of the equity of redemption are dealt with elsewhere (y); so also is the operation of restrictive

(q) "Three manner of rents there be, that is to say, rent service, rent charge, and rent secko" (Littleton's Tenures, s. 213). Rent sec was forms of rent are fundamentally different. Rent service is incident to the relation of landlord and tenant; it is a payment made by the tenant as a recompense for the use of the land (a), and the receipt of it constitutes the chief beneficial right of ownership. The landlord enjoys his ownership by virtue of the receipt of rent. A rentcharge, on the other hand, is a burden on the ownership. The owner of the rentcharge is entitled to a fixed periodical sum as against the owner of the land, and, in effect, this is paid out of the rent service which the owner of the land receives (b).

SECT. 2.
Rents.

513 Before the Statute (Quia Emptores (c)) a tenant in fee simple could grant the land for a like estate by way of subinfeudation, and on such grant could reserve a rent (d). His right in the land was changed to a seignory, and to this seignory the rent was incident as a rent service. Such rents still exist, and are known as chief rents, rents of assize, quit rents, and fee farm rents. As a rule they are payable by freehold tenants of a manor; but rents of assize and quit rents are also payable by copyhold tenants. A rent of assize is a rent which has been assized, or reduced to a certainty, by the lord of the manor; a quit rent is a rent reserved in lieu of all other services; but in principle there is no distinction between chief rents, rents of assize, and quit rents (e). Fee farm rents in theory differ from chief rents in being reserved as the actual equivalent for the use of the land instead of merely by way of service. They are the ancient form of conventional rent, and accordingly they are supposed to be substantial in amount. It has been said that a fee farm rent must be at least one quarter of the annual value of the land (f).

formerly a rent without power of distress (Littleton's Tenures, ss 217, 218), but as a power of distress is now incident to every rent charged on land (Landlord and Tenant Act, 1730 (4 Geo 2, c 28), s 5; Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict c 41), s 44), rents sec have ceased to exist.

(a) As to rents reserved on leases, see titles DISTRESS, Vol XI, pp. 119 et seq, LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol XVIII, pp. 464 et seq. As to apportionment of such rents, see ibid, pp 482 et seq.

(b) The distinction between the two forms of rent is illustrated by the decisions relating to rent on the Real Property Limitation Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c 27). The definition clause (ibid, s 1) is wide enough to include both rentcharges and all kinds of rent service, but, in limiting actions for the recovery of rent, this Act and the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict c 57), apply only to rentcharges (Grant v Ellis (1841), 9 M. & W 113), and, as to the meaning of "rent" in the Real Property Limitation Act 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c 27), s 9, where it is used several times in each sense, see Doe d. Angell v Angell (1846), 9 Q. B. 328, per Lord DENMAN, C.J., at p 356; and see title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, Vol XIX, p. 107.

(f) "It is to be the whole value of the land, or to the fourth part of the value, then the rent is called a fee farm" (Co. Litt. 143 b; 2 Bl. Com 43, and see p 142, ante). The expression is also sometimes used to denote a rentcharge in fee created on the grant of an estate in fee simple—the modern chief rent (Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), s 14 (3); Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 10),

Estates in respect of which rents are reserved.

514. Since the Statute Quia Emptores (g) the reservation of rent service on the grant of land in fee simple has been impossible; but it can be reserved on a grant of land for any less estate. Such a grant, whether in tail, for life or lives, or for years (h), leaves a reversion in the grantor, and to this reversion the rent service is incident (i), and the reversioner has at common law a power of distress for recovery of the rent (k). Reservations of rent on a grant of an estate tail do not occur in practice; reservations of rent on leases for lives or years are called "conventional" rents, and when the rent represents the full value of the tenement, by the year—that is, the gross value—or nearly so, it is called a rack rent (l).

515. A rentcharge is a rent issuing out of land and secured, whether expressly or by statute, by a power for distress (m).

Part VI.—Transfer of Land Inter Vivos.

SECT. 1.—Origin of Complete Power of Alienation.

Alienation under feudal system

516. Alienation of land under the feudal system might take place by transfer or by subinfeudation (n). A tenant in fee simple who actually transferred the land, and obtained the substitution of a new tenant in his place, retained no interest in the land or its profits: if he granted the land to be held of himself by way of subinfeudation, he equally ceased to be entitled to the land, but he had in its stead a mesne seignior; he remained liable to his overlord for the services due from him, and was entitled as an incident of seignior to the service due from his own tenant. Such dealings

(h) Littleton's Tenures, s. 214. This assumes that the grantor has a sufficient estate to support the grant. As to the insufficiency of his estate, see title RENTCHARGES AND ANNUITIES, pp. 497 et seq., post

(i) The reversion must remain in the grantor, if he grants the rest of the fee simple over as a remainder, he cannot reserve a rent as rent service (Littleton's Tenures, s. 215). But the rent is not, like fealty, inseparably incident to the reversion; the lessor can subsequently grant the reversion and reserve the rent to himself, or vice versa (Co. Litt. 143 a), but the power of distress follows the reversion; and see title DISTRESS, Vol. XI, p. 119

(k) Littleton's Tenures, s. 213.

(l) 2 Bl. Com. 43. It has been said that a rack rent is a rent that represents the full annual value of the holding (Ex parte Connolly to Sheridan and Russell, [1900] 1 I. R. 1, 6, C. A.), but annual value means primarily net annual value, while rack rent is the full or gross rental as distinguished from net annual value (Stevens v. Barnet District Gas and Water Co. (1888), 38 W. R. 921). see Stroud, Judicial Dictionary, 2nd ed., p. 1643; and compare title RATES AND RATING, p. 25, ante. The payment of a premium shows that the rent is not a rack rent (Ex parte Connolly to Sheridan and Russell, supra). For a statutory definition of "rack rent," see the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1834 (4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76), s. 109, Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 4 with the land might affect the interests either of the overlord or of the tenant's expectant heirs (o), and it is probable that in early times the consent of the lord and the heirs was necessary for a transfer of the land, and possibly for a grant by way of subinfeudation.

SECT. 1.
Origin of Complete Power of Alienation.

517. An alienation by transfer affected the lord by substituting a tenant whose personal qualifications might not be desirable; an alienation by subinfeudation affected him because it substituted a mesne seignior for the land itself as the source to which he must look for his feudal profits, and this might lessen their value (o). It is not clear, however, that the lord ever had, under the English feudal system, a recognised right to forbid alienation, on the other hand, he may have had a right, more or less indeterminate, to prevent alienations which would be seriously prejudicial to him (p). But the tendency was in favour of free alienation, and according to one view, in the period immediately preceding the Great Charter of 1217, the tenant could, without consent of the lord, alienate the whole or part of the land by subinfeudation, and the whole, though perhaps not part, by transfer (q). The Great Charter of that year implies the general right of alienation by introducing an exception. Thenceforth, so it enacted, no free man should give or sell so much of his land as that out of the residue he might not be able to do the services pertaining to his fee (a). But this left the power of alienation indefinite, and for safety the lord's licence was necessary (b).

Alienation as
lord.

518. A restraint on alienation might also be imposed by family law, the land might be the land of a group of persons constituting a family, or it might be land in which rights of inheritance existed which the owner for the time being was not at liberty to frustrate. Family ownership does not seem to have existed in England in historical times (c), but in early times the owner had not such complete power of disposition over land, whether hereditary or purchased, that he could alienate it entirely. He had to leave a reasonable part for the heirs (d), and hence the consent of the presumptive heirs was necessary to validate the title of a purchaser (e). But this necessity disappeared, and the heirs ceased to have any control over the property during the ancestor's life, notwithstanding that they were mentioned in the limitation to him (f). A limitation to a man and his heirs defined the duration of his estate, but did not confer an independent interest upon the heirs; and it was the same if the limitation was to a special class of heirs, such as heirs of the body of the ancestor. It became settled that such a limitation operated, so far as concerned the power of alienation, only as a condition. As soon as there was a child to answer the limitation, the condition was performed and the ancestor had absolute power of alienation. This meant that "form of the gift" was disregarded (g).

alienation.

519. The beginning of the reign of Edward I. found the law on the above described footing. It was then resettled by the two fundamental statutes, De Donis Conditionalibus (h) and Quia Emptores (i). The first statute protected the interests of heirs of the body, and created estates tail (k). But, in the absence of a special form of limitation, there was not then, nor has there ever been since, any protection for heirs during the life of the ancestor. Indeed, during his life the heir does not exist: nemo est heres iuventus (l). Moreover, the courts infringed upon the statutory protection of heirs of the body by sanctioning the fictitious proceedings for the barring of estates tail (m). The second statute—Quia Emptores (i)—removed all restraint on alienation which had existed in the interest of the lord, and allowed of the free alienation of estates in fee simple by way of transfer, but at the same time it put an end to transfer by way of subinfeudation (n). Since that time the right of alienation has been a necessary part of the ownership of an estate in fee simple and of property in land generally, and any attempt to restrict this right is generally void except in the case of married women (o).

520. Correlative to the right of a lord to object to the substitution of a new tenant is the right of the tenant to object to the substitution of a new lord; in other words, to the transfer of the seignior. This involved questions both of allegiance and seisin. The tenant's homage and fealty must be transferred, and since the grantee cannot be put in seisin of the seignior save by the acknowledgment of the tenant, the transfer appears to depend on the consent of the tenant. It seems, however, that there was a process for compelling tenants to attorn to the new lord, and in practice the rights of the tenants did not prevent alienations by the lord (p).

SECT. 1.
Origin of Complete Power of Alienation.

Transfer of seignior and attornment.

521. At common law, no possibility, right, title, or thing in action is assignable(a); and contingent remainders and executory interests were treated as possibilities so as to fall within this rule(b); but they might be released(c), and they were bound by estoppel(d), and assurances and contracts relating to them, if made for valuable consideration, were recognised as effectual in equity(e). It is, however, provided by statute that a contingent, an executory, and a future interest, and a possibility coupled with an interest(f), in any tenements or hereditaments of any tenure(g), whether the object of the gift or limitation of such interest or possibility is or is not ascertained, may be disposed of by deed(h). This power extends also to a right of entry into any tenements or hereditaments(i).

SECT. 2.—Transfer by Assurance.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Kinds of Assurance.

(i) In General.

Assurances at common law and by statute

522. Interests in land are conveyed by assurances which take effect at common law, or by statute, or partly at common law and partly by statute. The assurance is now usually made by deed alone, but, originally, interests involving immediate possession for an estate of freehold were, save in certain special cases (h), conveyed by deed accompanied by delivery of possession—that is, in such a case, seisin—and knowledge of this form of conveyance, and of the forms of conveyance which were intended to avoid actual delivery of possession, is still of practical use (l).

(ii) Assurances at Common Law

LIVERY OF SEISIN

Livery in deed or in law.

523. At common law an estate of immediate freehold passes by livery of seisin. This form of assurance is known as a feoffment (m). Livery of seisin is livery in deed or livery in law. Livery in deed involves the actual delivery of vacant possession by the feoffor to the feoffee (n), and this might be effected by words spoken upon the property, indicating the intention to deliver possession, and either accompanied or not by the delivery of a turf or other article symbolical of the land itself (a). If a tenant is in possession, and he or any one representing him is on the land, he must assent to the livery (b). Livery in law is effected by words spoken in sight of the land, and is turned into livery in deed by the subsequent entry of the feoffee during the life of the feoffor (c).

(h) I.e., release, surrender, exchange and partition; see pp. 292, 293, 295, post

(l) As to conveyances by fines and recoveries, see pp. 247—249, ante. Fines were not confined to barring estates tail. They were a bar to all claims at the expiration of five years from the levying of the fine, but, as regards persons under disability, the five years ran from the removal of the disability, and, as regards persons entitled to future estates, from the time when their estates fell into possession. Hence they might validate a title under a tenant for life or a disseisor, and, generally, they were used to confirm doubtful titles, see Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., pp. 393 et seq., and see note (h), p. 249, ante.

(m) As to feoffment generally, see 2 Bl. Com. 310 et seq., Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., pp. 397 et seq. Strictly, “feoffment,” “feoffor,” and “feoffee” are terms appropriate to a grant in fee simple; “donation,” “donor,” and “donee” to an estate tail, “lease,” “lessor,” and “lessee” to an estate for life (Littleton’s Tenures, s. 57, 2 Bl. Com. 316), but any livery of the seisin for an estate of freehold is commonly called “feoffment” (Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p. 398).

(n) “Vacant possession” does not require, as is sometimes said, that there shall be no person at all on the land or in the house other than the feoffor and feoffee. All that is really necessary is that there shall be no other person claiming the possession, either on his own account or for another (Doe d. Lued v. Taylor (1833), 5 B. & Ad. 575).

(c) Co. Litt. 48 b, 2 Bl. Com. 316; Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p. 399.

524. Livery of seisin was usually, though at common law not necessarily (d), accompanied by a charter of feoffment defining the lands assured and the estate taken by the feoffee, and containing a warranty of title by the feoffor. A memorandum of livery of seisin was indorsed on the charter (d). Under the Statute of Frauds (e) a feoffment could convey no greater estate than a tenancy at will unless evidenced by writing, and, under the Real Property Act, 1845 (f), a feoffment is void at law unless evidenced by deed, except in the case of a feoffment made under a custom by an infant (g). The livery of seisin was usually expressed to be made according to the form of the charter, and the charter controlled the effect of the livery. If the limitations in the charter were void under common law rules, for example, by purporting to create a freehold in futuro (h), the livery was void; if the limitations in the deed differed from limitations expressed verbally on the livery, those in the deed prevailed (i).

SECT. 2.

Any person in possession could by livery of seisin effect a tortious feoffment and vest the fee simple in the feoffee (j); and if he limited a less estate to the feoffee, a tortious reversion vested in himself (k).

(h) See p 216, ante. But if a term and a freehold in remainder expectant upon it were created at the same time, livery of seisin sufficient to support the remainder might be made to the termor (Littleton's Tenures, s 60; Co Litt 49 b; Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed, p 403)

(i) Co Litt 48 a, b, 222 b; Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed, p 403.

(j) A feoffment was the only form of conveyance which had this effect (Co Litt 49; 2 Sanders, Uses and Trusts, 14, 15)

(k) A tortious feoffment by a tenant for years or for life, or any other person than a tenant in tail turned the estate of the freeholder or the remainderman to a right of entry, if the feoffee died in possession, the right of entry was "toll'd by descent cast," and the true owner was put to his right of action (Co Litt 327 a, b), and see note (p), p 177, ante. A feoffment by a tenant in tail in possession, or by a person seised in right of another, operated as a discontinuance of the estate tail or other particular estate and the remainders upon it (see note (p), p 250, ante); this meant that the issue and the remaindermen had, when their estates fell into possession, no right of entry, but only a right of action (Littleton's Tenures, ss 592—595), but on a feoffment by a husband seised in right of his wife, the wife's right of entry was preserved by statute (stat (1540) 32 Hen 8, c 28, s 6; Co Litt. 326 a). The effect of descent cast and discontinuance, and the distinction between rights of entry and rights of action, were abolished by the Real Property Limitation Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27), ss 36, 39; see titles ACTION, Vol I, pp. 33, 34, 46; LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, Vol XIX, pp 104, 105. In Taylor d Alkyns v Horde (1757), 1 Burr 60, Lord MANSFIELD, C J, attempted to deprive feoffments by tenants of years of their tortious effect, as to this, see Co Litt 330, Butler's note; and, generally, as to tortious feoffments, see Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed, p. 405 et seq

SECT. 2. A feoffment now has no tortious operation, and hence it conveys Transfer by Assurance. only such estate as the feoffor is entitled to dispose of (l).

Release.

525. When a man is already in possession of land, his interest therein may be altered at common law without any livery of seisin. If he has no right against the lawful owner, but only an estate gained by disseisin, this estate may be turned to a lawful estate by a release by the disseisee of his right (m). If he has a limited right, such as an estate for life or for years, and the remainderman or reversioner in fee releases all his right to him and his heirs, this enlarges his estate to a fee simple (n). He is already in possession, and no livery of seisin is required.

Surrender

526. A surrender is the opposite of a release; in a release the greater future estate is abandoned to and enlarges the smaller particular estate; in a surrender the smaller particular estate is given up to and merges in the greater future estate (o). It is necessary, therefore, that the future estate should be the greater; a tenant for life cannot surrender to a remainderman for years (p), and there must be privity of estate between

(l) Real Property Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 106), s. 4.

(m) Littleton's Tenures, s. 445. This release operates mutter le droit; an estate which before was wrongful it makes lawful (Littleton's Tenures, s. 466; 2 Bl. Com. 325). All express releases must be by deed (Co. Litt. 264 b; see title DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS, Vol. X, p. 363).

(n) The release operates enlarge l'estate (Littleton's Tenures, s. 465, 2 Bl. Com. 324). The releasee must be in possession; hence there cannot be a release to a tenant before he enters, while his interest is only an interesse termini (Littleton's Tenures, s. 459, Co. Litt. 270 a), and for a release to operate by way of enlarging the estate, there must be privity of estate between releasor and releasee, i. e., both estates must exist as estates—a tenant at sufferance cannot take a release, though a tenant at will can (Littleton's Tenures, s. 460; Co. Litt. 270 b, Butler v. Duckmantou (1607), Cro. Jac. 169; see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII, p. 438)—and must have been carved out of the same original estate, so that they can still be treated as the same estate in law (2 Bl. Com. 325). A release by the freehold reversioner to the lessee for years gives him the freehold and converts his possession into seisin (Littleton's Tenures, s. 546; Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p. 409). A release may also operate mutter l'estate, where, for example, one of two coparceners releases to the other (see p. 211, ante), or one of three joint tenants releases to one of the others: this creates a fresh title in the releasee, or, in Sir E. Coke's phrase, makes a degree; but a release by one of two joint tenants to the other does not operate mutter l'estate and makes no degree, the releasee having the whole under his original title; and see note (n), p. 203, ante. Releases that operate mutter l'estate also require privity of estate between releasor and releasee (Co. Litt. 273 b, 2 Bl. Com. 325). A confirmation is sometimes said to enlarge an estate, but in this case it operates in all respects as a release; more properly it validates a voidable estate, where, for instance, a remainderman confirms a lease made by a tenant for life who dies during the term (Littleton's Tenures, ss. 515 et seq., Co. Litt. 295 b et seq., 2 Bl. Com. 325).

(o) 2 Bl. Com. 326. "Surrender properly is a yielding up an estate for life or years to him that hath an immediate estate in reversion or remainder, wherein the estate for life or years may drown by mutual agreement between them" (Co. Litt. 337 b; and see ibid., 50 a). There are, however, other kinds of surrenders, such as surrenders of copyholds (Co. Litt. 338 a; see title COPYHOLDS, Vol. VIII., pp. 89 et seq.)

surrenderor and surrenderee (q). Moreover, the surrenderor must be in possession, and since his possession supports the future estates the surrender takes effect without livery of seisin (q). By the Statute of Frauds (r) a surrender is required to be in writing, signed by the surrenderor or his agent; it is now void at law (s), unless made by deed (t).

SECT 2
Transfer by Assurance.

527. Hereditaments which, from their incorporeal nature, were not capable of actual livery, were assignable at common law by deed and accordingly were said to be in grant (u). In the case of seigniories and reversions, the attornment of the tenant was necessary to complete the grant (v), but now the grant of a reversion is effectual without attornment (a). Although, however, reversions and remainders were treated as incorporeal hereditaments, and were capable, at common law, of being conveyed by grant, it was not usual to employ this mode of assurance, and they were commonly conveyed by one of the modes which, while dispensing with livery of seisin, were appropriate to the conveyance of corporeal hereditaments, namely, lease and release, and bargain and sale enrolled (b).

Grant

(iii) Assurances under Statute

528 The conveyance of corporeal hereditaments by feoffment with livery of seisin was inconvenient in practice (c), and was avoided by means of assurances depending for their effect either in whole or in part on the Statute of Uses (d). These were a bargain and sale and a lease and release. Under a bargain and sale made for valuable consideration a use was raised in favour of the purchaser, and this was turned by the statute into the legal estate (e). But

SECT. 2. the bargain and sale, if passing a freehold interest, was subject to the statutory requirement of enrolment within six months (f).
Transfer by Assurance.

Lease and release.

529. The omission to include leasehold interests in the Statute of Enrolments (g) was the origin of the assurance which until 1841 was the common mode of conveying corporeal hereditaments (h). A bargain and sale of a lease for a year operated under the Statute of Uses (i) to place the purchaser in what was deemed to be actual possession, and, being thus in possession, he was capable of taking a release of the reversion in fee simple, which at once operated to enlarge his term of a year into the fee simple. This was the form of assurance known as a lease and release (j).

Modern deed of grant

530. It is now provided by statute that all corporeal tenements and hereditaments shall, as regards the conveyance of the immediate freehold thereof, be deemed to lie in grant as well as in livery (k). Hence a deed is now the usual mode of conveying all hereditaments, whether corporeal or incorporeal. But the word "grant," though appropriate for conveying freehold interests, is not necessary (l), and the word "convey" is equally effectual (m). A deed operating under this statutory provision has the same effect as the lease and release formerly had; hence it places the grantee in actual seisin of the land (n).

and livery of seisin was not necessary (Williams, Law of Real Property, 21st ed., pp. 398, n; Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p. 383).

A covenant to stand seised also raised a use and operated under the statute to vest the legal estate in the covenantee; but it was restricted to the consideration of marriage or near relationship, see p. 282, ante, 2 Bl. Com. 338.

(g) Stat. (1535—6) 27 Hen. 8, c. 16, see note (f), supra.

(h) By stat. (1841) 4 & 5 Vict. c. 21, a release was made as effectual as a lease and release; and by stat. (1844) 7 & 8 Vict. c. 76, which was in operation from the 31st December, 1844, to the 1st October, 1845, freehold lands might be conveyed by deed without livery of seisin. This statute was repealed by the Real Property Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 106).

(i) 27 Hen. 8, c. 10, see pp. 278 et seq., ante.

(j) 2 Bl. Com. 339. As to the effect of a release to a lessee for years, see p. 292, ante. The same form of assurance could be employed without recourse to the Statute of Uses (27 Hen. 8, c. 10), provided the purchaser entered under the lease, and it was sometimes employed in conveyances by corporations, who could not be seised to a use (Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p. 381; see p. 274, ante); but the ordinary mode avoided the necessity of entry. The assurance by lease and release depended for its effect, as to the lease, on the Statute of Uses (27 Hen. 8, c. 10), and, as to the release, on the common law (Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p. 380).

Hanbury* (1826), 5 B. & C. 101), where they could not have their primary effect, have been held to operate as words of grant.

PART VI.—TRANSFER OF LAND INTER VIVOS.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Exchange.

SECT. 2.

Transfer by Assurance.

Exchange at common law

531 An exchange (o) of corporeal or incorporeal hereditaments can be effected by an assurance operating at common law, by mutual conveyance, or by order of the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries. An exchange at common law did not require livery of seisin, and it could be made by parol, provided the exchange was of corporeal hereditaments in the same county, otherwise it had to be made by deed (p). An exchange is now void at law unless made by deed (q). Exchanges operating at common law at the present time do not occur in practice, except occasionally on an informal straightening of boundaries followed by immediate possession (r).

532 An exchange effected by mutual conveyance depends entirely upon the arrangement between the parties. Each party is in the position both of vendor and purchaser, and each must make a title to the property he is giving up, and investigate the title to the property which he is taking; and each gives to the other covenants for title, either express or implied, appropriate to the character in which he conveys (s). It follows from the nature of the transaction that, to the extent to which each is absolute owner, there is no restriction on the amount of or interest in the properties exchanged, and any necessary payment can be agreed upon by way of equality of exchange. When the parties or one of them are or is entitled only for a limited interest, the exchange is usually effected under the powers of exchange conferred by the Settled Land Acts (t), Exchange by mutual conveyance.

(o) The subject of partition is dealt with elsewhere, see title PARTITION, Vol. XXI, pp. 809 et seq.

(q) Real Property Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 106), s. 3, and see title DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS, Vol. X, pp. 367, 368. The requirement of writing was introduced by the Statute of Frauds (29 Car. 2, c. 4), s. 1. But an exchange completed by possession on both sides would be effective in equity, see Brown v. Patterson (1899), Times, 22nd February, and compare Morphett v. Jones (1818), 1 Swan 172, 181, Pann v. Coombes (1857), 1 De G. & J. 34, Maldison v. Alderson (1883), 8 App. Cas. 467, 475, Hodson v. Heuland, [1896] 2 Ch. 428.

(r) Other requirements of a common law exchange were: (1) that the estates exchanged should be equal in interest, e.g., fee simple for fee simple, term of years for the same term; (2) that the word "exchange" should be used; (3) that there should be entry by each party during their joint lives (Co. Litt. 51 b., 2 Bl. Com. 323), and (4) that the exchange should be between one person or set of persons on one side and another person or set of persons on the other, there could not be a triangular exchange (Eton College (Provost) v. Winchester (Bishop) (1774), 3 Wils. 483). Moreover, on a common law exchange, mutual warranties of title were implied with rights of re-entry in case of eviction (2 Bl. Com. 300, 323), hence the exchange could not be safely effected without investigation of title on both sides. In this respect the effect of a common law exchange was altered by the Real Property Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 106), s. 4, which provided that an exchange made after 1st October, 1845, should not imply any condition in law. As to exchanges generally, see Shep. Touch. (ed. 1821), ch. xvi.; 4 Cru. Dig., tit. 32, c. 6, 20.

(s) As to implied covenants for title, see Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), s. 7, title SALE OF LAND; compare Bartram v. Whicheote (1833), 6 Sim. 86, 92.

or by the settlement under which the limited interest arises (u). The exchange can be effected either by one document, in which each of the parties is a conveying party (a), or by separate deeds (b). The latter plan gives each party the advantage of having the deed relating to the property which he takes.

Exchange by order of the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries

533. The Board of Agriculture and Fisheries can effect exchanges of lands under statutory powers (c). For such purposes the word "land" includes incorporeal as well as corporeal hereditaments, and any undivided share therein (d); and, by virtue of such powers, freehold, copyhold, or customary land (e), undivided shares in land or other subject-matter of exchange (f), land held by the same person under different titles (g), and, generally, easements and other incorporeal rights and hereditaments (h), may be exchanged. On an exchange, mines and minerals and rights incidental thereto, and also rights of way and other easements, can be reserved (i).

Parties who may apply for an order

534. The persons who may apply for an order of the Board are the persons in actual possession or enjoyment of the land or right in question, or in receipt of the rents and profits, but application cannot be made by lessees for lives or years at a rent of not less than two-thirds of the clear yearly value, or lessees for a term not originally of easements created de novo (Re Trachen's Settlement, [1903] 2 Ch 265), and a trustee, or other person authorised, may, with the sanction of the court, reserve or except minerals from the land exchanged (Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict c 53), s 44, Trustee Act, 1893, Amendment Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict c 10), s 3) exceeding fourteen years, or tenants from year to year or at will. When any such lessees or tenants are in possession, application can be made by the reversioner, and the exchange does not affect the lessees or tenants; these remain in possession of their original lands; but, where the land is held on lease for lives or for a term originally exceeding fourteen years, and the lease reserves a rent less than two-thirds of the clear yearly value, the application must be made by the lessor and lessee jointly, and the exchange affects the lessee as well as the lessor. Consequently, both the leasehold and the reversionary interest are shifted from the lands given up to those received in exchange (k)

SECT. 2.
Transfer by • Assurance.

535. An exchange cannot be ordered where the two properties are not equal in value and the deficiency in value, in the opinion of the Board, exceeds one-eighth of the less valuable property; but to the extent of such deficiency compensation can be given by means of a rentcharge, of such amount as the Board thinks just, to be charged on the more valuable property, but not by payment of a lump sum (l).

Inequality
in value

536. Upon an application being made for an exchange, the Board requires a valuation of the properties to be made by a competent valuer, who must not be the agent of or connected with either of the parties, and it is a condition of the exchange that the Board shall consider it to be beneficial to the parties (m). If the Board considers the exchange beneficial, and the proposed terms just and reasonable, an order of exchange will be made (n), and such order is not liable to be impeached by reason of any defect of title of the applicants. The land taken is held upon the same uses and trusts, and subject to the same conditions, charges, and incumbrances, as the land given in exchange (o).

contract by husband and wife in regard to such property, unless made by deed acknowledged, does not bind the property, nor affect the title of the wife, even in equity (h).

Where husband and wife contract for the sale of the wife's realty, the purchaser being aware that it belongs to the wife, and she refuses to convey, the purchaser is not entitled to compel the husband to convey his interest in the property at an abated price (l); but, if the husband enters into an agreement for sale, and the purchaser believes the property to be his, he is entitled to a conveyance of the interest of the husband, with compensation in respect of the wife's interest (m).

Effect of
wife's fraud.

543 If a married woman is guilty of fraud in dealing with her property, she will be precluded from setting up her title against the person defrauded (n), and will be liable to indemnify him out of any property of which she has power to dispose (o). But a mere refusal to fulfil a contract by which she is not bound is not deemed to be a fraud for this purpose (p).

Husband's
power of

544. The husband alone may dispose of his wife's non-separate chattels real by act inter vivos (q), but he cannot, by a testamentary disposition, defeat her right by survivorship, although, if he bequeaths them by a will made during her lifetime, the bequest will take effect

An agreement for valuable consideration, or a covenant by the husband to dispose of his wife's term of years or part of it, is a good disposition in equity so as to bind the wife surviving (t).

SUB-SECT 5 — Form and Contents of Assurance

545. An assurance of real property follows the ordinary form of an indenture. It contains the date and parties, the recitals showing the title to the property conveyed and the object of the conveyance, the receipt clause, the actual grant, the description of the property conveyed, and the limitation of the estate taken by the grantee (a). In addition there are covenants for title which were formerly express, but are now usually implied from the use of the appropriate statutory words (b), any special covenants required by the nature of the restriction, such as covenants with respect to the user of the property (c), and, when all the title deeds are not handed over, there is an acknowledgment of the right to production and delivery of copies, and, save in the case of grantors who are trustees or mortgagees (d), an undertaking for safe custody (e).

Instruments which may be registered.

547. All deeds, conveyances, and wills, whereby any lands or hereditaments in Middlesex (i) may be affected at law or in equity, may be registered (h). This provision includes all instruments in writing, whether under seal or not, which affect the land (l), except instruments affecting copyhold estates (m), leases at a rack-rent, and leases for not exceeding twenty-one years, where the actual possession goes with the lease (n); but it does not apply to liens or charges created without writing (o). Consequently, all assurances in writing of lands, whether by way of sale, mortgage, or settlement, and all charges created or evidenced by writing, and all leases, save those just mentioned, may be registered (p). Assurances relating to Crown lands need not be registered (q).

Mode of registration.

548. The registration is effected by registering a memorial of the instrument (r). The memorial must be in writing under the hand of one of the grantors or grantees, and must be attested by one witness. Such witness must be a witness or one of the witnesses (if any) to the original instrument (s), unless at the date of the memorial every such witness is dead, or absent from the United Kingdom, or cannot be found, or some other sufficient cause exists to prevent such attestation. In such case the memorial must be accompanied by a statutory declaration (t), stating the reason why the witness to the memorial is not one of the witnesses to the instrument. The memorial must state the date of and parties to the instrument, and must specify, following the description in the instrument, the lands and hereditaments affected and the parishes where they lie. It must contain, or be accompanied by, a copy of any plan on the instrument (u).

(f) The registration of assurances is designed to give publicity to dealings with land, and thus prevent frauds upon purchasers and mortgagees. It is thus based on the same principle as the ancient feoffment with livery of seisin (see p. 290, ante). Such registration has, however, been confined in its operation to Middlesex, Yorkshire, and the Bedford Level, see pp. 304, 307, post. Registration of land under the Land Transfer Acts (see pp. 308 et seq., post) renders unnecessary the registration of deeds in the Middlesex and Yorkshire Registries.

550. The omission to register an instrument does not invalidate it, but, by reason of such omission, it will be adjudged fraudulent and void against a subsequent purchaser or mortgagee for valuable consideration who registers his assurance (b). Where a conveyance or security is effected by several instruments, it is sufficient if the lands are described in the memorial of one of them, and if the other memorials refer to it (Land Registry (Middlesex Deeds) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict c 64), Sched I (9)). Wills must be registered in Middlesex within six months of the testator's death (Middlesex Registry Act, 1708 (7 Anne, c 20), ss 1, 8), but, if the will has not been registered within that period, an assurance by a devisee, or a person deriving title under him, to a purchaser or mortgagee, if registered before an assurance from the heir-at-law, prevails over the latter (Vendor and Purchaser Act, 1874 (36 & 37 Vict c 78), s 8), and see Girling v. Girling, [1886] W. N 18; Re Cooper, Cooper v Vesey (1882), 20 Ch D. 611, C A (where, however, the assurance by the heir was held to be a forgery).

registration and not of date of execution. But this is only the prima facie rule, and it does not apply in the following cases:—

(1) A subsequent purchaser or mortgagee who takes with notice of an earlier unregistered instrument cannot by registration obtain priority over it: the statute is only designed to prevent fraud, and in such case he is not deceived (c). But for this purpose there must be actual notice; constructive notice is not sufficient (d).

(2) Registration is not itself notice to subsequent purchasers, nor does it deprive the legal estate of its efficacy. Hence a subsequent purchaser or mortgagee who takes without notice of the registered instrument, and either then or subsequently gets in the legal estate, thereby obtains priority (e).

(u) Yorkshire.

Yorkshire
registries

551. Deed registries are established in Yorkshire at Northallerton for the North Riding, at Beverley for the East Riding; and at Wakefield for the West Riding. They are maintained by the county authorities within the three ridings respectively (f).

Instruments
requiring registration

552. All assurances and wills by which any lands within any of the three ridings are affected may be registered (g). For this purpose "assurance" includes generally any conveyance in the ordinary sense of the term, and in particular any assignment, appointment, lease, or settlement made by deed, on a sale, mortgage, demise, or settlement of land, or appointment of a new trustee in respect of land, whether a conveyance in the ordinary sense or not (h); also any enlargement of a term into the fee simple (i), memorandum of charge, deed of consent to the discharge of a trustee, statutory receipt, private Act, award or order of the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries (k), order of a court, including writs of execution and

(f) Yorkshire Registries Act, 1884 (47 & 48 Vict c 54), s 31. This Act repealed the earlier Yorkshire Registries Acts, namely, the West Riding Act (stat (1703) 2 & 3 Anne, c 4, amended by stats (1706) 5 Anne, c 20, and (1707) 6 Anne, c 35, s 34), the East Riding Act (stat. (1707) 6 Anne, c 62); and the North Riding Act (stat (1734) 8 Geo 2, c 6). adjudications in bankruptcy, certificate of appointment of a trustee in bankruptcy, and affidavit of vesting under any Act of Parliament (l).

The term does not, however, include a contract under hand only for the sale and purchase of land (m).

Where a lien on land is claimed in respect of unpaid purchase-money, or by reason of any deposit of title deeds, a memorandum of such lien or charge, signed by the person against whom the charge is claimed, may be registered by any person claiming to be interested therein (n); and such memorandum must contain certain particulars prescribed by the statute (o).

The above provision does not extend to copyhold hereditaments, nor to any lease not exceeding twenty-one years, or any assignment thereof, where accompanied by actual possession from the making of such lease or assignment (p); nor does it extend to assurances of Crown lands which may be enrolled in the Land Revenue Office (q).

553. The registration is effected, in the case of deeds or other assurances, except private Acts, or memoranda of charges, or affidavits of vesting under a statute, by presenting a memorial for enrolment, in the case of a private Act, by presenting a King's printer's copy or a memorial, and, in the case of a memorandum of charge or an affidavit, by presenting the memorandum or affidavit at full length (r).

The memorial must be under seal; and the form is similar to that required in Middlesex (s).

554. Subject to the statutory provisions, and to any rules made thereunder, any person may inspect and search the register and indices, and may take copies thereof or extracts therefrom; or an official search may be requisitioned, and a certificate of the result, under the seal of the registry, obtained. The certificate is receivable in evidence (t). Provision is also made for obtaining certified copies of or extracts from the register (a); and solicitors, trustees, and other persons in a fiduciary position are protected against any error arising from reliance on certificates of search or certified copies of documents (b).

Priority.

555. All assurances entitled to be registered have priority according to the date of registration, and not according to the date of the assurances or of their execution (c); and this is not, as in Middlesex, merely the prima facie rule (d); it is the absolute rule, save only in the case of fraudulent or voluntary assurances. Thus, a subsequent purchaser or mortgagee who registers first has priority over an earlier unregistered assurance, notwithstanding that he took with actual notice of it (e); and a subsequent purchaser or mortgagee who gets in the legal estate does not thereby acquire priority over an earlier registered equitable assurance (f). But registration does not give priority in case of fraud; and a person taking without valuable consideration cannot by registering his assurance obtain any further priority or protection than would belong to his grantor (g). Moreover, registration itself is not notice to others of the registered assurance (h); hence, further advances made under a registered mortgage originally framed to cover them have priority over a subsequent registered mortgage, unless, at the time when they were made, the earlier mortgagee had

The stamp duty on a memorandum of lien or charge is 6d per cent ad valorem on the amount due, and, on an affidavit of intestacy, 2s 6d. No stamp is required on a caveat. Transfer by Assurance.

556. A person interested in land in any of the three Ridings can register a caveat in favour of any person named therein, specifying the time for which it is to remain in force. An assurance made within such time by the person registering the caveat in favour of the person named therein has priority as though it had been registered upon the date on which the caveat was registered (k). Thus, a vendor or mortgagor can by registering a caveat guarantee the purchaser or mortgagee against further dealings with the property to his prejudice. Caveat.

SUB-SECT 1—The Register

Land registry. 558. The office of Land Registry is established under the Land Transfer Acts, 1875 and 1897 (s), for the purpose of registering the title to land, and enabling land to be transferred and mortgaged by registered disposition (t).

Compulsory area In general, registration is voluntary, but in any county or part of a county where registration of title is compulsory on sale, a person cannot acquire the legal estate, under a conveyance on sale, of freehold land (u), or, in certain cases, under an assignment on sale or lease of leasehold land (r), unless he is registered as proprietor. At present compulsory registration is confined to the County of London (w).

Land Transfer Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict c 65), s 22 (8)), but in practice registration is almost confined to the compulsory area, and the necessity for district registries has not arisen Registration of title was introduced by Lord WESTBURY in the Land Registry Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict c 53) Under this Act registration might be made either with or without an indefeasible title The system did not meet with success, and it was replaced by the Land Transfer Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict c 87) This stopped further registrations under Lord Westbury's Act (Land Transfer Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict c 87), s 125, as to re-registration under the Land Transfer Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict c 87), see ibid, s 126. Land Transfer Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict c 65), Sched I), but registration under the Land Transfer Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict c 87), was little used until supplemented, as regards London, by compulsion under the Land Transfer Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict c 65) The whole system of registration of title is still the subject of discussion (see Report of 1911 of the Royal Commission on the Land Transfer Acts), and, if it is continued and extended, considerable modifications in the present system will probably be made

(t) As to specific performance in regard to registered land, see Land Transfer Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict c 87), ss 93, 94, which empower the court to summon before it all or any parties who have registered estates or rights or have entered notices, cautions or inhibitions against the registered title, and provide for the costs of parties so summoned

The registrar has extensive powers in the conduct of the business of the registry, including power to frame forms and to summon witnesses (a), subject in certain cases to appeal to the court (b). The regis-

The property register contains the description of the land comprised in each title, with a reference to the filed plan of the land, and any necessary notes relating to the ownership of mines and minerals; to exemption from liabilities and interests which are not incumbrances and do not require registration; and to easements and restrictive covenants for the benefit of the land, and other like matters (e).

The proprietorship register states the nature of the registered title, the name, address, and description of the registered proprietor, and any cautions, inhibitions, and restrictions affecting his right of disposition (f).

The charges register contains incumbrances, including notices of leases and of estates in dower and by the curtesy, and entries relating to covenants, conditions, and other rights adversely affecting the land (g).

561. The register is not open to public inspection. Only the registered proprietor of a land or charge, and persons authorised by him, or persons interested, are entitled to inspect it, but persons interested in the adjoining land, or any charge thereon, can inspect the property register and the filed plan of any title. An official search can be requisitioned and a certificate of the result obtained (h).

registrar thinks it unnecessary, approved by the applicant or his solicitor (Land Transfer Rules 1908, r 40). As to leasehold land, see ibid, r 5. The ordnance map, on the largest scale published, is the basis of all registered descriptions of land (Land Transfer Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c 65), s 14. Land Transfer Rules, 1903, r 269). The land is described by means of the map, together with such verbal particulars as the applicant for registration may desire, and the registrar (or the court) approves (Land Transfer Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c 65), s 14). In general, the map indicates general boundaries only (Land Transfer Rules, 1903, r 274), but, on notice given to the owners and occupiers of adjoining lands, the precise boundaries can be determined and delineated in the plan (ibid, rr 272, 273), and, as to the plan and description, see, further, ibid, rr 270, 271, 275—282. Additions to or removals from the land are, where practicable, to be noted in the property register and marked on the filed plan (ibid, r 4). Where it is proved to the satisfaction of the registrar that the right to mines is vested in the proprietor of the land, a note may be entered on the property register that they are included in the registration (Land Transfer Rules, 1903, r 213), or, if they are severed, a note that they are excluded (ibid, r 214).

leasehold land cannot be registered unless it is held on lease for a life or lives, or determinable on a life or lives, or for a term of years of which more than twenty-one are unexpired at the time of registration (k). A term created for mortgage purposes cannot be registered (l).

563. The register is intended to contain a statement of the existing proprietorship of the land and of the incumbrances upon it (m), and, generally speaking, all rights of third persons in respect of the land which are exercisable against the proprietor are incumbrances. But owing to the difficulty of giving an exact representation of all such rights, certain classes of them are deemed not to be incumbrances, and the land is subject to such of these as are for the time being subsisting in relation to it although they are not entered on the register. They include incidents of tenure, death duties, land tax, tithe rentcharge, easements, rights to mines and minerals created before registration, sporting and manorial rights, franchises, and leases or agreements for leases and other tenancies not exceeding twenty-one years; and also rights acquired or in course of being acquired under the Statute of Limitations (n).

But exemption from land tax or tithe rentcharge can be noted on the register, if proved to the satisfaction of the registrar (Land Transfer Rules, 1903, r. 212); and it can also be noted that no succession duty is owing on a certificate to that effect from the Inland Revenue Commissioners (ibid., as to registered charges, see Land Transfer Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Viet c 87), s 83 (8)). Further provision as to death duties is made by the Land Transfer Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Viet c 65), s 13, see Land Transfer Rules, 1903, rr. 208—211 On applications for registration with an absolute title, or to register a transmission, the registrar must inquire as to succession or estate duty, and, if any liability to these exists or is capable of arising, it must be noted on the register; otherwise, save in certain cases under possessory or qualified titles, it does not affect a bonâ fide purchaser for full consideration Rights to mines and minerals acquired after registration (see note (e), p 309, ante) must, for safety, be protected by registration (see Land Transfer Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Viet c 65) Sched. SUB-SECT. 2 - Who may Apply for Registration.

Persons entitled to be registered

564. Any person can apply for registration of freehold land who is entitled for his own benefit, at law or in equity, to an estate in fee simple, whether subject to incumbrances or not, also any person who has contracted to buy for his own benefit such an estate, or who is capable of disposing of such an estate for his own benefit by way of sale (p). Similarly, any person can apply for the registration of leasehold land who is entitled for his own benefit, at law or in equity, to leasehold land capable of registration, whether subject to incumbrances or not; and so also may any person who has contracted to buy for his own benefit such leasehold land, or who is capable of disposing of such leasehold land for his own benefit by way of sale (q). Several persons entitled for their own benefit, concurrently or successively, to such estates and interests as would make up an estate suitable for registration can be registered as joint proprietors (r).

settled land

565. Under the foregoing provisions the applicant for registration must be entitled to the land for his own benefit. Provision is also made for registration of settled land and land held on trust for sale. Settled land may, at the option of the tenant for life, be registered either in the name of the tenant for life, or, where there are trustees with power of sale, in the names of the trustees, or, where there is an overriding power of appointment of the fee simple, in the names of the donees of the power(s). The rights of the persons beneficially interested must be protected by proper restrictions or inhibitions (t). Subject to these, the registered proprietor can exercise his statutory rights of disposition, but otherwise the interests of the persons for

power of sale

566. Where land is held on trust for sale, or any trustee, mortgagee, or other person has a power of sale, the trustee or other person having such power may apply to be registered as proprietor, with the consent of the persons, if any, whose consent is required to the exercise of the trust or power of sale (b).

SUB-SECT. 3 —Effect of Registration

567. Freehold land can be registered with an absolute, a possessory, or a qualified title; leasehold land can be registered with an absolute title, with a good leasehold title, with a possessory title, or with a qualified title.

Titles which can be registered

568. The first registration of freehold land with an absolute title enables the registered proprietor to sell an estate in fee simple, subject (1) to registered incumbrances; (2) to incidents of tenure, easements, and other liabilities which are not treated as incumbrances on the register, unless the contrary is expressed, (3) where the registered proprietor is a trustee, or other person not entitled for his own benefit, to any unregistered estates, rights, or equities enforceable against him, but free from all other estates and interests, including rights of the Crown (c).

Absolute
title (freehold)

569. Registration with a possessory title does not prejudice adverse rights existing or capable of arising at the time of registration; but otherwise it has the same effect as registration with an absolute title. The result is that the title prior to registration can be impeached, but not the title after registration (d). Hence, on a sale of land registered with a possessory title, the title off the register prior to registration must be examined in the usual way from the date fixed by law or agreement as the commencement of title.

POSSessory
hold)

570. Where the applicant for registration with an absolute title shows a good title save for some specific defect, any rights arising by reason of such defect may be excepted from the effect of registration, but otherwise the registered title is absolute. This is a qualified title (e).

hold).

571. The registration of leasehold land (f) with an absolute title vests in the first registered proprietor the possession of the demised land for all the term of the lease, subject (1) to the implied and express covenants and obligations incident to the leasehold estate, (2) to registered incumbrances; (3) to easements and other liabilities which are not treated as incumbrances, unless the contrary is expressed on the register; (4) where the registered proprietor is a trustee, or other person not entitled for his own benefit, to any unregistered estates, rights, or equities enforceable against him; but free from all other estates and interests, including rights of the Crown (g). Thus an absolute title implies, first, that the lease is well granted by a person entitled to grant it, and, secondly, that the lease is vested in the registered proprietor.

hold title.

572. A good leasehold title only implies that the leasehold interest, whether well created or not, is vested in the registered proprietor; and registration with such a title does not prejudice rights adverse to the lessor's power to grant the lease, but otherwise it has the same effect as an absolute title (h).

Possessory title (lease-hold)

573. A possessory leasehold title corresponds to a possessory freehold title: it does not prejudice rights adverse to the title of the first registered proprietor which are existing, or capable of arising, at the time of registration; but otherwise it has the same effect as an absolute title (i).

Qualified title (lease-hold).

574 Where the title of the applicant is subject to some specific defect, any rights arising by reason of such defect may be excepted from the effect of registration, but otherwise the registered title is absolute. This is a qualified leasehold title (k).

SUB-SECT 4 Application for Registration

How made.

575. The application for registration must be in writing, and must state whether an absolute or possessory title is required (l)

Documents accompanying application.

The application must, unless the registrar otherwise directs, be accompanied by all such original deeds and documents relating to the title as the applicant has in his possession or under his control, including opinions of counsel, abstracts of title, contracts for or conditions of sale, requisitions, replies, and other like documents; a copy or sufficient abstract of the last document of title, not being a

Where the lease contains a prohibition against alienation without licence, rights arising on alienation without licence are excepted from the effect of the registration (ibid., s. 62). document of record; and sufficient particulars, by plan or otherwise, to enable the land to be identified on the ordnance map or Land Registry general map (m). When the title has been examined and all preliminaries satisfied, the registration is completed as of the day on which the application was delivered (n).

Transfer by Registration of Title.

An intending applicant for registration may secure priority of registration by lodging a priority notice at the registry and making his application within fourteen days or such further time as the registrar allows (o); after his application has been made, he can effectually transfer or charge the land, subject to prior rights obtained by registration (p).

Priority
notice

576 Any person having or claiming such an interest in land as entitles him to object to any disposition thereof being made without his consent may lodge a caution against registration of the land (q).

SUB-SECT 3.—Proof of Title

577. Before registration of an absolute title to freehold land, the registrar must approve the title to the fee simple (r). Before registration of an absolute leasehold title, he must approve the title both to the leasehold and to the freehold, and to any intermediate leasehold that may exist; and before registration of a good leasehold title he must approve the title to the leasehold interest (s).

Absolute
title.

For this purpose the title shown by the documents accompanying the application is examined by or under the superintendence of the Examination

of title.

(m) Land Transfer Rules, 1908, r 19. As to applications by corporations, see Land Transfer Rules, 1903, r 256. In the case of leasehold land, the lease itself, if in the applicant's possession or control, must be delivered; in other cases, a copy or abstract, or other sufficient evidence of its contents (Land Transfer Rules, 1903, r 51). As to applications, see, further, ibid, r 317—321. Evidence of value may be required for the purpose of ascertaining the fees payable (ibid, r 330). All documents of title must, if required, be disclosed by affidavit or declaration (Land Transfer Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict c 87), s 70, Land Transfer Rules 1908, r 44, and see Land Transfer Rules, 1903, r 341), and the registrar can enforce the production of documents in the possession of third persons, if the applicant or any trustee for him is entitled to production (Land Transfer Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict c 87), s 71). Sufficient documents must be produced to the registrar and marked by him with notice of registration to ensure that the fact of registration cannot be concealed from future purchasers (ibid, s 72, Land Transfer Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict c 65), Sched I). As to production and marking of deeds on application for a possessory title, see Land Transfer Rules, 1908, r 45, 46. As to costs of applications for registration and other proceedings in the registry, see Land Transfer Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict c 87), s 73, Land Transfer Rules, 1903, r 334.

registrar in accordance with the usual conveyancing practice (b); but he may modify the examination in such manner as he thinks fit (1) where the land has been sold or purchased under an order of the court; (2) where the first registered proprietor was a purchaser on sale, and he has been registered with possessory or qualified title for six years; and (3) where it appears to the registrar that the title has been sufficiently investigated on a transaction for value (a).

Notice of
application

Advertisements are, in general, required to be issued (b), and any person may object to the registration (c). Any such objection is determined by the registrar, subject to appeal to the court (d). A qualified title cannot be registered save on the applicant's request in writing (e).

Possessory
title.

578. An applicant may be registered with a possessory title, if the documents afford prima facie evidence of his right to apply for registration as first proprietor (f). If he has no documents of title, a statutory declaration of possession, if the registrar is satisfied on inquiry or otherwise that he is in possession or in receipt of the rents and profits, may be taken as sufficient evidence for this purpose (g).

Conversion
into absolute
title

After registering the possessory title, the registrar may, if the documents justify it, with the consent of the applicant, convert it into an absolute title (h), or a note may be entered that the title will become absolute at the expiration of a particular period, or on the occurrence of a particular event (i).

Land
certificate

579. Upon registration, a certificate, called the "land certificate," is either delivered to the registered proprietor, or, if he prefers, is deposited in the registry (k). This states the nature of the title (l).

580. The registered proprietor can by entry on the register create charges on the land, whether for a principal sum or for an annuity or other periodical payment, and a certificate of charge is delivered to the proprietor of the charge (o). The certificate must be produced to the registrar on every entry of a disposition by the registered proprietor of the charge (u).

This is subject to any registered estates, charges, or rights, but otherwise is equivalent to a lien created by deposit of deeds or of a mortgage deed (f). Notice of the deposit can be given to the registrar, and this is entered in the charges register and operates as a caution. Upon application for registration a lien can be created by notice of an intended deposit (g).

SUB-SECT 7 —Registered Transfers.

Right to transfer
freehold land

585. The registered proprietor of freehold land can, by registered transfer, transfer the land or any part of it (h). A land certificate is delivered to the transferee, and, where the land is severed, a land certificate is delivered to the transferor in respect of the land retained by him (h). A person on whom the right to be registered has devolved or by whom it has been acquired, may, by observing the prescribed conditions, transfer the land before he has been registered (i).

Effect of
transfer

A transfer of land registered with absolute title for valuable consideration confers on the transferee an estate in fee simple, subject (1) to any registered incumbrances, and (2), unless the contrary is expressed on the register, to easements and other rights which, for the purpose of registration, are not incumbrances, but free from all other estates and interests, including Crown rights (h). A transfer of a qualified title or a possessory title has the same effect, save that, in the case of a qualified title, the force of the registered qualification is not prejudiced (l); and, in the case of a possessory title, adverse rights subsisting or capable of arising at the time of first registration are not affected (m). A transfer made without consideration has the same effect as a transfer for value, save that

586. The registered proprietor of leasehold land can transfer the whole of his estate in the land, or any part thereof (o).

Transfer of leasehold
land.
Effect of
transfer.

The transferee takes subject to all implied and express covenants, obligations, and liabilities incident to the estate, but otherwise the transfer corresponds in its effect to a transfer of freehold land; if the title is absolute, the transferee takes subject only to registered incumbrances, and to statutory non-incumbrances (p); if it is a qualified title, the effect of the qualification is preserved (p); if it is a good leasehold title, rights adverse to the lessor are preserved (q); if it is a possessory title, adverse rights subsisting or capable of arising at the time of first registration are preserved (r); if the transfer is voluntary, unregistered estates and equities are preserved (s). On the transfer there is implied, on the part of the transferor, a covenant that the rent is paid and the covenants performed and observed until the transfer, and on the part of the transferee, a covenant to pay, perform, and observe the rent and covenants in the future, and to indemnify the transferor (t).

587. A transfer of freehold or leasehold land carries the mines and minerals, unless there is some indication to the contrary in the register, or in the transfer, or, in the case of leasehold land, in the lease (u).

Effect on mines and minerals

588. The registered proprietor of a charge may transfer it by registered transfer, and either the charge certificate is corrected or a new one issued (a). A registered transferee for value of a charge and his successors in title are not affected by any irregularity or invalidity in the original charge of which the transferee was not aware at the time of the transfer (b).

Transfer of registered
charge.

The registered proprietor of a charge may create a sub charge (c).

Sub-charge.

589 Upon the death of the registered proprietor of land or of a charge, or upon a change in his interest by bankruptcy or otherwise, the persons thereupon becoming entitled are, upon evidence being furnished to the registrar, entered on the register as proprietors in his place (d). They hold the land or charge for the purposes to which it is applicable at law, and subject to unregistered estates and equities, but otherwise as though they were transferees for value (e).

SUB-SECT 8.—Unregistered Interests.

Effect on legal estate of dealings off
 the register.

590. Registration of title does not prevent dealings with the property by unregistered instruments, and such instruments may either convey the legal estate or create equitable estates or interests.

Thus, where the legal estate is in the first instance vested in the registered proprietor, he can by an ordinary unregistered assurance convey it to another person, and thus sever it from the registered title; and all subsequent dealings with the land may go on without reference to the register (f). If, however, at any time there should be a registered transfer of the land for value, this again joins the legal estate to the registered title, and such registered title will prevail over the intermediate unregistered title (g).

Capacity to deal with land by instruments off the register.

591. In the same way, any person, whether he is the registered proprietor or not, if he has a sufficient estate or interest in the land, can create estates, rights, interests, and equities in the same manner as if the land were not registered. The only restrictions imposed by statute are (1) that the registered proprietor of land shall alone be entitled to transfer or charge it by registered disposition, and that the registered proprietor of a charge shall alone be entitled to transfer it by such disposition; and (2) that all unregistered dispositions take effect subject to the estate and right of the registered proprietor, that is, the estate and right of such proprietor has always a statutory priority (h).

SUB-SECT 9 —Protection of Unregistered Interests

Means of protection

592 Unregistered interests can be protected by entering on the register notices, cautions, or inhibitions, or specific restrictions on the powers of the registered proprietor (h).

Notices of leases and of estates in dower or by the curtesy.

593. Short leases accompanied by occupation are statutory non-incumbrances, and prevail over the registered title without being entered on the register (i). Other leases can be protected by notice entered on the register. This notice gives the lease priority over subsequent registered dispositions of the land, but not over the proprietors of incumbrances registered before the registration of Cautions.

594. A caution in respect of registered land or of a registered charge may be lodged by any person interested under an unregistered instrument or as a judgment creditor or otherwise. The caution prevents any registered dealings with the land or charge until notice has been served on the cautioner specifying a time within which he can intervene. Upon the cautioner giving sufficient security to indemnify parties affected, the registrar can delay registering any dealing with the land or charge (l). A person lodging a caution without reasonable cause is liable to pay compensation (m).

595. Dealings with registered land or a registered charge may be prevented by an inhibition. The inhibition is made by order of the court, or by entry by the registrar subject to an appeal to the court. It forbids for a time, or until the occurrence of a specified event, or generally until further order or entry, any dealing with the registered land or charge (n).

Inhibitions.

596. The registered proprietor of land or of a charge can apply to have restrictions placed on his transferring or charging the same. The restriction may prevent a transfer or charge unless (1) notice of an application for the transfer or charge is sent to a specified address; (2) the consent of a specified person is given; or (3) some such other matter or thing is done as may be required by the applicant and approved by the registrar (o).

Restrictions.

Where the estate of the first registered proprietor is or may be subject to a restraint on alienation, the registrar must enter a restriction protecting the restraint (p).

Protection of alienable interests.

597. Trusts can only be protected in the manner above stated; the beneficiary cannot rely on the doctrine of notice. Neither the registrar, nor any person dealing with registered land or a charge, can be affected with notice of a trust, express, implied, or constructive; and references to trusts are, as far as possible, excluded from the register (q).

598. Registration is no protection to fraudulent instruments, and any disposition of land or of a charge which, if unregistered, would be fraudulent and void, is fraudulent and void notwithstanding registration; but this provision is without prejudice to the statutory rights of persons claiming under registered dispositions for valuable consideration (r).

SUB-SECT 10—Rectification and Indemnity.

General
statutory provisions.

599. The Land Transfer Act, 1875 (s), makes provision, in certain cases, for rectification of the register, but does not give indemnity to the person whose registered title is thus displaced. The Land Transfer Act, 1897 (t), makes further provision for rectification and also gives indemnity; and, in cases where rectification cannot be made, indemnity may be given to the true owner. Indemnity is paid out of an insurance fund provided by the Land Registry fees, and in case of deficiency out of the Consolidated Fund (u).

Rectification
under the Land Transfer
Act, 1875.

600. Under the Land Transfer Act, 1875 (a), rectification cannot be made as against estates or rights acquired by registration (b), that is, as against registered absolute titles and genuine registered transfers from the registered absolute proprietors (c). Subject to such estates and rights, the court may order a rectification of the register: (1) where it has decided that any person is entitled to an estate, right or interest in any registered land or charge, and that in consequence rectification is required (d); (2) where any person is aggrieved by an entry made in, or by the omission of an entry

Davis*, [1908] 2 Ch. 169; title MORTGAGE, Vol. XXI., p. 285, note (p); and, as to the procedure where a lease subject to a registered charge has been determined by re-entry, see Pantlin v. Evans, [1911] W. N. 80. Where a title to registered land has been acquired by possession, the register may be rectified under this provision; see Land Transfer Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c. 65), s. 12; title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, Vol. XIX., p. 159. Rights acquired, or in course of being acquired, under the Statute of Limitations are not deemed to be incumbrances (see p. 311, ante), and the registered land is, therefore, subject to them (Land Transfer Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 87), s. 18, as altered by the Land Transfer Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c. 65), Sched. I.).

SECT. 3.

Rectification
under the Land Transfer
Act, 1897.

Under the Land Transfer Act, 1897 (f), where a registered disposition would, if unregistered, be absolutely void, or where the effect of any error, omission, or entry in the register would be to deprive a person of land of which he is in possession, or in receipt of the rents and profits, the register must be rectified (f), notwithstanding that this displaces an estate or right acquired by registration (g).

Where practicable the land certificate or certificate of charge must be produced on any rectification of the register (h).

certificate

601 Indemnity can be given in the following cases :—

(1) Where any error or omission is made in the register, or an entry is made or procured by fraud or mistake, and rectification cannot be made. The person suffering loss—that is, in general, the true owner of the registered land or charge—is entitled to indemnity (i).

Cases in which indemnity may be given.

(2) Where the register is rectified because a registered disposition is, as a disposition, absolutely void, or because the effect of such error, omission, or entry would be to interfere with the possession, the person suffering loss by the rectification—that is, the registered proprietor—is entitled to indemnity (k).

(e) Land Transfer Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 87), s. 96. Ibid., s. 95, provides for rectification in cases where rights exist adverse to the registered title, ibid., s. 96, appears to be intended to meet cases of default on the part of the Land Registry Office; see Brickdale and Sheldon, Land Transfer Acts, 2nd ed., p. 232. The court referred to in the Land Transfer Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 87), s. 95, is "any court of competent jurisdiction," i.e., any court by which the adverse right is established, the court referred to in ibid., s. 96, is the court as defined for the purposes of the Acts (Land Transfer Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 87), s. 114; Land Transfer Rules, 1903, r. 299). The Land Transfer Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 87), s. 114, contemplates that the county court may be prescribed by rule as an appropriate court, but this has not been done.

(f) Land Transfer Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c. 65), s. 7.

(g) Rectification in this case is not expressed to be subject to estates or rights acquired by registration; any such estates or rights may be the subject of indemnity; see the text, infra. The creation of the insurance fund, indeed, enabled the area of rectification to be extended; see A.-G. v. Odell, [1906] 2 Ch. 47, 73, C. A.

(h) Land Transfer Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c. 65), s. 8 (1).

(i) Ibid., s. 7 (1), which refers only to cases where rectification cannot be made "under the principal Act." Probably this must be construed as covering cases for rectification under either Act, since the procedure for rectification is established under the Land Transfer Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 87) (Brickdale and Sheldon, Land Transfer Acts, 2nd ed., p. 309). The register may be rectified either in the cases provided for by the Land Transfer Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 87), ss. 95, 96, or in the cases provided for by the Land Transfer Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c. 65), s. 7 (2). If there is an error in the register, and the case is not within any of these provisions, a claim for indemnity may arise in favour of the person damaged by the error.

(k) Land Transfer Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c. 65), s. 7 (2). In this case the register may be overridden, and the registered proprietor displaced in favour of the true owner; the registered proprietor is then, if his case is otherwise suitable entitled to indemnity.

tration of

 forgery

(8) Where the register is rectified by reason of fraud or mistake in a registered disposition for value, which the grantee was not aware of and could not by the exercise of reasonable care have discovered, the person suffering loss by the rectification—that is, in general, the grantee—is entitled to indemnity (l).

602. In all cases the right to indemnity is forfeited where the claimant has caused or substantially contributed to the loss by his own act, neglect, or default; and the omission to use the statutory means of protecting equitable interests is such neglect (m).

603. Registration is, in general, a merely ministerial act on the part of the registrar, and where a forged document is presented to him and he makes a change in the register in pursuance of it, the person whose registered title is thus displaced is entitled to have the register rectified, and the person presenting the forged document has no claim to indemnity (n). But it is otherwise if the registration is made after judicial investigation of title by the registrar, and the insurance fund then guarantees to the registered proprietor that the title is good (o).

Part VII.—Actions to Recover Land.

Real action

604. Formerly actions to recover land varied in form according as they were brought to recover a freehold or leasehold interest, i.e., to recover seisin or possession. Seisin might be recovered in a real action, either proprietary or possessory (p). The possessory action assumed that the claimant had a right of entry, but under certain circumstances—where, for instance, a disseisor had died in possession and the tortious freehold had descended to his heir—the right of entry was “tolled” and the owner was left to his proprietary action (q).

Action of ejectment.

A lessee for years could recover possession in an action of ejectment (a). This did not rank as a real action (b), and the procedure was simpler; and, since the right of the lessee to recover

(n) A.-G. v. Odell, [1906] 2 Ch. 47, C. A. Thus, in general, registration is no protection against loss by forgery, that is, it does not give the protection provided in the case of shares where a company has adopted the Forged Transfer Acts, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 43), and 1892 (55 & 56 Vict. c. 36); see title COMPANIES, Vol. V., p. 195; compare Gibbs v. Messer, [1891] A. C. 248, P. C., decided on the Transfer of Land Act in Victoria; and see Brickdale and Sheldon, Land Transfer Acts, 2nd ed., p. 308, where it is suggested that the Land Transfer Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c. 65), s. 7 (1), excludes the principle of Gibbs v. Messer, supra, but this, as A.-G. v. Odell, supra, shows, is not so.

under his leasehold title depended on the right of the lessor to grant the lease, the action was utilised for the purpose of establishing the freehold title. Instead of suing in his own name in a real action, the claimant sued in the name of a fictitious lessee (c). The convenience of the procedure was so great that real actions fell into disuse save where the claimant had lost his right of entry, for ejectment assumed this 'right'. At length the possibility of the right of entry being severed from the title was abolished, and so were real actions (d). Ejectment, shorn at a later date of its fictitious incidents (e), became the only means of recovering land, whether freehold or leasehold, and this remedy now exists under the form of the action to recover possession of land (f). A claimant can thus assert his title either by entry (g) or by action (h), but if he asserts it of action.

(c) The full proceedings required a lease, an entry by the lessee, and an ouster of the lessee, but the real owner, if not made a defendant, could not come in to defend without leave, and the court took this opportunity to make the non-essential parts of the procedure fictitious. The person wishing to defend was required to enter into a consent rule whereby he admitted the lease, entry, and ouster, and the trial took place upon the claimant's title; see the account of the proceedings in 3 Bl Com 202; and, for form of proceedings, see ibid. Appendix, p. vii. (f) See Gledhill v Hunter (1880), 14 Ch. D. 492; title ACTION, Vol. I., pp. 34 et seq., 44 et seq.

(g) A mere entry is not necessarily equivalent to taking possession (Real Property Limitation Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c. 27), s. 10, Randall v. Stevens (1853), 2 E. & B. 641, 652, Doe d. Baker v. Coombes (1850), 9 C. B. 714; see Worsam v. Vandenbrande (1868), 17 W. R. 53, Solling v. Broughton, [1893] A. C. 556, P. C. (where the acts of the person entering were equivalent to taking possession); and see title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, Vol. XIX, p. 129). The person entitled to possession may himself enter (Taylor v. Cole (1789), 3 Term Rep. 292; Taunton v. Costar (1797), 7 Term Rep. 431, Davis v. Burrell (1851), 10 C. B. 821; Wildbor v. Ranforth (1828), 8 B. & C. 4, Turner v. Meymott (1823), 1 Bing. 158; Wright v. Burroughes (1846), 3 C. B. 685); or enter by an agent (Butcher v. Butcher (1827), 7 B. & C. 399; Hey v. Moorhouse (1839), 6 Bing. (N. C.) 52; Jones v. Chapman (1849), 2 Exch. 803), or by a tenant (Doe d. Hanley v. Wood (1819), 2 B. & Ald. 724), or may ratify an entry made by a stranger (Fitchet v. Adams (1740), 2 Stra. 1128), and the fact that he has obtained judgment for possession at a future date does not preclude him from peaceably entering prior to that date (Jones v. Foley, [1891] 1 Q. B. 730). An entry under title upon part of the property operates as an entry on the whole (Littleton's Tenures, s. 417; Cotton's Case (1590), Cro. Eliz. 189); formerly it was necessary that the property should be all in one county (Co. Litt. 252 b); and, as to entry generally, see Cole, Law and Practice in Ejectment, pp. 66 et seq.

(h) The action may be brought in the High Court or, in some cases, in the county court; see title COUNTY COURTS, Vol. VIII, pp. 435 et seq. In the case of small tenements or deserted promises, a landlord can obtain an order for possession by summary proceedings before magistrates; see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII, pp. 559 et seq. Summary proceedings before magistrates are also available under special statutes in special cases, e.g., schoolhouses (Grammar Schools Act, 1840 (3 & 4 Vict. c. 77), s. 19; School Sites Act, 1841 (4 & 5 Vict. c. 38), ss. 17, 18; see title EDUCATION, Vol. XII., p. 121, note (e)); allotments (Inclosure Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 118), s. 111; see title ALLOTMENTS, Vol. I., p. 337); parish by entry this can only be done in a peaceable manner; otherwise he is liable to criminal proceedings under the Statutes of Forcible Entry (t).

605. An action to recover possession of land is commenced by the issue of a writ of summons indorsed with a claim for recovery of possession (k). In certain cases, where a landlord is seeking to recover possession from a tenant (l), or a mortgagee is claiming possession of the mortgaged property and the mortgagor has attorned tenant to him (m), the writ may be specially indorsed (n), and judgment recovered by summary procedure (o).

The plaintiff is entitled to join with the claim for recovery of the land a claim for mesne profits (p), or arrears of rent, or double value (q), or damages for breach of any contract under which the property (Poor Relief Act, 1819 (59 Geo. 3. c. 12), ss. 24, 25; Local Government Act 1894 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 73), s. 6 (1) (c) (iii); see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., p. 252), charity lands (Charitable Trusts Act, 1860 (23 & 24 Vict. c. 136), s. 13); and, in some cases, Crown lands (Defence Act, 1859 (22 Vict. c. 12), s. 5; Admiralty Lands and Works Act, 1864 (27 & 28 Vict. c. 57), s. 12, see title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VII., p. 91). The Crown may also recover possession of lands by information of intrusion (see title CROWN PRACTICE, Vol. X., pp. 5, 6), in which case the defendant must prove his title unless the Crown has been out of possession for twenty years (ibid., p. 6).

(i) See titles CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., pp. 474 et seq., LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., p. 557, note (m). As to whether the issue of the writ is equivalent to re-entry, see ibid., p. 536; and see Yearly Practice of the Supreme Court, 1913, p. 7.

(k) See R. S. C., Appendix A, Part III, s. iv., and, as to the parties, see, generally, title PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE, Vol. XXIII., pp. 99, 101, 102. An action brought to establish title only, without claiming possession, does not rank as an action for recovery of land (Gledhill v. Hunter (1880), 14 (Ch. D. 492). As to discovery in such action, see title DISCOVERY, INSPECTION, AND INTERROGATORIES, Vol. XI., pp. 103, 104.

(l) See title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., p. 558.

(m) See title MORTGAGE, Vol. XXI., p. 159.

(n) R. S. C., Ord. 3, r. 6, see title PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE, Vol. XXIII., p. 112; Yearly Practice of the Supreme Court, 1913, pp. 15, 19. The relationship of landlord and tenant should be shown on the face of the writ (Keenan v. Carson, [1897] 2 I. R. 234).

(o) R. S. C., Ord. 14, see title JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS, Vol. XVIII., p. 190.

(p) Under the old procedure in ejectment, the recovery of mesne profits was a distinct proceeding from recovery of the land. The claimant first recovered in ejectment, and then brought trespass for mesne profits (Astin v. Parkin (1758), 2 Burr. 665). The recovery in ejectment was evidence of his title from the day of the demise stated in the declaration, but for any earlier period special proof of title had to be given (Barnett v. Gursford (Earl) (1855), 11 Exch. 19, Ocean Accident and Guarantee Corporation v. Ilford Gas Co., [1905] 2 K. B. 493, 498, C. A.; Adams, Action of Ejectment, 2nd ed. p. 342). The profits could only be recovered for six years before action brought, since trespass for mesne profits was subject to the Limitation Act, 1623 (21 Jac. 1, c. 16), see Buller, Law of Nisi Prius, p. 88. It seems that, at any rate as between landlord and tenant, mesne profits may be calculated up to the date on which the plaintiff obtains possession (Southport Tramways Co. v. Gundy, [1897] 2 Q. B. 66; Hamill v. M'Donnell, [1909] 2 I. R. 104); and see titles JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS, Vol. XVIII., pp. 190, note (i), 194, note (e); LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., p. 558. The necessity for bringing a separate action does not now exist, and the claim for mesne profits is made in the action for recovery of the land; but it is still subject to the six years' limitation, see title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, Vol. XIX., p. 51, note (b).

land is held, or for any wrong or injury to the premises claimed; but he cannot join any other claim except by leave of the court (r). The land claimed should be so described in the writ that the description may, if necessary, be the foundation for a writ of possession (s).

PART VII.
Actions to Recover
Land.

As a rule, all persons in possession of the land of which the plaintiff claims possession should be joined as defendants to the writ (a), but in every case regard must be had to the circumstances (b).

Defendants.

606. The plaintiff in his statement of claim (c) must state his title with sufficient particularity to show how he derives his title to the land. A mere general statement that he is entitled under certain documents is not enough. He must set out their effect (d); but it is not necessary to give the exact words unless they are material (e). If he has not himself been in possession, he must trace his title from a person who has been in possession, and show the successive links in his title (f). He need not set out the defendant's title, it is in general sufficient to state that the defendant is in possession (g). If the defendant pleads the Statute of Limitations (h), the plaintiff must prove a title not extinguished by the statute (i).

Roe* (1844), 1 Dow & L. 657), or the landlord alone where the tenants are numerous (Geen v. Herrang, supra, Roe v. Wiggs (1806), 2 Bos. & P. (N. Where the defendant is not in possession by himself or his tenant, the person who is in possession, if ejected, may have the judgment set aside on being added as a defendant (Manet v. Johnson (1890), 63 L. T. 507, C. A.; and see title PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE, Vol. XXIII, p. 126). 607. If no appearance is entered to the writ, or if an appearance is entered, but the defence is limited to a part of the land only, judgment can be entered for possession of the land, or of the part to which the defence does not apply (k). If a claim for mesne profits, arrears of rent, double value, damages for breach of contract, or injury to the premises has been indorsed, judgment may in the same case be entered for this claim also (l).

608. A landlord cannot require his tenant to defend the action on giving him an indemnity (m), nor can he defend in his tenant's name (n), but any person not named as a defendant in the writ may, by leave of the court or a judge, appear and defend on filing an affidavit showing that he is in possession either by himself or his tenant (o). If he appears as landlord, he must so state in his appearance (p), and he must give notice of appearance to the plaintiff's solicitor (q). A tenant is bound to give his landlord notice of an action for recovery of possession brought against him (r).

609 The plaintiff must prove that he is entitled to recover the land as against the person in possession. He recovers on the strength of his own title, not on the weakness of the defendant's (s). But this does not mean that he is bound to show a title good against all the world. Possession in itself is a good title as against everyone except the true owner (t), and if one who has been in possession is wrongfully dispossessed, he is entitled to recover possession against the wrongdoer, notwithstanding that the true title may be shown to be in a third person (a). Whether an equitable owner is entitled to recover possession without bringing the legal title before the court is not settled, but apparently he is (b).

PART VII—ACTIONS TO RECOVER LAND.

610. A defendant who is in possession by himself or his tenant need not plead his title unless he relies on an equitable estate or right, or claims relief on an equitable ground (c) against a title asserted by the plaintiff. Save in the excepted cases, it is sufficient for him to plead that he is in possession, and this implies that he denies or does not admit the allegations of fact contained in the statement of claim (d). The defence may be limited to a part only of the land (e).

PART VII.

to Recover
Land.

Defence of defendant in possession.

611. If the defendant appears, but does not deliver a defence within the time limited for that purpose, the plaintiff can enter a judgment for possession with costs (f); and also for any claim for mesne profits, arrears of rent, double value, damages for breach of contract, or injury to the premises which is indorsed on the claim (g).

Judgment in default of defence.

612. Judgment in the action (h), being merely for the possession of the property, is not conclusive as to the title of the parties (i). It follows that an unsuccessful claimant may immediately commence another action (h), or a defendant who has been ejected may bring his action for recovery of possession against the claimant (i). The first judgment is, however, admissible as evidence in the second action between the same parties and those claiming under them (m), and the court has power to stay the second action until the costs of the first action have been paid (n).

Part VIII.—Extinguishment of Title.

SECT. 1.—Forfeiture.

In general.

613. An estate in land may be forfeited for alienation in mortmain, for breach of condition, for waste, and for denying the title of the lord under whom the land is held (o).

Alienation
in mortmain.

Alienation in mortmain is an alienation of lands or tenements to any corporation, sole or aggregate, ecclesiastical or temporal (p). Such an alienation is a cause of forfeiture to the Crown or mesne lord (if any) (a), unless made by licence from the

(n) See title PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE, Vol XXIII, pp. 157 et seq., and see Tickborne v Mostyn (1872), L R. 8 C P 29

(o) As to forfeiture, see, generally, 2 Bl Com 267 et seq., as to forfeiture by limited owners, see Co. Litt 251 a et seq. Formerly forfeiture was incurred by attainder for high treason or conviction for petit treason or felony. As to high-treason and petit treason, see title CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol IX, pp 450 et seq. High treason involved the absolute forfeiture of estates of inheritance, and the forfeiture of estates for life or years during the continuance of the estate (Treason Act, 1351 (25 Edw 3, stat. 5, c. 2): 3 Co Inst 1, 19, 4 Bl Com 381) In petit treason and felony the offender forfeited his chattels real absolutely, and his freehold estates during his life, and after his death the Crown took his lands held in fee simple (but not in fee tail) for a year and a day, with the right to commit unlimited waste (4 Bl Com. 385). The penalty of forfeiture was restricted to the life of the offender, save in high treason, petit treason, and murder, by the Corruption of Blood Act, 1814 (54 Geo 3, c 145). As to the abolition of petit treason, see title CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol IX, p 450, note (l) Forfeiture was abolished by the Forfeiture Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict c 23) In lieu thereof the property of the convict vests in an administrator (ibid, s 9; and see titles CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol IX, p 429, PRISONS, Vol XXIII, pp 261 et seq.). Bankruptcy also involves a species of forfeiture, since all the property of a bankrupt passes to his trustee in bankruptcy; see title BANKRUPTCY AND INSOLVENCY, Vol II, p 95 Formerly a feoffment in fee by a tenant for life or a fine was a forfeiture of his estate It vested a tortious fee in the feoffee, but gave the remainderman an immediate right of entry (see note (p), p 177, ante, note (h), p 291, ante, 2 Bl Com. 274, and see pp. 248, 249, ante); but now that feoffments have no tortious operation, this cause of forfeiture does not exist; see (Hallis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p 150. Alienation to an alien was a cause of forfeiture (2 Bl Com 274), but this also is obsolete; see the Naturalization Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 14), s. 2, title ALIENS, Vol. I, p. 309.

(p) 2 Bl Com. 268. As to ecclesiastical corporations, see title ECCLESIASTICAL LAW, Vol. XI., pp. 792 et seq. as to lay corporations, see title CORPORATIONS, Vol. VIII, pp. 367 et seq. As to ownership of property by corporations generally, see ibid, pp. 365 et seq.

(a) This restriction was aimed chiefly at the religious houses, and they attempted to evade it by taking grants of land and Crown (b), or under the powers of a statute (c). But it does not immediately vest the estate in the Crown or mesne lord; it only gives them a right of entry (d). SECT. 1.

Forfeiture

An estate created upon condition can be defeated by re-entry for breach of the condition (e). Breach of condition.

Waste committed by tenant in dower, by the curtesy, for life, or for years, is by statute a cause of forfeiture in favour of the owner of the inheritance (f); but in practice this remedy for waste is obsolete (g). Waste.

Denial of the lord's title might under the feudal system be a cause of forfeiture (h), and it may still be a ground of forfeiture as between landlord and tenant (i). Denial of lord's title.

SECT. 2—Escheat.

614 Upon the death of a tenant in fee simple intestate and without leaving an heir-at-law, the land escheats to the lord of whom Escheat.

immediately reconveying to the grantor as tenant under them; thus gave the pretext for subsequently entering and holding the land (2 Bl. Com. 269); the device was intended to be checked by Magna Carta, 1217 (2 Hen. 3), c. 43 (see Digby, History of the Law of Real Property, 5th ed., p. 133), and a general prohibition against alienation in mortmain was enacted by the Statute De Religiosis (1279), 7 Edw. 1, stat. 2, c. 13. It was still possible, however, for a religious house or other corporation to obtain land by means of a collusive action, hence the Statute of Westminster II. (1285), 13 Edw. 1, c. 32, provided for an inquiry into the demandant's title, and, if he had no title, the land was forfeited to the next lord of the fee, and, as to these statutes, see Digby, History of the Law of Real Property, 5th ed., pp. 219 et seq. The Statute Quia Emptores (1290), 18 Edw. 1, c. 1 (see p. 144, ante), in authorising alienations generally, expressly excluded alienations in mortmain (ibid., s. 3). As to the attempts to evade forfeiture by means of grants to uses, see note (p), p. 272, ante.

(b) The method of obtaining the King's licence was prescribed by stat. (1299) 27 Edw. 1, stat. 2; and stat. (1306) 34 Edw. 1, stat. 3, preserved the rights of mesne lords. The prerogative right was affirmed by stat. (1344) 18 Edw. 3, stat. 3, c. 3, and again by stat. (1695—6) 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 37, and the latter statute dispensed with the necessity of the mesne lords consenting to the licence. Forfeiture to the Crown and to mesne lords, and the grant of licences in mortmain, is now governed by the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 42), ss. 1, 2, see title CORPORATIONS, Vol. VIII, p. 368, note (k). As to the procedure to obtain a licence, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XII., p. 759, note (w).

SECT. 2. the land is hold ; usually this is the Crown. The subject of escheat Escheat. is fully dealt with elsewhere (k).

SECT. 3.—Merger.

The principle
of merger,

615. Merger is an act of law (l), and, prior to the alteration effected by statute (m), took place when a particular estate in land and a subsequent estate both became vested in the same person without any intervening estate in another person (n). The particular estate was then at law merged or drowned in the subsequent estate (o). In general, it was essential that the particular estate should not be greater than the subsequent estate (p).

Where there is no merger
at law.

616. The principle of merger was, however, subject to two exceptions. There was no merger at law if the person in whom the two interests united held them in different rights, where, for instance, he held a term of years as executor and the reversion in his own right (q) ; and an estate tail in freeholds has always been

(k) See p. 145, ante, titles CROWN PRACTICE, Vol. X., pp 35 et seq, DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, Vol. XI, pp. 23 et seq, and as to escheat in the case of equitable estates, see ibid, p 24, title EQUITY, Vol. XIII, p 95.

(l) 3 Preston, Conveyancing, p. 6. the whole of the third volume of this work is devoted to the subject of merger

(m) Judicature Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict. c 66), s 25 (4).

(n) 2 Bl Com. 177 ; 3 Preston, Abstracts of Title, 50, Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed, p 86, and see Wescot's Case (1599), 2 Co Rep 60 b, 61 b, note (iv).

(o) 2 Bl. Com. 177. The operation of merger is similar to that of surrender (see p 292, ante), and hence it is said that a merger only takes place where a surrender of the particular estate to the owner of the subsequent estate is possible (3 Preston, Conveyancing, p 152, Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed, p 87) ; but an express surrender takes effect in accordance with the intention of the parties, and the merger is then a consequence of the surrender, see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII, p 547. Merger at law is independent of intention and follows upon the mere vesting of the estates in the same person ; see Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed, p 88, as to the different effect in certain cases of surrender and merger.

(p) 3 Preston, Conveyancing, p 50. Thus a term of years will merge in the reversion (Capital and Counties Bank, Ltd v. Rhodes, [1903] 1 Ch 631, 652, C. A., 2 Bl Com 177), and a partial merger could take place at law where the term or the reversion was held in undivided moieties (Bovy's (Sir Ralph) Case (1672), 1 Vent 193, White v Greenish (1861), 11 C. B. (N. S.) 209, 233). An estate for life will merge in the inheritance in reversion (Co. Litt. 338 b, Re Dunsany's Settlement, Nott v. Dunsany, [1906] 1 Ch. 578, 582, C. A., 3 Preston, Conveyancing, p. 255) ; and, since an estate for a man's own life is deemed to be larger than an estate pur autre vie (see p 178, ante), the latter estate may merge in the former, but not vice versa (ibid, Re Barry Rail Co and Wimbome (Lord) (1897), 76 L. T. 489, 492) ; and see Lemon v. Mark, [1899] 11 R 416, 435, C. A. But this rule does not apply to terms of years, and a term in possession merges in a shorter term in reversion ; see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII, p. 552. As to the effect of a release or a surrender, see p. 292, ante.

(q) 2 Bl Com. 177 ; 3 Preston, Conveyancing, pp. 50, 309 ; Chambers v. Kingham (1878), 10 Ch. D. 743 ; Re Radcliffe, Radcliffe v. Bewes, [1892] 1 Ch. 227, 231, C. A. ; or a term of years in his own right and the reversion in right of his wife (Co. Litt. 338 b, Platt (Lady) v. Sleep (1611), Cro. Jac. 275 ; Jones v Davies (1861), 7 H. & N 507, Ex. Ch ; Doe d. Blight v. Pott (1840), 11 Ad. & El. 842 ; Hurley v. Hurley, [1908] 11 R. 393), exempt from merger, and consequently cannot be destroyed by coming in contact with another estate tail or a remainder in fee simple in the same person (v).

SECT. 3.
Merger.

617. In equity, the question of merger does not depend upon the mere fact of the union of the estates in the same person, but upon the intention of the parties concerned (s); and this intention may either be express, or it may be implied from the nature of the estates or other circumstances (t). In this respect the same principles apply to the merger of estates and to the merger of charges in the and (u); and it is now provided that there shall be no merger by operation of law only of any estate the beneficial interest in which would not be deemed to be merged or extinguished in equity (v). Consequently in questions of merger, whether arising in reference to legal or equitable estates, the equitable rule now prevails, and merger is not recognised as having taken place contrary to the intention, express or implied, of the parties (w).

Equitable principles applicable to merger.

618. When the same person has the legal estate in fee simple and is absolutely entitled as cestui que trust to the beneficial

Extinguishment analogous to merger.

But it seems that merger was only prevented in this case where the union of estates took place by act of law, and might follow on an assignment, notwithstanding the estates were held in different rights (3 Preston, Conveyancing, p 285, Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p 92), and a difference has been suggested where a termor holds a term of years in his own right and the freehold in right of another, or the term in right of another and the freehold in his own right. In the former case there is a merger and he loses his term, in the latter there is no merger and the other person's right is saved (Co Litt 338 b, Nurse v Yeworth (1674), 3 Swan 608, 618). But the distinction has been questioned (see 3 Preston, Conveyancing, p 278, Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p 92); and these subtleties are now practically obsolete in consequence of the prevalence of the equitable rule.

(r) Wiscot's Case (1599), 2 Co. Rep 60 b, 61 a ("An estate tail cannot be merged nor surrendered, nor extinguished by accession of a greater estate"), Roe d Crow v. Baldwre (1793), 5 Term Rep 104, 109, Van Grutten v Forwell, Forwell v Van Grutten, [1897] A C 658, 679, 2 B Com 177; 3 Preston, Conveyancing, pp 246, 341; Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p 93. But in the case of copyholds, the rule is different; see title COPYHOLDS, Vol VIII, p 111, and an estate tail after possibility of issue extinct (see p 174, ante), merges on the acquisition of the fee (Co Litt 27 b, 3 Preston, Conveyancing, p 240).

(w) As to the equitable doctrine of merger, see, further, Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., pp. 94 et seq. On the union of a term and the reversion in the lessee, an intention to prevent merger may be gathered from subsequent dealings with the property (Lea v Thurstby, [1904] 2 Ch. 57). As to the statutory extinction of satisfied terms, see p. 271, ante.

Douglas* (1884), 28 Ch D. 327 (where an equitable estate acquired by an heir under an election merged in the legal estate acquired as heir). An equitable estate held by tenants in common may merge in an equal and co-extensive legal estate held by the same persons as joint tenants (Re Selous, Thomson v. Selous, [1901] 1 Ch 921), see note (n), p 201, ante, but there is no merger if the equitable and legal estates are not co-extensive (Brydges v. Brydges, Philips v. Brydges (1796), 3 Ves 120, 126; Merest v. James (1821), Madd. & G. 118).

PART I.
Appointment out of Court.

Part I.—Appointment out of Court.

619. A receiver is either (1) an agent appointed out of court by individuals or corporations for the collection or protection of property, or (2) an officer of the court appointed by the court for a similar purpose. Receivers appointed out of court have such powers, duties, and liabilities as are defined by the instrument or statute under which they are appointed and by the general law of agency (a).

Receiver: either an agent or an officer of the court.

620. The most familiar instances of appointment out of court are in the cases of mortgages and debentures. Debentures or the covering trust deed usually give an express power to appoint a receiver of the property comprised in the security in certain specified events; but, in the case of mortgages, such a power is usually omitted in reliance on the statutory provisions (b), which empower a mortgagee by deed, in certain events (c), to appoint a receiver of the mortgaged property with certain specified powers and duties. These statutory provisions with regard to receivers can, however, be varied, or added to, or wholly excluded, by agreement between the mortgagor and mortgagee either in the mortgage itself or in a separate deed (d).

In the case of mortgages by deed of land executed prior to the 1st January, 1882, when the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict c 41), came into force, the powers conferred on mortgagees by Lord Cranworth's Act, stat. (1860) 23 & 24 Vict c 145, ss 11—24 (now repealed), including the power of appointing a receiver, are still available, see Re Solomon and Meagher's Contract (1889), 40 Ch. R.), 364, 368. It is not unusual in mortgages and debentures to provide for the appointment of a manager as well as of a receiver; see, for instance, Re Rylands Glass and Engineering Co., Ltd., York City and County Banking Co., Ltd v. The Co (1904), 118 L T Jo 87. Paterson v. Gas Light and Coke Co., [1896] 2 Ch 476, 477, C A. *Re Hale, Lilley v. PART I.
Appointment out of Court.

Agency.
Disqualification of mortgagee.
Power to distrain.

A receiver appointed by a mortgagee, whether under the statutory power (e) or under a power in the mortgage (f), is as a general rule the agent of the mortgagor, not of the mortgagee.

Though a mortgagee may have a receiver at the expense of the mortgagor, he cannot stipulate to be receiver of the rents and profits himself with a commission (g).

If the mortgagor attorns tenant to the receiver, the relation of landlord and tenant thereby constituted justifies distress by the receiver in his own name, notwithstanding that he has no legal reversion to which a right of distress could attach (h), but distress cannot be levied by a receiver appointed under the statute (i) after the mortgagee's interest in the property has determined (j), and a mere agent to receive rents cannot distrain or serve notice to quit (k) unless he has also authority to let (l).

When foreclosure pending

When an action for foreclosure is pending, it is desirable that the appointment should be made by the court rather than by the plaintiff mortgagee (m).

Appointment by debenture holders.

621. Debentures issued by a company in the ordinary form, giving a floating charge only, are not mortgages within the meaning of the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (n), and debenture-holders are not entitled to appoint a receiver out of court unless expressly authorised to do so by the terms of their security (o). It may be, however, that trustees of a debenture trust deed which gives a specific charge on property of the company are mortgagees (p) within the meaning of the Act (n).

ferred by debentures or a covering trust deed in the usual form is regarded as the agent of the company, even if there is no express stipulation to that effect (g); but, if the form is unusual and the nature of the powers which the receiver is authorised to exercise is inconsistent with an intention that he should act as the agent of the company, he is regarded as the agent of the debenture-holders (r).

622. A receiver appointed out of court, being an agent only, is not primâ facie personally liable in respect of transactions properly entered into by him as receiver (s). If, however, a receiver gives his personal promise to pay a debt for which his principals may become liable, he is bound thereby (t); but the question whether the promise is the personal promise of the agent or the promise only of his principals depends in each case upon the intention of the parties, to be gathered from the terms of the document, if any, containing the promise (a). When a debenture trust deed provides that any receiver appointed thereunder shall be the agent of the company, and the company afterwards goes into liquidation so as to be unable any longer to employ agents to bind its property, it may be that the receiver, though not purporting to contract personally, is personally liable on contracts subsequently entered into by him, as for breach of an implied warranty of authority (b).

receiver.

From the fact that a receiver appointed out of court is an agent it follows that any payment on account of a debt, if made within the scope of his authority, may constitute an acknowledgment binding on his principal sufficient to take the case out of the Statutes of Limitation (c). Again, a receiver appointed by deed, unlike a receiver appointed by the court, may be constituted an express trustee, and would formerly have been unable to take the benefit of such statutes (d).

623. Though mortgages and debentures supply the most frequent instances of the appointment of a receiver out of court, such an appointment may be made in a variety of other circumstances, as, for example, by a landowner who desires by this means to secure to annuitants annuities which he has granted out of his estate (e), by a mortgagee in possession who resides at a distance from the mortgaged property or who for any other reason finds it impracticable to collect the rents personally (f), or by partners who wish to realise the assets of the partnership without the assistance of the court (g); a rector might formerly (h) have appointed a receiver of the tithes and profits of his rectory to secure charges thereon (i). So also a receiver may be appointed under an inspectorship deed to collect and receive for the benefit of creditors all debts and moneys due to the debtor (k), and a receiver and manager may be appointed by the trustees of settled estates with the consent of the tenant for life (l), or by the guardians of an infant (m).

But in all these cases the powers and duties of the receiver must depend on the terms of his appointment (n). If the deed of appointment, for instance, is silent as to remuneration, the receiver will be entitled only to a quantum meruit (o), and if it contains no directions as to the disposition of moneys to be received they will be held on behalf of the appointing party (p).

He is, therefore, not entitled to make any profit for himself out of moneys passing through his hands, and may be made to account for such profits even after his accounts have been passed and closed (q).

625. The appointment of a receiver by the court operates as a discharge of a previous appointment out of court by a party to the action (r), and the authority of a receiver appointed out of court, as of any other agent, is determined by the death of the principal (s).

SECT. 1.—Jurisdiction.

626. The appointment of receivers by the court is now generally made under the Judicature Act, 1873 (a), s. 25 (8), which provides that a receiver may be appointed by an interlocutory order of the court in all cases in which it appears to the court to be just or convenient that such order shall be made. The appointment may be made either before or after judgment, and a fortiori by the judgment itself or at the hearing of the action (b).

General
equitable
jurisdiction.

The effect of the statute (a) is to extend the jurisdiction to appoint a receiver, formerly exercised by the Court of Chancery, to all divisions of the High Court (c), to the Court of Appeal (d), and to every inferior court having jurisdiction in equity, or at law and in equity, and in Admiralty respectively, as regards all causes of action within its jurisdiction (e).

Division.

627. Of the three Divisions of the High Court, it is still in the Chancery Division, as representing in practice the old Court of Chancery (f), that the general jurisdiction to appoint a receiver is most frequently exercised.

In the King's Bench Division receivers are very frequently appointed by way of equitable execution (g), but seldom in other cases (h).

In the Probate, Divorce, and Admiralty Division the power conferred by the Judicature Act, 1873 (i), is not often invoked. In probate cases use is still made of the jurisdiction conferred on the old Court of Probate by the Court of Probate Act, 1857 (k), to appoint an administrator pendente lite of the personal estate of a deceased person or a receiver of the rents and profits of his real estate (l), but appointments may also be made under the Judicature Act, 1873 (h).

In divorce cases receivers are sometimes appointed by way of equitable execution under the Judicature Act, 1873 (i).

In Admiralty cases a receiver has been appointed in an action of co-ownership at the instance of one of two co-owners (d), and also in an action by an equitable mortgagee of ship and freight (e),

A county court has power to appoint a receiver of the rents and profits of an equity of redemption by way of equitable execution, notwithstanding that it could not have issued the writ of elegit which, under the old practice of the High Court, was a necessary preliminary to the appointment (R v Selfe, [1908] 2 K B 121)

but applications for a receiver are seldom made in Admiralty actions (f).

In the district registries of Liverpool and Manchester a receiver may be appointed where the parties consent, but not in hostile cases, nor, except in an extreme case, where the defendant is an executor or trustee (g). In other district registries it has been said that there is no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver (h), except by way of equitable execution (i).

In certain cases (k) justices have jurisdiction to appoint receivers.

628. An application for the appointment of a receiver under the Judicature Act, 1873 (l), must, in general, be made in a properly constituted action. It may be made by any party to the action, or, it would seem, by any person served with notice of, or attending any proceeding in, the action (m).

SECT. 2. a receiver without commencing an action (p), and mortgages under the Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (q), and the Public Health Act, 1875 (r), may be enforced in a similar way.

Application for Appointment.

A judgment creditor of a railway company may obtain the appointment of a receiver and, if necessary, of a manager of the undertaking of the company, on application by petition in a summary way to the Chancery Division (s).

So, also, the holders of mortgage debentures under the Mortgage Debenture Acts, 1865 and 1870 (t), may, subject to the provisions of those Acts, obtain the appointment of a receiver by petition or summons at chambers in the Chancery Division (u).

Holders of local loans.

Under the Local Loans Act, 1875 (v), if a local authority makes default for twenty-one days in payment of an amount not less than £500 due under the Act (v), the persons entitled may apply by petition to the county court for the appointment of a receiver of the local rates or property charged (w).

Loans on compensation fund.

Under the Licensing (Consolidation) Act, 1910 (a), there is a similar provision in case a compensation authority should make default for one month in paying an amount of not less than £50 due in respect of any loan under the Act (b).

Tithe rent-charge.

631. The recovery of arrears of tithe rentcharge may similarly be enforced by application to the county court for the appointment of a receiver (c).

Practice in King's Bench Division

632. In the King's Bench Division, where the appointment of receivers is in practice almost entirely confined to cases of equitable execution, the application is made by summons at chambers (d).

Practice in Chancery Division

In the Chancery Division the application is usually by motion in open court, but it may be made by summons at chambers where it

SECT. 2.
Application for Appointment.

633. When a plaintiff suing on behalf of a class obtains an order for a receiver, any member of the class who objects should apply by summons to be made a defendant in the action, so that he may take steps to get rid of the order or to take the conduct of the proceedings out of plaintiff's hands. He is not allowed to intervene simply by appealing against the order (i).

Plaintiff suing on behalf of a class

634. It is not necessary that the appointment of a receiver should have been claimed by the writ or even by the statement of claim (k), unless such appointment is a substantial part of the relief sought (l). Leave to amend the writ will be given if necessary (m). Similarly a receiver may be appointed in the Court of Appeal, though the appointment has not been asked for in the court below (n).

When appointment may be made although not claimed by writ.

It is not necessary, in a foreclosure action, to proceed by writ rather than by originating summons in order to get a receiver appointed (o).

636. When an action has been commenced, the writ or originating summons must as a rule be served on the defendant before a receiver can be appointed(s). A receiver is not as a rule appointed if the persons principally interested in the property to be affected are not before the court(t); but if the defendant has absconded, or if for any other reason it is found impossible to serve him, or if there is imminent danger of the property being lost, a receiver may be appointed before service on an ex parte application supported by affidavit(u).

637. When the writ has been served, notice should be given, if possible, to the defendant of any intended application for a receiver. A receiver is not appointed on an ex parte motion, either before or after appearance, in the absence of special circumstances(a); and ex parte applications for the appointment of a receiver by way of equitable execution are not granted, except in case of special emergency(b). Though a defendant has not appeared to the writ, an attempt should still be made to serve him personally with notice of any motion or summons for a receiver. It is not enough to file documents in the Central Office of the High Court as in default of appearance(c).

638 Though a plaintiff may in an urgent case apply for the appointment of a receiver even before service of the writ, a defendant can only apply after he has appeared to the writ, and then only on notice to the plaintiff (d); nor can he apply without first filing a counterclaim or a writ in a cross-action, unless his claim to relief arises out of the plaintiff's cause of action or is incidental to it (e). Application for Appointment.
Application by defendant

639 Though the death of a party does not cause abatement (f), a receiver cannot be appointed over the property of a deceased defendant until some duly constituted representative is before the court (g). In an administration action, however, a receiver may be appointed, notwithstanding the death of the sole defendant and executrix, on the plaintiff's undertaking to obtain forthwith the appointment of himself or some other person as administrator de bonis non (h). Effect of death of defendant.

640. A receiver cannot be appointed in a foreclosure action after order for foreclosure absolute, for this brings the proceedings to an end as far as the court is concerned (i), but it is otherwise in the case of actions for money demands, where the process of the court may still be invoked to enforce what is on the face of it a final judgment (k); and a receiver may be appointed after an order for administration or for foreclosure nisi if a proper case is made out (l), or after judgment in a partition action pending an appeal (m). SUB-SECT 3—Evidence in Support.

The affidavits in support of an application for a receiver should show the nature of the applicant's interest in the property, unless there is already on the pleadings an admission of title sufficient to give the applicant a locus standi (n), and the grounds on which he alleges that it is just and convenient that a receiver should Affidavits in support.

If it is asked that a named person should be appointed, an affidavit of his fitness for the post will also be required (q).

Affidavits sworn before action.

642. An affidavit sworn before action is valueless, even though filed after issue of the writ (r), but the court sometimes makes an order on such an affidavit, the applicant undertaking to have it resworn and refiled (s); and, exceptionally, when the defendant to a contemplated action is out of the jurisdiction and a writ cannot in consequence be issued without an application to the court (t), an affidavit in support of the application may be read, entitled in the matter of the Judicature Acts and of the contemplated action (u).

General statutory jurisdiction

643. The court has now statutory power to appoint a receiver whenever it appears just or convenient (u), and in exercise of this power it appoints a receiver in many cases in which the old Court of Chancery would not, as a matter of practice, have intervened (a), but the appointment is discretionary, and in cases where the Court of Chancery had previously no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver the court does not exercise the statutory power conferred on it (b).

Cases in which appointment will be made.

after he has taken possession (e), if the circumstances render it just and convenient (f). So, also, a receiver may be appointed of the rents and profits of land vested in legal tenants in common or joint tenants, even though no case of exclusion be made out (g); or of the estate of a deceased person notwithstanding that no legal representative has been constituted and no probate proceedings are pending (h); or at the instance of a judgment creditor notwithstanding that he has not taken advantage of the legal remedies open to him (i), provided the circumstances render it just and convenient (h). So an order for the payment of money into court may be enforced by the appointment of a receiver (l).

645. In cases of disputed title to land, the former rule was that the court would not interfere with the party in possession unless his title was obviously defective (m) or was affected by some equity (n), or the rents were in danger of being lost (o) or the property in danger of destruction (p). be entertained, and a receiver will be appointed if the court thinks that the plaintiff will probably succeed at the hearing and that, in all the circumstances of the case, the appointment is just and convenient (g).

The court considers the relative merits of the competing titles, notwithstanding that this may in effect deprive the defendant in an ejectment action of his privilege of not disclosing his title (r), and it also takes into consideration the length of the defendant's possession (s) and the position of the tenants, who might be called upon to pay their rents over again if the party in possession were not solvent (a). Similarly, a landlord suing to recover possession of demised premises as for breach of covenant may obtain a receiver of the rents and profits pending trial, if he shows a probability of success at the hearing (b), or if the circumstances render it just and convenient (c).

Vacant or adverse possession.

646. If no one is in possession of the property the court will appoint a receiver almost as of course, to prevent a scramble and to preserve the property until the rights of the parties are ascertained (d); and similarly a receiver will be appointed in an urgent case to prevent a stranger to the suit from obtaining a title by adverse possession (e).

647. Apart from appointments by way of equitable execution (f), or to enforce a charge (g), the general ground on which the court appoints a receiver is ultimately in every case the protection or preservation of property for the benefit of persons who have an interest in it. On this ground receivers are constantly appointed pending the trial of an action (h) or pending the constitution of a legal representative of a deceased person (i), or, if necessary, pending a reference to arbitration (j) or the trial of an interpleader issue (k), or pending proceedings in another court (l).

SECT. 3.
Grounds of Appointment.

648. Thus, in actions for the specific performance or rescission of contracts for the sale of land, and especially of mining property, a receiver, and if necessary a manager, is frequently appointed to preserve the property until the right is decided (m), and an unpaid vendor may have a receiver with a view to enforcing his lien (n).

Actions relating to sale of land.

649. In a partnership action, the fact that the surviving partner is endeavouring to divert the goodwill of the business to himself is sufficient ground for the appointment of a receiver and manager at the instance of the representative of a deceased partner (o). One of several legal co-owners may have a receiver pending a partition action if the rents are in danger of being lost (p); or a receiver may be appointed after decree in a partition action to ensure due receipt of rents and provision for outgoings pending an appeal (q).

Partnership and partition.

Again, any plaintiff who has a right to be paid out of a particular fund is entitled to an injunction or a receiver to prevent that fund being dissipated so as to defeat his rights (r), and receivers are frequently appointed to protect the estates of infants (s).

SECT. 3.
Grounds of Appointment.

Against
trustees.

650. The fact that trustees are not holding an even hand, but are receiving rents on behalf of one only of several claimants to the property, may justify the appointment of a receiver even before trial, if the applicant shows a prima facie title (a). Loss of trust funds, too, is prima facie evidence of a breach of trust sufficient to justify the appointment of a receiver (b); and a trustee of leasehold property, alleging that his co-trustees refuse to make any provision out of rents and profits for repairs, may obtain the appointment of a receiver in the interests of remaindermen to preserve the lease from risk of forfeiture (c).

Against tenant for life.

651. If a tenant for life of renewable leaseholds threatens to allow, or actually allows, the lease to expire, the remaindermen may have a receiver appointed in order to provide a fund for renewal or compensation as the case may be (d). A receiver of rents and profits may also be appointed against a tenant for life who, by refusing to produce title deeds, prevents the raising, by sale, of portions which have priority over his life interest (e). On the completion of a sale under order of the court, the vendor may have a receiver appointed to secure arrears of rent due to him (f).

Against
debtor under trust deed.

Trustees of a creditors' deed may obtain the appointment of a receiver against the debtor if he is shown to be wasting his assets in breach of covenants (g).

In other cases.

652. In numberless other cases persons who show a prima facie interest in property of any sort may, in a properly constituted action, if it appears to the court to be just and convenient, have a receiver appointed for its protection; but the appointment is not made unless the property is in danger (h).

Applicant's interest.

653. The applicant must satisfy the court that he has an interest in the property to be affected (i). A landlord, for instance, has not, as a rule, sufficient interest in the business carried on by his tenant to justify the appointment of a receiver over it, but, in the case of licensed premises, it may be necessary for the preservation of the premises as licensed premises to appoint a receiver of the licences with liberty to carry on the business so far as may be necessary to preserve them from forfeiture (k). Where a receiver of mining property is claimed on the ground of partnership, the applicant must show that the alleged partnership holds something more than a mere licence to work the mines (l).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Administration of Estates.

654. When proceedings are pending in the Probate, Divorce, and Admiralty Division of the High Court to determine who is entitled to administer the estate of a deceased person, applications for a receiver, if made at all, should be made to that Division, and are not, in the absence of special circumstances, entertained elsewhere (m). If no probate proceedings are pending, however, a receiver may still be appointed in a creditor's administration action in the Chancery Division (n) if the appointment is claimed by the writ (o).

tion does not hold, for the Probate court often appoints an administrator pendente lite after the appointment of a receiver in Chancery (q), but it does not appoint any other person than the Chancery receiver except for special reasons (r). On such an appointment being made, the Chancery court will discharge its receiver, but will retain control over him in his capacity as administrator and make such orders on him as it may think proper, for example, for payment of particular debts (s).

Grounds for appointment.

655. An executor will not be dispossessed on the mere ground of poverty (t); but the insolvency of an executor or administrator is a ground for the appointment of a receiver at the instance of either beneficiaries or creditors (a), and this is the case even if the insolvency occurs before the death of the testator, unless it is clearly shown that the testator was aware of the insolvency at the date of the will or deliberately refrained from altering his choice after knowledge of the circumstances. The court does not infer from the mere fact of the will not having been altered after bankruptcy that the testator intended to entrust his estate to an insolvent executor (b). Gross misconduct or personal disability on the part of an executor (c), wasting or misapplication of the assets (d), the retention of improper securities or other breach of duty (e), circumstances pointing to fraud in obtaining the execution of the will (f), admitted insufficiency of assets (g), or even the fact of

Similarly it was held, before the passing of the Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 75), that if a married woman were appointed executrix, the insolvency of her husband (Scott v. Becher (1817), 4 Price, 346), or even his residence out of the jurisdiction (Taylor v. Allen (1741), 2 Atk. 213), afforded sufficient ground for the appointment of a receiver.

permanent residence abroad (h), may also justify the appointment of a receiver (i). Similar principles are applicable to the appointment of a receiver against trustees (j).

SECT. 3.

of Appoint-
ment.

SUB-SECT. 4.—As between Co-owners.

656. As between legal co-owners of land, the court formerly would not appoint a receiver unless by consent (k), or unless the applicant was prevented from exercising his legal right of entering into possession and sharing in the management (l). Mining property, however, formed an exception to this rule (m). As between equitable co-owners, "exclusive occupation" by one owner, in the sense that he refuses to pay to his co-owners their proper share of rents and profits (n), has always been a ground for appointing a receiver, unless security for payment is given (o); and a co-owner, though not entitled to a receiver of the whole of the rents, could always obtain, if necessary, a receiver of a portion of the rents in proportion to his interest (p). Now, pending trial of a partition action, the court has jurisdiction to appoint a receiver at the instance of one of several co-owners, whether legal or equitable, notwithstanding that the party in actual occupation is not in exclusive occupation in the above sense: but the order is not made in the absence of special circumstances, if the occupying owner is willing to pay an occupation rent (q). Landowners.

As between co-owners of a ship, a receiver may be appointed if the managing owner is in embarrassed circumstances (r) or has shown a want of good faith towards his fellows (s); and, as between co-owners of a newspaper, a receiver may be appointed if the owner in possession refuses to account (t). SUB-SECT. 5.—In Aid of Creditors.

657. An order for alimony in divorce proceedings constitutes the wife a judgment creditor, and may entitle her to a receiver of her husband's interest under a settlement (a).

658. An incumbrancer is entitled to a receiver if default has been made in payment of the principal (b), or, in the case of an equitable charge, if his interest is in arrear (c); and, even if no default has been made, he may have a receiver appointed if he satisfies the court that his security is in jeopardy (d), and thus applies to the floating security constituted by a debenture as well as to specific charges (e).

In the case of mortgages of tolls of a public undertaking, the fact that interest is in arrear justifies the appointment of a receiver (f).

659. A plaintiff who is seeking to establish a claim as a general creditor against a defendant is not, before trial, granted a receiver of specific property of the defendant, unless the evidence is very clear in his favour and the risk of eventual injury to the defendant very small; but if the property is in no one's possession, a receiver may be appointed to preserve the property pending determination of the rights of the parties (g).

660. Under the Bankruptcy Act, 1883 (h), before any receiving order is made, the official receiver may be appointed interim receiver of the debtor's property with power to take possession at once.

SECT. 3.
Grounds of Appointment.

SUB-SECT. 6.—Reasons for Refusing.

661. A strong case must be made out to dispossess a party who is interested and who has the legal title (k). As against a prior legal mortgagee in possession, for instance, a receiver will not be appointed unless his debt has been wholly satisfied (l). The legal title, however, does not protect a party in possession from the appointment of a receiver if it has been acquired subject to existing equitable interests which he has failed to respect (m) or with notice of a lis pendens (n). Party in possession.

662. When the defendant in an administration action becomes bankrupt, the absence of the trustee in bankruptcy is no sufficient reason for refusing to appoint a receiver, though it may prevent the effectual prosecution of the action (o). When the property over which a receiver is claimed is in mortgage, it is no objection that the mortgagees are not before the court, for their rights will not be prejudiced by the order (p); and, generally, where all necessary parties are not before the court, it seems that a receiver may be appointed if the appointment cannot prejudice their interests (q). In the case, however, of a public trust, a receiver is not appointed in the absence of the Attorney-General (r). Effect of absence of parties

Grounds of Appointment.

Objection of parties.

Regard paid to rights of third parties.

Laches and acquiescence.

663. If the applicant makes out a case for a receiver, it is no ground for refusing to make the appointment that a majority of those interested in the property do not desire it (a), or that a prior incumbrancer objects (t).

664. In appointing a receiver, however, the court will take care to protect the rights of persons interested in the property other than the applicant (a). Thus, the appointment of a receiver at the instance of beneficiaries or unsecured creditors will be made without prejudice to the right of mortgagees to take possession (b); an appointment at the instance of puisne incumbrancers will be made without prejudice to the rights of prior incumbrancers (c), an inquiry as to priorities being directed, if necessary (d); and, after the death of a judgment debtor, the court will not, by appointing a receiver, assist one judgment creditor to obtain a preference over others who are not parties to the proceedings (e); and, generally, the court does not appoint a receiver if the appointment may involve grave risk of injury to the interests of other parties (f).

665. Laches and acquiescence on the part of the applicant may be a ground for refusing to appoint a receiver (g). Thus, one of several co-adventurers in a mining concern who has never interfered or asserted his title while it was being conducted at a loss, will not be allowed after many years to come forward in a time of prosperity and claim the appointment of a receiver on the ground of exclusion and mismanagement (h).

PART II.—APPOINTMENT BY THE COURT.

SECT. 3. Grounds of Appoint- ment.

666. Though the circumstances may justify the appointment of a receiver, the appointment is not made if it is sought for an improper purpose. Thus, a partner is not allowed, by getting himself appointed receiver, to obtain powers in excess of those authorised by the articles of partnership (i); nor is a receiver granted for the purpose of defeating an executor's legal right of retainer (k), or his right of preferring one creditor to another of the same degree (l); nor can a debtor obtain a receiver of his own property with a view to preventing his creditors from taking possession (m); and the court does not grant a receiver on an interlocutory application if it can only do so by prejudging the action itself (n).

Improper purpose.

667. A receiver will not be appointed if the appointment would be nugatory (o); but the fact that there is no person in whose name the receiver could sue to recover the property is not a sufficient ground for refusing a receiver (p), for the appointment at least operates as an injunction against receipt of the property by any party to the action (q).

Nugatory effect.

SECT. 4.—Choice of Person to be Appointed.

SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

668. On a motion for a receiver, the court does not usually appoint a named person there and then unless by consent (r), or unless the applicant is the only person interested in the property (s), but, in cases of urgency, a named person or even the applicant himself may be appointed to act at once as interim receiver, the applicant undertaking to abide by the order of the court and, if necessary, to be answerable in damages (t), and a judgment creditor is often so appointed (a).

669. In ordinary cases the appointment is referred to chambers, where it is the duty of the master to select, from among the various persons nominated by the parties interested, the person whom he considers in all the circumstances of the case best fitted to fill the post (b). In practice, the person nominated by the party having the carriage of the order is usually appointed, unless he is objected to and some other person shown to be better qualified (c), but special directions are sometimes given to the master that preference should be shown or should not be shown to the nominee of a particular party (d).

670. The court does not interfere with the discretion of the master in making the appointment unless the person he has selected is shown to be unfit (e) or some question of principle is involved (f), and any objection to the master's appointment should be made promptly (g). The mere allegation that someone else is better fitted for the post does not justify interference (h). The Court of Appeal is guided by similar considerations when asked to review an appointment by the judge (i).

671. An infant cannot be appointed a receiver (k). A peer of the realm has been said to be ineligible, because the ordinary remedies against a receiver, such as that of committal, are not available against him (l), and a beneficed clergyman is under a statutory disability in Ireland (m), and, semble, also in England (n), unless he acts without remuneration (o). It is also an objection that the person proposed has given security to the Crown which might result in all his property being swept away by prerogative process (p).

SECT. 4.
Choice of Person to be Appointed.

In the ordinary case of a receivership of the rents and profits of lands, it is not a fatal objection that the person nominated has no experience of estate management (q), or even that he is illiterate (r), provided that he is in other respects well qualified.

Qualification.

It is a serious objection, however, if he lives at a great distance from the estate (s), or if his own daily affairs leave no time for personal attention to the duties of the office. Thus, a barrister practising in London who is also a member of Parliament is not primâ facie a suitable receiver for a north country estate, though these objections may be outweighed by his position in the family and special confidence reposed in him by the testator (a); but neither a practising barrister nor a member of Parliament is disqualified as such (b).

Residence.

672. In the case of foreign property, a person resident in the foreign country may be appointed receiver, or an English receiver may be appointed and authorised to employ an agent abroad (c).

SECT. 4.

Choice of Person to be Appointed.

General principle as to parties and persons connected with them.

Persons who would otherwise control
receiver.

SUB-SECT 2 — Interested Party.

674. As a matter of principle, a person ought not to be appointed who has shown a partiality for one of the parties (e), or who proposes to act under the direction and control of one of the parties (f), or whose interests may conflict with his duties (g), though it may sometimes be desirable on grounds of convenience to retain the services of someone already employed by a party interested (h). A party to the action should not be appointed unless by consent (i), or unless there are special circumstances justifying his appointment in preference to others (k); indeed, a party to the action cannot propose himself without the leave of the court (l), and such leave when given does no more than remove the disability under which he would otherwise have rested (m).

675. A person whose duty it would otherwise be to check the accounts of the receiver and control his actions should not be appointed, unless there are very special circumstances rendering his appointment desirable (n). Thus, the next friend of an infant plaintiff will not be appointed, even though no objection is raised by the other parties to the action (o); nor should a son of the next friend be appointed (p); and, semble, a master of the Supreme Court is not fitted for the post, inasmuch as his accounts would come under the review of one of his colleagues (q). For the same reason, it is not desirable that the master should himself nominate the receiver, though it may be that in a matter of public concern he would be justified in doing so, if the parties interested failed to nominate within a reasonable time (r).

A trustee will not be appointed, at any rate with remuneration (s), unless by reason of special knowledge of the property (t) or special confidence reposed in him by the testator (a) he is better fitted for the post than anyone else; but a trustee is generally allowed to propose himself, if he offers to act without salary (b), and the appointment of a trustee who has no active duties to perform, such as a trustee to preserve contingent remainders, is unobjectionable (c).

For similar reasons, the appointment of the solicitor having the conduct of the cause (d), or who is actually and substantially the solicitor for the parties interested in the estate, the ostensible solicitor acting under his control (e), or the appointment of a member of the firm of solicitors acting for the plaintiff (f), is improper; but a solicitor is not as such ineligible for the position of receiver, though he is not allowed to charge profit costs (g).

676. In some cases, and particularly where powers of management are conferred, it may be desirable that a person with special knowledge or aptitude should be appointed (h), notwithstanding that he is a party interested (i). Thus, in partnership actions a solvent partner is generally appointed (k), and an executor or trustee is often appointed receiver and manager of a testator's business (l), and, in the case of public undertakings such as railways, the chairman, manager, or some other official of the company is usually chosen (m).

So, also, when a company is in liquidation, the liquidator is generally appointed on grounds of economy and convenience (n), and any receiver already in possession under an order of the court is discharged (o); but if the liquidator of a mining company in voluntary liquidation has not the means of keeping the mine open, an incumbrancer whose security is in consequence imperilled may have a receiver appointed in spite of opposition by the company (p), and a liquidator will not be appointed receiver if he has assumed an attitude of hostility to the secured creditors (q).

SUB-SECT. 3 — Right of Creditor to Nominate

Nominees who are preferred.

677. A judgment creditor or an incumbrancer is in general entitled to have his own nominee appointed receiver on satisfying the court of his fitness for the post by affidavit (r); but, if the value of the equity of redemption is as great as that of the mortgage debt, and the master chooses to appoint the nominee of the mortgagor, his discretion will not be interfered with on the mere ground that the mortgagee's nominee is better qualified (s). In the case of debentures, the nominee of trustees representing the whole body of debenture-holders is preferred to the nominee of an individual debenture-holder, even though his action is prior in point of time (t); and, as between several incumbrancers, the nominee of a prior incumbrancer is preferred (u); but, when one order for the appointment of a receiver is made on several applications of persons whose rights are in other respects equal, the carriage of the order with its resulting advantages is generally given to the person whose notice of motion was first served, even though his writ is not the earliest (a).

Debenture-holders who have obtained such an order may, on obtaining judgment for the amount of their debt, have the receivership extended to any property of the company not included in the order, so as to prevent other judgment creditors from seizing assets not covered by the debentures (e).

680. The interest affected must, however, be a genuine right of property. A receiver will not be appointed, for instance, of a purely voluntary allowance (f), or of rates for paving and lighting expenses to be fixed by a future assessment and collected at a future time, where the commissioners or corporation concerned can take nothing for themselves, but are obliged to apply the proceeds as directed by statute (g).

Nor will the appointment be made if it is likely to prove ineffective (h) or destructive of the property to which it relates (i). A receiver will not be appointed, for instance, of an interest under a will which would be forfeited by the very fact of the appointment (k).

681. A receiver will not be appointed of the future earnings of a debtor, unless he has himself assigned or charged them (l).

(h) In Pulmer v. Vaughan (1818), 3 Swan 173, it had been doubted whether a clerk of the peace was a "public officer" within the meaning of this rule, and a receiver was appointed only for the purpose of securing the profits of the office pending a decision; but see note (i), infra. The clerk to the deputy registrar of the Pierogative Court of Canterbury was held not to be a "public officer" (Aslon v. Gwinnell (1829), 3 Y. & J. 136). The schoolmaster of an Irish national school is a "public officer" within the meaning of this rule (Pecton v. Cullen, [1900] 2 I. R. 612, C. A.), and so is the clerk to petty sessions in Ireland whose salary is paid not solely out of local funds, but in part out of the proceeds of fines at petty sessions (M'Creevy v. Bennett, [1904] 2 I. R. 69). A fellowship at the universities is not a "public office" for this purpose (Feistel v. King's College, Cambridge (1847), 10 Beav. 491); in the earlier case of Berkeley v. King's College, Cambridge (1830), 10 Beav. 602, a receiver was refused on interlocutory motion apparently because the nature of the emoluments attaching to the office was not disclosed; see Feistel v. King's College, Cambridge, supra, at p. 499.

Reilly* (1830), 2 Sim. 560; affirmed 1 Russ. & M. 560, it was held in the court of first instance that the salary of assistant parliamentary counsel to the Treasury was incapable of assignment, but this was doubted in Grenfell v. Windsor (Dean and Canons) (1840), 2 Beav. 544, and the refusal to appoint a receiver may be supported on other grounds, namely, that the appointment would have resulted in the salary being stopped, and would therefore have been nugatory. statute, they are capable of assignment, but, if awarded either wholly or partly in consideration of some continuing duty or service, they cannot be assigned (m). Pensions awarded to public servants under the age of sixty, to which a statutory liability is attached to re-enter the public service if called upon, are therefore incapable of assignment and cannot be taken in execution (n).

Naval and military pensions are by statute inalienable (o), but certain sums arising from the commutation of military pensions (p) may be the subject of a receivership order (q).

Naval and Pensions and superannuation allowances granted to police constables, poor law officers, and asylum officers are by statute inalienable (a), but not so pensions of the Royal Irish Constabulary, which, therefore, being awarded solely for past services, may be the subject of a receivership order (b). In Ireland, superannuation allowances granted to corporate and other local public officers are by statute incapable of assignment (c).

Ecclesiastical

SUB-SECT. 3.—Property already in the Possession of a Receiver.

General rule.

688. The court does not as a rule appoint a receiver over property already in the possession of a receiver appointed in other proceedings (n), unless it is shown that those proceedings were collusive (o). A receiver may be so appointed at the instance of a prior incumbrancer, but he will not be allowed to act till the former receiver is removed (p). In some cases it may be convenient that the receiver already in possession should be appointed to act for the applicant, if he is willing to do so (q).

Property in hands of sequestrator.

689. A receiver may be appointed of the rents and profits of land in the occupation of a sequestrator (r), but the appointment does not discharge the sequestration unless the receiver is appointed expressly in place of the sequestrator over all the sequestrated property (s).

SECT. 6.—*Security Required.*SUB-SECT 1.—*In General.*SECT. 6.
Security Required.Duty of
receiver.

690. Before the appointment of a receiver is completed, he must, unless the order otherwise directs, give security duly to account for his receipts and to pay the same as the court or judge shall direct (t).

691. In the absence of direction to the contrary, the security is by recognisance in the form No. 21 in Appendix L to the Rules of the Supreme Court (a). The form referred to, however, is often superseded in practice by a form of joint and several bond by the receiver and a recognised guarantee society (b) for payment of the actual sum to be received, if capital, or of double the gross annual value in the case of income. If the amount exceeds £2,000, the receiver must also give his personal recognisance (c). If a guarantee society is not employed, the security taken is usually a recognisance of the receiver himself and two sureties, and any other form of security, for instance, a mortgage on land belonging to the receiver, has been said to be improper (d). In some cases, where a party to the action applies for the appointment of himself as receiver, he is directed to pay a lump sum into court by way of security in lieu of the ordinary bond or recognisance (e). If the amount for which security is required does not exceed £500, an undertaking in the form No. 21A of Appendix L to the Rules of the Supreme Court, signed by the receiver and his sureties, is accepted as sufficient security (f).

Form of
security.

In the Chancery Division, the recognisance or bond is given to the two senior masters for the time being attached to the chambers of the judge to whom the cause or matter is assigned (g).

NOTE 6.
Security
Required.

A receiver's security must be given in London (h), except where the appointment is made in the district registries of Manchester or Liverpool (i).

Who may be surety.

692. A party to the action may be accepted as surety, but a solicitor having the conduct of the cause has been rejected (k). A partner in business of the receiver will not be accepted (l). Sureties must be su juris and solvent, and the receiver is required from time to time to testify to their continued solvency on passing his accounts (m). Further, inasmuch as one of the objects of having sureties is that they may look to the conduct of the receiver and see that he performs his duties diligently, any arrangement by which they are given a control over moneys coming to the receiver's hands, as a sort of indemnity, is highly improper (n). Where the security required is of large amount it may be distributed among a number of sureties (o).

sureties.

Individual sureties must, as a rule, be resident in this country (p), but in the case of corporations some latitude is allowed. The bond of a Scottish guarantee company may be accepted, provided the company submits to the jurisdiction of the court (q), and the bond of a foreign company is admissible on the like condition if it has assets in this country and the court is satisfied as to its solvency (r).

Death or insolvency of surety.

If a surety goes abroad or becomes insolvent (s) or obtains his discharge (t), a substitute must be found and a fresh recognisance entered into; but in the event of death, no fresh security will be required, unless the estate of the deceased surety is insufficient to cover the liability under the recognisance (a).

moneys that would otherwise come to the hands of the receiver may be directed to be paid into court (b). SECT. 6 Security Required.

Where the property over which the receiver is appointed is extended or increases in value, additional security may be required (c); and similarly, where the property decreases in value, an order may be obtained for reduction of security (d). The liquidator of a company, on being appointed receiver on behalf of debenture-holders, must give security in addition to what he has given as liquidator (e). Increase or reduction of security.

694. When a receiver is appointed only until judgment or further order, his continuance by the judgment is in effect a new appointment, and fresh security must be given, unless the interlocutory order otherwise directs (f). Continuation of appointment.

695. A receiver who acts without giving the security directed by the order of appointment is none the less liable to account (g), but the balance found due from him is a simple contract debt instead of a debt of record (h). Acting without security

696. All the expenses of finding security, including premiums payable to guarantee societies, must be borne by the receiver personally, unless he is acting without salary, in which case they are allowed in his accounts (i). Cost of security

697. Where trustees undertake to act as receivers without salary and to account accordingly, they will not be required to give security beyond their own recognisances (k). Security required from trustee-receiver

698. In the case of West Indian estates, managers are required to give security to account for their receipts, but not for faithful management (l). Receivers of West Indian estates appointed under the West Indian Incumbered Estates Acts, 1862 and 1864 (m), are required to give security (n). West Indian estates.

SUB-SECT. 2.—*When Dispensed with.Security Required.Receiver nominated by parties interested.

699. In certain cases a receiver appointed by the court is not required to give security beyond his own personal recognisance. If all the parties interested in the property are sur juris and themselves nominate the receiver, security may be dispensed with at their request (a); but, if the nomination is made by the court on a reference to chambers, security must be given (b), even though all parties are sur juris and are willing to dispense with it (c).

Receiver
nominated
by testator.

If a testator by his will nominates a person to act as receiver of the rents and profits of realty, or if the person nominated by the parties has been employed by the testator in his lifetime as manager of the property, security may be dispensed with, notwithstanding that some of the parties interested are infants (d).

Receiver
without salary.

Where a receiver is appointed without salary it is not unusual to dispense with security (e).

In cases of equitable execution.

700. In cases of equitable execution, where the appointment of a receiver is obtained not with a view to possession, but merely for the purpose of getting a charge upon the property, security is dispensed with, the plaintiff and the receiver undertaking not to act without the leave of the court (f), and where the judgment creditor is willing to act personally, he himself may be appointed receiver without salary and without security (g), and such an appointment has been made even where immediate possession was contemplated (h). Where the judgment debt and costs do not exceed £50, security is usually dispensed with in the King's Bench Division, the plaintiff undertaking to answer for the acts and defaults of the receiver (i).

Unpaid

is in immediate danger of destruction, he is entitled to be appointed receiver and manager without salary and without security in spite of opposition (k).

SECT. 6.
Security
Required.

702. In cases where the delay incident to the completion of security might result in the loss or deterioration of the property, and especially in the case of mortgagees or debenture-holders whose security is in jeopardy, a named person is often appointed on motion to act at once as receiver (l), the plaintiff undertaking to be answerable for what he may receive or become liable to pay (m) before the completion of his security or before a receiver is duly appointed at chambers (n); and the order then proceeds to direct that security be given by a certain date, or that a proper person be appointed receiver, as the case may be. The plaintiff himself may, under similar circumstances, be appointed interim receiver without security on his undertaking not to deal with the property except under the direction of the court (o). Where the application is made ex parte an undertaking in damages may also be required (p), but this is not usual (a). In matters of urgency.

to take possession at once (c), cannot take possession until he has completed his security (d), and even then he cannot compel delivery of possession until an order directing delivery of possession has been obtained and served on the parties (e). Such a direction is, however, usually inserted in the order of appointment (f), whether made at the trial or on an interlocutory application (g). The order for possession may be enforced either by attachment (h), or by writ of possession in the case of land (i), or by writ of assistance in the case of specific chattels (k), but these writs cannot be issued unless a time has been limited within which possession must be delivered (l). In a foreclosure action, though the defendant may be ordered to deliver up possession to the receiver, the court will not prejudice the action by restraining him from remaining on the premises (m).

704. An order may also be obtained for an occupation rent to be fixed against a defendant in occupation of any part of the premises (n), but this constitutes him a tenant only from the date of the order, and does not entitle the receiver, at any rate until the rights of the parties have been determined in the action, to any payment in respect of his previous possession (o), nor can a receiver distrain upon the goods of a defendant in possession who has not been constituted a tenant (p).

705. The appointment of a receiver operates as an injunction restraining the parties to the action from receiving any part of the property affected by the appointment (q).

The appointment of a receiver in an administration action deprives the executor of the right of obtaining possession of the assets (r), and consequently of his right of retainer, except as to assets received by him before the appointment (s).

The appointment of a receiver by a mortgagee out of court does not of itself prevent the mortgagee from afterwards issuing a specially indorsed writ (t) and obtaining judgment (a), provided that no moneys have come to the hands of the receiver, but, if the receiver has received moneys, and the amount due from the mortgagor is in consequence uncertain, leave to defend the action will be given (b); and, if the receiver has been appointed by the court in a foreclosure action, the issue of such a writ is unnecessary and improper (c).

706. As against tenants, the receiver is entitled to an order for attornment and payment of rent to him. This is usually inserted in the order of appointment (d), but payment cannot be enforced until it has been obtained and served on the tenants (e).

An order directing a tenant to pay rent to the receiver could formerly be enforced by attachment (f), and may still be enforced by sequestration (g). If after service of the order a tenant refuses to pay rent, the receiver may obtain leave to distrain (h) or to bring an action for the recovery of the land (i), and the latter remedy is available against a defendant who retains possession under a collusive tenancy agreement at an inadequate rent (k). If the possession by an alleged tenant has been taken after and with notice of the order, he may be brought before the court to justify his refusal without being made a party to the action (l).

Though a tenant who has not been served with an order directing payment of rent to a receiver is justified in continuing to pay rent to his landlord, yet if in fact he has notice of the appointment and consequently knows that the landlord is no longer entitled to receive the rent, he cannot resist payment over again to the receiver (m) unless he can plead compulsion of law (n).

A receiver of rents is entitled to all arrears unpaid at the date of the order for his appointment (o). Tenants who pay such arrears to their landlord before they have notice of the order will not be compelled to pay a second time to the receiver, but any party to the action who, with notice of the order, collects arrears of rent or takes securities for the amount due, may be compelled to hand them over to the receiver (p).

707. The position of debtors is in some respects similar to that of tenants. They may be ordered to pay their debts to the receiver, even though no person exists in whose name actions could be brought to enforce them; and refusal to comply with an order for payment to the receiver may be treated as a contempt of court (q), if the debtor had proper notice of the application for the order and an opportunity of disputing the debt (r).

708. When a receiver is appointed over property situate abroad, he must take the necessary steps to obtain possession in accordance with the local law. An English court cannot and will not attempt to put its officer into possession of foreign property, though it may direct an inquiry as to the best means of obtaining possession (s) and make any necessary order on a defendant in this country (t).

brought by leave of the court and judgment recovered, the judgment cannot be enforced by writ of possession as against the receiver without the leave of the court (g).

Persons.

714. A tenant who has been erroneously committed for contempt of court cannot bring an action against the receiver for false imprisonment: his proper course is to apply for a reference to the master for compensation (u); nor will a tenant be allowed to sue the receiver or his authorised agent in replevin or for unnecessary violence in levying a distress (a).

SUB-SECT 2—Exercise of Rights by Leave of the Court.

716. On any application by a stranger to enforce his rights the court will examine the claim and either give effect to it by an order in the action or, if this is impracticable, allow any necessary proceedings to be taken outside the action (e).

landlord may obtain an order for payment out of the proceeds of sale, provided he has asserted his right to distrain prior to sale (l), but not otherwise (m); and a landlord who alleges that the lease has been forfeited for breach of covenant may be allowed to continue ejectment proceedings against the receiver, notwithstanding that they were commenced without the leave of the court (n).

Rights of

718. A parson may obtain an order for payment of tithe rent-charge (o). The grantee of an annuity secured by a term, whose right is paramount to that of the parties to the action, may obtain leave to bring ejectment (p), but the court generally examines a claim under an alleged adverse title before allowing proceedings to be taken (q). Where lands have been conveyed to a railway company in consideration of a rentcharge and the company makes default in payment, the court allows the owner to exercise powers of distress or re-entry reserved by the conveyance (r), but distraint is not allowed if all goods and chattels not necessary for carrying on the undertaking have been assigned to trustees for creditors (s). So also a public authority may be allowed to exercise a statutory right of distress for non-payment of rates or penalties (t), or a gas company for default in payment for gas (a), provided the right is paramount to the rights of the parties (b).

execution (d), and, if necessary, to take proceedings in ejectment (e), notwithstanding the possession of the receiver. If property which he wishes to take in execution is in possession of the receiver only in consequence of an error in the order of appointment, the court cannot give leave to levy execution, but grants an application either to discharge the order or for leave to be examined pro interesse suo (f). A judgment creditor of a tenant for life or other beneficiary to whom the receiver in an administration action has been directed to pay rents or make periodic payments out of income may obtain an order attaching such payments, so far as the moneys are in the hands of the receiver, until his debt is satisfied (g), or leave to issue an elegit against the life estate with an order on the receiver to deliver up possession (h); but an individual debenture-holder who recovers judgment for his own benefit after the appointment of a receiver cannot issue execution against the company, for his only right is to be paid pari passu with other debenture-holders (i). When a receiver has been appointed in a partnership action, a judgment creditor of the firm is generally given a charge on the assets, on his undertaking to deal with the charge according to the direction of the court. This protects his rights and renders immediate execution unnecessary (k). The solicitor in the cause may obtain a similar order in respect of his costs, on the ground that the assets have been recovered or preserved by his action (l).

720. The owner of machinery on premises in the occupation of a receiver and manager may obtain leave to remove it (m). A person desiring to construct a railway on land over which a receiver has been appointed may be given leave to make proposals in chambers for acquiring the necessary rights or interests (n). A prior mortgagee may have an order discharging the receiver and letting him into possession, even though he be a defendant, provided he has in no way submitted to be bound by the proceedings (o).

SECT. 2.

As against Other Persons.

How the application should be made.

721. The application to the court should be made in the action in which the receiver was appointed, and not by independent proceedings (p), even though the claim is against the receiver for acts in excess of his authority (q), though such proceedings may be allowed to continue if they do not prejudice the rights of the parties to the action (r). An applicant for leave to bring an action, notwithstanding the appointment of a receiver, need not show a clear legal right: if the court is satisfied that there is really a question to be tried, leave is granted (s).

SECT. 3.—*Status of the Receiver.*SUB-SECT. 1.—Nature of his Possession.

An officer of the court

for benefit of all the parties.

722. A receiver appointed by the court is in no sense an agent or trustee for the party at whose instance the appointment is made (t). He is an officer of the court appointed for the benefit of all the parties to the action (u), and their rights inter se are not affected (v). As between mortgagee and mortgagor, therefore, if the receiver embezzles or otherwise wastes the rents and profits, the loss must fall on the mortgagor (a); and, as between vendor and purchaser, the possession by a receiver appointed at the instance of the vendor is attributed to the purchaser from the date at which the purchase ought to have been completed (b).

Effect upon rights and liabilities of parties and strangers.

723. So also the possession by the receiver, though it necessarily displaces the possession of the owner or occupier to some extent for the purposes of the appointment (c), does not interfere with the

SECT 3
Status
of the Receiver.

It is not such an interruption of possession as prevents the Statutes of Limitation running in favour of the defendant as against strangers to the action (e), though it does prevent them running in favour of strangers as against the party obtaining the appointment (f).

Effect as time Payment by receiver as acknowledgment

Though a receiver appointed by the court is not an agent and cannot, therefore, give an acknowledgment of the existence of a debt on behalf of any principal (g), yet payment of interest by a receiver appointed at the instance of a mortgagee is clearly payment on behalf of the mortgagor and as such sufficient to prevent the operation of the Statutes of Limitation (h).

724. The trustees of a settlement may apply for and obtain leasing powers under the Settled Estates Act, 1877 (i), and a tenant for life may with the leave of the court exercise the leasing powers conferred by that Act (k), notwithstanding the appointment of a receiver; for the appointment vests no estate or title in the receiver, he is merely the officer of the court to collect the rents under the title of some persons parties to the action (l).

Exercise of

Status
of the Receiver.Position as "owner."

726. A receiver of the rents of house property is not the "owner" within the meaning of the Public Health Act, 1875 (n), for he does not receive the rents either on his own account or as agent or trustee for any other person (o); nor is he the "owner" within the meaning of the Water Companies (Regulation of Powers) Act, 1887 (p); but where an order has been made for possession to be delivered to a receiver appointed at the instance of an incumbrancer, the receiver becomes at once the landlord of the premises for the purpose of the Landlord and Tenant Act, 1709 (q), and entitled, as against a judgment creditor who has levied execution subsequently to the order, to one year's arrears of rent, though the order has not been drawn up and he has not in fact taken possession, nor have the tenants attorned to him (r).

SUB-SECT. 2.—*Money in his Hands*Money in hands of
receiver.

727. Money in the hands of a receiver is not in custodia legis in the same way as money in the hands of a sequestrator (s). It may be that if the object of the action is to determine the rights of the parties or to ascertain what incumbrances exist on an estate and what are their priorities (t), or to settle a dispute as to title, the receiver holds moneys coming to his hands on behalf of the persons who may ultimately prove to be entitled (a). But when the receiver is appointed at the instance and for the benefit of an individual, as in an ordinary case of equitable execution, or where a puisne incumbrancer or a particular class of incumbrancers or creditors obtain the appointment of a receiver on their own behalf in proceedings to which the prior incumbrancers are not parties, any funds collected by the receiver are held on behalf of the parties to the action alone according to their rights (b), unless the prior incumbrancers have actively intervened to assert their rights before the rents were collected (c), or unless there has been a direction to keep down interest on incumbrances of which they have elected to take the benefit (d). Even where prior incumbrancers are defendants to a foreclosure action they are not entitled to rents collected by the receiver in priority to the plaintiff in the absence of any special direction as to their application or inquiry as to priorities (e).

SECT 4.—Interference with Receiver's Rights

728. Any interference with the possession of a receiver appointed by the court is a contempt of court (f) and renders the offending party liable to committal, though this extreme remedy is not enforced where there has been an excusable mistake (g), or where an injunction will suffice (h), and the offending party is often excused on payment of costs (i). The fact that the appointment of the receiver has been improperly obtained does not justify interference with his possession; so long as the order stands it must be respected (k). Liability for interference for a receiver and an injunction made in court, but before the order has been drawn up (m); a tenant who offers personal violence to the receiver (n); a creditor of a company who attaches debts due to the company after a receiver has been appointed in a debenture-holders' action (o), a partner who by circularising customers injures the partnership business which is being carried on by a receiver and manager (p); a stranger who, under a claim of right, enters upon land in the possession of a receiver (q)—all these interfere with the receiver and may be restrained by injunction, or, if necessary, by committal (r). Any threatened proceedings against a receiver in respect of trespass or wrongful seizure of goods instituted without the leave of the court will be restrained, unless the court is satisfied that the receiver has acted in excess of his authority (s). Entry into possession by a remainderman or landlord after determination of the interest (for life or years) in respect of which the receiver was appointed, though technically an interference with the possession of the court (t), would probably not be visited with punishment (u).

Interference not restrain-able

730. If the order of appointment does not clearly show over what property the receiver is appointed, interference with his possession under a claim of right will not be restrained (a). Similarly, if the appointment of a receiver is conditional on his giving security, interference with his possession before he completes his security does not amount to contempt of court (b).

A tenant who continues to pay rent to his landlord, knowing that a receiver has been appointed, cannot be attached for contempt unless he has been actually served with notice of the appointment (c);

PART III.—EFFECT OF APPOINTMENT.

nor is a tenant guilty of contempt who, after an order for payment of rent to a receiver, pays it, under threat of proceedings, to a mortgagee in possession who is not a party to the action (d).

SECT. 4.
Interference with Receiver's Rights.

731. When a receiver is appointed of the rents of land abroad, a defendant who prevents payment to the receiver is guilty of contempt, and, if he is not himself within the jurisdiction, his property within the jurisdiction may be sequestrated till he purges his contempt (e); but an attempt to obtain possession of foreign assets in priority to the receiver by any person who is not a party to the action is not contempt of court, because the court has not the power and never purports to give its officer possession of foreign property (f).

Interference with foreign assets

732. Inasmuch as a receiver of the undertaking of a railway company appointed under the Railway Companies Act, 1867 (g), is not entitled to receive unpaid capital (h), proceedings taken by a judgment creditor against a shareholder under the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (i), to attach unpaid capital are not interference with the possession of the receiver, and it can make no difference that the shareholder and receiver are one and the same person, for example, the chairman of the company (h).

Interference with property not receivable

Part IV.—Powers and Duties.

SECT. 1.—Receipt of the Property.

733 The duties of a receiver are limited to the collection of the property over which he is appointed and the payment of all moneys received into court, or as the court may direct; but he cannot compel delivery of actual possession of property without an order directing such delivery (l), nor can he compel tenants to pay rent (m) or to attorn to him without an order (n).

SECT. 1.

Receipt
of the Property.Collection of debts.

734. A receiver appointed to collect debts may exercise a reasonable discretion in giving time for payment (o), especially if by so doing he gains some collateral advantage for the creditors, such as security or additional security (p).

When a debt or right of action is of doubtful value or only enforceable at disproportionate expense, the court sometimes authorises the receiver to offer it for sale by auction (q).

Where the debentures or mortgages of a limited company include uncalled capital, a receiver appointed to enforce them is entitled to have calls made (r).

Documents
of title

735. If it is desirable on the ground of convenience that documents of title should be produced to, or handed over to, the receiver, the court may make an order for their production or delivery on such terms as may be thought fit, notwithstanding the opposition of the person legally entitled to hold them (s), or of a solicitor asserting a lien for costs (a).

Court rolls

A receiver appointed over a manor is not entitled to act as steward of the manor, and, therefore, not entitled to possession of the court rolls; but, if the acting steward has been guilty of misconduct, the lord of the manor may obtain an order for delivery of the court rolls to the receiver in the action (b).

Rents

736. A receiver appointed to receive rents without prejudice to the rights of prior incumbrancers ought not to take possession by serving notice on the tenants to pay rent to him, after a similar notice has been served by a prior incumbrancer (c).

Duty to take possession and give notice

737. A receiver of chattels should take possession of them at the earliest possible moment, so that they may not be in the "order and disposition" of the defendant in case of bankruptcy (d). So, also, a

(o) A receiver appointed under the Charitable Loan Societies (Ireland) Acts, 1843 (6 & 7 Vict c 91), s 45, and 1900 (63 & 64 Vict c 25), s 4, has the same power of compromising debts as the society itself (O'Reilly v Connor, Same v Allen, [1904] 2 I R 601, C A). receiver of book debts should give notice of his appointment to the debtors, for if he leaves the debts in the apparent ownership of the creditor he may find his title ousted by a subsequent assignee (e), or by the trustee in a subsequent bankruptcy (f); and, in the case of debts due from a foreign firm, or indeed of any foreign property, if he neglects to perfect his title or obtain possession in accordance with the local law, other parties who show greater diligence may obtain priority (g). For the same reason a receiver of property comprised in a settlement should at once give notice of his appointment to the settlement trustees (h).

738. When a receiver is appointed over leaseholds for lives, perpetually renewable, an inquiry will be directed, if necessary, as to whether it will be for the benefit of the parties that a renewal should be obtained and on what terms (i). Renewal of leaseholds

739 A receiver appointed by the court may distrain for one year's rent without the sanction of the court (j), but if the rent be in arrear for more than a year the leave of the court should be obtained, at any rate in a case where the letting is not in the receiver's name and the tenant has not attorned to him (k). When there has been no letting by the receiver and no attornment to him, the distrain should be in the name not of the receiver, but of the person beneficially entitled (l). If the person beneficially entitled is not ascertained, or the receiver is unable to obtain information as to the amount of rent in arrear, an application to the court is necessary in any case (m). When leave of the court necessary

The distrain should, however, be made in the name of the receiver if either the letting has been in his own name (n) or the tenant has attorned to him (o), for in either case the tenant is estopped from questioning his landlord's title, even though it may When receiver alone can distrain

A receiver may employ a bailiff to distrain, though he may not delegate his authority generally (s).

SECT. 3.—Institution of Proceedings.

In bankruptcy

740. A receiver is justified in taking all steps necessary to get in the assets he is appointed to collect. He may, for instance, prove in his own name in the bankruptcy of a debtor to the estate (t); and though, not being himself a creditor, he cannot as a rule present a bankruptcy petition (a), yet he may do so if he has taken an assignment of a debt in his own name (b).

Instances in which receiver may sue.

741. Though a receiver cannot generally maintain an action in his own name, since no property is vested in him (c), yet if he has an independent cause of action, the fact that he is receiver does not disqualify him from suing (d). He may, for instance, sue as the holder of a bill of exchange or promissory note (e), or as the occupier of business premises (f), or as the bailee of chattels to whom possession has been delivered by order of the court (g), or as the assignee of a debt (h), or as landlord, if the letting has been in his name (i), and he may sue on a covenant for payment of rent to himself, though he is not a party to the lease (k), and a receiver and

742 When a receiver is claimant in interpleader proceedings he is not called upon to pay the value of the goods into court in the usual way, for it is not necessary for the protection of the rival claimant that the receiver, being an officer of the court, should do more than undertake to hold the goods subject to the order of the court (n). 743. A receiver who either institutes or defends proceedings without the previous sanction of the court runs the risk of having his costs disallowed if his action is not approved (o). The court does not lightly authorise proceedings if the parties interested object (p), especially if the receiver is a solicitor (q), though it is not now the practice to give the conduct of an action to the receiver personally (r). An inquiry will, if necessary, be directed whether it will be for the benefit of the parties interested that proceedings should be taken or defended (s); but the parties themselves have no power to dictate whether proceedings shall or shall not be taken or defended (t). in support of the claim of one of the parties in an action for the determination of their relative rights is improper and may be refused with costs, to be paid by the receiver personally (b).

A receiver has no vested right in his appointment which can entitle him to litigate for the profits of his receivership (c).

SECT. 4.—Creation and Determination of Leases and Tenancies.

When leave
necessary

744. When a receiver is appointed of the rents and profits of land, it is not the practice to insert in the order an express power of leasing. The receiver may let for any term not exceeding three years without the sanction of the court (d), but for longer leases the approval of the court must be obtained on summons at chambers, and such leases are made in the name not of the receiver, but of the persons beneficially entitled (e). If, however, the title to the property is in dispute, the receiver may be authorised to grant leases in his own name, and a tenant who accepts such a lease will be estopped from questioning the rights of the receiver as landlord (f).

abroad

In the case of property situate abroad, with a view to preventing the delay and expense of applications to the English courts, an inquiry may be directed as to what should be the term beyond which the receiver ought not to let without leave (g).

Determina-
tenancies

745. The receiver may, without the leave of the court, determine tenancies from year to year by notice to quit, though the tenancies have been created before his appointment and the tenants have not attorned to him (h); and a notice to quit served by the receiver in his own name is a demand for possession by the landlord or his lawfully authorised agent sufficient to support a claim for double rent in case of holding over under the Landlord and Tenant Act,

SECT. 4.

Creation, and Determination of Leases and Tenancies.

Rearrangement of tenancies

746. Though a receiver is bound to let the estate to the best advantage (k), it would appear that he is not justified in dispossessing tenants without the leave of the court merely for the purpose of raising rents or of dividing the estate into fewer and larger holdings (l); the court does not allow rents to be reduced or arrears to be forgiven or compounded for, unless the parties interested consent (m).

SECT. 5.—Expenditure of Money on Repairs &c

747. A receiver appointed by the court without express powers of management is not in general justified in incurring expenditure without the sanction of the court (n), though he may be allowed in his accounts any expenditure which is shown to have been beneficial to the parties interested (o).

Leave as a rule necessary.

748. He may execute small repairs on his own initiative (p), but if he spends any considerable sum on repairs without the previous sanction of the court he runs the risk of having the amount, or so much of it as is considered excessive, disallowed in his accounts (q). An inquiry will be directed, if necessary, whether the expenditure has been reasonable and beneficial to the parties interested (r); but if the receiver has disregarded a positive direction of the court not to spend further money on repairs, such an inquiry will be refused and the payments will be disallowed (s).

A receiver of licensed premises may, and should, pay any duties necessary to preserve the licences (u).

Maintenance of licences
Fire insurance premiums

749. A receiver may insure premises against loss or damage by fire either in his own name or in the name of persons beneficially interested, or he may keep on foot an existing policy; and the premiums paid by him for this purpose are allowed in his accounts (a).

Rent, rates, and taxes.

750. A receiver is also justified in paying head-rent (b), rates (c), taxes, and other outgoings properly chargeable against him in respect of the property of which he is in occupation (d).

Mortgage interest.

751. A receiver is not, it is conceived, justified in paying interest on incumbrances, unless he has been expressly ordered to do so (e).

Application of rent and profits by receiver appointed at instances of mortgagees

A receiver appointed at the instance of incumbrancers is usually directed to apply the rents and profits received by him in keeping down interest according to priorities. It is only in very special circumstances that he is allowed to apply them in reduction of principal (f). A direction to a receiver to keep down the interest on incumbrances out of rents received by him does not operate as an appropriation of such rents or of so much of them as may be required for payment of all interest; it is made for the benefit of incumbrancers only so far as they choose to avail themselves of it, and if any of them omit to apply for their interest they are presumed to rely on their security both for interest and principal. SECT. 7.—Raising of Money.

752. When immediate expenditure is required for the preservation of property, a receiver may be authorised to borrow money for the purpose, and the amount will be charged upon the property in priority to all existing incumbrances (h); but such an order is not made unless a case of salvage is established (i). Thus, a receiver has been allowed to raise, by a charge on the property, a sum of money required to enable him to effect a transfer of mortgages, the holders of which were pressing for payment (k).

SECT. 8.—Disability to Purchase or Take a Lease.

753. A receiver, being in a fiduciary position towards the persons beneficially interested, cannot purchase, either in his own name or through the intervention of a trustee, any part of the property over which he is appointed without the sanction of the court (l); and the court will not authorise a receiver to bid at a sale, unless very special circumstances are shown, or unless all persons interested in the property are sui juris and consent (m); for a receiver has opportunities of acquiring and making use of information accessible only to himself, and the court might be baffled if it were to inquire in each case whether the receiver had in fact taken advantage of such opportunities (n).

Disability to purchase arising from fiduciary relationship.

754. Even though the sale has been at a fair price and without any circumstances of fraud, concealment or undue advantage, such as would be sufficient to avoid the transaction in the case of a stranger, the receiver is not allowed to retain the benefit of his purchase as against the parties interested, other than a vendor who elects to stand by his bargain (o); and it would appear that the vendor himself, though he alleges none of the recognised grounds for rescission, Disability to Purchase or Take a Lease.

If all parties interested are suo jure, they may, of course, elect to affirm the sale (q); but, if any of them are under disability or object to the sale, the court either sets aside the transaction altogether (a), or declares that the receiver holds the property in trust for the persons who would be entitled but for the sale (b). A declaration of this sort is not, however, made so as to prejudice a vendor who repudiates the sale (c).

Receiver's charge for purchase-money.

755. The receiver is entitled to a charge on the property with interest at 4 per cent. for any purchase-money he may have actually paid (d), and he is also allowed credit for any sums that he has expended on the property since his purchase by which the estate is benefited (e).

Disability to take a lease

756 Not only is a receiver unable to purchase, but he cannot even accept a lease of any part of the property committed to his charge without the sanction of the court (f). A receiver appointed over the estate of a reversioner is not, however, thereby incapacitated from purchasing the interest in a lease of the same lands which the reversioner has in another right (g).

SECT. 1.
Losses and Improper Payments.

758. If such moneys do not reach their proper destination, the receiver will be compelled to make good the loss unless he can show that he has acted with perfect regularity and has used such a degree of prudence as would be expected from a private individual in relation to his own affairs (l).

Degree of prudence required

If, for instance, he pays money temporarily into a bank to a separate receiver's account, he is not liable for loss occasioned by the failure of the bank (m), but it is otherwise if he pays it into his own general account and mixes it with his own money (n), or if he accepts for his own use interest on balances standing to the credit of his receivership banking account (o). For a receiver is remunerated for his services, and is not entitled to reap any further advantage out of the estate, such as an increase of his personal credit with a bank. If he derives any profit or advantage from his position, he must also be responsible for loss (p).

Liability in respect of money paid into the bank

Again, if a receiver remits money to his own solicitor for payment into court he is not, as a rule, held liable for loss caused by the bankruptcy or default of the solicitor (q); but if he has been directed by the order of the court to pay certain named persons, he is answerable for loss occasioned by payment to any other person (r), whether his own solicitor (s), or the solicitor having the conduct of the cause (t), or the solicitor representing the payees, unless he can show in the latter case that the solicitor had authority to receive the money and give a discharge for it (a).

Improper Payments.

A receiver is, of course, liable for loss occasioned by parting with the control of the property (b) or by wilful neglect to carry out the orders of the court (c) or by placing money in what he knows to be improper hands, and for any loss to which his own fraud or collusion has contributed (d). It is immaterial that the irregularity complained of is not in fact the immediate cause of the loss that has occurred. Thus, if a receiver enters into an improper arrangement with his sureties by which they are enabled to control the application of the moneys received and paid into a bank by him (e), he is answerable for loss caused by the failure of the bank.

Acts in excess of authority.

759. So also a receiver may be personally liable for acts in excess of his authority, for example, for taking possession of property not included in the assets of a testator which he has been appointed to collect; but, if his action has been acquiesced in by the beneficiaries, and they have had the benefit of it, he is entitled to an indemnity (f).

If the receiver, appointed in an administration action, distributes the assets without directions from the court, an inquiry may be directed whether the payments have been properly made (g).

Losses and expenses in carrying on business

760 A receiver who is also acting as manager of an estate or business is not answerable for trading losses so long as he carries on the business in a usual and proper manner in accordance with the directions of the court (h). He is allowed in his accounts all sums properly expended in the discharge of his duty, though such expenditure may not have been directly sanctioned by the court (i), and is entitled to be indemnified out of assets against all liabilities properly incurred (k); but any expenses incurred by a receiver in open disregard of the orders of the court are disallowed, whether beneficial to the property or not (l).

service of a four-day order (m) is liable to be imprisoned for contempt, for he is a person acting in a fiduciary capacity within the meaning of the Debtors Act, 1869 (n), and he is further liable to be deprived of his remuneration and to be ordered to pay interest at 5 per cent. 762. Exceptionally a receiver of the rents and profits of leasehold property is bound to pay thereout in the first instance the rent due to the superior landlord (q), even though the order of appointment is silent on the subject, and the court has directed application of the receipts to other objects. If a receiver of leaseholds omits to keep down head-rent when he has money in hand available for the purpose, he may be called upon personally to make good the omission, though he will be entitled to an indemnity out of assets if he has acted bond fide and in accordance with the directions of the court (r) but the appointment of a receiver over leaseholds does not of itself constitute him an assignee of the lease or make him personally liable for payment of rent or performance of covenants (s), and a receiver who pays rent in his own name does not become liable as a tenant by estoppel if the landlord has not been induced thereby to believe that the lease has been assigned to him (t).

In the case of tenements of an annual value not exceeding £10 a receiver is under a statutory liability to pay water rates out of the rents received by him (a), but this does not constitute him the "owner" of the premises within the Water Companies (Regulation of Powers) Act, 1887 (b), so as to render him

Liability for income tax

764. A receiver, on behalf of other persons, is under statutory liability to pay income tax (d) in the place of such persons.

SECT. 3.—Costs.

Extent of personal liability.

765. The costs of all proceedings in the Supreme Court being in the discretion of the court (e), receivers may be and frequently are directed to bear personally the costs of unnecessary applications or appearances (f), or of proceedings which have been rendered necessary by their own misconduct or default (g); but costs which have been properly and unavoidably incurred by a receiver in the discharge of his duties are allowed him in his accounts (h), and a receiver appointed on behalf of debenture-holders who has, with the sanction of the court, appeared upon a successful appeal which went against the company cannot be made liable for the costs of the appeal, although the company is insolvent (i).

SECT. 4.—Contracts.

Personal liability

766. A receiver appointed by the court, not being an agent, is prima facie personally liable on all contracts entered into by him (j). He may of course stipulate in any particular contract that he shall not be held personally liable (k), or the nature of the transaction may show that he did not intend to pledge his personal credit and that the creditor did not look to it (l), but the mere addition of the

SECT. 4
Contracts.

767. The receiver, however, or any creditor of his who is entitled to be subrogated to his rights, is entitled to an indemnity against all liabilities properly incurred by him, and thus indemnity ranks as a first charge upon the assets, subject only to the costs of realisation and to the receiver's costs, charges and expenses, including his remuneration (n); but a receiver appointed by the court, not being an agent or trustee for the parties, has no right of indemnity against them personally in case the assets controlled by the court prove insufficient (o).

Right to
indemnity

768 Contracts entered into before the appointment of the receiver are not cancelled by the appointment, but the receiver incurs no personal liability under them, unless he expressly adopts them (p).

SECT. 1.—Remuneration.

SUB-SECT. 1—When Allowed

769. Unless it is otherwise ordered, a receiver appointed by the courts receives a proper salary or allowance (q).

Receiver

A trustee who is appointed receiver is not generally entitled to remuneration (r), but even a trustee-receiver, unless he is expressly appointed "without salary," may be allowed remuneration if no other person equally well qualified for the position can be found or, in the case of administration actions, if the testator has authorised the payment of remuneration (a). The objection to remuneration does not arise in the case of a trustee who has no active duties to

- Remuneration. A legal mortgagee in possession who is himself appointed receiver is not allowed remuneration (c), though in a proper case it is conceived that he might be allowed the costs of employing an agent for collection of rents (d); and, generally, where a party interested is appointed receiver, he is not allowed a salary (e), unless by consent (f).
- Mortgagee-receiver Where the property to be received is of small amount and involves no difficulty in collection, the court has sometimes refused to allow remuneration (g).

- Small estate.

SUB-SECT. 2—How Calculated and Paid

- When determined. 770. The nature and amount of the remuneration is usually determined in chambers when the receiver passes his accounts, for a receiver is not entitled to any remuneration until he has accounted for all his payments and receipts (h). Occasionally, however, the remuneration is fixed by the taxing master on taxation of costs, if the order for taxation so directs (i).
- How calculated. 771. A receiver of annual rents and profits or the receiver and manager of a business is generally paid by a commission on the gross amount of his receipts, the rate varying from about 2 to 5 per cent. in proportion to the care and trouble involved (k). In other cases a fixed salary is allowed, which may or may not include an allowance for out-of-pocket expenses (l). A receiver of capital sums, as for instance a receiver appointed to get in the personal estate of a deceased person, is often paid by a lump sum, the amount of which depends on the degree of difficulty experienced in getting in the property (m).
- Extra remuneration 772. If a receiver, without applying to the court for directions, voluntarily incurs extraordinary trouble and expense beyond what

tion.

773. Where the remuneration of a receiver is paid by a poundage or commission on receipts, the quantum is sometimes reduced by allowing capital sums to be paid directly into court instead of passing through the receiver's hands (p). Reduction of quantum.

774. A receiver is liable to be deprived of his remuneration if he fails to pass his accounts or pay over his balances according to order (q). Loss of right.

SUB-SECT. 1—In General

776. A receiver is entitled to be allowed all costs, charges and expenses and to be indemnified against all liabilities properly incurred in the protection and preservation of the property committed to his charge, or otherwise in the course of his duties, even though they result in loss (s), and the right to indemnity is not lost by the termination of his office (t), but if he suffers any costs to accrue which ought to have been prevented he is liable to pay them out of his own pocket (u). SECT. 2.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Disbursements.

Allowance
of Costs, Charges,
and Expenses.Expenses of
business

777. A receiver who is also appointed manager of a business is allowed all the necessary expenses of carrying on the business with a view to advantageous sale, such as wages and salaries to workmen and servants (a); but the right to repayment is limited to the assets controlled by the court; if these prove insufficient, the receiver can have no claim against the parties personally in the absence of express contract (b). In the case of large business concerns, the order of appointment often authorises the engagement, at a salary, of sub-managers and agents for various purposes (c).

The consignee of a West Indian estate (d), whose duty it is to send out, often at considerable expense, the machinery and supplies necessary for the proper cultivation of the estate, is entitled to have the balances found due to him on taking his accounts reimbursed, in the first place, out of income, and, if necessary, out of corpus, as being in the nature of salvage expenditure (e).

Effect of default of

778. A receiver who has been directed by the court to pay moneys coming to his hands to one person will not be allowed payments to any other person unless they have been made by leave of the court (f).

A receiver may be ordered to pay the costs of any application to the court rendered necessary by his own default (g), but it would appear that if a receiver who has been guilty of default can show that he acted at the instance of parties interested in the property, he may be allowed to charge such parties in account with any costs that have been thrown on him personally in consequence of such default (h).

Loss of right of objection to allowances

779. Plaintiffs who are parties to orders authorising a receiver to do various acts as receiver are estopped from objecting afterwards to the allowance of his costs in respect of them (i).

respect of disburse-

his accounts, and the receiver may be ordered to pay the costs of any unnecessary application of the kind (k); but the sanction of the court should be obtained beforehand for any expenditure or liability the propriety of which may be in doubt; for unless this is done the receiver runs the risk of having such expenses disallowed and an indemnity against such liabilities refused (l).

SECT. 2.
Allowance
of Costs,

An inquiry will, if necessary, be directed whether unauthorised expenditure has been for the benefit of the property or parties interested (m), and expenditure which in the result proves beneficial is, as a rule, allowed (n).

SUB-SECT 3—Costs of Proceedings

781. A receiver is entitled to the costs of and incidental to the passing of his accounts, unless he is in default and has accounted only under stress of an order for attachment (o), and, if no objection is taken at the time to want of punctuality in accounting, such costs are not afterwards disallowed unless in very special circumstances (p).

He is not, however, allowed the expenses of finding security or the premiums payable to a guarantee society, unless he is acting without salary (q). If he fails to complete his security he must, as a rule, bear personally the costs of the proceedings necessary to set aside his appointment and obtain the appointment of a substitute (r).

Costs of completing
security

782. A receiver who applies for his own discharge is not allowed the costs of the application (s) unless there is very good reason for it (a), nor is he allowed the costs incidental to his own removal and the appointment of a new receiver, unless by consent or after unusually long and faithful service (b). receiver, being a mere officer of the court, should not appear, though served with notice of the application, and if he does appear his costs will be disallowed (c). Where the application is rendered necessary by the wilful default of the receiver himself, he may be ordered to pay the costs of the application, of his own discharge, and of the appointment of a successor (d).

Costs of
proceedings
by leave.

783. A receiver is allowed his costs of any action brought by direction of the court, even though it is dismissed with costs; and, if the assets prove insufficient to pay the costs of the successful defendant as well as those of the receiver, priority will be given to the receiver's claim (e).

Costs of proceedings
without leave

The costs of initiating or defending legal proceedings without the leave of the court are not, as a rule, allowed (f); but if the defence of an action is undertaken in the interests of and for the protection of the estate and proves successful, the receiver is entitled to be indemnified against his costs, notwithstanding that he acted without the leave of the court (g). If proceedings initiated by a receiver have to be abandoned owing to an error in the form of procedure the costs are disallowed (h), and so also are the costs of an application by a receiver for leave to commence proceedings on behalf of the plaintiff against one of the defendants to an action, such proceedings being outside the scope of his duties as receiver (i).

Applications to the court

784 Application to the court should be made by the parties to the action and not by the receiver personally, and the costs of any application by the receiver in his own name may be disallowed unless he shows that the parties have refused or neglected to act (h), especially if the application is made in the interests of one party against another in a disputed question of right (l).

SECT. 3.—Payment.

Priority.

785. A receiver is entitled to be paid his remuneration, costs, and expenses out of the property, notwithstanding that it may be insufficient to meet all claims upon it. Such payment is postponed to the costs of realisation (m) and to any overriding charges outside

SECT. 3.
Payment.

786. It may be that the receiver's remuneration would be postponed to any right of indemnity to which creditors of the receiver, who had no notice of the existence of the receivership, might be entitled by way of subrogation (o). If, however, such creditors have relied upon a charge, even though expressed to be a first charge, and not upon the personal liability of the receiver (p), or if they are themselves parties to the action and have had the benefit of the receiver's expenditure (q), or if they have had notice of the receivership and of the purpose for which the credit is required (r), their claims will be postponed to the receiver's claim for remuneration.

When postponed to creditors' right of indemnity.

Form.

Form.

The parties interested are entitled to have the accounts made out in such a way as to show the balance actually in the hands of the receiver at a given date, and if the accounts are not so made out the receiver may be ordered personally to pay the costs of any proceedings rendered necessary to ascertain the balance due from him (v).

SECT. 2—Verification and Delivery.

Date for leaving accounts at chambers

790. The court or judge fixes the days on which the accounts are to be left at chambers (w), and also the days on which the balances are to be paid (x). The intervals at which accounts are directed to be left vary with the nature of the property or business over which the receiver is appointed, but do not generally exceed a year (a).

Extension of time for delivery

A receiver may in a proper case obtain an extension of time within which to deliver his accounts, and, on the other hand, in case of undue delay on his part, the plaintiff or other parties interested may obtain an order for delivery of accounts within four days and payment by the receiver of the costs of the application (b).

Affidavit verifying
accounts

791. The accounts must be accompanied by an affidavit of the receiver exhibiting and verifying them (c). Any payments not verified are disallowed (d). Where the security given by the receiver is the bond of a guarantee society, the last paragraph of the model affidavit should be varied by stating that the society is still carrying on business and that no petition is pending for its winding up (e).

Copy accounts for plaintiff.

792. A copy of the accounts, together with notice that they have been left at chambers, should at once be given to the plaintiff or other person having the conduct of the cause (f), who thereupon obtains an appointment for the purpose of passing them (g).

(v) Bertie v. Abingdon (Lord) (1845), 8 Beav. 53. The accounts should be in the prescribed form, with such variations as circumstances may require (R. S. C., Ord. 50, r. 19; Appendix L, No. 14). They should be written upon foolscap paper, bookwise (ibid., Ord. 66, r. 2). Separate accounts of real and personal estate should be made out, and the items of receipts and payments numbered consecutively in each case (ibid., Ord. 33, r. 4). A summary should be appended showing the balance due from the receiver on each account after making allowance for his costs when taxed. For form of account by receiver appointed out of court, compare Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. I, p. 154.

(w) The order may direct the accounts to be taken in the office of any district registrar (Judicature Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict. c. 66), s. 60).

793. Accounts are not taken in a district registry, though the action has been proceeding there, unless the order of appointment so directs (h), but this does not apply to the district registries of Manchester and Liverpool (i).

SECT. 2.
Verification and Delivery.

SECT. 3.—Passing

Proceedings in district registry
Vouching and passing

794. At the appointed time the accounts are vouched and passed in chambers in the usual way (h), or the court may direct that only such items as may be contested or surcharged shall be brought before the judge in chambers (l).

A certificate of the master stating the result of a receiver's account may be obtained from time to time (m) on application by summons in chambers. The master's certificate, when filed, is binding on all parties, unless discharged or varied upon application by summons, which must be made within two days (n). Only in special circumstances are receivers' accounts reviewed at a later date (o).

Master's certificate.

795. All parties interested in the property over which the receiver is appointed are entitled to attend the passing of the receiver's accounts (p), but they attend at their own expense, unless they have been directed by the judge to attend (q), or have obtained special leave to attend at the expense of the estate (r). If the judge decides that their attendance has been necessary, their costs are made costs in the cause: they will not be included in the receiver's accounts unless an order as to payment of costs of the action has been made, which would justify their inclusion (s).

Attendance of parties in chambers.

In administration actions, parties other than the party having the conduct of the cause and the executor or administrator representing the estate are not usually allowed their costs of attending proceedings in chambers (r). The fact that they have obtained the leave of the court to attend does not entitle them to their costs unless the order so directs (u).

796. In foreclosure actions the passing of the receiver's accounts may be postponed till after foreclosure absolute if the destination of balances in his hands has been already determined (v), or if the amount received is not sufficient to cover his out-of-pocket expenses and remuneration (a), but not otherwise, in the absence of special circumstances (b).

SECT. 4.—Payment of Balances.

Payment into court on certificate.

797. Any direction for payment of balances into court may be attached to the certificate in the form of a lodgment schedule signed by the master, which operates in the same manner as a lodgment schedule attached to an order (c). On receipt of a copy of such a lodgment schedule the Paymaster-General issues a direction for lodgment in court (d).

Payment into
request

798. A receiver may, however, at any time pay moneys or securities in his hands into court on a mere request to the Paymaster-General without waiting for the direction of a master (c), and it is his duty to do so if they are of such an amount as to make it worth while to invest them, for he is not entitled to make use of balances in his hands for his own benefit (f), or to retain them in an unproductive state until an order is obtained for investment (g). Payments into court should be made in London under the Supreme Court Funds Rules, 1905, even though the action has been proceeding in a district registry (h).

Order for payment after dismissal of

799. An order may be made on a receiver to pass his accounts and pay over the balances notwithstanding that the action in which he was appointed has been dismissed (i); and even after a receiver has been discharged his accounts may be investigated and surcharged (l).

These penalties may be enforced even after the receiver has been discharged, if he fails to pay the final balance found due from him (p); but accounts passed will not be reopened for the purpose of charging a receiver with interest or disallowing his remuneration unless the application is made promptly (q), nor will a receiver be deprived of his remuneration if his delay in accounting has been solely for the convenience and at the request of the parties (r).

803. If a receiver absconds or dies after having made default in passing his accounts and paying the balances into court, his recognisance may at once be put in suit against his sureties though the amount due from him has not yet been ascertained; for the receiver's default involves a forfeiture of his recognisance and creates an immediate debt to the masters of the Supreme Court to whom it is given (c).

Foster* (1789), 2 Bro C C 616 An admission of assets by the executors of a receiver has been treated as an admission of assets to meet whatever should be found due from the testator in his character of receiver, so as to make them liable for interest as well as principal; but this was considered a very hard case (Tew v. Winterton (Lord) (1792), as cited in Hovey v. Blakeman (1799), 4 Ves. 596, 605, 606); see also *Magan v. Part VIII.—Discharge.

SECT. 1.—When Ordered.

SECT. 1.

When Ordered.

805. When a receiver has been appointed on an interlocutory application without any limit of time it is not necessary to provide for the continuance of his appointment in the final judgment. The silence of the judgment does not operate as a discharge of the receiver or determination of his powers⁽ⁱ⁾. So, also, the appointment of a receiver generally by the decree in an administration action need not be continued by the order on further consideration^(j).

Effect of interlocutory appointment without limitation as to time.

806. When a receiver is appointed only for a limited time, as in the case of interim orders, his office determines on the expiration of that time without any further order of the court^(k), and if the appointment is “until judgment or further order” it is brought to an end by the judgment in the action. The judgment may provide for the continuance of the receiver, but this is regarded as a new appointment^(l). If a further order of the court, though silent as to the receivership, is inconsistent with a continuance of the receiver, it may operate as a discharge^(m).

Effect of appointment for limited time

807. With the above exceptions a receiver can only be discharged by an order of the court, even though circumstances have rendered the appointment nugatory. For example, the subsequent bankruptcy of the defendant does not of itself operate as a discharge⁽ⁿ⁾, nor does the liquidation of a company over the assets of which a receiver has been appointed in a debenture-holders’ action^(o); nor does the fact that the estate for which the property is held, whether for life or years, has determined^(p); or that the receiver has been unable to complete his security^(q), or that the property proves to belong to a stranger^(r); or that the creditors on whose behalf the receiver has been appointed have been fully paid (s); or that the action has abated by reason of the death of a party (t), or has been stayed or dismissed (a). For though it has been said that a receiver appointed in an action must stand or fall with the action (b), yet there must be an order discharging the receiver (c).

Effect on
creditors

An order for discharge will not be made if it would prejudice creditors parties to the cause (d); but such creditors may be put on terms to bring their own action for a receiver forthwith (e).

The statutory power (f) conferred on a court of bankruptcy of staying any action against the property or person of the debtor implies a power to discharge a receiver appointed in the action (g).

When order may be obtained.

808. In general, an order for the discharge of a receiver may be obtained whenever the appointment has become either nugatory or unnecessary (h). In the case of annuities the receiver may be discharged, if all arrears have been paid and the security is no longer in jeopardy, notwithstanding the opposition of the annuitant (i) or of prior incumbrancers (k); but a receiver appointed on behalf of creditors will not be discharged so long as the claim of any one creditor remains unsatisfied or unadjudicated (l); nor will a receiver appointed at the instance of beneficiaries be discharged so long as any question of the title to the property remains outstanding (m).

Discharge in company's liquidation.

809. When a company goes into liquidation a receiver who has been appointed by the court in a debenture-holders' action will, as a general rule, be discharged and the liquidator appointed in his place (n); but this will not be done if the assets are clearly insufficient to meet the claims of the debenture-holders (o), or if there is no substantial amount of uncalled capital and similar assets outstanding (p), or if the nature of the assets is such that they are more readily realisable by an accountant or business man than by an officer of the court (q). If there is a dispute between the receiver and the liquidator as to the validity of the debentures and the extent of the property comprised in the security, an independent person will be appointed receiver pending determination of the question at issue (r).

810. If the Chancery Division appoints a receiver of the personal estate of a deceased person in a creditor's administration action pending probate proceedings and the Probate Division subsequently appoints the same person administrator pendente lite, the Chancery Division will discharge its receiver, but will hold its hand over the administrator and make such orders on him as it may think proper, for example, for payment of debts (s).

811. The order appointing a receiver is discharged whenever it is shown to have been improperly obtained (t). Thus, if a receiver has been appointed of property not capable of assignment at law (u), or for the purpose of preventing the exercise of a legal right, such as an executor's right of retainer (a), or for the purpose of enabling a partner to act in excess of his powers under the partnership articles (b), or if property of a stranger has been erroneously included in the order (c), or if a person has been appointed who by reason of his position should not have been appointed, such as a trustee (d), or the plaintiff's solicitor (e), or the next friend of an infant plaintiff (f), or who has subsequently come under some disqualification, statutory or otherwise (g), in all such cases either the receiver or the order appointing the receiver will be discharged as the justice of the case may require.

Defaulting or absconding
receiver

812. Any default by a receiver in passing his accounts, paying his balances, or otherwise, may be ground for his discharge (h), and a receiver who becomes bankrupt (i), or absconds (k), will be discharged; but it would appear that the mere fact that the receiver has left the neighbourhood of the property and gone to reside at a distance does not justify discharge, unless all parties consent (l).

Incompetence of receiver

The incompetence of a receiver is a ground for his discharge, but not the mere fact that some other person is shown to be more competent (m).

Misconduct of receiver

Misconduct may also justify discharge. Thus, a receiver appointed in a partnership action who allows the rent of the partnership premises to get into arrear so that the landlord distrains, or tries to move the business for the benefit of the plaintiff, who is his personal friend, may be discharged (n); but the mere fact that the receiver has allowed the owner to remain in possession of part of the property is not sufficient, for the parties might have applied to the court for delivery of possession to the receiver (o).

Appointment of receiver on behalf of prior interest

813. A prior incumbrancer desiring to take possession is entitled to have the receiver obtained by a puisne incumbrancer discharged (p) and a nominee of his own substituted (q), but, on grounds of convenience, the existing receiver is generally appointed, if he is willing to act as receiver in the action of the prior incumbrancer (r). 814 A receiver will not be discharged on his own application unless he shows reasonable cause for such discharge (a), such as failing health or other incapacity (b), or unless all parties interested consent (c).

application.

815. When the parties interested are numerous, the receiver will not be discharged on the application only of the party at whose instance he was appointed (d), for he is an officer of the court appointed for the benefit of all parties (e); when a receiver has been appointed at the instance of two infants, tenants in common, the court will not discharge the receiver at the request of one of them who has attained her majority (f).

SECT. 2. -- How Obtained.

816. The application for discharge may be made by motion or summons in the action, or, exceptionally, by petition (g); but an order for discharge may be made on further consideration of an action without any special application for the purpose, and the cost of an unnecessary application for discharge may be disallowed in such a case (h).

When application may be made

817. The application may be made not only by parties to the cause, but by any stranger who is adversely affected by the continuance of the receivership, such as a mortgagee desiring to take possession (i); and when a company goes into liquidation the liquidator may apply for the discharge of a receiver appointed in a debenture-holders' action (k). So, also, a surety may apply for the discharge of a receiver who has absconded (l) or become insane (m).

SECT. 2.

How Obtained.

Notice of application
Effect of order.

818. Notice of the application should be served on the receiver (n), but the receiver, being a mere officer of the court, should not appear, and his costs may be disallowed if he does so (o).

819. An order for the discharge of a receiver deprives him of his right to receive, but does not put an end to his liability to account (p). The order, in fact, usually directs him to pass his final account and pay any balance that may be found due from him, and it is only on such payment that his recognisance is directed to be vacated (q).

Part IX.—Position of Sureties.

SECT. 1.—Extent of Liability

Legal and equitable liability.

820. On any default by a receiver causing a forfeiture of his recognisance, his sureties become immediately liable at law to the whole of the penal sum therein named. In equity, however, they are relieved from total forfeiture, but only on condition of paying not only any balance due from the receiver, but all sums for which the receiver would have been properly accountable to the court (r).

Liability for interest on balances

Thus they are liable to the payment of interest on balances improperly retained in the receiver's hands, unless the laches of the parties renders it inequitable that the payment of interest should be enforced (s).

Costs of
proceedings

They are also liable for the costs of any proceedings necessarily or properly incurred in consequence of the receiver's default, such as the costs of an attachment for failure to account, of

(where the surety of a receiver appointed by a mortgagee under statutory powers was held liable to make good to the mortgagor a balance found due from the receiver and not paid by him, notwithstanding that the mortgagee had realised his security by sale and obtained payment of all that was due to him under the mortgage). It is apprehended that this is the true ground of liability, namely, that the surety is excused from his legal liability only on condition of doing what would be equitable as between the receiver and all the parties to the action. In the earlier cases attention was directed rather to the exact wording of the recognisance, see R v. Albert (1716), Bunb. 4, Re Lockey, a Lunatic (1844), 1 Ph 509; *Maunrell v. applications for his discharge, and for the appointment of another person in his place, and of any proceedings taken to enforce the recognisance (t); but it would appear that they are not liable for any moneys for which the receiver, though accountable, cannot be made to account in the action (u), and in no case can the total amount of their liability exceed the sum named in their recognisance (a).

SECT. 1
Extent of Liability.

821. Moreover, sureties are entitled to the benefit of any right of indemnity which the receiver enjoys against the assets; so that if a receiver makes default in paying into court a balance found due from him, his sureties may nevertheless be excused if he is entitled to an indemnity for a larger amount (b).

Sureties' right to benefit of receiver's
indemnity

822. When a receiver who has been appointed manager for a limited time continues to act as manager beyond that time without the authority of the court, his sureties are nevertheless liable for the profits of such management which come to the hands of the receiver as receiver (c); and, similarly, sureties are liable for moneys coming to the hands of a receiver before his appointment is perfected by the completion of his security (d).

Duration of
liability

823. The security given by the recognisance or bond of a surety is not a continuing security, but comes to an end on the death of the receiver, except as to breaches then incurred, and when once, after such death, judgment has been recovered against a surety, and execution levied, he is freed from any further liability, except perhaps for costs (e).

Effect of death of receiver

A discharge in bankruptcy does not discharge a debt due on a recognisance (f).

Effect on bankruptcy

SECT. 2.—Enforcement of Liability.

824 Formerly, on default by the receiver, it was the practice for the plaintiff or other party interested to obtain leave to put the recognisance in suit at law against the sureties in the name of the cognisee (g). Such leave was not granted as of right, but lay in the discretion of the court, having regard to the equitable circumstances of the case (h). It is now, however, usual for the sureties to submit to the jurisdiction of the court by which the receiver was appointed and to offer to have the accounts taken against themselves in the action (i). In the case of a guarantee society acting as surety this is expressly provided for by the form of bond now in use (k). So also, in the form of undertaking now prescribed, where the amount for which security is required does not exceed £500, the sureties expressly submit to the jurisdiction of the court to determine any claim made against them on their undertaking (l).

surety

825. Though, as a general rule, proceedings cannot be taken against a surety until proper steps have been taken against the receiver to enforce the performance of his duty under the recognisance or bond and the receiver has made default thereunder, yet if the receiver has absconded or become bankrupt or died, or if for any other reason it is impracticable to pursue the ordinary course against him, proceedings may be commenced against the surety even before the actual balance due from the receiver has been ascertained (m).

Stay of
proceedings

826 The surety may obtain an order for the stay of such proceedings on payment into court of the amount of his recognisance (n) or of the balance found due from the receiver (o), and, on such payment may have the recognisance vacated so far as he is concerned (p).

Indemnity
and contribution

827. A surety who has been called upon to make any payment has a right to be indemnified by his principal to the whole amount thereof (q), and also by his co-sureties in proportion to the amount for which each surety has made himself hable (r). This is an equitable

SECT. 3.
Rights against Other Parties.

828 As against any beneficial interest of the receiver himself in the property to which the order relates, a surety is entitled to an order declaring such interest liable to make good the amount he has been compelled to pay (a), and he is entitled to a lien for his disbursements on any balance payable to the receiver out of court, and may obtain an injunction restraining the receiver from taking out such balance without discharging the surety's claim (b).

Enforcement of right.

830. A surety is not as a rule entitled to attend at the taking of the receiver's accounts, and still less to have them re-opened after they have been passed (e), but, where the receiver has become bankrupt or has died insolvent, or where it is reasonably certain that the receiver will not be able to pay the balance due from him, the surety may obtain an order giving leave to attend the taking of accounts at his own expense (f), and also, in a proper case, to have past accounts reopened, on the terms of paying the costs of such re-opening and new account and also interest from the date of the order on the sum which he may eventually be called upon to pay (g).

Discharge.

No discharge when receiver not in default unless by consent.

831. So long as the receiver is not in default, a surety will not be discharged at his own request, unless he has accepted the position by inadvertence (h), or can prove underhand practice in which the receiver is implicated (i), or unless it is clearly for the benefit of the parties that he should be discharged (k), but he may be discharged with the consent of all parties, including his co-surety and the receiver, the order being made, in cases where the recognisance is joint in form, without prejudice to the liability of the receiver and the remaining surety for past and future defaults of the receiver (l).

On death or bankruptcy of receiver.

When a receiver has died or absconded or become bankrupt, his sureties may obtain an order for their discharge on payment into court of the balances which may be certified to be due from him (m).

Part X.—Managers.

SECT. 1.—When Appointed

Management of trade or business.

832. With a view to the preservation of property, it is often necessary that the receiver appointed by the court should also act as manager of a trade or business. Thus, a manager may be appointed of the business of a deceased person pending the constitution of a legal representative (n), or a receiver may be authorised to manage the farms of a testator during the minority of infants till tenants can be found (o), or to manage the business of a testator pending sale in an administration action (p), or when the trustees

SECT. 1.
When Appointed

Pending litigation or realisation

833. A manager is frequently appointed for the preservation of a business or property pending litigation as to the rights of the parties (r) or pending realisation by sale (s), especially in the case of mining properties, where any cessation of business might cause serious damage to the mine, or forfeiture of the lease under which it is held (a), and, in case of mismanagement, a receiver and manager may be appointed even against a mortgagee in possession (b). But the court does not assume the permanent management of any business or undertaking (c).

834. In the case of subsisting partnerships a receiver and manager is not appointed unless dissolution is claimed by the writ, or the court is satisfied that dissolution is inevitable (d), if, however, the partnership has already determined and the parties cannot agree as to management pending realisation of the assets, the court will appoint a manager for the purpose of winding up (e); and in such case a solvent partner is generally entitled to be appointed manager, unless there is good reason, on the ground of misconduct or otherwise, for excluding him (f). So also, in the case of companies, if there is no properly constituted governing body, or such dissension among the directors that the business of the company cannot be carried on to advantage, a receiver and manager may be appointed until a general meeting can be held and a proper governing body constituted (g).

As between co-owners

835 As between co-owners of land, whether joint tenants or tenants in common, it was formerly held that a receiver, and a fortiori a manager, could not be appointed unless a case of actual exclusion were made out (h). Now, however (i), it is thought that a manager may be appointed in a proper case, either for the interim preservation of the property or with a view to sale (k).

Mining

In the case of mining property, the working of the mines must be regarded as a trade or business carried on by the co-owners in partnership (l), and a manager is not appointed except for the purpose of dissolution (m).

essential to the preservation of the security that the business should be kept on foot (o). The appointment of a manager of a business at the instance of an incumbrancer is made solely with a view to the realisation of the security by the sale of the business as a going concern (p). An incumbrancer is only entitled to a sale of what is included in his security, and if the business is not included in the security the court has no jurisdiction to appoint a manager (q).

Thus, debenture-holders of a company incorporated for a public purpose are not entitled to a sale and consequently cannot obtain the appointment of a manager (r). Where the management of a public undertaking is entrusted by Act of Parliament to certain persons with defined powers, a manager cannot be appointed at the instance of a mortgagee (s), unless, perhaps, the persons entrusted with the management act unreasonably or perversely (t), or have interests which conflict with their duty (a).

837 In the case of railway companies, however, it is now provided by statute that a judgment creditor may obtain the appointment, if necessary, of a manager of the undertaking as well as of a receiver (b). stoppage of the working of the railway(c), and the appointment extends to the whole of the undertaking of the company, even though the railway is but a small portion of such undertaking and is authorised by the Act of some other company(d). The court will not appoint a second manager at the instance of a second judgment creditor, so long as the first appointment has not been discharged(e). A director or other official of the company is nominated as manager unless there is reason to believe that the undertaking is not being honestly or fairly conducted; but he acts, of course, as the officer of the court thenceforward(f), his duty being to provide for the working expenses and other proper outgoings of the railway, and subject thereto to apply his receipts in payment of the debts of the company under the direction of the court(g).

Landlord.

838. Though a lessor, as such, has not usually sufficient interest in the business carried on by his lessee on the demised premises to justify the appointment of a manager, yet in particular cases he may be able to show such an interest as renders it just and convenient that a receiver appointed at his instance should be authorised to keep the business on foot so far as may be necessary for his protection as landlord(h).

SECT. 2.—Effect of Appointment.

SECT. 2.
Effect of Appointment.

840. The appointment of a manager by the court does not dissolve or annihilate any existing firm or company, but it takes the conduct of the business out of the hands of those who previously carried it on and vests entire control in the manager (k).

As regards control of business

In no case is a manager appointed by the court to be regarded as the agent or servant of the individual, firm, or company whom he displaces (l).

841. Though a receiver and manager appointed by the court acts as an officer of the court, he does not necessarily, by carrying on the business, dispossess the previous owner or occupier of the business premises, unless, perhaps, where he has taken possession by direction of the court. He is to be regarded rather as a custodian or caretaker on behalf of the owners. Thus, he cannot resist a distraint for poor rate, some portion of which is due in respect of a period before his appointment (m), nor can he insist on a continuance of a supply of gas or electricity to the premises without paying arrears due to the companies who supply it (n).

As regards
business
premises.

842. The appointment of a manager in a debenture-holders' action, since it effects a change in the personality of the employer, operates as a notice of dismissal to the servants of the company (o), and may give rise, in the case of any servant whose services are not retained by the manager, to a claim against the company for damages for wrongful dismissal or breach of contract (p), but it does not affect the position of directors or disentitle them to their ordinary remuneration (q).

As regards servants of the company and directors

SECT. 2.

Effect of Appointment.

It would seem that the appointment of a receiver and manager of a business would not generally operate to determine trade contracts (r).

As regards trade contracts Duration of office.

843. As a rule the same person is appointed both receiver and manager (s), but the office of manager, in view of the power of expenditure with which he is invested, is generally limited in point of time (t), according to the modern practice, to three months.

SECT. 3 — Powers.

Power of carrying on business

844. The manager, by virtue of his appointment, has power to buy and sell, to discharge outgoing, to engage and dismiss workmen and servants (u), to provide for the payment of current expenses (a), and, unless expressly prohibited, to enter into fresh contracts in the usual course of business (b). He must carry on the business in the usual way, but without entering into any speculative dealings (c) or undertakings in which his personal interest may conflict with his duty (d).

Protection of goodwill and assets.

It is his duty to preserve the goodwill as well as the assets of the business, and he is not allowed, therefore, as a rule, to disregard contracts entered into before his appointment, even though the assets could be realised to much greater advantage if contracts were disregarded (e), but the court does not sanction the borrowing of large sums of money to complete contracts from which no direct profit can result (f). For the protection of goodwill a receiver and manager may properly bind his employees, within legal limits, not to compete in business (g). A receiver and manager appointed by the court on behalf of secured creditors has no power in the course of business to charge the assets in favour of unsecured creditors so as to give them priority, nor will he be estopped from denying the validity of his act, if he gives such a charge (h).

Delivery of books

845. A receiver and manager is entitled to an order for delivery of all books relating to the conduct of the business (i); but a receiver and manager appointed in a debenture-holders' action cannot insist on retaining such books as against a liquidator, where the business and management have come to an end (k).

SECT. 3.
Powers.

846. A manager is frequently authorised to appoint a sub-manager or to employ agents to conduct the business under his supervision (l).

Sub-manager.

847. A manager is authorised to borrow money when required for the proper conduct of the business (m), and to give a first charge on the assets for the amount (n); but in general he has no power to charge assets except by leave of the court (o), and borrowing will not be sanctioned, even for the completion of existing contracts, if it is apparent that no direct profit can result (p).

Borrowing.

A manager is also often authorised to advance money of his own for the purpose of the business, and in such case the court generally gives him a charge on the assets for the amount of the advance with interest at 5 per cent. (q), but expenditure on any particular object will not be sanctioned unless the court is satisfied that it is likely to promote an advantageous sale (r).

Advances

SECT. 4.—Right to Indemnity.

848 A manager is entitled to an indemnity out of assets against all expenses and liabilities properly incurred in the execution of his duty (s), and he may enforce such indemnity even after his discharge (t), and expenses and liabilities bonâ fide incurred in the ordinary course of business are primâ facie treated as having been properly incurred (a); but a receiver and manager who has made default in paying into court a balance found due from him cannot pro tanto claim an indemnity without making good the default (b). The indemnity is in all cases limited to the assets under the control of the court (c).

If he incurs liabilities to any extent without the previous sanction of the court or in excess of the limit of any borrowing powers conferred on him by the court, he is not entitled to an indemnity unless he satisfies the court that such liabilities were in each case properly and reasonably incurred, and that he was justified in incurring them without first applying for leave; it is not sufficient for him to show that they were incurred bonâ fide and in the ordinary course of business (d).

The creditors of the receiver and manager will be entitled to be subrogated to him in respect of any right of indemnity he may have against the assets (e), unless it appears that he did not intend to pledge his credit and that they did not rely upon it (f); but they can have no better right than the receiver himself, and if, in consequence of default in paying in his balances, the receiver is entitled only to a partial indemnity, the creditors must look to the receiver personally for any balance of their debts which they are unable to recover out of assets (g).

SECT. 5.—Remuneration and Discharge.

Form of

849. The remuneration of a manager is paid in the same way as that of a receiver, either by a percentage on gross receipts, or by an annual salary, or by a lump sum (h), and, as in the case of a receiver, additional remuneration may be allowed for extraordinary services outside the normal scope of his employment (i).

The manager of a West Indian estate, though not entitled during his absence from the island to charge commission, is yet entitled to be allowed all such sums as he has reasonably paid to others to whom he has entrusted the management (j).

The rules applicable to the discharge of a receiver apply equally to the discharge of a manager, and where the two offices are combined in one person, as is usually the case, his powers of management may be discharged by order of the court without affecting his position as receiver (k), or leave may be given him to vacate the business premises (l). Such an order is not, however, often required, for powers of management come to an end automatically at the expiration of the limited period for which they are granted, unless they are expressly renewed (m).

Registers kept at the General Register Office

851. The General Register Office is the name of the office provided for keeping a register of all births, marriages, and deaths in England (a), and it may be situate in any place which, in the opinion of the Treasury, is most convenient for the purpose (b). The appointment of the officials, clerks, and servants necessary to carry on the business of the office, and their salaries (c), are under the direction of the Treasury, or of the Registrar-General subject to the approval of the Treasury (d).

852. At the General Register Office are kept the certified copies of the registers of births, marriages, and deaths in England and Wales since the 1st July, 1837 (e); the returns of births and deaths

SUB-SECT. 2.—The Registrar-General

853 The Registrar-General is appointed by the Crown under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom (p), and is subject to such regulations as may from time to time be passed by the Local Government Board for the management of the General Register Office (q). Appointment the Births and Deaths Registration Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 88), made it compulsory. A detailed list of all registers, documents and records kept at the General Register Office may be obtained free of charge from the Registrar-General.

Duties as to registration

854. It is the duty of the Registrar-General generally to supervise and direct the registration of births, marriages, and deaths in England and Wales (i); and to make, subject to the approval of the Local Government Board, regulations for the management of the General Register Office and for the staff thereof, and for the superintendent registrars, registrars, and deputy registrars (s). Such regulations have the same force as if they were enacted by Act of Parliament (t).

Custody of registers and indexes

855. The Registrar-General is also responsible for the custody of all registers and records deposited at the General Register Office, and he must cause indexes to be made of all the registers and records in his custody (a), and all certified copies of entries given at the General Register Office to be sealed with the official seal of the General Register Office (b).

Provision of registers and

856 It is the duty of the Registrar-General to cause to be printed (c), and to furnish to every superintendent registrar for the use of the registrars under his superintendence, and to every person on whom the duty of registering marriages is imposed, including marriage and consular officers abroad, a sufficient number of register books for making entries of all births, marriages, and deaths, and of forms of certified copies thereof (d), and to provide, for the use of the registrars for the custody of the registers, strong iron boxes fitted with locks and two keys for each lock (e).

Quarterly and annual returns.

857. office becoming vacant, the appointment lapses to the Registrar-General (g).

Registrars of marriages are appointed by the Registrar-General or by a superintendent registrar subject to the approval of the Registrar-General (h).

863 Every superintendent registrar (i) must appoint by writing, subject to the approval of the Registrar-General, a deputy to act in case of illness or unavoidable absence, and the deputy has all the powers and is subject to all the duties and obligations of the superintendent registrar whose deputy he is, the superintendent registrar being civilly responsible for his acts or omissions (l). A deputy holds office during the pleasure of the superintendent registrar by whom he is appointed, but subject to removal by the Registrar-General (l). If a superintendent registrar dies, resigns, or otherwise ceases to hold office, his deputy succeeds him as interim superintendent registrar, with all the powers and duties of a superintendent registrar, until another superintendent registrar is duly appointed (m). Tenure of office.

864 Every registrar of births and deaths must inform himself carefully of every birth which happens in his sub-district, and upon personally receiving from the informant, within three months of the birth of any child or the finding of any living new-born child, Duty of registrar to register births.

No superintendent registrar or registrar may be a member of the board of guardians appointing him, nor may he have been a member within six months of his appointment (General Rule, May, 1905). A woman may fill the post of registrar of births and deaths, but not that of superintendent registrar or registrar of marriages (ibid). Superintendent registrars and registrars of births and deaths, but not registrars of marriages, may be compulsorily retired at the age of sixty five (Poor Law Officers' Superannuation Act, 1896 (59 & 60 Vict c 50), ss 2, 19); and see titles POOR LAW, Vol XXII, pp 546, 547. Every person whose duty it is to register marriages is liable to the same penalties (Births and Deaths Registration Act, 1836 (6 & 7 Will 4, c 86), s 42), except an authorised person in a registered building (Marriage Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict c 58), s 12). This penalty is recoverable on summary conviction (Births and Deaths Registration Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict c 88), s 45). As to making false answers to such inquiries, see ibid, Perjury Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo 5, c 6), s 3. On an indictment for making false statements after marriage to the officiating clergyman, it is sufficient to prove that the statements were made before marriage to the clerk, and inserted by him in the register book, in the absence of the officiating clergyman, and averred by the prisoner to be correct in answer to a question put afterwards by the clergyman (R v Brown (1848), 1 Den 291). It is essential that the false statement should have been made wilfully and not by mistake (R v Dunboyne (Lord) (1850), 3 Car & Kir 1). It would seem that to constitute an offence under this provision it is unnecessary that the purpose should be effected (R v Mason (1848), 2 Car & Kir 622, and see title CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol IX, pp 741, 742).

Sub-SECT 2—Mode of Registration

893. The registration by a marriage or consular officer must be in duplicate, in two marriage register books furnished for that purpose by the Registrar-General (through a Secretary of State), according to the form provided for the registration of marriages in England, or as near thereto as the difference of circumstances admits (h). The entry in each book must be signed by the marriage officer, by the person solemnising the marriage, if other than the marriage officer, by both the parties married, and by two witnesses of the marriage (i). The marriage officer has the same powers of asking particulars as a clergyman of the Church of England (j). Particulars.

Part I.- Nature of Rentcharges and Annuities.

SECT. 1—Rentcharges and Annuities in General.

Rentcharges and Annuities in General.

903. The right created by an instrument (whether deed, will, codicil, or statute) to receive a definite annual sum of money is an interest which may be, strictly speaking, either a “rentcharge” or an “annuity.” If the only source from which the money is directed to be paid be freeholds or copyholds, the interest is a rentcharge and is in the nature of real estate (a). If the only source from which the money is directed to be paid be personal estate, other than leaseholds, the interest is an annuity and is in the nature of personal estate (b). If, lastly, the only source from which the money is directed to be paid be leaseholds, the interest may be properly described as a rentcharge (c), and is a chattel real in the nature of personal estate (d).

Nature of interest depending on the source of payment.

Difficulties as to the nature of the interest arise where several sources, themselves differing in nature, are provided for payment of the money. In such case it depends on the construction and effect of the instrument creating it whether the interest is in the nature of real estate, or in the nature of personal estate, and regard must be had (1) to the words in which the interest is described in the instrument, for example, as a “rentcharge” or as an “annuity”; (2) to any priority in which recourse must be had to

SECT. 2.—Nature of a Rentcharge.

904. A rentcharge is an annual sum issuing out of land the due payment of which is secured by a right of distress (f). It is called a "rentcharge" because the land for payment thereof is charged with a distress (g). Where there was no power of distress the rent was called a "rent seek" (h).

According to the law before 1730, a power of distress might have arisen either by an express clause or by the common law (i). The common law, however, only conferred a power of distress in the following exceptional cases, that is to say, where a rent was granted (1) to a widow in lieu of dower, or (2) for equality of exchange, or (3) by one coparcener to another for equality of partition (h).

Rents seek now rent-
charges

In 1730 the same remedy by distress which existed in the case of rents reserved on lease was extended to rents seek (l), which were thereby in effect converted into rentcharges (m).

Now, by the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (n), the owner of an annual sum charged by some instrument on land or its income by way of rentcharge or otherwise, not being a rent incident to a reversion, can enforce payment of such annual sum by distress or entry or demise for a term of years of the land charged (o). This provision, however, only applies where the instrument comes into operation after the 31st December, 1881 (p).

SECT. 2.

Nature of a Rentcharge.

Rentcharge distinguished from rent service and tithe rentcharge

An incorporeal hereditament.

905. As regards the relation of rentcharges to rents described in other ways, it should be noted that a rentcharge in fee may in some cases be described by the term "fee farm rent" (q). A rentcharge, however, must be distinguished from a rent service, which is an incident of tenure, being a rent reserved by a grantor who retains the reversion in the land (r), whereas a rentcharge is not an incident of tenure, the owner having no reversion (s). Again, a rentcharge in the ordinary sense must be distinguished from a tithe rentcharge, which is a right to receive part of the produce of land, whereas a rentcharge is charged on the land itself (t).

906. A rentcharge is an incorporeal hereditament (u) and is prima facie real estate (b). It is usually charged on the inheritance (c), but it may be charged upon leaseholds, in which case it is a chattel real in the nature of personal estate (d). If a rentcharge

(q) See Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), ss. 10 (1), 20 (2) (iii), Settled Land Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 69), s. 9, Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), s. 14 (3). The term "fee farm rent" occurs frequently in legislation relating to land in Ireland, see Renewable Leasehold Conversion Act, 1849 (12 & 13 Vict. c. 105). Land Law (Ireland) Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 49), ss. 11, 12, 26, 29. The fee farm rents referred to in such legislation are in effect rentcharges. The strict meaning of the term "fee farm rent" seems to be a rent reserved upon a grant of land in fee (Co Litt 143 b. n. 5, Bradbury v Wright (1781), 2 Doug. (K. B.) 624, 627, n., where it is said that the rent must be at least one fourth of the value of the land at the time of the reservation), see, further, title REAL PROPERTY AND CHATELS REAL, p. 285, ante.

Pollock considers that the treatment in English law of a rentcharge as an incorporeal hereditament is arbitrary (Pollock, Principles of Contract, 8th ed., p. 249, n. (k), 8th ed., p. 249, n. (o)).

(b) Savery v Dyer (1752), Amb. 139: "a rentcharge is an interest in the land itself" (Creed v Creed (1844), 11 Cl. & Fin. 491, 508, 510, 11 L., it is a "portion of the estate" (Pitt v Dacre (Lord) (1876), 3 Ch. D. 295, 299). A rentcharge in fee is subject to curtesy (Co Litt 29 a) and dower (Co Litt. 32 a, see Chaplin v Chaplin (1734), 3 P. Wins. 229, title REAL PROPERTY AND CHATELS REAL, pp. 183, 184, 190, ante). On the death of the owner intestate it ordinarily descends to the common law heir, but when granted out of gavelkind land it descends in gavelkind (Edwin v Thomas (1687), 1 Vern. 489, see Stokes v Verryer (1674), 1 Mod. Rep. 112; Randall v Writtle (1673), 2 Lev. 87, titles DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, Vol. XI, p. 3; REAL PROPERTY AND CHATELS REAL, p. 155, ante). If there are no heirs it may escheat to the Crown (Intestates Estates Act, 1884 (47 & 48 Vict. c. 71), s. 4, see title DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, Vol. XI, p. 24). A rentcharge granted for equality of partition descends in the same manner as the land (Co Litt 169 b). The yearly sum charged by way of interest in favour of a person who redeems land tax is in the nature of a rentcharge (Shene v Cook, [1901] 2 K. B. 7, 14, affirmed, [1902] 1 K. B. 682, 687, C. A.), but is by statute personal estate (ibid.; see title LAND TAX, Vol. XVIII, pp. 325, 326).

(c) Bailey v Badham, supra, and see Ashwin v Bullock (1899), 81 L. T. 48 (where the charge was on an undivided moiety of land).

be charged on both freeholds and leaseholds, it is considered as issuing out of the freeholds only, but nevertheless with a right to distrain on the leaseholds (e).

A rentcharge cannot at common law be created by a subject so as to issue out of a rent (f) or other incorporeal hereditament (g). The Crown, however, by virtue of its prerogative, can create a rent issuing out of an incorporeal hereditament (h); and a subject may, by statute, do the same (i).

A sum

907. A rentcharge must be a certain, not a fluctuating, sum (k). It may be divided by deed or will so as to render the land liable to several distresses (l).

Certain statutes applicable to rentcharges.

908. As regards the relation of rentcharges to divers statutes, the Real Property Limitation Act, 1833 (m), defines "rent" as extending to all services for which a distress may be made and all periodical sums of money charged upon or payable out of any land. "Rent" accordingly, as used in the Act, includes a rentcharge limited by deed (n) or by will (o).

By the Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (p), the word "land" is defined as extending to "rents and hereditaments of any tenure (except copy of court roll), and whether corporeal or incorporeal," and accordingly includes rentcharges.

elegit to take in execution the "lands, rents and hereditaments" of the judgment debtor, words which include a rentcharge (r).

SECT. 2.
Nature of a Rent-
charge.

In the Settled Land Act, 1882 (s), a rentcharge is included in "land," which is defined as extending to "incorporeal hereditaments" (t).

A man is not as a rule entitled to vote in respect of the ownership of a rentcharge, which word includes in the Representation of the People Act, 1884 (u), a "fee farm rent, a rent seek, a chief rent, a rent of assize, and any rent or annuity granted out of land" (v).

A rentcharge can, it seems, be vested by an order made as to "land" under the Trustee Act, 1893 (a), s. 26.

For the purposes of the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (b), Part I, the expression "rentcharge" means "any perpetual rent or annuity granted out of land." It is included in the expression "fixed charge," but not in the expression "lands or incumbrances" (c).

SECT. 3.—Nature of an Annuity.

909 An annuity is a sum of money payable yearly, or at any rate periodically, from a source which is exclusively or at any rate primarily personal estate (d). A charge on personally.

910. Prima facie an annuity is itself personal estate (e). Thus, Personal estate. annuities were held to be in the nature of personal estate when granted by the Crown out of Barbados duties (f), or out of the revenues of the Post Office (g), or out of coal duties (h). So also where, under statutory powers, limited owners granted easements and chattels to a company, subject to the payment of an annual rent or sum to the grantors, their executors, administrators and assigns the interest was personal estate (i). Where a will directs

SECT. 3.

Nature of an Annuity.

Gifts of "annuities" construed as

an "annuity" to be paid out of real and personal estate, the interest is prima facie personality (j).

911 The general rule is that annuities are included in the term "legacies" in a will (l), and even in the term "pecuniary legacies" (l), unless the will shows a contrary intention (m). Gifts by will, however, of interests called "annuities," accompanied by a charge on land, may, on construction, be held to amount to gifts of rentcharges payable exclusively out of the land. Such construction may be placed upon the gift if express powers of distress are given (n), or where the annual sums are referred to as "annuities or rentcharges" (o), or where the will contains other indications of intention that the gift is of a rentcharge (p).

Gift so as to devolve on death like
real estate.

912. Although an annuity is personal estate, and is payable out of personal assets, it has this peculiarity, that it is capable of being given in such a manner as to devolve on death in the same manner as real estate (q): thus it may be given to a man and his heirs, a gift which confers an estate in fee descendible to the heir in default of alienation (r). Again, an annuity may be given to a man and the heirs of his body (s), but a limitation in the last-mentioned form does not constitute an estate tail, by reason of the Statute De Donis

(1911), 104 L. T. 710, C. A., compare Re Gerard (Lord) and Trencham's Contract, [1894] 3 Ch. 295, 315, C. A., and see note (i), p. 468, ante.

A statutory charge of an annual sum on a statutory undertaking, comprising hereditaments corporeal and incorporeal, and personality, creates an interest which is personal, not real estate (Re Barber's Trusts, Mulling v Addison (1910), 103 L. T. 427, affirmed (1911), 104 L. T. 710, C. A.).

Where a testator bequeathed to each of his executors "the sum of £400 a year during the term of 5 years," these sums were held to be annuities payable out of income and not legacies payable out of corpus, but postponed in time of payment (Scholefield v Redfern (1863), 2 Drew & Sm. 173).

Conditionalibus(t), which contains only the word "tenement," and an annuity, although a hereditament, is not a "tenement" (u). Where an annuity is limited to A and the heirs of his body, a conditional fee is created, and A can alienate the annuity as soon as an heir of his body is born, in the same manner as he could have done in the case of real estate before the Statute De Donis Conditionalibus(a). But although given with words of inheritance, an annuity is personalty for all purposes other than descent(b).

SUB-SECT 2—Creation by Instrument Inter Vivos

914. To create a rentcharge by an instrument inter vivos the instrument must as a general rule be under seal, for a rentcharge is an incorporeal hereditament(e), and it is settled that, whether for a freehold or a chattel interest, such a hereditament cannot be so Deed necessary.

(d) A claim to rent on the ground of prescription is mentioned by Sir E COKE (Co Litt 114 a, 144 a), and it has been said that the title by prescription is applicable to incorporeal hereditaments (Beauchamp (Earl) v Winn (1873), L R 6 H L 223, 238). But no modern instance of such a claim can be found in the books, and it is expressly excepted from the Prescription Act, 1832 (2 & 3 Will 4, c 71), s 1. From long payment of rent, however, the courts have presumed arrangements made many years ago for such payment, see Adnam v Sandwick (1877), 2 Q B D 485, 492, C A; *Foley's Charity Trustees v. created (f) otherwise than by deed (g). A rentcharge may be created by deed poll (h).

An agreement to grant a rentcharge, issuing out of the land of the grantor, which is evidenced by a writing not under seal may be enforced (v). Such agreement may entitle the grantee to have the rentcharge further secured by the personal covenant of the grantor (k).

915. A rentcharge may be created for an estate in fee simple (l), in fee tail (m), for life (n), or for a term of years (o). Again, a

In the case of rentcharges created by deeds before 1882, the deed usually provided express remedies for enforcing payment out of the land by distress, entry, and the limitation of a term of years. Where the instrument comes into operation after the 31st December, 1881, the rentcharger can now by the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict c 41), s 44 (see p. 514, post), himself enforce payment by distress, entry, or a demise for a term. A rentcharge is also frequently secured by the personal covenant of the creator, and sometimes special powers are given for the appointment of a receiver, see p 520, post. An ordinary instance of the creation by deed in modern times of a rentcharge occurs in the limitation of a jointure usually inserted in a marriage settlement of real estate; see the forms in Davidson, Conveyancing Precedents, 3rd ed., Vol III, pp 982 et seq. and Mr Waley's remarks on their proper framework, ibid, 310 et seq., see also title SETTLEMENTS. A jointure rentcharge prima facie takes effect on the husband's death (Re De Hoghton, De Hoghton v De Hoghton, [1896] 2 Ch. 385). Precedents of various documents relating to the creation and assignment of rentcharges will be found in the Encyclopedia of Forms and Precedents, Vol 1, pp 543 et seq.

The stamp duty on a grant of a rentcharge is the same as on a conveyance of land, whether the grant is for valuable consideration (Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c 39), s 54, see title SALE OF LAND), or voluntary (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c. 8), s. 74); see title REVENUE, pp 700 et seq., post.

916. A rentcharge already created cannot at common law be granted so as to commence in futuro (r), but may be so granted when it is created de novo (s). The time of commencement must of course be within the period limited by the rule against perpetuities (t).

917. There are two forms of words in which rentcharges may be created by an instrument inter vivos, namely, (1) by common law grant or reservation (u), and (2) by a limitation taking effect under the Statute of Uses (a). If the instrument creating the rentcharge operates as a common law grant, the grantee does not obtain seisin in deed of the rentcharge until he has actually received part of it (b), and he could not be treated as having been in the "actual possession" of the rentcharge required in the case of a county voter by the Representation of the People Act, 1832 (c). If, however, the instrument operates under the Statute of Uses (d), the grantee acquires seisin in deed of the rentcharge by virtue of the statute (c), and, even before he receives it, has the "actual possession" required for franchise (f).

(u) Where a rentcharge is created by common law reservation there is in effect a grant of the land by the owner thereof and a grant of the rent by the grantee of the land (Browning v. Beston (1555), Plowd 134, arguendo, 3 Preston, Abstracts of Titles, 55; compare Ewart v. Graham (1859), 7 H. L. Cas 331, 345; *Durham and Sunderland Rail Co v. Should, however, the land be limited to A and his heirs to the use of B and his heirs to the use that C and his heirs shall receive a rentcharge, this does not transgress the rule that a use cannot be limited upon a use. The second use does not create a trust, but gives a seisin in the rent to C (Hanly v. Carroll, [1907] 1 I R. 166, 173; Gilbertson v. Richards (1859), 4 H. & N. 277, 297, compare title REAL PROPERTY AND CHATTELS REAL, pp 271 et seq., ante). Where A granted land to B and his heirs to the use that A and his heirs should receive a rentcharge, and subject thereto to dower uses in favour of B, a subsequent common law grant in the deed of the same rentcharge by B to A was treated as inoperative (Hartley v. Maddocks, [1899] 2 Ch 199).

Where land is held by A and B as tenants in common (q) and they make a common law grant to C of a rent of 20s. per annum, C has two rents of 20s. (r). If, however, A and B hold as joint tenants, it seems that C only has a single rent. If A and B are

SECT. 1.
Rent-
charges.

920. A person cannot at the same moment grant a perpetual rentcharge issuing out of freehold or copyhold land and also the fee simple in the same land to the same person (c). Where a copyholder covenants to surrender his copyholds by way of mortgage and by the same deed grants to the mortgagee a power to distrain for the interest on the principal mortgage debt, the grant operates as an immediate grant of a rentcharge, which, however, will cease upon the admittance of the mortgagee (c).

Perpetual
rentcharge cannot be granted with fee simple

921 The grantor of a rentcharge must have an estate or interest in the land out of which the rentcharge is made to issue, as great as if not greater than the estate or interest created in the rentcharge (d). If he purports by deed to create the rentcharge for a greater estate or interest than that which he has in the land, the rentcharge is valid in so far as his estate or interest in the land is able to support it (e). Apparent exceptions to the general rule which requires the grantor's estate in the land to equal or exceed the estate or interest in the rentcharge granted are afforded by various statutory enactments, the general effect of which is to empower limited owners or parties under personal disabilities (f) to dispose of land in consideration of a rentcharge. But, at least in the case of sales for building purposes by a tenant for life under statutory powers (g), this apparent exception is not a real exception; for, although the limited owner may be empowered to convey in fee simple subject to a "reservation" of a rentcharge (h), the transaction appears to take effect as a grant of the rentcharge by the grantee in fee simple of the land (i).

Necessity for registration.

922. Any rentcharge granted since the 26th April, 1855, otherwise than by marriage settlement, for one or more life or lives or for any term of years or greater estate determinable on one or more life or lives does not affect any lands, tenements, or hereditaments as against purchasers, mortgagees, or creditors, unless registered at the Land Registry (j). An unregistered rentcharge is, however, valid as against persons taking notice of it (k).

SUB-SECT 3 — Creation by Testamentary Disposition

Creation by will or codicil.

923. A rentcharge, that is, an interest in the nature of a rentcharge, may be created by will (l), for which purpose it is unnecessary to use any particular form of words. The question whether a rentcharge is created by a will is one of construction, and the indication of the testator's intention to create an interest having the incidents of a legal rentcharge is sufficient (m). Thus, the land of a lunatic can, with the sanction of the judge in lunacy, be sold for such a consideration (Re Ware (a Person of Unsound Mind), [1892] 1 Ch 344, C. A., see title LUNATICS AND PERSONS OF UNSOUND MIND, Vol XIX, p 443). The land of a municipal corporation can also, with the sanction of the Local Government Board, be sold for a like consideration (Scarborough Corporation v Cooper, [1910] 1 Ch 68; see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol XIX, p 318). It seems, however, that the ordinary power of sale and exchange does not authorise a sale in consideration of a rentcharge (Read v Shaw (1807), Sugden, Powers, 8th ed., p. 864). Sales and conveyances of land to purchasers in consideration of rentcharges are common in some parts of the north of England. Precedents of such conveyances will be found in the Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol XII, pp 594 et seq. The position, on the death of such a purchaser, of his legal personal representative is dealt with in the Law of Property Amendment Act, 1859 (22 & 23 Vict c 35), s 28, and see the text, infra. No vendor's lien on land arose in favour of a vendor who agreed to sell the land in consideration of a life annuity to be secured by bond (Dixon v Gayfere (1857), 1 De G & J 655, and see the earlier decisions there discussed). Where, under the powers of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict c 18) s 10 (amended by the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act Amendment Act, 1860 (23 & 24 Vict c 106), ss 1, 4, see title COMPULSORY PURCHASE OF LAND AND COMPENSATION, Vol VI, p 59), land was agreed to be sold to a company in consideration of a rent charge, and before conveyance the rentcharge fell into arrear, the vendor had no lien on the land for the arrears (Jersey (Earl) v Briton Ferry Floating Dock Co. (1869), L. R. 7 Eq 409). On the other hand, where, after conveyance, the rentcharge fell into arrear, the vendor was allowed, notwithstanding the appointment of a receiver of the tolls, profits, and income of the undertaking, to distrain for the arrears upon the land, as well where a power to distrain was expressly given by the conveyance (Eyton v Denbigh, Ruthin, and Corwen Rail Co (1868), L. R. 6 Eq. 14) as where it arose under the Landlord and Tenant Act, 1730 (4 Geo. 2, c 28), s 5 (Eyton v Denbigh, Ruthin, and Corwen Rail Co, Richman v Johns (1868), L. R. 6 Eq 488).

A power to invest upon freehold or leasehold ground rents may authorise the purchase of such rents (Re Mordan, Legg v Mordan, [1905] 1 Ch. 515 (C. A.)).

For form of devise of rentcharge, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol XV, pp 620, 628.

(m) See Ramsay v Thorngate, supra; Re Trenchard, Trenchard v.

a rentcharge is created where a testator devises land to one person charged with the payment of an annual sum to another (n). A gift by will of a rentcharge issuing out of land is a gift of an interest in the land itself and necessarily specific (o).

Rent-
charges.

SUB-SECT. 4. — (Creation by or under the Powers of a Statute.)

924. There are numerous statutory provisions as to the creation of rentcharges. Thus, under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Acts, 1845 and 1860 (p), the absolute owner of land, whether under disability or not, can sell land to an undertaking in consideration of an annual rentcharge to be charged on the tolls or rates of the undertaking or to be otherwise secured as may be agreed. On compulsory purchase.

925. Further powers exist for the creation of rentcharges either for repayment of advances made by the Treasury for drainage works (q), or for the commutation of customary, prescriptive, or other similar obligations to repair, maintain, or do any works (r), or for repaying advances made under the Improvement of Land Act, 1864 (s), and under other Acts authorising the charging of land with the expenses of improvement (t). To secure repayment of advances for improvements

926. Local authorities may create rentcharges in respect of advances made for private improvements (u). These rentcharges must be registered (v). By local sanitary authorities

927. Where partitions are made by order of the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries, compensation for the purpose of producing equality may be given by means of perpetual rentcharges charged on the whole or part of the land partitioned (w). By parties to a partition.

SMOT. 1.

Rent-charges.

By limited owners of settled land.

928. As regards settled land, the court may authorise a tenant for life to grant the land for building or mining purposes in perpetuity at a fee farm rent (x). The power only applies to districts as to which the evidence mentioned in the Settled Land Act, 1882 (y), is produced to the court. Where, under the above power, a grant in fee simple is made for building purposes, with a reservation of a rentcharge, the reservation operates to create a rentcharge in fee simple issuing out of the land granted (z) and having incidental thereto the powers and remedies conferred by the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (a).

By registered proprietors of land.

929. A registered proprietor of land may charge it with an annuity or other periodical payment by way of registered charge (b). In such a case the powers of the Land Transfer Act, 1875 (c), apply.

On enfranchisement of copyholds

930. In the case of compulsory enfranchisement under the Copyhold Act, 1894 (d), the lord's compensation must in certain cases be, and in the case of a voluntary enfranchisement under that statute the consideration may wholly or partly be, an annual rentcharge issuing out of the land enfranchised (e).

On sale for charitable uses.

931. Rentcharges may be created upon sale for full valuable consideration of land for charitable uses (f).

Necessity for registration

932. A rentcharge created, under any statute, since the 1st January, 1889, otherwise than by deed, for securing to any person moneys spent or expenses incurred by him, or moneys advanced by him for repaying moneys spent or expenses incurred by any other person, under such statute, is void as against any person taking any interest in the land charged unless registered in the Land Registry (g).

SECT. 2.—*Annuities.*SUB-SECT. 1.—*Creation by Instrument Inter Vivos.*SECT. 2.
Annuities.

933. To create an annuity by instrument inter vivos, a deed, as a general rule, is necessary (h). An annuity is frequently secured by a personal covenant (i), and, where it is payable for the separate use of a married woman, a restraint on anticipation may be attached (k). By deed.

934. A parol grant of an annuity would appear to offend against the Statute of Frauds (l), not being a contract to be performed within a year (m). But, although a deed may be necessary for the express Parol grant.

(h) Re Locke (1823), 2 Dow & Ry (κ β) 603, 606; Nield v. Smith (1808), 14 Ves 491; see Cupit v. Jackson (1824), 13 Price, 721. The grant of life annuities by deed was largely in vogue during the seventeenth, eighteenth, and the early part of the nineteenth centuries as a means of raising money and evading the usury laws, a clause for redemption being sometimes inserted; see Butcher v. Ashley (1844), 1 Ph 422; Re Muffell, Jones v. Mason (1888), 39 Ch D 534, 536. The last-mentioned laws, which prohibited loans at a higher rate of interest than 5 per cent., were contained in the following statutes—(1713) 13 Anne, c. 15 (Statutes of the Realm); Bank of England Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 98), s. 7; Gaming Acts, 1835 (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 41) and 1839 (2 & 3 Vict. c. 37). Doubts existed as to the validity of these annuity transactions, and accordingly divers subterfuges were resorted to. In practice, the parties kept these loans as secret as possible and disguised the true nature of the transactions, giving them the appearance of mere purchases and sales, and frequently omitting the clause for redemption; see Lunkey on Annuities, 1833, Introduction, pp. xviii, xix. With the view of dealing with the mischief and protecting minors, the legislature passed a series of Acts—(1776) 17 Geo. 3, c. 26; (1813) 53 Geo. 3, c. 141, (1822) 3 Geo. 4, c. 92, (1826) 7 Geo. 4, c. 75—requiring, among other things, enrolment. But the true root of the evil was not removed until 1854, when the usury laws were repealed (Usury Laws Repeal Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 90)), see title MONEY and MONEY-LENDING, Vol. XXI., p. 42).

According to the present practice the grant of an annuity is sometimes, but rarely, resorted to as a means of raising money (Davidson, Conveyancing Precedents, 3rd ed. Vol. V, p. 99), and much of the older law in relation to the grant of annuities has become obsolete. On the other hand, annuities are not infrequently purchased from and granted by insurance companies. Forms of annuity deeds will be found in Davidson, Conveyancing Precedents, 3rd ed. Vol. V, pp. 103 et seq., and precedents of various documents relating to the creation and assignment of annuities will be found in the Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. I., pp. 503 et seq.

The stamp duty on a grant of an annuity is the same as on a conveyance on sale of land (Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), s. 54; see title SALE OF LAND, whether the grant is for valuable consideration (see ibid.) or voluntary (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 74); and see title REVENUE, pp. 700 et seq., post

(i) Where a life annuity is secured by a personal covenant, the covenantor cannot on originating summons obtain a declaration as to the evidence to be produced of the continuance of the annuitant's life (Hunt v. Hunt (1908), 97 L. T. 822, C. A.). As to bonds to secure annuities, see title BONDS, Vol. III., pp. 81, 82, 94; and, as to the stamp duty on such bonds, see ibid., p. 104.

SECT. 2.
Annuities.

grant of an annuity, an agreement in writing, not under seal, for the grant of an annuity is an agreement of which the courts may decree specific performance (n).

Necessity for registration.

935. An annuity granted since the 26th April, 1855, otherwise than by marriage settlement, for one or more life or lives, or for any term of years or greater estate determinable on one or more life or lives, does not affect any hereditaments, as against purchasers, mortgagees, or creditors, unless registered (o).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Creation by Testamentary Disposition Payment of Value in Cash.

Creation by will

936. Annuities can be created by will; and in a will, according to the general rule, annuities are included in the term "legacies" (p). The most common form of annuities created by will are life annuities; but a will may create annuities for different periods, or annuities which are perpetual (q).

Forms.

937. The creation by will of a life annuity may take any one of the following forms, namely—

(1) Simple bequest.

(1) A simple bequest of an annuity.

In this case, where the testator's estate is sufficient, the annuitant cannot claim to be paid in cash the value of the annuity (a); but he can claim to have such a security set apart as will make it practically certain that the annuity will be paid (b). Where the estate is insufficient, the annuitant can claim that the annuity shall be valued, and that the amount of the valuation, subject to an abatement in proportion to the abatement of the pecuniary legacies, shall be paid to him in cash (c).

(2) Direction or power to set apart fund.

(2) A simple bequest of an annuity, followed by a direction to the trustees to set apart a fund to provide for the annuity, or a power to do so.

In these cases, where the estate is sufficient to set apart the requisite fund, the annuitant, although he may be entitled to have any deficiency of income made up out of capital, cannot claim to have the value of the annuity paid over to him (d). Where the estate is insufficient to set apart the requisite fund and also to pay in full any pecuniary legacies bequeathed by the will, but is sufficient to pay in full the legacies and also the value of the annuity as at the testator's death, the annuity should be valued as at the death according to the Government scale, and the valuation may either be paid to the annuitant or invested in the purchase of an annuity (e). Again, where the estate is insufficient to pay in full the legacies and also the value of the annuity as at the testator's death, the amount of the valuation should be treated as a legacy, and, all the legacies abating proportionately, the abated amount of the valuation should be paid to the annuitant (f).

(3) A simple bequest of an annuity, followed by a power to the trustees to purchase an annuity (3) Power to purchase.

In this case, when the trustees have finally determined to exercise the power and have provided money for the purpose of the purchase, the annuitant can claim to have the value of the annuity paid over to him (g). If, however, the annuitant dies before the money has been provided, his representatives have not this right (h).

(4) A simple bequest of an annuity, followed by a direction to trustees to purchase an annuity (i) or a direction to purchase standing alone (k) (4) Direction to purchase

In these cases the annuitant has a right to claim in cash the price to be paid for the annuity; and, if he dies before the purchase, his representatives have a similar right, even where his death occurs immediately after that of the testator (l).

(5) A direction to trustees to invest a given sum in the purchase of an annuity for the annuitant's benefit (a). (5) Direction to invest a given sum.

In this case the annuitant is entitled to the sum; and, if he dies before appropriation, his representatives have a similar right (b).

938. The right to have the cash value of a life annuity paid over to him is not interfered with by a power to trustees to apply the annuity for the annuitant's personal benefit (c), or by a mere declaration that the annuitant shall not be entitled to receive the When right of annuitant to payment of value is negatived.

value of the annuity (d). In order to prevent the annuitant having the value there must be a gift over (e).

939. The creation by will of a perpetual annuity may take the form of an unlimited gift of the income of a particular fund and, in such case, amounts to a gift of the corpus from which the income arises, and the annuitant is entitled to payment of the corpus accordingly (f).

SUB-SECT. 3—Creation by or under the Powers of a Statute

Annuities payable out of public revenues

940. As regards the raising of money, a long series of statutes (g) empowered the Government to raise money by the creation of annuities payable out of the public revenues. The management of these funds was eventually given to the National Debt Commissioners (h); and many statutes have since provided for the creation of either terminable or perpetual annuities (i), or the conversion of perpetual annuities into terminable annuities (j), or the conversion of Exchequer bonds into annuities (k).

Annuities for raising money for special public purposes.

Money has frequently been raised for special purposes by the creation of annuities, for example, by the Fortification Acts (l), the Telegraphs Acts (m) and the Public Buildings Expenses Act, 1903 (n), and to pay off shareholders in a public company whose dividends were guaranteed by the Government (o), or to pay the amount due from the National Debt Commissioners on account of friendly societies (p), or in respect of trustee savings banks (q), or in connexion with the purchase of Irish land (r). SECT. 2.
Annuities.

941. In addition to the public general statutes, powers have been given by various local Acts to raise money by the creation of annuities. This power is given, as a general rule, for a specific purpose, as, for example, to meet the expenses of paving and lighting (b), or of managing a river (c), or repairing or rebuilding a church (d).

Annuities
for raising money by local Acts

942 As regards the purchase of annuities by the public, the Savings Banks Acts (e) have created and gradually extended the powers of the Government to grant Government annuities of small amount. By the Government Annuities Acts, 1853 and 1864 (f), annuities up to the amount of £50 might be granted to persons of not less than sixteen years of age nor more than sixty, and the payments for these were to be made either in one gross sum or by annual payments during a course of years. By the Government Annuities Act, 1882 (g), and the Savings Bank Act, 1887 (g), the amount was increased to £100, and the minimum age reduced to five years. Annuities may also be granted to two persons as joint tenants, provided the whole amount does not exceed the amount grantable to one person (h).

Effect of words of

As regards words of limitation, the rules of construction applicable to limitations of estates in land are also applicable to limitations of estates in rentcharges (i). The estate depends in each case on the words of limitation used, and the duration of the rentcharge is ascertained accordingly (k). The various estates for which a rentcharge may be created have already been stated (l)

As regards estates in fee, a rentcharge created de novo for such an estate may, it seems, be limited to commence at a future time, and such future time may either be a fixed point or may be ascertainable on a contingency (m). As regards estates tail, a rentcharge, being a "tenement" within the Statute De Donis (n), may either be created de novo for an estate tail only, or, while existing for an estate in fee, may be subsequently entailed. In the former case a disentailing assurance would, it seems, create a base fee; in the latter case it would result in a fee simple (o). As regards estates pur autre vie, where the grantee of the rentcharge predeceases the cestui que vie, the estate may pass to the legal personal representative of the grantee either as special occupant (p) or under the Wills Act, 1837 (q).

944. Where A, owning Blackacre in fee, grants thereout a rentcharge to B without words of limitation, B takes an estate in the rentcharge for life only (r). The result is the same where A devises

(k) Thus, if A, owning Blackacre in fee, grant thereout a rent to B "in fee simple," B takes a perpetual rentcharge (Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), s. 51). A perpetual rentcharge may also pass under a grant to A without words of inheritance, where the intention sufficiently appears by the deed (Re Stinson's Estate, [1910] 1 I. Where a tenant for life under the Settled Land Acts (see title SETTLEMENTS) grants land for building purposes subject to a reservation of a perpetual rentcharge, the reservation operates to create a rentcharge in fee (Settled Land Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 69), s. 9), and see p. 478, ante

Where A, owning Blackacre in fee and Whiteacre for a term of years, grants out of Blackacre and Whiteacre a rentcharge to B in fee, the rentcharge in fee issues out of Blackacre only, but nevertheless with a right to distrain upon Whiteacre during the term(t). Where A, owning Blackacre for a term of years, grants thereout a rentcharge to B for his life, this is a chattel interest which will endure until the term expires or B dies, whichever event first happens(u). Where A, owning Blackacre for a term of years determinable on lives, devises out of this estate a rentcharge to B, the rentcharge will continue during the term notwithstanding the death of B(v).

Commencement and Duration of Rent-

Annuities.

Duration Annuity for life of annuitant.

Perpetual annuity.

From the nature of the limitation.

947. As regards its duration, an annuity may be (1) for the life of the annuitant, or (2) perpetual, or (3) for some period other than the life of the annuitant (d).

948. With regard to annuities for the life of the annuitant; an annuity given by will to a person simpliciter, without words of limitation, is for life only (e). This is the general rule, so that if a longer duration is claimed, the claimant must establish an exception (f). Even where an annuity is given by will to one person for life and then to another simply, both persons take life annuities only (g).

949. With regard to perpetual annuities; an annuity bequeathed to a person is perpetual where the words indicate its perpetual continuance after his death (h), as, for instance, where the annuity is given to him for ever (i), or where there is a gift over if he dies without issue (k), or where, in the case of an annuity given to several without survivorship, there is a direction for the sale at a particular period of the annuity in its integrity (l).

An annuity is perpetual where given to "A and his heirs" (m) or to "A. or his heirs" (n). Where an annuity is given to "A and the heirs of his body," A takes a conditional fee which becomes absolute on the birth of issue (o).

A direction to purchase an annuity in Government securities to the amount of so much a year may pass a perpetual annuity (p).

(n) Parsons v. Parsons (1869), L. R. 8 Eq 260, compare the gift of an annuity to "A or his descendants," which was held to be a gift to A for life only with a substitutional gift to his descendants for life (Re Morgan, Morgan v. Morgan, [1893] 3 Ch. 222, C. A.)

Again, an annuity is perpetual where the words amount to a gift of the income of a particular fund without limit of time (q).

An unlimited gift of an annual sum "being the interest of" stock carries the principal (r); but a mere charge of an annuity on a particular fund does not render it perpetual (s); nor does a charge on land devised in fee simple (t). A charge on leasehold property may cause an annuity to continue during the lease (u).

950. With regard to annuities created for some definite period other than the life of the annuitant, where there is a gift by will of an annuity to a person for some period other than his own life, or for some particular purpose which may last only during some such definite period, the general rule is that the gift is for that period and for that period only.

Thus, a gift of an annuity for a term or pur autre vie is a gift to the annuitant and his representatives during the term or during the life of the cestui que vie (b). An annuity given to A during the life of B continues during the life of B, although A predeceases him (c); and an annuity given to the testator's son from his majority to the death or second marriage of the testator's widow continues during that period, notwithstanding that the son dies before the widow, being payable after the son's death to his representatives (d).

A single annuity given to A and B "during their lives" continues during the life of A surviving, who after B's death takes the whole (e). But under a direction to purchase an annuity "for the life of A and B" to be equally divided between them, the annuity continues during the joint lives only (f). In such a case, however, a gift over "after the deaths of A and B" may cause the annuity to continue for the survivor's benefit during his life (g). A single annuity, given to A and B expressly "during their lives and the life of the survivor" in equal shares, continues during that period but without survivorship, the share of A predeceasing B going to his representative (h); but in a case of this kind, where the gift is to A and B during their and his life with a gift over after the death of the survivor, A surviving is entitled to receive the whole annuity (i).

Under a gift of several annuities to A and B "for their lives and the life of the survivor" each takes an annuity continuing during their joint lives and the life of the survivor (j), but if such a bequest contains the additional words "for their or her absolute use and benefit" the annuity of A on his predeceasing B survives to B for his life (k). Under a gift to A and B of an annual sum each so long as they shall live, A and B take several annuities each continuing for the life of the annuitant (l). A bequest of an annuity to several persons during their lives, without words of survivorship, is a bequest to each of them of a separate annuity equal to an aliquot share of the whole, and, upon the death of each, his separate annuity ceases (m).

Annuities
during lives of animals

951. As regards annuities bequeathed during the lives of animals, the bequest of an annuity to an executor to be paid for the keep of the testator's mare is a valid gift of an annuity during the mare's life (n). Again, if a testator charges land with payment to his trustees of an annuity for the term of fifty years if any of his horses and hounds shall so long live, the annuity to be applied in their maintenance, the gift is valid (o). It seems that the duration of such an annuity should for the purposes of the rule against perpetuities be confined to human lives (p).

952. An annuity bequeathed to a trustee or executor "for his trouble" (q), or "so long as he executes the office" (r), continues so long as duties or trusts remain to be performed, and are performed, by the annuitant (r). It does not cease upon judgment in an administration action (s). But where annuities are bequeathed to trustees "for their services and collecting of rents," and the trustees employ a collector whose expenses, to an amount exceeding the annuities, are allowed to the trustees in an administration action, the trustees are not entitled to the annuities (a).

953. As regards annuities given for maintenance, education and the like, the authorities are numerous. A gift of an annuity to the testator's widow during a daughter's minority, for the daughter's "maintenance and education," does not cease by the death of the widow during the minority (b). A gift of an annuity for the maintenance of A is, certainly where A is an adult (c), a general trust for his benefit, which amounts to an absolute gift (d). Such a gift during the life of another person accordingly may continue after A's death (e) it is certainly not confined to A's minority (f). A gift for the "maintenance and education" of children, where no definite period is mentioned, amounts to a gift for the joint lives of the children and the survivor of them, the children for the time being entitled taking as joint tenants until they sever (g). Again, a gift of an annuity during a definite period to a widow, 'for her own benefit and for the maintenance and education' of a class of children, may create a trust not limited to children under twenty-one or unmarried (h). Under such a trust, the widow is entitled to a separate interest (i), which may be attached by a judgment creditor (k), and where in such a case she is guilty of immorality the court will administer the fund (l).

954. An annuity may be validly given to A during her widowhood (m). A gift of an annuity to A "so long as she continues my widow" ceases on A's death or remarriage (n). The remarriage must, of course, be a valid ceremony (o). Such an interest will continue notwithstanding a ceremony of marriage celebrated between A and her deceased sister's husband before August, 1907 (p). Where in the case of such a gift, A is not the testator's wife at his death, the gift is inoperative (q), except where it appears that the testator meant to use the word "widow" in a secondary sense (r). The gift of an annuity to A, a single woman, "until she shall die or be married" is good, and will cease upon her death or marriage (s); and it seems that a similar limitation of a rentcharge, which is real estate, would follow the same rule (t). The gift of an annuity to A so long as she remains unmarried, there being no gift over, requires marriage to determine it, and, if A dies unmarried, her executor is entitled to the fund producing the annuity (a). If the will includes a gift over to B "after A's marriage" or "if A marries," B takes upon A. dying unmarried (b). It seems that where an annuity is bequeathed, after the death of a husband, to his wife "so long as she continues unmarried," a divorce may not prevent the wife from taking (c).

Effect of

955. While limitations of annuities and rentcharges until marriage may be good, different results may follow from conditions subsequent in restraint of marriage, whether total or partial, attached to gifts of this kind (d).

Sometimes annuities are given upon terms calculated to discourage one spouse from cohabiting with the other (e); as, for instance, where a testator bequeaths an annuity to the annuitant to be paid only whilst living apart from his or her wife or husband (f), (d) As to the distinction between a condition precedent and a condition subsequent, see title CONTRACT, Vol VII, p 432. It has been said that, according to English law, if a condition subsequent which is to defeat an estate is against the policy of the law, the gift is absolute, but if the illegal condition is precedent there is no gift (*Re Moore, Trafford v. If the words referring to living apart should be read as a condition subsequent, it will be ignored as a condition contra bonos mores (h). If, however, the words should be read as a limitation rather than a condition, as where the commencement and duration of the period during which the payment is to be made is fixed by reference to the living apart, the gift is void (i).

If a marriage settlement contains a grant by the wife to the husband of an annuity, a proviso for its cesser on the annuitant living apart from his wife is void (k).

The construction of covenants in separation deeds relating to the payment of annuities, and the effect on such provisions of subsequent reconciliation, has already been dealt with (l).

956. With regard to the property charged with annuities given by will, the question whether an annuity is payable exclusively out of income, or is charged upon the corpus of the estate, or whether any arrears are payable out of the income of succeeding years, depends entirely upon the words of the particular will construed in their ordinary grammatical sense (n). In some cases the words of the will may amount to a clear charge on corpus which does not admit of doubt (a). In other cases doubts may arise as to the property on which an annuity is charged, the solution of which must be found in the construction of the whole will.

The numerous cases on this subject may be conveniently grouped according to the form of the initial gift of the annuity. This gift may be in one of the following forms:—(1) in the form of a simple gift of an annuity followed usually by a residuary gift; or (2) in the form of a direction to trustees to whom the testator's general estate is given to pay an annuity out of the income of such general estate; or (3) in the form of a direction to trustees to set apart sufficient property to produce an annuity of a specified amount, and, out of the income of the property set apart, to pay such annuity; or (4) in the form of a direction to trustees to set apart specified property, whether real or personal, and, out of the income of the property set apart, to pay an annuity of a specified amount.

957. In cases where the initial gift of the annuity is in the form of a simple gift followed by a residuary gift, the general rule is that the annuitant must be paid in preference to the residuary legatee, who can take nothing until the annuitant has been paid in full (b). Various forms of words have been held to amount in effect to a simple gift of an annuity followed by a residuary gift (c).

The right of an annuitant claiming under an initial simple gift to have recourse to the corpus of the residue is not taken away by a subsequent direction to trustees to pay the annuity out of income (d); nor, as a general rule, is such annuitant's right of recourse to the general residue taken away by a subsequent direction to trustees to set apart a fund (e).

As a rule of practice (independent of construction), where an annuity is payable out of residue, the court can set apart a sufficient fund to answer the annuity and pay the surplus residue to the residuary legatee; but in such a case the annuitant can, if necessary, resort to the corpus set apart (f). The appropriation of a fund to answer the annuity does not discharge the rest of the testator's estate, either where the appropriation is by the court (g) or where it is made by the executor (h).

958. The cases where the initial gift of the annuity is in the form of a direction to trustees, to whom the testator's general estate is given, to pay an annuity out of the income of such general estate, may be divided into two classes. In the first class the case is treated as one of "a legacy and a residuary bequest," and the annuity is charged on the corpus of the estate (i). In the second class the case is treated as one of "a tenant for life and remainderman," and the annuity is not charged on the corpus of the estate (h). In some cases where the will contains a direction to trustees, to whom the general estate is given, to pay an annuity out of the income of such general estate, the annuity is a continuing charge on the income after the death of the annuitant for the purpose of recovering arrears, though not charged on the corpus of the estate (l).

959. The cases where the initial gift of the annuity is in the form of a direction to trustees to set apart sufficient property to produce an annuity of a specified amount, and out of the income of the property set apart to pay such annuity, may also be divided into two classes. In the first class the annuity is charged upon the corpus of the estate; the reason being that the form of gift shows the main object of the testator to be the bestowal of an annuity, the direction to set apart a fund not denoting the testator's object, but merely the means by which that object is to be secured (m). In the second class the annuity is not charged on corpus; the reason being that the form of the gift shows that the testator intended that the fund set apart should be continued in its integrity during the life of the annuitant and should in that state go over (n).

960. Lastly, the cases where the initial gift of the annuity is in the form of a direction to trustees to set apart specified property, whether real or personal, and out of the income of the property set apart to pay an annuity of a specified amount, may also be divided into two classes. In the first class the annuity is charged on the corpus of the property set apart (o). In the second class the annuity is not charged on the corpus of the particular property set apart, but only on the income thereof; the reason being that, under the form of the gift, a new trust arises on the death of the annuitant (p). A similar result may be arrived at where leaseholds out of the income whereof the annuity is to be paid are directed to be sold after the death of the annuitant (q).

In the last-mentioned case the will contained a gift of the surplus income of the particular property, and the words "subject to the trusts aforesaid" were confined to payments out of income; see Re Mackenzie's (Kenneth) Settlement (1863), 32 Beav. 253 (a decision dealing with the case where particular property had been settled by a deed, and the income, which had been insufficient to pay annuities, subsequently increased); compare *Scott v. SECT. 3.
Rights of Rentchargers
and Annuitants Inter se to Priority.

Priority as regards property charged with annuity.

962. Priority between annual sums is in general a question of construction. Thus, on construction, a rentcharge charged on the testator's real estate may have priority over legacies directed to be raised out of real estate in the event of the personal estate proving insufficient (a). A direction to pay an annuity out of residue may postpone it to other annuities previously given by the will (b). Where a testator grants an annuity to A and "subject thereto" devises estates, and by subsequent codicils charges the same estates with other annuities, A's annuity has priority (c); but the words "in the first place" or "impimis" (d), or a direction to pay without abatement (e), do not give priority.

Again, a direction as to the time of payment gives no priority. For example, an annuity, deferred as to its time of payment, must in the distribution of assets rank equally with other annuities which are directed to be paid immediately (f); and an annuity payable immediately has no priority over an annuity payable on the death of a tenant for life (g), nor over annuities which are directed to be paid after the payment of certain legacies (h).

SECT. 4.—Cumulative and Substitutional Annuities Arising by Testamentary Disposition.

963. Where more than one annuity is given to the same person by a testamentary disposition, a doubt frequently arises whether the annuitant is entitled to both annuities or whether the second is intended to be taken in the place of the first—in other words, whether the gifts are cumulative or substitutional (i). of this doubt depends to a large extent upon the question whether the gifts are contained in the same instrument or in different instruments, and, although a codicil is in strictness merely a part of the will, if the first gift is in the will and the second in a codicil, the result may be different from that where the gifts are both in the will, or both in the same codicil (l).

Thus, two annuities of the same amount given to the same person by the same testamentary instrument are primâ facie substitutional (l). On the other hand, two annuities of the same amount given to the same person by different testamentary instruments are primâ facie cumulative (m).

Gifts to the same person in the same testamentary instrument of annuities of different amounts are primâ facie cumulative (n); but the instrument may show an intention of substitution (o). Gifts to the same person in separate testamentary instruments of several annuities are primâ facie cumulative, whether the amounts are the same or different (p).

964. The rules of the doctrine of satisfaction, both as regards the satisfaction of portions by legacies and the satisfaction of debts by legacies (q), have been discussed by the courts in connection with annuities. Thus, as regards the first of the above rules, where a father covenants by settlement to pay an annuity to his son and subsequently dies having bequeathed legacies to the son, this rule may prevent the son claiming both the annuity and the legacies (r). Again, where an annuity is granted or secured to another by a testator in his lifetime, and he subsequently dies having bequeathed to such grantee or obligee an annuity differing slightly from the existing annuity, these slight differences may prevent the doctrine of satisfaction from applying, so that both annuities may become Part IV.—Rights of Rentchargers and Annuitants as Affected by the Quantum of the Donor's Estate or the Amount of His Assets.

SECT 1.—Cases where upon the Creation of a Rentcharge the Estate of the Donor in the Land Charged is Insufficient.

965. If the tenant in tail of land grants out of it a rent in fee, the rent will determine on the grantor's death, unless he disentails, in which case it will continue (r). If a tenant for years of land grants out of it a rentcharge to a stranger for his life, the grant is not void, but is good as a chattel interest during the term if the grantee so long live (r). If one, who in fact is only tenant for life of land, grants an annuity to commence on his own death and charges it on the land, covenanting that the annuitant may distrain for arrears, the annuitant may recover arrears from the grantor's estate by an action of covenant (a). Again, where a testator, who is only entitled to an undivided share of certain land, purports by will to give a rentcharge payable out of the whole of the land, the rentcharge is payable in full out of the testator's share (b). If a mortgagor of copyholds covenants by the mortgage deed to surrender his land and also grants a rentcharge, the rentcharge will cease upon the mortgagee's admittance (c).

SECT. 2.—Cases where the Donor of a Rentcharge or Annuity becomes Bankrupt.

966. Where the terre tenant of freehold land subject to a rentcharge becomes bankrupt, his trustee may, it seems, disclaim the land (d).

Upon the bankruptcy of the donor of an annuity, future payments of the annuity may be proved as debts under the Bankruptcy Act, 1883 (e), even although the annuity may be contingent on the performance or non-performance of some act by the annuitant (f). If, after the value of a contingent annuity has been estimated, the happening of the contingency results in the assessment being excessive, the assessment cannot be altered (g).

967. The following annuities are capable of valuation and therefore provable in bankruptcy:—an annuity for life subject to a condition contra bonos mores which is void (h), an annuity contingent upon the annuitant surviving another person (i); an annuity payable under a separation deed to a wife with a proviso for cesser if she becomes unchaste or if cohabitation is resumed (k); an annuity to a widow to cease on remarriage (l); an annuity to a retiring partner determinable on breach of a covenant not to trade within a limited area (m); an annuity payable during the continuance of certain works which may cease at any time (n); an annuity payable until the annuitant does some act whereby the annuity will become vested in another (o).

An annuity not registered pursuant to the Judgments Act, 1855 (p), although void as against subsequent purchasers without notice of the annuity, is binding upon all subsequent incumbrancers who took with notice and against the trustee in bankruptcy of the grantor of the annuity, and is provable in the latter's bankruptcy (q).

Future payments of alimony under a decree of judicial separation are incapable of valuation and are not provable in bankruptcy (r). The husband therefore continues liable to make the payments notwithstanding his discharge in bankruptcy (s).

SECT. 3.—Cases where upon the Donor's Death his Assets are Insufficient.

SUB-SECT 1—Effect as regards Annuities Created by Instrument Inter Vivos so as to give rise to a Debt

968. In the administration by the court of the assets of any person who has died since the 1st November, 1875, and whose estate may prove to be insufficient for the payment in full of his debts and liabilities, the rules in bankruptcy as to the respective rights of secured and unsecured creditors, and as to debts and liabilities provable, and as to the valuation of annuities and future and contingent liabilities respectively apply (t).

969. So long as the annuity is paid, the annuitant is not a creditor even where it is shown that the estate of the deceased is insufficient to meet liabilities, including the estimated value of the annuity (a). Consequently, the annuitant whose annuity is not in arrear cannot obtain an administration judgment (b), and this is the case although his annuity is expressed to accrue from day to day (c); but if a judgment has been obtained by another person as a creditor he is allowed to prove (d).

annuity from the estate of an insolvent intestate; he cannot, however, retain the estimated value of his annuity, but must come in and prove for the same as an ordinary creditor (c).

SUB-SECT 2—Effect as regards Annuities Created by Testamentary Disposition

971. Where a testator bequeaths immediate annuities and also pecuniary legacies, and his estate is ascertained at his death to be insufficient, the rule is to ascertain the value of each annuity as at the death (/); and, it being settled that, in a case of deficiency of assets, annuities and legacies abate rateably, the values so ascertained must abate proportionately with the legacies (g), and each annuitant is entitled to be paid at once the abated valuation of his annuity (h).

972. Where the estate is only ascertained at some point of time after the testator's death to be insufficient, and a distribution has gone on down to that point of time, the rules applicable appear to be as follows.—

(1) If all the annuitants are living at that point of time, there must be ascertained in the case of each annuitant the arrears then due to him and the then present value of future payments. These two sums must be added together, and the funds available for payment of annuities must be divided between the annuitants in the proportion which the aggregate amounts bear to each other (i).

(2) If all the annuitants are dead at that point of time, there must be ascertained in the case of each annuitant the arrears then due to their respective estates, and the funds must be divided in the proportion of those arrears (k).

(3) If some of the annuitants are dead at that point of time and some are living, the values of the annuities of those annuitants who are dead must be fixed at what they would have actually received had the estate not been insufficient; and the values of the annuities of those annuitants who are living at that point of time must be ascertained by adding to the then present value of future payments the amount of the arrears then due. The funds must be divided in the proportion of those values (l).

973. Where a testator bequeaths a reversionary annuity and also immediate pecuniary legacies, and his estate is ascertained at his death to be insufficient, the court values the annuity on the basis of its being a reversionary interest, and this valuation must abate rateably with the immediate legacies (m). Again, where in the case of a bequest of a reversionary annuity the estate is only ascertained at some point of time after the testator's death to be insufficient, and before that point of time the reversionary annuity has fallen into possession, the value of the reversionary annuity must be ascertained by adding the amount of the arrears accrued since the annuity fell into possession to the then present value of the future payments (n).

Where a testator bequeaths two annuities, one immediate and the other reversionary, and the immediate annuity is for some time paid in full, but the estate is subsequently found to be insufficient, and such annuity remains for some time unpaid, then, in the division between the immediate and reversionary annuitants of the funds ultimately available, the immediate annuitant is not bound to bring into hotchpot his early payments in full (o).

Part V.—Payment of Rentcharges and Annuities.

SECT. 1.—Deductions (p).

974. As regards the deduction of income tax in the case of annuities or rentcharges given by will the following rules apply:—
Where a testator bequeaths an annuity without using any words exonerating the annuitant from income tax, the annuitant must bear it himself (q). In such a case it is the duty of trustees to deduct income tax before paying the annuitant (r). If they pay without deduction, they may, subject to any defence based on the Statutes of Limitation, be liable to make good the overpayment (s).

As regards Deductions. the construction of words of this nature, it is settled that income tax is not, properly speaking, a "deduction" (a). Accordingly, where a testator simply gives an annuity "free from all deductions," the annuitant must bear the income tax himself (b). Where, however, a testator directs that an annuity shall be "free from all deductions in respect of taxes," the word "deductions" is construed by the word "taxes," and the annuity is payable free of income tax (c); and, by other parts of his will, the testator may show that he understood the word "deductions" as extending to income tax (d).

Liability to income tax in the case of annual payments under deed

975. As regards the deduction of income tax in the case of annuities or rentcharges payable under deeds the following rules apply. The Income Tax Act, 1842 (c), charges income tax upon annuities and other annual payments, and provides (f) that all contracts for payment of such annual payments without allowing the deduction of income tax shall be void. Having regard to these provisions, income tax is payable by the annuitant in the case of an annuity to a wife payable upon a divorce or under a deed of separation (g), even where the contract is to pay an annual allowance "clear of all deductions" (h).

accruing from day to day and are apportionable in respect of time accordingly (j).

SECT 2

Apportionment.

The apportioned part becomes payable and recoverable, in the case of a continuing rentcharge or annuity, when the entire portion of which such apportioned part forms part becomes due and payable, and not before; and in the case of a rentcharge or annuity determined by re-entry, death, or otherwise, when the next entire payment would have been payable if the same had not been so determined, and not before (k).

When apportioned part becomes payable.

All persons have the same remedies for recovering the apportioned parts, when payable, as they would have had for recovering the entire portions if they had been entitled thereto (l). Neither, however, the persons liable to pay rents reserved out of or charged on hereditaments of any tenure, nor the same hereditaments, are to be resorted to for any such apportioned part forming part of an entire or continuing rent specifically; but the entire or continuing rent, including such apportioned part, is to be recovered and received by the heir or other person who, if the rent had not been apportionable under the above provisions, or otherwise, would have been entitled to such entire or continuing rent, and the apportioned part is recoverable from such heir or other person by the executors or other parties entitled under the above provisions to the apportioned part (m).

Remedies for recovery.

978. The above provisions do not extend to any case in which it is expressly stipulated that no apportionment shall take place (n), provided the express stipulation is contained in the will or other instrument of gift (o). Nor do the provisions apply to an annuity payable in advance (p).

Cases outside general rule.

979. Upon the sale of a rentcharge, the contract usually provides for apportionment in respect of time as between the vendor and purchaser (q). If instalments of the rentcharge are in arrear, they should be expressly dealt with by the conveyance, otherwise they will not pass to the purchaser (r).

rentcharger can have recourse to any one portion of the land for recovering the whole of any one instalment (t). But if A grants to B a rentcharge issuing out of Blackacre and Whiteacre, and afterwards sells Blackacre to C and Whiteacre to D, and the rentcharger resorts to Blackacre only, C can have contribution from D (a). So if on A's death Blackacre passes to C as devisee under A's will, and Whiteacre descends to D as A's heir, C and D must contribute rateably to the payment of the rentcharge (b).

Cases where rentcharge is apportioned.

981. In some cases, however, a rentcharge is apportioned and the owner of part of the land charged is only liable for an apportioned part. Thus, if A having a good title to Blackacre and a bad title to Whiteacre grants both properties to B, reserving in his own favour a rentcharge issuing out of both and B. is subsequently evicted from Whiteacre, the rentcharge will be apportioned, and B will only be liable for an apportioned part (c). If, however, instead of reserving a rentcharge to himself, A grants the rentcharge to a stranger and is subsequently evicted from Whiteacre, Blackacre will after eviction remain charged with the whole rent, for A cannot take advantage of the weakness of his own estate (d).

In the case of a rentcharge belonging to A which issues out of Blackacre and Whiteacre, if Blackacre descends on A, Whiteacre will only remain liable to an apportioned part of the rent (e).

An apportionment of a rentcharge between parishes may result from a statute (f).

Effect of release and concurrence of parties interested.

982. As regards the effect of releases, A having a rentcharge issuing out of Blackacre may release part of the rent to the tenant of Blackacre and reserve part (g). The release from a rentcharge of part of the hereditaments charged does not extinguish the whole rentcharge, but operates only to bar the right to recover any part of the rentcharge out of the hereditaments released, without prejudice nevertheless to the rights of all persons interested in the hereditaments remaining unreleased and not concurring in or confirming the release (h). rentcharge issuing out of Blackacre and Whiteacre, and distinguishes between the effect of a release of Blackacre where the persons interested in Whiteacre concur, and where they do not concur (l). In the former case the rentcharge is not apportioned, but is payable entirely out of Whiteacre (l). In the latter case Whiteacre is liable only to a proportionate part of the rentcharge (l).

SECT. 2.
Apportionment.

983. Where in the above cases there must be an apportionment, the basis of the apportionment should be not the acreage of the several parts of the land, but their relative values (m).

984. Where a testator charges freeholds and leaseholds with a rentcharge, and disposes separately of the several properties, they are liable to contribute to the rentcharge in proportion to their respective annual values at the testator's death (n).

Relative liability of freeholds and leaseholds.

985. Where a rentcharge issues out of Blackacre and Whiteacre, and Blackacre alone is taken compulsorily under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (o), the rentcharge may either be apportioned or be left to issue solely out of Whiteacre, compensation being determined and paid in accordance with the statute (p).

Compulsory purchase.

SECT. 3.—Contribution to Payment as between Tenant for Life and Remainderman.

986. Where a testator bequeaths legacies and annuities and by the same will settles the residue upon a tenant for life and remainderman, the general rule is that as between tenant for life and remainderman the legacies are payable out of capital and the annuities out of income (q).

In some cases, annuities payable out of income

987. Where a testator who is liable as a debtor to pay an annuity settles his residue, questions have arisen as to the proportions which the tenant for life and remainderman must contribute to the annuity. To this question three different answers have been given.—(1) In some cases it has been ruled that each payment must be raised out of the corpus of the estate, the tenant for life bearing only the loss of income in respect of the sum raised (r). (2) In other cases the rule has been stated thus: Each instalment of the annuity must be dealt with separately; on the occasion of each payment there must be ascertained what sum set aside on the testator's death and accumulated at simple interest would have fully met the particular instalment; a portion of the instalment equivalent to this sum must be contributed by corpus and the balance by income (s). (3) In other cases the court, to avoid the inconvenience of separate calculations for each payment, has applied the following rule: There must be ascertained once for all at the testator's death the actuarial values of the life estate and the reversion, and each instalment of the annuity must be divided in that fixed proportion, and the income and corpus must contribute thereto accordingly (t).

Discretion of the court.

It seems that where there must be some apportionment, as between tenant for life and remainderman, the method of carrying it out is in the discretion of the court (a).

SECT. 4.—Order of Priority in which Real and Personal Assets are Applicable in Payment of Rentcharges and Annuities.

Where realty is primarily liable.

988 Where in a marriage settlement, whereby the settlor's personal estate receives no benefit, a jointure is secured on land and also by the settlor's covenant, the land is the primary source of payment (b).

Again, where an annuity granted for money value and secured by covenant is also by the deed charged on land, such land is, as between the persons claiming under the deceased grantor, primarily liable (c).

(s) Re Perkins, Brown v. Perkins, [1907] 2 Ch. 596. In this case the gift of the life estate was contingent; and in the calculation the date taken for setting aside the sum was not the testator's death, but the day on which the gift of the life estate vested. The above principle was adopted by JOYCE, J., in Re Thompson, Thompson v. Watkins, [1908] W. N. 195, and by PARKER, J., in Re Poyser, Landon v. Poyser, [1910] 2 Ch. 444. The rate of interest applied was 3 per cent in Re Perkins, Brown v. Perkins, supra, and 3½ per cent in Re Poyser, Landon v. Poyser, supra; compare Alhusen v. Whittell (1867), L. Mason*, supra, at p. 537); and see titles EQUITABLE, Vol. XIII., p. 144; EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, Vol. XIV., pp. 288 et seq.

989. If a rentcharge is by will charged on land already subject to a mortgage, the rentcharger may be entitled to have the assets marshalled, and, notwithstanding the Real Estates Charges Act, 1854 (d), to throw the mortgage upon the personal estate (e).

SECT. 4.
Order in which Assets are Applicable in Payment.

990. Prima facie an annuity (which is a legacy (f)) given generally by will is payable out of personal estate only (g). Annuities may, however, be given so as to be payable out of real estate only (h), and in this case are more strictly known as rentcharges. If in either case there are several annuities and the sole source of payment proves insufficient, the annuities will abate rateably (i).

Right of rentcharger to marshalling.
Annuities given by will.

Where, however, annuities are given so as to be payable out of both real and personal estate, and the real and personal estates are disposed of separately, questions of priority may arise. The general rule is that annuities are payable primarily out of the testator's personal estate, unless he has expressed an intention to the contrary (j); but, on the construction of the will, the primary liability may fall on the real estate (k), or the liability of the two properties may be rateable (l).

Realty and personality given separately.

Where the real and personal estates are disposed of together several distinctions have been taken. Thus, where the real estate is directed to be sold and there is a direction to pay an annuity out of the mixed fund, the real and personal estates are liable rateably (m); and the effect is the same where the proceeds of the real estate are directed to be part of the personal estate (n).

Realty and personality given together.

On the other hand, where the real estate is directed to be sold, but there is no direction to pay out of the mixed fund, the personal estate is primarily liable (o).

Where the real and personal estates are disposed of together, but the real estate is not directed to be sold, the personal estate, as a rule, remains primarily liable to pay the annuity (p). But in certain cases on construction the real and personal estates may be held rateably liable (q). The rule of rateable liability may be applied where the real estate is not directed to be sold, but the testator has shown an intention of creating a mixed fund of realty and personalty (r). Again, on construction, the primary liability may be thrown on the real estate, the general personal estate being secondarily liable (s)

SECT. 5.—Interest on Arrears.

general assets of testator or

Annuity
under will

991. First, as to an annuity arising by will and constituting a voluntary gift to the annuitant. Where such an annuity falls into arrear, and, the annuitant claiming the arrears against the general assets of the testator, judgment is given for administration, interest is not as a general rule allowed on the arrears (a). By way of exception, interest may be given where there is misconduct or improper delay on the part of those chargeable with the payment of the annuity (b).

Annuity
under deed.

992. Secondly, as to an annuity arising by covenant and constituting a debt to the annuitant. Where, after the death of the debtor, such an annuity falls into arrear, and, the annuitant claiming the arrears against the general assets of the debtor, judgment is given for administration, interest at 4 per cent. is allowed as to the arrears due at the judgment from the date of the judgment, and as to the instalments accruing after judgment from the dates when they accrue due (c)

In the older cases the rule was stated to be discretionary (Morris v Dillingham (1750), 2 Ves. Sen 170); and an exception was sometimes made in favour of the annuitant where the annuity was a provision for a wife or child (Litton v. Litton (1719), 1 R. Wms. 541; Drapers Co v. Davis (1741), 2 Atk. 211). But this exception has been disapproved (Torre v. Browne, supra, at p. 578); compare the rule that interest will not be allowed on the arrears of a jointure, unless a special case be made (Anon. (1755), 2 Ves. Sen. 662; *Morgan v. 993. The above rules govern the cases where the claim for interest is made against the general assets of a testator or of a debtor. Where the claim is made against the land charged with an annuity, the rule has been stated thus:—

Where an annuity which constitutes one of several incumbrances on land falls into arrear, and an action is commenced for redemption or foreclosure, then, as between incumbrances and as against the land charged, no interest on the arrears is as a general rule allowed (d). The allowance of interest on arrears in such a case was not justified by the ordinary provisions of the old annuity deeds (e), but may be justified by a special covenant on the part of the grantor of an annuity to indemnify the annuitant against other incumbrances (f).

994. A clause in an annuity deed which expressly gives interest on arrears of the annuity is not objectionable (g).

995 The statutory remedies conferred on annuitants and rentchargers (h) do not apparently enable them to recover interest on arrears (i).

Beav 7 (where interest was allowed under the then existing rules of court). According to previous decisions given when no such rules were in force, interest in such a case was refused (*Booth v. As regards the Civil Procedure Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c 42), s 28 (see title MONEY AND MONEY-LENDING, Vol XXI, p. 38), it was said that the discretion previously exercised by the Court of Chancery as to allowing or not allowing interest was not altered by the discretion given in that statute to juries (Re Powell's Trust (1852), 10 Hare, 135; see Mansfield (Earl) v. Ogle supra, at p 42). In the case of annuities secured by bonds, interest was allowed, but not exceeding the penalty (Newman v. Auling (1747), 3 Atk 579; Mackworth v. Thomas (1800), 5 Ves 329, Crosse v. Beddingfield (1841), 12 Sim 35; and see title BONDS, Vol III, p 93). In the case of annuities secured by judgments, interest on the judgments was formerly refused (Bedford v. Coke (1743), 1 Dick. 178; Booth v. Leicester, supra; see Beamish v. Farmer (1867), 1 I R Eq 466). But since the Judgments Act, 1838 (1 & 2 Vict c 110), s. 17, such a judgment carries interest (Knight v. Bowyer (1859), 4 De G & J 619, C A; see *Hyde v. SECT. 1.

Extinguishment of Rentcharges.

Essentials to validity of release.

SECT. 1.—Extinguishment of Rentcharges.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Extinguishment by Act of the Rentcharger.

996. The owner of a rentcharge may extinguish the rentcharge by releasing it to the owner or owners of the land out of which it issues (k). In order to effect a valid extinguishment as against all parties, all persons who are interested in the rentcharge must execute the release; and the release must be to all parties who are interested in the land charged. Thus, if a man who is entitled absolutely and in his own right to a rentcharge issuing out of land grants the rentcharge to the absolute owner in his own right of the land, the rentcharge is extinguished; but if he grants it to the tenant for life of the land charged, the rentcharge is suspended only (l).

Release of portion of rentcharge

997. A release of a portion of a rentcharge will operate as a release pro tanto (m), so that the owner of a rentcharge may release part of it without extinguishing the whole (n).

Release of portion of land charged.

998. If the owner of a rentcharge issuing out of land releases from the rentcharge part of the land, such release only operates to bar the right to recover any part of the rentcharge out of the land released (o).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Extinguishment by Operation of Law.

Cases of extinguishment by merger.

999. If a man is entitled absolutely and in his own right to a rentcharge issuing out of land, and the whole of the land is granted or devised to him absolutely and in his own right, the rentcharge is extinguished (a). So there is a complete extinguishment of the rentcharge if he becomes entitled absolutely and in his own right to part of the land either by purchase (b) or by devise (c). If, however, part of the land descends upon the owner of the rentcharge, there is not an extinguishment, but the rentcharge is apportioned (d).

SECT. 1.
Extinguishment of
charges.

The above rules depend upon merger. According to the present law there is no merger by operation of law only of any estate the beneficial interest in which would not be deemed to be merged in equity (e).

Rules dependent on merger.

Rules as to presumption
of merger.

1000. In equity, the rules applicable to the merger of estates in land and the merger of charges on land are, generally speaking, the same (f), and they depend largely on the intention of the parties (g). Thus, in equity, where a wife concurs with her husband in mortgaging her property to secure money paid to the husband, the wife's property is prima facie a surety only (h). Where a person is entitled to land in fee, and his wife, in the event of her surviving him, is entitled for life to a rentcharge issuing out of the land, and he and his wife mortgage the land by a deed which purports to extinguish her rentcharge, her equity of redemption in the rentcharge is not released (i). Again, where there is no direct evidence of intention, courts of equity presume that merger was not intended, if it was to the interest of the party that merger should not take place (k). In accordance with this rule, where a tenant for life of land pays off a charge on the inheritance, prima facie there is no merger, but the tenant for life is entitled to the charge for his own benefit (l). Even according to the old common law doctrine, where rent is granted in fee to the tenant for life of the land on which a rent is charged, the rent, it seems, is not extinguished, but is "put in suspense" during his life (m).

1001. Further, it is a condition of merger that the land and the charge should be held by the same person at the same time and in the same right (n). Accordingly, where the owner of land out of which a rent issues grants that land to the rentcharger by way of 1002. Where the owner of a rentcharge dies intestate and without an heir, the law of escheat applies under a recent statute in the same manner as if the estate or interest of the deceased in the rentcharge were a legal estate in corporeal hereditaments (q).

Lapse of 1003. Where a rentcharge remains unpaid for more than twelve years, and there is no acknowledgment of the rentcharger's title, the rentcharge is extinguished (r).

SUB-SECT 3—Statutory Provisions for the Redemption or Discharge of Rentcharges

Statutory redemption by owner or person
interested.

1004. A perpetual rentcharge may be redeemed at the instance of the owner of the land or of any person interested therein (s). Where it is desired to redeem, a written requisition to that effect must be made to the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries (a) by such owner or person interested to certify the amount for which the rentcharge may be redeemed (b). If the person entitled to the rentcharge is in the position to give a good discharge for its capital value, the person redeeming may, after a month's notice in writing, pay or tender the amount certified by the Board (c). On proof of such payment or tender the Board is directed to certify that the land is discharged from the rent (d).

When statutory method
inapplicable

This statutory mode of redeeming a rentcharge is not applicable in the case of tithe rentcharge, or where the rent was reserved on a sale or lease or was made payable under a grant or licence for building purposes, or to any payment issuing out of land not being perpetual (e).

ments under the Settled Land Act, 1882(j), may be redeemed by capital moneys arising under the Settled Land Acts(g).

1006. Where land charged with an annual sum is sold, the court may, if it thinks fit, on the application of any party to the sale, direct or allow payment into court of (1) such an original amount as when invested in Government securities the court considers will be sufficient by dividends to provide for the charge, and (2) such additional amount, not exceeding in ordinary cases one-tenth of the original amount, as the court considers will meet costs, expenses, interest, and any other contingency except depreciation of investments. Thereupon the court may, if it thinks fit, and either after or without notice to the incumbrancer, declare the land to be free from the charge and make orders for conveyance or vesting to give effect to the sale(h). This provision applies in the case of annuities charged on land(i), but not, it seems, in the case of statutory rentcharges(k). In any case, the court does not under this provision compel the vendor to pay money into court for the purpose of discharging an incumbrance on land, when the result of so doing would be to inflict a great hardship upon him(l).

1007. Where land subject to a rentcharge created under the Improvement of Land Act, 1864(m), is sold by the tenant for life under the powers of the Settled Land Acts(n), the vendor can, by charging the rentcharge on settled land remaining unsold, exonerate the land sold(o).

Part VII.—Remedies for Recovering Rentcharges and Annuities.

SECT. 1.

In General.

General
nature of remedies.

1009. The remedies for recovering rentcharges and annuities are of various kinds, and either have been expressly given by the instrument creating the interest, or arise by statute (r), or result from the court's action in enforcing payment.

SECT. 1.—In General.

SECT. 2.—Remedies for Recovering Rentcharges.

SUB-SECT. 1 — In General.

Remedies
open to owner
of rent-
charges.

1010. Remedies for recovering rentcharges may be of the following kinds :—(1) distress; (2) an entry under a special power on the land charged; (3) the limitation under a special power of a term on trust to raise arrears; (4) an action of covenant; (5) an action of debt; (6) a sale or mortgage of the land charged; (7) the appointment of a receiver (s). The owner of a rentcharge cannot obtain an injunction to restrain waste by the owner of the land out of which the rentcharge issues (t).

Different remedies
available.

1011. The owner of a rentcharge may be entitled to pursue several different remedies (u). In the case of a rentcharge secured by a right of entry and also by a term, the right of entry does not destroy the term, nor does the term defeat the right of entry (v).

SUB-SECT. 2 — Distress

Distress.

1012. A power of distress is of the essence of a rentcharge. It may be given by express provision. Apart from express provision, the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (a), confers the power upon the owner of every annual sum payable out of land, whether by way of rentcharge or otherwise, and arising under an instrument coming into operation after the 31st December,

(a) 44 & 45 Vict. c 41, s 44 (2); and see title DISTRESS, Vol. XI., p 120. The powers conferred by the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), apply not only in the case of annual sums arising under instruments coming into operation since the 31st December, 1881, but also in the case of rentcharges created under the Copyhold Acts, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c 73), s. 15, and 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. 46), s. 27 (a) (see title COPYHOLDS, Vol. VIII., p. 120), or created under the Improvement of Land Act, 1899 (62 & 63 Vict. c 46), s 3. As to the recovery of a rentcharge in respect of a land improvement, see title LAND IMPROVEMENT, Vol. XVIII., p. 298.

1881. In the case of rentcharges arising under earlier instruments, the power was conferred by the Landlord and Tenant Act, 1780 (b).

SECT. 2.
Remedies
for Recovering Rent-
charges.

In the case of rentcharges reserved on conveyances under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c), an express power is given to the rentcharger of distraining on the goods and chattels of the promoters (d).

1013. Where a rentcharge is held by several as tenants in common each owner may distrain (e). Extent of remedy

A single owner of a rentcharge cannot distrain for part of the rent on one piece of the land and for another part on the remainder (f). Where an annuity is charged on an undivided moiety of land, the distress may be limited to one half of the rents (g).

In the case of a rentcharge charged by will on land in the occupation of tenants and secured by a power of distress, the rentcharger must wait for payment until the first rent day which occurs after an instalment accrues due (h).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Entry under a Special Power on the Land Charged

1014 The power of entry has taken two forms, namely, (1) a power for the owner of the rentcharge in default of payment to enter and hold the land until satisfaction of the arrears; and (2) a power for the owner of the rentcharge in default of payment to enter and hold the land as his own; the power in the latter form being in effect a power of forfeiture (i). Dual nature of power

1015 In the case of rentcharges arising under instruments coming into operation after the 31st December, 1881, a power in the first form is conferred on the rentcharger by the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (j); and, in the case of rentcharges arising under instruments which came into operation before the 1st January, 1882, a power of the same nature was frequently Power to enter and hold land¹ until satisfaction.

(j) 44 & 45 Vict. c. 41, s. 44(1), (3). Where the instrument under which the rentcharge arises, and which comes into operation after the 31st December, 1881, in fact exercises a power of appointment, but such power of appointment was contained in an instrument which came into operation before the 1st January, 1882, the power of entry conferred by the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), s. 44 (3), equally applies; see Conveyancing Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 37), s. 6 (2).

conferred by the instrument itself (k). The rule of law relating to perpetuities does not apply to a power of this nature, whether conferred by the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (l), or by the instrument under which the rentcharge arises (m).

Where a power in the form first above mentioned is limited by way of use, and the rentcharger enters under it, he has a quasi-conditional inheritance determinable upon payment of the rent, and may grant a lease, which is good until such payment (n). He may also, it seems, enforce the covenants in existing leases (o).

Power of forfeiture.

1016. A power in the form secondly above mentioned is, it seems, void unless limited in accordance with the rule against perpetuities (p).

Covenants with grantee of rentcharge secured by power of re-entry.

1017. Sometimes the grantor of a rentcharge enters into covenants with the grantee, either in the form of positive covenants for repairing or budding or doing other acts upon the land, or of negative covenants restricting its user, and then secures the performance of these covenants by a power of re-entry. As regards the enforcement of these covenants apart from the power of re-entry, it is settled that the burden of such positive covenants does not run with the land either at law or in equity so as to be enforceable against subsequent owners (q). Negative covenants, however, are enforceable in equity

(k) See the form in Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol XII, p 638; Re Manchester and Milford Rail Co, Foster v Manchester and Milford Rail Co (1880), 49 L J (CH) 454. It seems that such a power might have been implied (Foster v Foster (1700), 2 Vern 386).

(o) Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict c 41), s 10, Turner v Walsh, [1909] 2 K B 484.

(p) According to the law as it existed before the Conveyancing Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c 37), such a power was void (Re Hollis' Hospital (Trustees) and Hague's Contract, [1899] 2 Ch 540, 555; see Re Da Costa v Church of England Collegiate School of St Peter, [1912] 1 Ch 337), though the contrary opinion was maintained by some writers (Challis, Law of Real Property, 3rd ed., p. 190; Law Quarterly Review, Vol XVII, p 32); see also the Real Property Commissioners' 3rd Report, p 37; compare Switzer & Co v Rockford, [1906] 1 I R 399; A-G v Cummins (1895), [1906] 1 I R 406. The words, however, of the Conveyancing Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c 37), s. 6 (1), raise considerable doubt whether according to the present law the rule against perpetuities applies at all to a power in this form. In some cases powers in this form have been treated in equity as entitling the rentcharger to hold until the rent is paid, but no longer, see note to Peachy v Somerset (Duke) (1724), 2 White & Tud. L. C., 8th ed., p. 261; and see, further, title PERPETUITIES, Vol. XXII., pp 299, 314, 331, 332.

against all subsequent owners, except bond fide purchasers for value of the legal estate without notice (r). As regards the power of re-entry, it is doubtful whether its exercise should be restricted within the period allowed by the rule against perpetuities (s).

1018 A rentcharger intending to re-enter must, before doing so, serve the notices required by statute (t).

1019. Where, in the case of a rentcharge granted by a life tenant, the rentcharger does not in fact enter during the life, he cannot claim arrears out of apportioned rent subsequently accruing (u).

SUB-SECT 4 — Limitation under a Special Power of a Term on Trust to Raise Arrears

1020 In the case of rentcharges arising under instruments coming into operation before the 1st January, 1882, a power to limit a term on trust to raise arrears was frequently conferred by the instrument, and, in the case of rentcharges arising under instruments coming into operation after the 31st December, 1881, this power is conferred on the owner by the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (x), so far as such a remedy might have been conferred by the instrument under which the rentcharge arises, but not further (y).

Neither to the statutory power so conferred nor to "the same or a like power" conferred by the instrument does the rule of law relating to perpetuities apply (z).

SUB-SECT 5 — Action of Covenant.

1021. The due payment of a rentcharge is frequently secured by the covenant of the landowner who creates it (a). The burden of such a covenant does not run with the land so as to bind subsequent owners of the land (b); nor, it seems, does the benefit of the covenant run with the rentcharge so as to entitle subsequent owners of the rentcharge to sue (c).

Where in a marriage settlement a jointure is secured on land, and is also secured by the settlor's covenant, the land is the primary source of payment (d). Where the remedy against the land is extinguished, the remedy on the covenant is extinguished also (e).

Nature of remedy.

1022. Since the abolition of real actions by the Real Property Limitation Act, 1833 (f), a rentcharge in fee may be recovered in an action of debt from the terre tenant entitled to a freehold interest (g) even where he is terre tenant of part only of the land charged with the rent (h).

Who may be liable

The terre tenant must be "pernor of the profits" of the land (i); but he may be made liable whether he has or has not received profits equal to the rentcharge claimed (k); and if the freeholder has discussed in Norton on Deeds, pp 483 et seq; and see title DEEDS and OTHER INSTRUMENTS, Vol X, pp 475 et seq. An agreement to sell land for an annuity to be charged thereon in favour of the vendor for his life entitles him to the purchaser's personal covenant for payment (Bower v. Cooper (1842), 2 Hare, 498). Where an annuity was granted to commence on the grantor's death, and he charged it on land and covenanted that the annuitant might distrain for any arrears, and it turned out that the grantor was only a tenant for life of the land charged, the annuitant was allowed to recover arrears from the grantor's estate by an action of covenant (*Monypenny v. an immediate right to take possession, he has sufficient "pernancy of the profits" to render him liable (l). Accordingly, a mortgagee who has never entered may be liable (m), also a highway authority (n); but a company which is being wound up is not liable after the liquidator has repudiated the land charged (o), nor is a tenant for years liable in such an action (p).

SECT. 2.
Remedies
for Recovering Rent-
charges.

In the case of rentcharges reserved on conveyances under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (q), an express power of recovering arrears by action of debt in a superior court is given to the rentcharger by statute (r).

Special statutory remedy.

1023. Where an executor or administrator liable as such to the rent or covenants contained in any conveyance on chief rent or rentcharge, whether any such rent is by limitation of use, grant, or reservation, granted to the testator or intestate (1) has satisfied all such liabilities accrued due and claimed, and (2) has set apart a sufficient fund to answer claims in respect of fixed sums, if any, covenanted by the grantee to be laid out on the property, and (3) has conveyed such property to a purchaser, he may distribute the residuary personal estate of the deceased without appropriating any part thereof to meet future liability (s). But this provision does not prejudice the right of the grantor or those claiming under him to follow the assets (s).

SUB-SECT. 7—Sale or Mortgage of the Land Charged

1024. For the purpose of raising the arrears of a rentcharge, the court may order a sale or mortgage of the land charged, both where the rentcharge is expressly charged on the fee simple (t) and also where it issues out of the rents and profits (u). But the exercise of the jurisdiction is discretionary (u), and no order will be made where a sale is not necessary for any other purpose and it is advisable to wait (y), or where an immediate sale ought not to be imposed on the parties interested (z). If the rentcharge is secured by a term, the owner is not entitled to a sale of the fee simple (a).

If the land has been sold compulsorily, arrears are paid out of the purchase-money (b).

SUB-SECT. 8—Appointment of a Receiver

By order of court.

1025. The appointment of a receiver may be obtained from the High Court by the owner of a rentcharge where the rents are not sufficient or where the rentcharge has been long in arrear (c). The recovery of arrears of tithe rentcharge arising in England or Wales may be enforced by application to the county court for a receiver (d). Receivers may also be appointed to enforce rentcharges which have been reserved on conveyances under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (e), and by statute charged on the tolls or rates of the undertaking (f).

Out of court

1026. Out of court, the appointment of a receiver by deed under special powers is also adopted as a means of securing an annuity (g). Such an appointment may create an equitable charge (h).

According to the rules applied in an administration action, the legatee of a perpetual annuity is entitled to the best security to be obtained in Government stock (l), and, if paid in cash, he should receive such a sum as at the price of the day will purchase $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. The legatee of a life annuity charged upon corpus is not entitled as a matter of right to have the estate converted, but he is entitled to have such a security set apart to answer the annuity as will make it practically certain that the annuity will be paid (n); and, even against the opposition of the annuitant, the court, as a rule of practice, has jurisdiction to set apart such a security and pay the remainder of the residue to the residuary legatees (o). Where a fund has been set apart, the annuitant, it seems, has the right to resort, if necessary, to the capital of the fund (p). Other 1031. Where the annuity is secured by a covenant the annuitant may of course bring an action on the covenant (d). He may also in a proper case obtain the appointment of a receiver (e). When the annuity is charged on land the annuitant is also, as against the land, able to avail himself of the remedies given by the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (f).

in these statutes extends to all annuities and periodical sums of money charged upon or payable out of land (i), and the word "land" extends to all corporeal hereditaments (k). This definition of rent includes rentcharges granted by deed (l); annuities charged on land by will (m) or by deed (n); annuities charged on real and personal estate either by will (o) or by deed (p); and tithe rentcharges, as well, it would seem, where they belong to a spiritual corporation sole as where they belong to a lay person (q).

1033. Annuities such as those above-mentioned fall accordingly within the code of rules set forth in the Real Property Limitation Act, 1833 (r), and the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874 (s), as governing the recovery of rent (t). Where such an annuity remains unpaid for twelve years from the point when time commences to run (u), then, in the absence of acknowledgment, the title of the annuitant to the annuity, taken as a whole, is extinguished by the material provisions of the statutes (b). Such an annuity is to be considered and dealt with as one "rent" within the provisions (c) referred to, not as a series of "sums of money charged upon or payable out of land or rent" within the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874 (d), s. 8 (e). The extinguishment occurs even where the annuity is also secured by a personal covenant (f).

SECT. 1.

Rent-charges and Annuities Not Secured by an Express Trust.

Time limit as regards recovery of arrears.

When time commences to run

Application of statutory provisions

Where the non-payment of such an annuity has not continued for the full period of twelve years, the title of the annuitant is not extinguished, but he cannot recover arrears for more than six years (g). The same limit applies, it would seem, even where the annuity is also secured by a personal covenant (h).

1034. As regards the point when time commences to run against the annuitant, the rule is that, in the case of an annuity of which no instalment has ever been paid, time runs from the date on which the right to recover the earliest instalment first accrued (i). But, in the case of an annuity of which an instalment has been paid and the receipt has been subsequently discontinued, time runs from the last payment (k).

Provisions dealing generally with the time when the right to recover the annuity shall be deemed to have accrued (l), acknowledgments (m), disabilities (n), concurrent rights (o), estates tail (p), concealed fraud (q), and the rights of mortgagor and mortgagee (r), are contained in the Real Property Limitation Acts, 1833 and 1874 (s).

Effect of rule as to liability of every portion of estate charged.

1035. A rentcharge is entire and issues out of every portion of the land charged, and, if a rent charged on Blackacre and Whiteacre is for more than the statutory period paid by the occupier of Blackacre, Whiteacre during the whole of this period belonging to a separate owner who never pays the rent, the right to distain on Whiteacre is not barred (t). Again, where for a long series of years a rentcharge is paid, not by the owner of the land really charged but by some other person, the court in some cases presumes a lost grant or agreement having the effect of preserving the rentcharger's rights against the land really charged (u).

(g) Real Property Limitation Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c 27), s 42; see Francis v Grover (1845), 5 Hare, 39, Ferguson v Livingston (1846), 91 Eq R 202, Re Nugent's Trusts (1885), 19 L R. SECT. 1.

1036. An annuity charged upon or payable out of personal estate only, where given by will, should, it seems, be treated as a series of "legacies" within the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874 (i), s. 8, payable de anno in annum (w). In this view, non-payment of the annuity for twelve years does not extinguish the title of the annuitant (a); but each instalment must be considered separately, having regard to the time at which a present right to receive the same accrued; and, in the absence of acknowledgment or part payment, the right to recover such an instalment is barred where twelve years have elapsed from the time at which such present right accrued (b).

Rent-charges and Annuities Not Secured by an Express Trust.

1037. An annuity payable out of personal estate only is neither "rent" nor "interest in respect of a legacy" within the Real Property Limitation Act, 1833 (c), s. 42, which limits arrears to six years (d). It seems accordingly that, where the gift is by will, arrears for a period not exceeding twelve years can be recovered (e).

Arrears recoverable.

Rent-charges and Annuities Secured by an Express Trust.

view, where the annuity remains unpaid, time does not commence to run, so far as the real estate is concerned, against the annuitant's right to recover unless and until the trustee conveys to a purchaser for value (k). If there is such a conveyance, time thereupon commences to run, but only in favour of the purchaser for value and any person claiming through him (l); it will, however, so run even where the purchaser has notice of the trust (m). Time does not run in favour of a person who takes a conveyance not for value (n). The rule as to the running of time applies in the case of any annual payment which can be strictly described as a rentcharge (o).

Arrears.

As regards arrears, the right of the annuitant is limited to six years (p).

Annuities on personal estate only

1040. In the case of annuities charged upon or payable out of personal estate only, an express trust of the personal estate prevents the lapse of time from barring the right to the annuity or limiting the arrears (q).

Laches.

1041. Where an annuity is secured by an express trust, the annuitant is not precluded from recovering proper arrears merely by neglecting for a considerable time to enforce punctual payments (r).

Re Drake's Estate, [1909] 1 I. R. 136, C A This view seems preferable to the other view suggested by KAY, J, in Hughes v Coles (1884), 27 Ch D 231, 235, that such an annuity should be considered as a series of sums of money charged upon or payable out of land or rent within the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict c 57), s 10; see also title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, Vol XIX, p. 141, where the question as to what is an express trust for this purpose is dealt with Part I.—Authorities Controlling the Revenue.

SECT. 1.

The Crown.

Origin of control.

1042. The control over the public revenue exercised by the Crown owes its origin to the historic character of the revenue as being money at the disposal of the Sovereign, derived either from his possessions, prerogative rights and privileges, or from aids granted by the Commons.

Crown
revenues.

1043. Revenues of the former class are now customarily surrendered by the Sovereign on his accession (a), and such rights as are preserved to the Crown in respect of them have no appreciable effect upon the revenue (b).

Crown's requirements

1044. On the other hand, in respect of the aids granted by the Commons and of expenditure from the public revenue, the requirements of the Crown still provide the reason for, and so implicitly fix the limits of, the grant and the expenditure, and no petition for any sum relating to the public service, or motion for a grant or charge upon the public revenue, can be received in the House of Commons unless recommended by the Crown, or made by way of an address to the Crown (c).

Control by executive Government

The necessary recommendation is conveyed by the constitutional advisers (d) of the Crown, so that the control assured is in effect a control by the executive Government, and prevents the introduction of independent proposals for increasing existing taxes, or for creating new charges upon the revenue otherwise than by an address to the Crown (e).

Finally, a Royal Order under the Sign Manual is necessary to authorise the Treasury to issue any sum out of the credits granted to it on the Exchequer accounts for the supply services (f).

(c) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, Nos. 66, 70; see title PARLIAMENT, Vol XXI, pp 766 et seq. As to the expenditure of the revenue, see pp 744 et seq, post

(d) As to the relations between the Crown and the Ministry, see title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol VI, pp 386, 387; Vol VII., p. 5

(e) See title PARLIAMENT, Vol XXI, p 766; Parliamentary Debates, 3rd series, Vol. 191, p 1878 (amendment varying incidence of taxation refused), ibid, Vol. 174, p 1922 (address to the Crown).

(f) Exchequer and Audit Departments Act, 1866 (29 & 30 Vict. c. 39), s 14; see title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VII, p. 9 As to the distinction between Consolidated Fund services and supply services, see note (g), p. 538, post, and see pp 744 et seq, 748 et seq, post.

SECT. 2.—Parliament.

SECT. 2.

Parliament.

1045. Parliamentary control over the revenue is threefold in its nature. It is exercised in respect of (1) the raising of the revenue, (2) the expenditure, (3) the auditing of the accounts.

Threefold control.

1046. Of these forms of control, the first is the oldest (g) and the most effective. The greater part of the revenue, that raised by taxation, can be collected only as the result, or in anticipation (h), of specific enactments. As regards other sources, the powers of the various departments which contribute towards the revenue (i) are conferred upon them mainly by statutory authority, and exercised subject to the responsibility of the heads of the several departments to Parliament (l). Only a few miscellaneous sources of revenue are by their inherent character independent of parliamentary control (l).

In respect of raising of revenue.

1047. Except in the case of certain payments out of the gross receipts of the Post Office (m), Telegraph Service (n), and the Departments of Woods, Forests, and Land Revenues (o), parliamentary sanction is required to legalise any expenditure out of the public revenue (p).

In respect of expenditure.

(g) See title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VI, p 377.

(h) Ibid, pp 379, 380 As a necessary precaution against evasion, the collection of many of the taxes and duties imposed by the annual Finance Acts commences as soon as the necessary resolutions have been passed by the House of Commons. The legality of this anticipation of statutory authority, which was the subject of discussion in the House of Commons when the Finance Bill of 1909 had been rejected by the House of Lords (Parliamentary Debates, 5th series, Vol 14, pp 885 et seq), has at length been raised in Bowles v Bank of England (1912), 29 T. L. R 42, where it was held that the deduction by the Bank of England of income tax from a dividend on stock before the Act imposing such tax had been passed, although after the passing of a resolution of the Committee of Ways and Means (see title PARLIAMENT, Vol. XXI, p 774), was unlawful.

(i) The most important of these departments are the Commissioners of Woods, Forests and Land Revenues (see title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol VII, p 122) and the Post Office (see title POST OFFICE, Vol. XXII., pp 625 et seq). Other departments, though not primarily productive of revenue, receive in the course of their general administration considerable sums, which are either paid into the Exchequer accounts (see Finance Accounts of the United Kingdom, 1910-1911, Parliamentary (House of Commons) Paper No 201 of 1911), or used as appropriations in aid; see note (p), infra.

(p) See pp 538—540, post, and see title PARLIAMENT, Vol. XXI., p. 766. The system of "appropriations in aid" by which miscellaneous receipts of various departments are directly spent by them appears at first sight to be an exception to the proposition in the text, supra. Since, however, the whole expenditure of any department is set out in the estimates upon which Parliament votes the supplies, and the amount of receipts to be appropriated is fixed by the Appropriation Act, the only effect of the system is to diminish pro tanto the grants out of the Exchequer and the control

Statutory

This sanction is given by Acts of Parliament, which are either permanent or annual (q). The latter consist of several Consolidated Fund Acts (r), and at least one Appropriation Act (s), embodying the resolutions of the House of Commons passed after consideration of the expenditure in detail, the different items being grouped together into a number of "votes" (t).

With the consent of the Treasury, supplies granted under one sub-head of a vote may be utilised for expenditure under another sub-head of the same vote, and, in the case of the Army and Navy, transfer from one vote to another is temporarily allowed in anticipation of the sanction to be given by a subsequent Appropriation Act (a).

1048. To enable the House of Commons to ascertain whether its directions as to how the revenue is to be raised and spent are by Parliament remains unimpaired; see Public Accounts and Charges Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 24), s. 2; Appropriation Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 15); and Parliamentary (House of Commons) Paper No. 387 of 1902, pp. 58, 223; and see title PARLIAMENT, Vol. XXI, pp. 768, 769.

(q) Although, in either case, the expenditure is met principally out of the Consolidated Fund, the services are distinguished, according as the provision is permanent or annual, by the titles "Consolidated Fund Services" and "Supply Services". The security that the charges in respect of the former class will be met unless Parliament actively intervenes is recognised as conferring a certain independence. For example, the provision for the charges for the National Debt (see pp. 753 et seq., post) and the salaries of the judges and the Comptroller and Auditor-General is permanent, see preamble to the Public Revenue and Consolidated Fund Charges Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 94); and see title PARLIAMENT, Vol. XXI, p. 768.

(r) As any balance in the hands of a department must be surrendered at the end of the financial year (31st March), by which time consideration of the estimates is never concluded, such Acts are passed from time to time to make provision for current expenditure; see title PARLIAMENT, Vol. XXI, pp. 769, 775.

(s) See Appropriation Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 15); and see title PARLIAMENT, Vol. XXI, p. 775.

(t) The control over expenditure is of comparatively recent origin. Prior to the Revolution of 1688 the ordinary revenues of the Crown were left at the absolute disposal of the Sovereign, and only in a few cases was any attempt made to secure that even extraordinary grants should be expended upon the objects for which they were voted. After the revolution, annual votes for the Army, Navy, and Ordnance services, and occasional votes for civil purposes were introduced, but the restrictions so imposed were evaded by the practice of spending large sums on Army and Navy "Extraordinaries," for which sanction was not obtained until the next session. Further, as the whole expenditure on the Army was divided into only two or three votes, while that of the Navy was, until 1798, included in a single vote, the freedom left to the departments to appropriate the grant to any purposes within the vote went far to impair the efficiency of the control; see Parliamentary (House of Commons) Paper No. 387 of 1902, p. 228. As to parliamentary control of public money generally, see title PARLIAMENT, Vol. XXI, pp. 792 et seq.

(a) Such transfer is authorised annually by the Appropriation Act; see Appropriation Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 15). In accordance with a resolution of the House of Commons (4th and 5th March, 1879), a statement of each case where such a transfer is sanctioned, and of the representations made by the Department to the Treasury, must be laid before Parliament within three weeks after the sanction has been given or, if Parliament is not then sitting, within three weeks of its next meeting; and see, further, title PARLIAMENT, Vol. XXI, p. 770.

carried out, statutory provision is made for presenting, by specified dates, accounts of the receipts and issues from the Exchequer, and also audited accounts, showing the appropriation of the supplies granted, together with reports by the Comptroller and Auditor-General thereon (b).

These accounts and reports are referred to, and considered by, a committee of the House of Commons (c), which reports to the House from time to time, and recommends, when necessary, that expenditure which has been incurred in excess of that voted should be sanctioned by excess grants, and comments upon any transfer from one vote to another in the case of the Army and Navy (d).

SECT. 2.
Parliament.

SECT. 3.—The Treasury.

1049. The control exercised by the Treasury (e) derives its sanction partly from the fact that the Treasury is the department through which the executive Government acts in relation to questions affecting the revenue, and partly from specific enactment.

Origin of control.

Thus, the Treasury is the department charged with the preparation of the annual budget, and its authority is secured by the

(b) It is important to distinguish between the control which consists in determining in anticipation how the revenue is to be spent, and therefore ends with the act of voting, and that which is exercised over those who actually expend the grants, by the knowledge that accounts will have to be submitted and will be carefully scrutinised. It is only in recent times that Parliament has sought to obtain this latter form of control. Accounts of receipts from certain sources were required by certain taxing Acts at an early stage (e.g., stat. (1688) 1 Will. & Mar. c. 20, s. 38), statements of the gross and net produce of the revenue in 1787 (stat. (1787) 27 Geo. 3. c. 13, s. 72), and of the issues from the Exchequer in 1801 (stat. (1802) 42 Geo. 3. c. 70, s. 4); and for provisions now in force, see Public Revenue and Consolidated Fund Charges Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 94), s. 2; Exchequer and Audit Departments Act, 1866 (29 & 30 Vict. c. 39), s. 16. But no accounts showing audited expenditure were presented to Parliament until 1831, when appropriation accounts of the naval expenditure were required by the Admiralty Act, 1832 (2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 40), s. 30. The system was extended to the Army in 1847 (stat. (1846) 9 & 10 Vict. c. 92, s. 7), to the votes for the revenue departments in 1861 (stat. (1861) 24 & 25 Vict. c. 93), and, finally, to every head of public expenditure by the Exchequer and Audit Departments Act, 1866 (29 & 30 Vict. c. 39), ss. 21—31; see p. 541, post; and see Return of Public Income and Expenditure, Parliamentary Paper, No. 366 of 1869, pp. 326 et seq.

(c) I.e., the Committee of Public Accounts, Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911 (No. 75), and see title PARLIAMENT, Vol. XXI., pp. 684, 777. A day is usually provided for consideration by the House of the reports of the Committee and the recommendations embodied therein. An insight into the work and value of the Committee may be obtained from the report and evidence given before a select committee which sat in 1902 and 1903, in which it is stated that "as a check not merely upon extravagant or unauthorised expenditure, but also upon unwise methods of management the Committee is probably more effectual than the House of Commons itself"; see Parliamentary (House of Commons) Papers, Nos. 387 of 1902 and 242 of 1903.

(d) See, for example, First and Second Reports of the Committee for 1910, Parliamentary (House of Commons) Papers, Nos. 71 and 125 of 1910.

Treasury. moneys, details of the estimates, the approximate totals of which have previously been determined by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in consultation with the heads of the departments and the Cabinet, are drawn up in the departments concerned. For the Civil Service estimates the Treasury is directly responsible; the other estimates must be submitted to the Treasury, where they are closely examined before their introduction to the House of Commons is sanctioned. The power of refusing this sanction enables the Treasury to impose upon the departments rules as to the practice to be followed, particularly with reference to the submission to the Treasury of proposals involving financial liability (g).

Statutory
control.

1050. On the other hand, the control over the actual receipt and issue of public money is secured by Act of Parliament. The Royal Order directing issues for the supply services must be countersigned by the Treasury, and the requisitions upon the Comptroller and Auditor-General, and orders to the banks for issues from the Consolidated Fund are made by the Treasury (h). The management of the Customs and Excise and Inland Revenue departments and certain powers in respect of other departments contributing to or spending from the revenue are also conferred upon the Treasury (i), and, in general, when Parliament entrusts to some other authority subsidiary powers, the exercise of which will affect the revenue, it is customary to insert provisions requiring the sanction of the Treasury (k).

Finally, when the money has been received and the expenses met, the preparation of the accounts and their submission to the Comptroller and Auditor-General are made subject to Treasury direction, and to the Treasury is entrusted the final decision as to the passing of accounts of the accounting officers and the collection and recovery of unexpended balances (l).

SECT. 4.—The Exchequer and Audit Department.

1051. The function of the Exchequer and Audit Department is two-fold. It includes, firstly, the superintendence of the receipts and issues of public moneys, and, secondly, the examination on behalf of Parliament of various accounts, and especially the accounts of all supply grants, for the purpose of reporting thereon to the House of Commons. In the performance of the latter duty it is independent of all public departments, including the Treasury.

functions.

1052. The head of the department, the Comptroller and Auditor-General, and also the Assistant Comptroller and Auditor-General, are appointed by letters patent under the Great Seal, in which provision is made for their salaries and pensions to be charged upon the Consolidated Fund. They hold office during good behaviour, subject to removal by the Crown on an address by both Houses of Parliament (m). The staff of the department is appointed and regulated by the Treasury, but the power to promote, suspend, or remove is vested in the Comptroller and Auditor-General (n).

of this fund, upon requisition by the Treasury, the Comptroller and Auditor-General, if satisfied with the correctness of the requisition, grants credits to the Treasury, and the Treasury makes issues therefrom to meet the public expenditure (p).

Daily accounts of the receipts and issues are furnished to the Comptroller and Auditor-General, and quarterly accounts of the income and charges on the Consolidated Fund, and of the public income and expenditure. If the income is insufficient to meet the charges, the Comptroller and Auditor-General authorises the Banks of England and Ireland to make advances of the necessary amounts (q).

It is the duty of the Comptroller and Auditor-General to examine, and report to the House of Commons upon, (1) all appropriation accounts, that is, accounts of supply grants, which are prepared by certain dates (r) and in a prescribed form (s) by such departments or officers charged with the expenditure of those grants as the Treasury may appoint (t); (2) the account of the Consolidated Fund services prepared by the Treasury (a); and (3) certain other accounts in respect of which such examination is prescribed by special enactment (b).

By means of such examination, it is the duty of the Comptroller and Auditor-General to ascertain and call attention to every case in which it appears to him that (1) a grant has been exceeded; (2) money received by a department from other sources than the grants for the year to which the account relates has not been applied or accounted for according to the directions of Parliament; (3) a sum charged against a grant is not supported by proof of payment; or (4) a payment so charged did not occur within the period of the account or was for any other reason not properly chargeable

1058. The Commissioners of Inland Revenue are a body appointed by letters patent to collect and cause to be collected all duties of inland revenue, and have their chief office at Somerset House, London. They hold their appointments at the will of the Crown, and are entrusted with all the powers necessary to carry into execution every Act relating to inland revenue, but in the exercise of these powers they are subject to the authority, direction, and control of the Treasury (n). All minutes, orders, and notices made by them can be proved by a copy purporting to be signed by a secretary or assistant secretary by their order (o).

1059. Legal proceedings against any person for the recovery of any fine, penalty, or forfeiture under any Act relating to inland revenue can only be commenced by the order of the Commissioners and in the name of an officer, or in the name of the Attorney-General (p). They may mitigate fines or penalties incurred under any Act relating to inland revenue, and stay proceedings for such fines or penalties, and may after judgment remit any fine, or order any person imprisoned for any offence against inland revenue to be discharged before his term of imprisonment has expired (q). Any fine, penalty, or forfeiture which is incurred under any Act relating to inland revenue, and which is not otherwise legally appropriated, is payable to the Commissioners to the use of His Majesty (r).

They may make regulations for the prevention of smuggling, may order proceedings for the recovery of any penalty incurred in connection with any Act imposing a duty of customs or excise, may remit or mitigate any fine or penalty, or restore any goods seized, and may reward any person instrumental in detaining smugglers, securing the conviction of offenders, or making seizures (c). the Treasury⁽ⁱ⁾, and are paid such salaries as the Commissioners may fix^(j). These salaries may not be seized or taken under process of court until they have been paid to or for the use of the officials to whom they are assigned^(k).

The officers are exempt from service on juries^(l), and cannot be compelled to undertake any local public office^(m).

Powers of officers.

1063. The officers have a right of access to harbours, docks, and piers⁽ⁿ⁾; they may go upon and search any ships^(o), open packages^(p), and search persons suspected of having smuggled goods upon them^(q). Where a person is summoned for obstructing an officer in the execution of his duty in searching a ship, the court has no power to inquire into the reasonableness or unreasonableness of the search, unless it was a mere pretence for the purpose of justifying an interference or annoyance by the officer^(r). They may seize any ships, boats, carts or conveyances used for "running" prohibited goods^(s), or spirits unlawfully removed^(t), and may arrest persons engaged in the removal^(u).

Damages for wrongful seizure.

If, on proceedings for the recovery of goods so seized, a verdict is found for the claimant, and an action for damages for wrongful seizure is afterwards brought by him against the officers, he may not recover more than 2*d.* damages without costs, if the judge at the original trial has found that there was reasonable and probable cause for the seizure^(a).

Conduct of proceedings.

Under the order and direction of the Commissioners, officers may conduct proceedings in customs and excise cases^(b).

Penalties for false returns etc

1064. All officers concerned in the collection, receipt, disbursement or expenditure of public revenue are liable to fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court if they knowingly Part III.—Sources of Revenue.

SECT. 1.—Permanent Sources.

1066. The permanent sources of the Revenue are—(1) so much of the hereditary revenues of the Crown as have been surrendered to the nation (e), including the revenue derived from the Post Office (f), (2) revenue derived from taxation, which includes income tax (g), death duties (h), customs duties (i), excise duties and licences (k), stamp duties (l), land tax (m), duties on land values (n), inhabited house duty (o), and corporation duty (p); and (3) certain miscellaneous sources of revenue (q), the principal items in which are the dividends upon 176,602 Suez Canal shares bought by the Government in 1875.

SUB-SECT 1.—Treasury Bills

1067. The issue of Treasury bills is a means of raising money when the receipts on the Exchequer account are at any time insufficient to meet the expenditure sanctioned by Parliament. Such bills can only be issued on the authority of an Act of Parliament (r), and it is usual in Consolidated Fund or Appropriation Acts

Date, renewal;
interest.

1068 The latest date for payment of the bills is generally fixed by the Act which authorises the issue and is not more than twelve months from the date of the bills (t). Subject to such express limitation, the date of each bill is determined by the Treasury (a), which has power, unless provision to the contrary is made, to issue, during any financial year and a period of three months after its expiration, new bills to raise money to meet those which fall due and are paid off (b). The interest is also fixed by the Treasury (c).

Method of issuing bills

1069. The bills are issued by the Bank of England on the authority of a warrant from the Treasury countersigned by the Comptroller and Auditor-General for amounts directed by the Treasury (d). The signature of one of the secretaries to the Treasury is necessary (e); in other respects the form is settled by Treasury regulations (f). The Bank of England receives, as remuneration for management, £200 for every million pounds of the maximum amount outstanding during the financial year (g).

Application
of money raised.

1070. All money raised by Treasury bills must be paid into the Exchequer account (h), and is then generally made available for any purpose for which that fund is available (i). The principal and interest are a charge on the Consolidated Fund (j), and may be repaid out of the old or new sinking fund (k).

SUB-SECT. 2 — Exchequer Bills

Purpose.

Term;
interest,
renewal.

1072. Unless express provision is made in the Act authorising the issue of such bills or bonds, the term of currency must not exceed six years (n), and the interest must not exceed £5½ per Part IV.—Duties on Land Values.

SECT. 1.—Introductory and Definitions.

1073. The duties on land values, i.e., increment value duty, reversion duty, undeveloped land duty and mineral rights duty (s), are all imposed by the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (t), Part I. With the exceptions of mineral rights duty and the increment value duty chargeable annually on minerals leased or worked (u), the taxes on land values are taxes on capital values

Nature of taxes

1074 For the purposes of the assessment of increment value duty (v), the taxable increment is taken as that accruing since the 30th April, 1909, and the value of all the land (w) in the United Kingdom as on that date is ascertained and recorded under the heads of total value and site value (z). These are the "original total value" and the "original site value" of the land (a)

For definitions of "land," see title REAL PROPERTY AND CHATTELS REAL, pp. 156-157, ante. In the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), Part I (Duties on Land Values), the term "land" does not, as a rule, include any incorporeal hereditament issuing or granted out of land (ibid. s. 41). "Land" does not include mines of gold and silver (2 Co. Inst. 577, The Case of Mines (1568) 1 Plowd. 310-336; A-G v Morgan, [1891] 1 Ch. 432, 455, C.A., and see stat. In the case of land held by a statutory company, the cost to the company of the land is to be taken as the original site value (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 33 (2)) see pp. 553, 554, post. The assessable site value cannot be a minus quantity. If the charges falling to be deducted

SECT. 1.

Introductory and Definitions.

Definition of total value.

1075. The "total value" is the amount which the fee simple (b) of the land, if sold at the time in the open market by a willing seller in its then condition (c) free from incumbrances (d) and from any burden, charge, or restriction (other than rates or taxes), might be expected to realise (e), less the amount by which that value would be diminished if the land were sold subject to any fixed charges (f) and to any public rights of way (g) or any public rights of user, and to any right of common (h) and to any easements (i) affecting the land, and to any covenant or agreement restricting the use of the land entered into or made before the 30th April, 1909, or, if entered into or made since that date, provided the restraint was in the opinion of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue desirable in the interests of the public when imposed, or in view of the character and surroundings of the neighbourhood (j).

Definition of site value.

1076 The "site value" is what remains after the following further deductions have been made from the total value as thus found.—

from the total value to arrive at the site value would, if subtracted, make the latter a mathematically minus quantity, the site value is to be taken as nil (Herbert's Trustees v Inland Revenue (1912), 49 Sc L R 699).

(b) "Fee simple" means the fee simple in possession not subject to any lease, but does not include an undivided share in a fee simple in possession (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 41). As to the ordinary meaning of the term, see title REAL PROPERTY AND CHATELS REAL, p 164, ante. In the case of copyholds of inheritance, copyholds held for a life or lives, or for years where the tenant has a right of renewal, and of customary freeholds, the term "fee simple" means the whole copyhold or customary interest or estate (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 40 (1)). An undivided share in a fee simple is an "interest in land" (ibid, s 41); and see note (b), p 558, post. By the statutory rules made by the Commissioners under Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 3 (2) (3), a lease for a term of which ninety-nine years or more remain unexpired is treated as a fee simple.

(c) I.e., in its condition as at the time when the valuation is made, whether for original site value or on the occasion of a charge. As to such occasions, see pp 560, 561, post.

(d) "Incumbrance" includes a mortgage in fee or for a less estate and a trust for securing money, and a lien, and a charge of a portion, annuity, or any capital or annual sum, but it does not include any "fixed charge" as defined by the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 41, namely, any title or title rentcharge or other periodical payment in lieu of or in the nature of tithe, or any fee farm rent, rent seek, quit rent, chief rent, rent of assize, or any other perpetual rent or annuity granted out of land; nor does it include any burden or charge (other than rates or taxes) arising by operation of law or imposed by, any Act of Parliament, or imposed in pursuance of the exercise of any powers or the performance of any duties under such Act, otherwise than by a person interested in the land, or in consideration of an advance to any person interested in the land (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c 8), s 41).

(e) This is the "gross value of land"; see Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 25 (1).

(f) For the meaning of "fixed charge," see note (d), supra.

(g) As to public rights of way, see title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI, pp 1 et seq.

(h) As to rights of common, see title COMMONS AND RIGHTS OF COMMON, Vol IV, pp 441 et seq.

SECT 1

Introductory and Definitions.

Deductions from site value.

(1) The difference between the value of the bare site (k) and the value of the land if sold in its present condition (l) free from incumbrances and from all burdens or charges other than rates or taxes (m).

(2) Any part of the total value directly attributable to works executed (n) or expenditure of a capital nature (o) incurred bona fide by or on behalf of or solely in the interests of any person interested in the land for the purpose of increasing its value as building land, or for the purpose of any business (p), trade, or industry other than agriculture (q); or to the appropriation of any land or the gift of any land by any person interested in the land for the purpose of streets, roads, paths, squares, gardens, or other open spaces for the use of the public (r); or to the expenditure of money on the redemption of land tax (s), or any fixed charge (t), or on the enfranchisement of copyhold land or customary freeholds (u), or on releasing the land from restrictive covenants (v); or to goodwill (h) or any other matter personal to the owner, occupier, or other person interested for the time being in the land

(3) Any sums which in the opinion of the Commissioners would appeal lies to the referee from the decision of the Commissioners; see p 582, post

(k) This expression does not occur in the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8). It is used here to denote the value of the land if divested of any buildings and of any other structures (including fixed or attached machinery) on, in, or under the surface, which are appurtenant to or used in connection with the buildings, and of all growing timber, fruit trees, fruit bushes, and other things growing on the land. see ibid. s 25 (2); and see Herbert's Trustees v Inland Revenue (1912), 49 Sc L R 699, per Lord JOHNSTON, at p 705

(m) This difference is the "full site value" of the land (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 25 (2))

(n) Other than buildings for which a deduction is made; see note (h), supra

(o) Including expenses of advertisement (ibid.).

(p) "Business" includes "everything which occupies the time and attention and labour of a man for the purpose of profit" (Smith v Anderson (1880), 15 Ch D. 247, 258, C A, per JESSEL, M R)

(q) "Agriculture" includes the use of land as meadow or pasture land, or orchard or osier or woodland, or for market gardens, nursery grounds, or allotments (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s 41). It probably does not include the use of land for glasshouses or greenhouses; see ibid., s 16 (2), where this use is expressly included for the purposes of the charge of undeveloped land duty; and see Smith v Richmond (1899), 81 L T 269, H L. Where the works executed or expenditure incurred for the purpose of improving the value of the land for agriculture have actually improved the value of the land for any of the other purposes referred to, the works or expenditure are to be regarded as having been executed or incurred for the other purpose also (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 25 (4))

(r) As to such purposes, see titles HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI, pp. 33 et seq; OPEN SPACES AND RECREATION GROUNDS, Vol. XXI, pp. 577 et seq

(t) For definition of "fixed charge," see note (d), p. 550, ante.

(u) See title COPYHOLDS, Vol. VIII, pp. 111 et seq

(v) This is limited to the restrictive covenants referred to as those to be taken account of in ascertaining the total value of land, see p. 550, ante.

require to be expended in order to clear the land of buildings, timber, trees, or other things of which it would be necessary to divest the land in order to arrive at the bare site value (c).

1077. For the purpose of assessing the increment value duty on minerals (d) two analogous values of the minerals are taken and recorded, the increment value subsequently accruing on the values thus found being that upon which the duty is leviable (e) —

(1) The “total value”: this is the amount which the fee simple of the minerals, if sold in the open market by a willing seller in their condition at the time the valuation is made, might be expected to realise (f); and

(2) The “capital value”: this is the total value after deducting any sums which may be allowable (g) for any works executed, or expenditure of a capital nature (h) incurred, bonâ fide by or on behalf of any person interested in the minerals for the purpose of bringing them into working, or, where they have been partly worked, such proportion of these sums as corresponds to the amount of the minerals still unworked (i).

Original total value, original capital value

1078. The original total value and the original capital value of minerals which were not on the 30th April, 1909, the subject of a mining lease (j) or being worked (k) are the values as on that date.

(f) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 22 (7) This would include the value of the machinery attached to and necessary for the working of the mine; see Addie & Sons v Inland Revenue Solicitor (1875), 12 Sc L R 274 [282]

(g) The sums to be allowed and the proportion of any sums expended which may be allowed are fixed by the Commissioners subject to appeal (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), ss 23 (1), 33 (1))

(i) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 23 (1)

(j) A “mining lease” here means a lease for mining purposes, that is, for searching for, winning, working, getting, making merchantable, carrying away, or disposing of, mines and minerals, or purposes connected therewith, and includes an agreement for such a lease and any tenancy or licence, whether by deed, parol, or otherwise, for mining purposes (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 24); compare title MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES, Vol XX, p 531, note (b) A grant to lessees of minerals of the right to let down the surface is a mining lease (Sitwell v. Lonsborough (Earl), [1905] 1 Ch 460, 464) The lease may include the use of contiguous lands necessary for working the minerals (Re Rebeley's Settled Estates (1863), 11 W R 744). In such cases the land included in the lease would be regarded as minerals for the purposes of the assessment and collection of the duties (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s. 23 (4)) As to mining leases generally, see title MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES, Vol. XX, pp 528 et seq

(k) Minerals which are being won for the purpose of being immediately worked are deemed to be minerals which are being worked, and minerals are deemed to be comprised in a mining lease if the right to work them is the subject of a mining lease, or if they are being worked under the terms of such a lease although it has expired (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 4

But if the proprietor of the minerals has not specified the nature of the minerals, and given an estimate of their capital value in his return made to the Commissioners for the purposes of the general valuation (l), they are regarded as having no original value, and any value subsequently found on an occasion of charge is assessed as increment value (m).

In the case of minerals which on the 30th April, 1909, were the subject of a mining lease or were being worked, the original values are those found after the minerals have ceased for a period of not less than two years to be comprised in a mining lease or to be worked (n).

1079 A tenant for life (o), or a person having the powers of a tenant for life, or a trustee, who is liable to pay any sums in respect of increment value duty or reversion duty assessed on settled land (p) of which he is tenant or trustee, or to pay any sums reasonably incurred in connection with a valuation made of the land for the purposes of the duties, may charge by deed upon the land any amount so paid by him (q). A mortgagee of land, who is liable to pay any sum on account of either of these duties assessed on the land, may add to his security the sum for which he is so liable, as well as any sum by way of costs and expenses properly incurred by him in connection with the payment (r).

SECT. 2.—The General Valuation.

1080. In order to ascertain the value of all the land in the United Kingdom on the 30th April, 1909, a general valuation is being carried out in the following way

Purpose of valuation

The Commissioners are required to make this valuation (s), showing separately the total value and the site value of the land, and in the case of agricultural land its value also for agricultural purposes (t).

Values to be shown

The General In the case of mineral parcels of land, the values to be ascertained are the total value and the capital total value of the minerals (u).

Valuation. The values to be taken are in all cases the values as on the 30th April, 1909 (v).

Pieces of land in separate
occupation.

1081. Each piece of land in separate occupation, and, if the owner requires it, any part of any land in separate occupation, is to be separately valued (a). But, on the request of the owner of any pieces of contiguous land not exceeding 100 acres in extent, the value of the pieces may be taken together although under separate occupation, should the Commissioners in the special circumstances think it proper that they should be so valued (b).

Returns by owners.

1082. To enable the necessary particulars to be obtained, the Commissioners are authorised to call upon any owner of land (c), or any person receiving rent in respect of land, to send in to them a return containing such information as to the ownership, tenure, or area of the land, or such other matters as may properly be required for the purpose of the valuation of the land (d), as it is in his power to give.

belonging to the Crown from increment value duty, from which it is to be inferred that, but for the express exemption in this respect, the Act would have made the duty chargeable on such lands), and it also includes minerals. For definition of "land," see note (w), p. 549, ante, and, as to the minerals affected, see note (k), p. 552, ante, and see note (n), p. 553, ante. But minerals which on the 30th April, 1909, were comprised in a mining lease, or being worked by the proprietor, are not to be valued until the lease or the working ceases, and minerals which were not so comprised or worked on that date are regarded as having no value as minerals, unless the proprietor of the minerals in the return sent in by him has specified the nature of the minerals and given his estimate of their capital value (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 23 (2)). In the case of land held by a statutory company, the cost of the land to the company is to be taken as the original site value of the land, see note (a), p. 549, ante. For definitions of "total value" and "site value," see p. 550, ante.

(u) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 23. For definitions of "total value" and "capital value" of minerals, see p. 552, ante.

(b) Revenue Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo 5, c. 2), s. 5. The powers of the Commissioners under this provision to adopt the larger unit of valuation are exercised chiefly in the case of building plots of land ripe for development, where boundaries of the areas of occupation are frequently of a transitory nature. In the case of land abutting on a highway there is a presumption that the land abutting on the highway usque ad medium filum is included in the tenement; see title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., p. 51; Central London Railway v City of London Land Tax Commissioners, [1911] 2 Ch. 467, C. A. (a case of land tax); see also title BOUNDARIES, FENCES, AND PARTY WALLS, Vol. III., pp. 120 et seq., compare titles FISHERIES, Vol. XIV., p. 583; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.

(c) The "owner" is defined as the person entitled in possession to the rents and profits of the land in virtue of any estate of freehold, but, if the land is let on a lease for a term of which more than fifty years are unexpired, the lessee under the lease, or, if there are two or more such lessees, the lessee under the last created underlease, is deemed to be the "owner" (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 41).

(d) "Other matters" which might properly be required for the purpose

They may also require any person paying rent, or who as agent receives rent in respect of land, to furnish them with the name and address of the person to whom the rent is paid or on behalf of whom the rent is received, as the case may be (c). Any owner of land and any person receiving rent in respect of land who fails to furnish these particulars when called upon to do so by the Commissioners is liable to a penalty not exceeding £50 recoverable in the High Court (j).

SECT. 2.
The General Valuation

1083. The income tax parish (g) is taken as the unit of area for the purposes of the valuation, and an officer has been appointed for each parish throughout England and Wales (h), for the purpose of making application on behalf of the Commissioners to owners of land for the information required in connection with the valuation (i).

Area unit Valuation
officers

This officer is supplied with a valuation book for the parish, into which are entered from the rate-book (k) the particulars of the ownership, occupation, extent and rateable value of the property. Each separate hereditament is entered and numbered consecutively for each parish, the number thus given, together with the name of the parish, forming the "identification number" by which the unit of valuation is to be officially known. These identification numbers, together with the particulars of the rating, are inserted prior to their issue on all forms of return issued to the owners by the valuation officer (l). On receipt of the returns from owners and of the valuation do not include an estimate of the annual value of the land by an owner who is also the occupier (Dyson v. A.-G., [1912] 1 Ch. 158, C. A., per COZENS-HARDY, M.R. at p. 165, and per FARWELL, L.J., at p. 171). The owner may, if he thinks fit, furnish an estimate of the total value or site value, or both, of the land, and, in making their valuation, the Commissioners must consider such estimates (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8) s. 26 (3)).

(c) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 31 (1).

(f) Ibid., s. 26 (2). But if the notice calling for the return specifies a shorter period within which it is to be made than the thirty days allowed by the statute, or if any information in excess of that authorised is asked for, the notice calling for the return may be disregarded and no penalty is incurred (Dyson v. A.-G., [1912] 1 Ch. 158, C. A., Burghes v. A.-G., [1912] 1 Ch. 173, C. A.). The form must specify the parcels of land in respect of which the names and addresses are to be furnished, and must not require the person to whom it is addressed to give the descriptions and precise situations of the parcels of land in respect of which the rent was paid or received (Burghes v. A.-G., supra). As to the recovery of penalties, see pp. 737 et seq., post.

(g) This may consist of several poor law parishes (Taxes Management Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 19), s. 37; and see titles INCOME TAX, Vol. XVI., p. 617; POOR LAW, Vol. XXII., pp. 574, 592). In such case the name of the first parish in the group is taken in forming the identification number (see the text, infra) of the hereditament.

(h) The officers appointed in England and Wales were in almost every case those holding the offices of assessors of income tax for the respective parishes. As to these, see title INCOME TAX, Vol. XVI., pp. 615, 616.

(i) The power given to the Commissioners by the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), ss. 26 (2), 31 (1), to call for returns has been held to be properly exercised by their calling for these to be sent to their appointed officers (Burghes v. A.-G., supra, Dyson v. A.-G., supra).

(k) See title RATES AND RATING, pp. 53, 56, ante.

(l) As to the necessity for the insertion of these particulars prior to the

SECT. 2. others interested in the land the information received is copied into the valuation book for use by the official district valuer.

The General Valuation.

Valuers.

Field book.

1084. The work of valuation is done by valuers, one of whom is appointed for each of the districts into which the country has been mapped out (m). Each valuer is supplied with an official "field book," and these books, when completed, form the draft of the General Valuation Book for the United Kingdom. They contain, by reference to each unit of valuation, the particulars furnished by the owners' returns, the various steps taken by the valuer in making his valuations, the deductions allowed by him in each case, and the gross value (n), full site value, total value, and assessable site value (o) of the land.

Service of provisional valuation

1085. A copy of the valuation thus made, that is, the "provisional valuation," is then served upon the owner of the land and upon any person interested in the land who applies for a copy (p).

Settlement of values

1086 Where no objection (q) is made by any person entitled to object (i) within the period allowed (s), the provisional valuation becomes final, and, subject to the right of an owner in certain cases (t) to have substituted value taken, the total value and the assessable site value thus found are the original total value and the original site value (a). Where objection has been duly made (h)

issue of the form, see Burghes v A-G, [1912] 1 Ch 173, ('A', per FLETCHER MOULTON, L J, at p 187

(m) Great Britain was for the purpose of valuation divided into 111 valuation districts. In Ireland the work was entrusted to the Government Valuation Department, which had been in existence prior to 1910

(n) For definition of "gross value," see Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 25 (1), and see note (c), p 550, ante

(p) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 27 (1), (5)

(q) Objection to the provisional valuation must be made within sixty days after service, such objection stating the grounds of objection and the amendments desired (ibid, s 27 (2))

(r) That is, by any person entitled as owner or as having an interest in the land to be served with a copy of the provisional valuation (ibid, s 27 (1), (5)) Where the tenant for life and the trustees exercise their discretion as to whether they will accept a provisional valuation of settled land, the court will not interfere at the instance of the tenant for life (Re Knollys' Trusts, Saunders v Haslam, [1912] 2 Ch 357, ('A') The Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 27, does not impose upon trustees a general duty to check provisional valuations, and the court will not direct trustees to check such valuations, unless it is shown that serious injury to the trust estate will otherwise result (ibid); but the court may in a particular case give leave to trustees to take such steps as may be advisable to test provisional valuations (Re Smith-Bosanquet's Settled Estates (1912), 107 L T 191)

(s) See note (q), supra

(a) As to the meaning of "total value," "assessable site value," "original total value," and "original site value," see pp 549, 550, ante. Even where no objection has been made, the Commissioners may amend the provisional valuation, whereupon the amended valuation becomes the provisional valuation of which copies are served and may be objected to (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 27 (3))

(b) If, on notice of objection, the Commissioners amend the provisional and the provisional valuations appealed against (c), the values as fixed on appeal are to be taken as the original total value and the original site value of the land (d).

SECT. 2.
The General Valuation.

1087. Upon the completion of any valuations (e) the full details are sent from the office of the district valuer to the head office at Somerset House, London, in the case of land in England and Wales, and to the head office at Edinburgh in the case of land in Scotland, where they are recorded (f).

Returns to head valuation office.

1088. The Commissioners are required to keep records of the particulars of all valuations, apportionments, reapportionments, and assessments made by them and of any deductions allowed in determining any value, and of the amount of any increment value duty, reversion duty, undeveloped land duty, or mineral rights duty paid in respect of any land (g).

Records to be kept by Commissioners.

1089. The Commissioners must furnish to any person interested in any land (h), and to any person authorised by any person so interested, on his application, and on payment of a fee not exceeding 2s 6d., copies of any particulars recorded by them in reference to the land (i).

Duty of Commissioners to furnish particulars

SECT. 3.—Increment Value Duty.

SUB-SECT. 1—As a Capital Charge on Land Other than Minerals.

(1) Definition.

1090. Increment value duty is a duty (k) charged on the amount, if any, by which the site value of the land, on the occasion on Nature of the duty.

valuation so as to be satisfactory to the objectors, the total value and site value so amended are adopted as the "original total value" and "original site value" (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 27 (2)). If the provisional valuation is not amended so as to be satisfactory to the objectors, the objectors may give notice of appeal, but, if no notice of appeal is given, the total value and site value stated in the provisional valuation, subject to any amendments made by the Commissioners in order to meet objections, are adopted as the "original total value" and "original site value" (ibid., s. 27 (4)).

(c) As to the procedure on appeals, see pp. 582 et seq., post.

(d) As to the meaning of "original total value" and "original site value," see p. 549, ante.

(e) The boundaries of each unit of valuation (see p. 555, ante) in a district are also permanently recorded on a set of ordnance plans which are kept at each district office.

(f) The full details sent to Somerset House and to Edinburgh are entered on cards specially prepared for the purpose. Each of the cards is appropriated to a particular unit of valuation (see p. 555, ante), and is distinguished by the identification number (see p. 555, ante) of the unit to which it relates. The cards are made up into parishes, those for each parish being filed in numerical order. The particulars of any subsequent occasional valuations of the land to which they refer, and any apportionments and payments of duty, are also entered on the cards. These cards and particulars thus constitute the record which the Commissioners are required to keep.

(h) As to such persons, see note (b), p. 558, post, note (i), p. 556, ante.

(i) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 30 (2).

(k) Increment value duty, as between tenant for life and remainderman, is apparently payable out of capital (Re Smith-Bosange's Settled Estates (1912), 107 L. T. 191).

SECT. 3. which the charge is made, exceeds the original site value of the land (l).

Increment Value Duty.

(u) Occasions of Charge

Occasions on which duty is chargeable.

1091. The duty is chargeable on the occasion of

(1) Any transfer on sale (a) of the fee simple of the land, or of any interest (b) in the land, or the grant of any lease (c) of the land for a term of fourteen years or more (d);

(2) The death of any person, where the fee simple of the land or any interest in the land is property passing on the death of

(l) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 2 (1). For the meaning of "site value" and "original site value," see p. 549, ante. An original site value calculated on the consideration for a transfer on sale or mortgage of the land or an interest in the land which took place at any date within twenty years prior to the 30th April, 1909, or at any date between the 29th April, 1909, and the passing of the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (29th April, 1910), or at any date subsequent to the passing of that Act if in pursuance of a contract made before the commencement of the Act or on the consideration for a transfer on sale made, at any time previous, to the person who was owner at the time application is made to have the value substituted, may be substituted for the site value as fixed at the general valuation of the land (ibid., s. 2 (3), as amended by the Revenue Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 2), s. 2), and by the Finance Act, 1912 (2 & 3 Geo. 5, c. 8), s. 10).

(a) the transfer on sale of any separate tenement, flat, or dwelling in a building used for the purpose of separate tenements, flats, or dwellings is not an "occasion" (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 11). As increment value duty is a stamp duty (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 3 (6)), it is submitted that this expression bears the same meaning as in the Stamp Acts, as to which see pp. 700 et seq., post.

(b) An "interest" in relation to land is defined as including any undivided share in a fee simple in possession and a reversion expectant on the determination of a lease, but as not including any other interest in expectancy, or an incumbency, or a fixed charge, or any purely incorporeal hereditament, or any leasehold interest under a lease for a term of years not exceeding fourteen (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 41). The grant of a lease of any such separate tenement, flat, or dwelling as is referred to in note (a), supra, is not an "occasion" (ibid., s. 11). In legal understanding it "extendeth to estates, rights and titles that a man hath of, in, to, or out of lands" (Co. Litt. 345 b), and see titles LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII, p. 372, note (d). SALE OF LAND. An interest in land must be such as to affect the land directly (Attree v. Howe (1878), 9 Ch. D. 337, C. A.). A reversion expectant on the determination of a lease of which ninety-nine years are unexpired is not an interest for the purposes of the charge of increment value duty (Commissioners' Rules under the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 3 (2), (3), r. 1 (6) (Stat. R. & O., 1910, p. 395)). For definitions of "incumbency" and "fixed charge," see note (d), p. 550, ante.

(c) A lease includes an underlease and an agreement for a lease or underlease, but does not include a term of years created solely for the purpose of securing money until the term becomes vested in some person free from an equity of redemption (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 41). In the case of copyhold land held for a life or lives, or for years where the tenant has not a right of renewal, the copyholder's interest is regarded as a leasehold interest (ibid., s. 40 (2)). As to leases generally, see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII, pp. 331 et seq.

(d) The term of a lease includes any period for which it may be renewed in pursuance of an enforceable covenant for renewal contained in the lease itself (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 41). As to what covenants for renewal are enforceable, see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII, pp. 461 et seq.

the deceased within the meaning of the statutes imposing estate duties (e); and

(3) Where the fee simple of the land, or an interest in the land, is held by any body corporate or unincorporate (f) in such a manner or on such permanent trusts that the land or interest is not liable to death duties, on the 5th April, 1914, and in every subsequent fifteenth year (g).

SECT. 3.
Increment
Value Duty.

(III.) Assessment and Collection of the Duty.

1092. On the occasion of a transfer on sale of land or of a statutory interest in land (h), or on the grant of a lease (i) for a term of fourteen years or more, the transferor or lessor (l), as the case may be, or the secretary or other accountable officer (l) of the body, where the land is held by a body corporate or unincorporate, must present to the Commissioners of Inland Revenue the instrument or reasonable particulars of the instrument by which the transfer or lease is effected or agreed to be effected (m).

Presentation of particulars

(e) See title ESTATE AND OTHER DEATH DUTIES, Vol. XIII., pp 183 et seq. The passing on death of a lease of any such separate tenement, flat, or dwelling as is referred to in note (a), p. 558, ante, is not an "occasion" (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 11)

(f) The expression "body unincorporate" is defined by the Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1885 (48 & 49 Vict. c. 51), s. 12; see note (k), p. 734, post. The definition is adopted for the purposes of the charge of the duties on land values by the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 6

(g) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), ss. 1, 6 Duty on any such periodical occasion (see ibid, s. 6) is not payable by such a body where the interest held by it is only a leasehold interest in any such separate tenement, flat, or dwelling (ibid, s. 11)

(h) See definition of "interest," note (b), p. 558, ante

(i) Including an agreement for a lease or an underlease, see note (c), p. 558, ante In the case of an agreement for a transfer to be followed shortly by a conveyance, the statutory regulations do not require the agreement to be presented, but they do require it in the case of an agreement for a lease (Commissioners' Rules under the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 4; r. 7; (Stat. R. & O. 1910, p. 389)).

(k) "Lessor" includes an underlessor and the person entitled for the time being to the reversion, whether freehold or leasehold, expectant on the determination of the lease, but it does not include any person who joins in the execution of the instrument by which the lease is effected for the purpose of conveying an estate vested in him as a trustee or an incumbrancer, or of acknowledging the receipt of the consideration money, or of giving consent The expression "transferor" does not include a person who joins in the execution of an instrument of transfer for a similar purpose (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 41)

(l) "Accountable officer" means every chamberlain, treasurer, bursar, receiver, secretary or other officer, trustee or member of a body corporate or unincorporate, by whom the annual income or profits of property in respect whereof corporation duty is chargeable is received, or in whose possession, or under whose control, the same may be (Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1885 (48 & 49 Vict. c. 51), s. 12; which appears to be incorporated by the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7; c. 8), s. 6 (2), (3)). As to "corporation duty," see pp. 734 et seq., post.

But presentation is not required where the property leased is a separate tenement, flat, or dwelling in a building used for such flats, separate tenements, or dwellings, or on the transfer on sale of any such lease, or where the Commissioners have made arrangements for obtaining the necessary particulars through any registry of lands, deeds, or title (ibid., ss. 4 (5), 11).

The Commissioners may make regulations as to the mode in which any instrument or particulars are to be presented to them (n), and if a transferor, lessor, or accountable officer, as the case may be, fails to present the instrument or particulars in accordance with such regulations, he is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding £10, and to pay interest at the rate of £5 per cent. per annum on any duty ultimately found payable by him as from the date on which the instrument has been executed (o).

Where the occasion is the grant of any lease of the land or the transfer on sale of any interest less than the fee simple in the land, the value of the fee simple is first to be ascertained on the basis of the consideration for the grant or transfer, and the value thus found is taken as the total value (q).

If on any sale or grant of a lease the consideration for the transfer or lease is a periodical money payment, the Commissioners may assess the consideration at such sum as appears to them to be the capital value of the payment (r); and, where part of the

As to proceedings in courts of summary jurisdiction, see title MAGISTRATES, Vol. XIX, pp. 589 et seq. As to liability where the particulars furnished are inaccurate through carelessness or neglect without fraud, see A. G. v. Till, [1910] A. C. 50. Proceedings for the recovery of the penalty can only be commenced by order of the Commissioners, and must be taken in the name of an official or in the name of the Attorney-General (Inland Revenue Regulation Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 21), s. 21 (1)). No time is fixed either by the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), or by the statutory regulations, on the expiration of which failure to present the instrument on the particulars would render the transferor or lessor liable to the penalty.

(q) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 2 (2) (b). No claim to be allowed a deduction for the purpose of ascertaining the site value can be admitted if it is one which might have been, but was not, made when the original site value of the land was being ascertained (ibid., s. 14). For the deductions to be made from total value to arrive at the site value, see pp. 550, 551, ante.

(r) The following decisions under the Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39) (see pp. 700 et seq., post), seem to be applicable here.—The consideration for the sale may be in whole or in part a debt due to the purchaser (Scottish Equitable Life Society v. Inland Revenue Commissioners (1894), 32 Sc. L. R. 77), and, even if the debt is a bad debt, the whole is to be included in the consideration (Inland Revenue Commissioners v. North British Ry. Co. (1901), 4 F. (Ct. of Sess.) 257). The rent payable on an assignment of leaseholds is not ordinarily consideration for the sale (Swayne v. Inland Revenue Commissioners, [1900] 1 Q. B. 172, C. A.); but where land subject to tithe was sold in consideration of a lump sum and an annual consideration consists of a covenant or undertaking to discharge any incumbrance, or a lease has been granted at a nominal rent subject to any covenant to erect buildings or to expend any sums on the property, they may add to the consideration for the transfer or grant such sum in respect of the covenant or undertaking as they think just (s).

SECT. 3.
Increment
Value Duty.

1094 Where the occasion is a death, the increment duty then chargeable is collected as if it were estate duty (t), but where any land or an interest in land is property passing to the personal representative by virtue of his office (u), such representative must deliver an account setting forth the particulars of the increment value in respect of the property (a). On the occasion of a death and when the fee simple is property passing on such death, the site value is to be calculated from the principal value of the land as ascertained for the purposes of estate duty, such principal value being the market price of the land at the death of the deceased, subject to a special deduction on account of any depreciation in value arising by reason of the death (b), and, where any interest in the land is property passing on the death, the site value is to be calculated from the value of the fee simple of the land on the basis of the principal value of the interest as so ascertained (c).

1095. In the case of increment value duty chargeable in respect of land or an interest in land held by a body corporate or unincorporate, the site value in this case being calculated with reference to the statutory "total value" of the land (d), the duty is assessed upon the account delivered under the Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1885 (e), in the year 1914 and in every subsequent fifteenth year. The account sent in for the purposes of the charge of corporation duty in these years must contain particulars of the increment value of the land as on the preceding 5th April (f).

Duty payable on devolution of partial interest.

Where such an account is due, the body and the accountable officer wilfully neglecting to send it in are liable to a penalty equal to 10 per cent. upon the amount of the duty payable on the property (g).

When it is sent in, the Commissioners are required to assess the duty on it, but they may before doing so call for the production of any books or documents necessary to enable them to verify the accounts (g).

1096. When the increment value of the land has been ascertained, deductions are allowed from the total amount of (1) a sum equal to 10 per cent. of the site value of the land on the last preceding occasion for the collection of increment value duty, or equal to 10 per cent. of the original site value of the land if no occasion for collection of the duty has previously arisen (h); and (2) any sum or sums paid to a rating authority (i) in respect of any increase in the value of the land due to any improvements made or any other action taken by the authority (j).

1097. The charge for increment value duty is raised on the net increment value thus arrived at, and from this charge all sums paid or deemed to have been paid for duty on previous occasions are deducted. This net charge is the duty payable on the occasion of the transfer on sale or passing on death of the fee simple of any land, or on any periodical occasion in the case of the fee simple of land held by a body corporate or unincorporate (k)

For exemptions from corporation duty, see pp. 735, 736, post. But no account for increment value duty need be sent in on any periodical occasion on which no duty falls to be collected (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 6 (5)). The increment value duty cannot be assessed unless the account is sent in (Re New University Club's Estate Duty (1887), 18 Q B D 720); but the Commissioners may compel the delivery of an account by the defaulting official or body; see Crown Suits, etc Act, 1865 (28 & 29 Vict. c. 104), s 55.

(i) "Rating authority" means any body which has power to raise a rate or administer money raised by a rate the proceeds of which are applicable to public local purposes, and which is leviable on the basis of an assessment in respect of the yearly value of property (ibid., s 35 (2)).

any periodical occasion in the case of such an interest held by a body corporate or unincorporate, such a proportion of the duty is payable as the interest which is the subject of the charge bears to the whole fee simple of the land (l). SECT. 3.

The Commissioners may make rules to determine this proportion (m), and they may in charging the duty on any occasion make such allowances as they think just in respect of any payment of reversion duty, where the benefit on which reversion duty was paid is shown to them to be identical with the increment value on which increment value duty is charged (n). Proportionate 1099 Increment value duty is collected as a stamp duty at the rate of £1 for every complete £5 of increment value chargeable (o). Rate of duty.

(iv) Recovery of the Duty

1100 Where the occasion of charge is the transfer on sale of land or the grant of a lease of land, the duty is payable by the transferor or grantor as the case may be, and any contract for the payment by the transferee or lessee of the duty, or of any expenses incurred in connection with the payment or assessment of duty, is void (p). Parties liable

The duty is assessed on the presentation of the instrument of transfer or lease and becomes a debt due to the Crown from the transferor or lessor (q). Any duty so assessed is, for the When liable.

(l) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 3 (3). The amount of increment value duty to be collected on the occasion of the grant of a lease or transfer on sale or passing on death, of any interest in land, or on any periodical occasion in the case of an interest in land held by a body corporate or unincorporate, is one-fifth of the increment value of the land after deducting from that one-fifth one-fifth of the increment value on the last occasion (if any) on which duty was paid in respect of the interest under review (Commissioners' Rules under the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s. 3, r 3 (1) (Stat R & O, 1910, p 395))

(m) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s. 3 (3). By these rules the proportion is defined as "the ratio of the present value of an annuity for the term of the interest under review to the present value of the same annuity in perpetuity" (Commissioners' Rules under the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 3, r. 1 (1) (Stat R. & O, 1910, p 395)) The "term of the interest" means: (a) Where the interest is an interest in possession, a term equal to the residue of the interest for the time being outstanding, and (b) where it is a reversion expectant on the determination of a lease, a term equal to the term of the reversion deferred for the period of the outstanding term of the lease (ibid., r. 1 (2)) The calculations for the purpose of ascertaining the proportion are based on the 4 per cent tables for the purchase of leases, estates, and annuities (ibid., r. 1 (4))

(n) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s. 14 (4) A corresponding allowance is made on the assessment of reversion duty in respect of any part of the value of the benefit chargeable which was already charged with increment value duty, see p 572, post

1102. The Commissioners may make regulations for the payment by instalments of the duty payable in the case of any lease or transfer on sale, where the consideration is in the form of a periodical payment, and these regulations must provide for the remission of any instalment which has not fallen due at the time the lease is determined (a).

(a) Ibid, s 4 (5) The regulations (see Commissioners' Rules under ibid, s 4 (Stat R & O, 1910, p 389), r 16) provide that in such a case the Commissioners may, if they think fit, allow payment of the duty assessed to be made by instalments in accordance with the following rules.—

1 Where the consideration consists wholly of a periodical payment, the duty is payable by five equal annual instalments, and the first instalment falls due one year after the date of the grant of the lease or the transfer of the interest, and the subsequent instalments on the same date in each successive year

2 Where the considerations consist partly of a lump sum payment and partly of a periodical payment:

(1) At the date of the grant or transfer an amount is payable bearing to the whole duty to be collected the same proportion as the lump sum bears to the present total value of the consideration calculated on the 4 per cent. tables

(2) The balance is payable by instalments of the same amounts and at the same times as if the periodical payment constituted the whole of the consideration, and the balance were the whole of the duty to be collected.

3. In any case in which the person liable to the payment of the duty may and does elect to pay it by instalments, he must furnish security to the satisfaction of the Commissioners for the payment of the whole amount of the duty payable.

4 If any person, on being required by the Commissioners to furnish such security, fails to do so within two months, he forfeits his right to pay the duty by instalments and the whole of the duty is deemed to be due on the expiration of two months from the date on which notice was given by the Commissioners of their requirement.

Out of what property duty is payable.

1104 Where the occasion of charge is the passing on death of the land, and it passes to the personal representative as such (c), the duty is payable out of the interest in the land in exoneration of the rest of the deceased's estate (d). In the case of land not so passing, the duty is payable by the person or persons beneficially entitled (e). Except as against the land on which the duty is assessed, the Crown's claim for the duty ranks pari passu with the claims of the other creditors of the deceased (f).

1105. The duty assessed periodically in respect of land held by a body corporate or unincorporate is payable by the body or by the accountable officer (g), and the latter may retain any duty paid by him from any property of the body which comes into his hands. Every body and every accountable officer of a body who wilfully neglects, for the space of twenty-one days after it becomes payable, to pay any duty is liable to a penalty of 10 per cent on the amount of the unpaid duty and a like penalty for every month thereafter that the neglect continues (h). The duty is payable immediately after assessment, but, if the body corporate or unincorporate so desire, it may be paid by fifteen equal yearly instalments (i).

Value Duty.

(6) Land held by a statutory company (a) for the purposes of its undertaking, which cannot be appropriated by the company except to these purposes (b); but the duty which might but for this exemption have been charged is not deemed to have been paid (c). If the company is under its lease or agreement required to pay over any part of the increment value to His Majesty or any Government department, the increment value is regarded as arising in respect of land held by the Crown (d);

Statutory

(7) Land, or any interest in land, held by or on behalf of any governing body constituted for charitable purposes (e), in Charities.

(r) For definition of "owner," see note (c), p 554, ante, which in this case also includes a person holding under a lease originally granted for a term of fifty years or more; but here, too, if exemption is granted to a person holding under such a lease, a person liable on account of any other interest held in the land continues liable to pay the duty corresponding to his interest (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s 8 (4)). A reversion expectant on the determination of a lease of which ninety-nine years are unexpired is treated by the regulations of the Commissioners as not having an interest chargeable with duty (Commissioners' Rules under the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s 3 (2), (3) (Stat R & O 1910, p 395), r 1 (6)).

(s) See title INCOME TAX, Vol XVI, pp 619 et seq

(t) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s 8 (1). Any duty remitted under either of the heads of exemption (3), (4), or (5) (see p 556, ante, and the text, supra) is, for the purpose of the collection of the duty on future occasions, deemed to have been paid. Notwithstanding the exemptions granted, the Commissioners require any instrument of transfer of an interest in the land, or of a grant of a lease for a term exceeding fourteen years, to be presented to them for stamping (Commissioners' Rules under the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 4 (Stat. R. & O. 1910, p 389), r. 10).

(a) A "statutory company" means any railway company, canal company, dock company, water company, or other company for the time being authorised under any special Act to construct, work, or carry on any railway, canal, dock, water, or other public undertaking, and includes any person or body of persons so authorised (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s 38 (4)).

(b) But the exemption covers land which is intended to be ultimately appropriated for the purposes of the company, although temporarily used for other purposes (ibid., s 38 (1)). As to lands falling within this category, see Hooper v. Bourne (1880), 5 App. Cas. 1; Bayley v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1884), 26 Ch. D. 434, C.A.

(c) It cannot, therefore, be claimed as a deduction when an occasion for charge of the duty arises after the land has been sold or ceases to be held by the company.

(d) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 38; Revenue Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 2), s 6.

(e) Such a body includes any person or body of persons who have the right of holding, or any power of government of, or management over, any property appropriated for charitable purposes (including property appropriated for the purpose of any of the military or naval forces of the Crown), and includes any corporation sole and all universities, colleges, schools, and other institutions for the promotion of literature, science, or art (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 37 (1)). respect of the periodical charges of duty which would be payable by it every fifteenth year as a body corporate or unincorporate. The exemption applies only while the land is occupied and used for the purposes for which the body was constituted (f). It extends also to land, or any interest in land, held by a registered society (g), or by an incorporated company if the company is by its memorandum or Act precluded from dividing any profit amongst its members (h); or

Recreation

(8) Land, or any interest in land, held by a body corporate or unincorporate is exempt from liability to the periodical charge for increment value duty, where the land is bonâ fide used for the purposes of games or other recreations and without any view to the payment of a dividend or profit out of the revenue derived from it (i).

SUB-SECT. 2 —As a Capital Charge on Minerals.

(1) Definition

Assessable increment
value

1107. Where minerals are liable to increment value duty as a capital charge, the assessable increment value is the amount, if any, by which the capital value of the minerals at the time when the occasion for charge arises exceeds the original capital value of the minerals (k)

meaning of "charitable purposes," see titles CHARITIES, Vol IV, p 209, note (a), INCOME TAX, Vol XVI, pp 629, 630, Re Donald, Moore v. Somerset, [1909] 2 Ch 410; R v Special Commissioners of Income Tax, Ex parte Esser Hull (1911), 27 T L R 466, C A; and see titles LITERARY AND SCIENTIFIC INSTITUTIONS, Vol XIX, pp 204 et seq, RATES AND RATING, pp 21, 22, ante. For the meaning of "appropriated for the promotion of science," see title CHARITIES, Vol IV, p 208

(f) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s. 37 (1)

(g) The term "registered society" means any society or body of persons which is registered, or whose rules are certified or registered by a registrar of friendly societies in pursuance of any Act of Parliament, and who by its rules makes provision for the benefits set out in the Friendly Societies Act, 1896 (59 & 60 Vict. c 25), s. 8 (1), and where the contract between the society and the member is of a permanent character (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s. 37 (2)). As to such registered societies, see titles BUILDING SOCIETIES, Vol III, pp 321 et seq, FRIENDLY SOCIETIES, Vol XV, pp 119 et seq, INDUSTRIAL, PROVIDENT, AND SIMILAR SOCIETIES, Vol XVII, pp 1 et seq, WORK AND LABOUR

(h) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s. 37 (2)

(i) Ibid, s. 9. In this case the Commissioners must be satisfied that the land is used for games or other recreations under some agreement with the owner which as originally made could not be determined for a period of at least five years, or under other circumstances which render it probable that the land will continue to be so used. The duty remitted is not, for the purposes of the future collection of duty, deemed to have been paid (ibid).

(k) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s. 23 (1). For definitions of "capital value" and "original capital value," see p. 552, ante. The assessable capital value may be the full value of the minerals where the proprietor of the minerals in his return made for the purposes of their valuation did not specify the nature of the minerals and give an estimate of their capital value (ibid, s. 23 (2)). The duty is not chargeable upon minerals which are the subject of a mining lease or are being worked (ibid, s. 23 (2) (3)). For definition of "minerals," see note (c), p. 579, post. As to the severance of minerals from the ownership of the surface, see title MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES, Vol. XX., pp. 506, 550.

(ii) Occasions of Charge.

SECT. 3.

Increment
Value Duty.

Occasions.

- 1108. The duty is to be collected on the same occasions as in the case of ordinary land (l), except that the grant of a mining lease is not an occasion on which the duty is to be charged (m).

(iii) *Assessment and Collection of the Duty*Asses-ment and collection.

- 1109. The duty is assessed and collected at the same rate as in the case of the corresponding charge on land, and subject to the same provisions as to deductions, allowances, abatements and exemptions (n).

SUB-SECT. 3—As an Annual Charge on Minerals (o)(1) *Definition*Nature of the charge.

- 1110. Annual increment value duty is the charge levied on the amount, if any, by which the rental value of the right to work minerals and of the mineral wayleaves in the preceding working year exceeds two twenty-fifth parts of the original capital value of the minerals, or, where increment value duty as a capital sum has been collected on the minerals, exceeds two twenty-fifth parts of the capital value of the minerals on the last occasion on which the duty was so collected (p).

Exemptions

It is not chargeable on minerals which, on the 30th April, 1909, were the subject of a mining lease or were being worked by the proprietor, or on minerals which are not the subject of a mining lease or being worked (q).

(l) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), ss 1, 23 (2), and see pp 558, 559, ante

(m) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 22 (1)

(n) Ibid ss 1, 23 (2), and see pp 564 et seq., ante

(o) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c 8), s. 23 (4)

(p) Ibid, s 22 (3). Where the minerals are the subject of a mining lease, the rental value is the amount of rent paid by the working lessee in respect of the right to work the mineral, or in respect of the wayleave, in the last working year (ibid, s 20 (2), and see Beaufort (Duke) v Inland Revenue Commissioners, [1912] 2 K B 281). But if the lessor is liable under any Act to pay any sum in respect of rates, the rental value is to be taken as what the rent would be if the lessee were liable for the rates instead of the lessor (Finance Act, 1912 (2 & 3 Geo 5, c 8), s 11 (1)). Where the minerals are worked by the proprietor, the rental value is the sum which would have been obtained by him in the last working year if the right to work the minerals had been leased to a working lessee for a term and at a rent and on conditions customary in the district, and they had been worked to the same extent and in the same manner as they were worked in the year by the proprietor (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c. 8), s 20 (2)). The rent is to be taken on the basis of the lessee paying all rates in respect of the minerals, notwithstanding that the proprietor would have been liable to pay the rates or some part thereof (Finance Act, 1912 (2 & 3 Geo. 5, c 8), s 11 (2)). If the rent paid exceeds the rent customary in the district, and partly represents a return on expenditure incurred by the proprietor which would ordinarily be borne by the lessee, the Commissioners may, in assessing the duty, make an allowance for this (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 20 (2)). The working year means the year ending the 30th September (ibid, s 24). For definition of "capital value," see p 552, ante

(q) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c. 8), ss 22 (2), (3). But the exemption granted to minerals leased or worked on the 30th April, 1909, does not apply where the minerals have since that date ceased

SECT 3

(ii) *Assessment and Collection of the DutyIncrement Value Duty.Returns to Commissioners.

1111. The assessment is made on a return which is required to be furnished to the Commissioners by every proprietor (r) of minerals and by every person to whom any rent is paid in respect of the minerals, setting forth the rent paid by the working lessee (s), or, where the proprietor himself works the minerals, the rate of rent and royalty customary in the district (t).

Deduction from rental
value.

Before the charge for duty is assessed on the rental value returned, a deduction is made of any part of this value which can be shown to represent a return for money expended within fifteen years by a lessor in boring or otherwise proving the minerals (a).

Rate of duty.

1112. The duty is charged at the rate of £1 for every complete £5 of increment value remaining after this deduction has been made, and is payable at any time after the 1st of January in the year for which it is charged (b).

(iii) *Recovery of the Duty.*Persons liable.

1113. As soon as assessed, the duty becomes a debt due to the Crown from the proprietor of the minerals if the minerals are worked by the proprietor, and in any other case from the immediate lessor of the working lessee (c). But if the lessor who pays the duty is himself only a lessee of the right to work the minerals or of the wayleave, he is entitled to deduct from the rent paid by him for a period exceeding two years to be the subject of a mining lease or to be worked (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), ss 22 (2), (3))

(r) "Proprietor" means the person for the time being entitled in possession to the minerals, or to the rents and profits thereof, or any part of these rents and profits, but it does not include a person entitled as lessee other than a person entitled to the possession of land comprised in a lease for any long term of years to which the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), s 65 (as to which see title REAL PROPERTY AND CHATTELS REAL, p 268, ante), applies (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 24). No deduction may be made in respect of super-tax (Beaufort (Duke) v Inland Revenue Commissioners, [1912] 2 K B 281)

(s) The "working lessee" is the person who is actually working the minerals, or who would have the right actually to work the minerals if the minerals were worked. As respects wayleaves the term means the person who is in actual enjoyment of the wayleave (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 24); for definition of "wayleave," see note (l), p. 580, post

(t) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 20 (3), and form of notice and return issued by the Commissioners. Failure to furnish the return when called upon to do so involves liability to a penalty not exceeding £50, recoverable in the High Court (ibid). Knowingly making a false return under the Act involves liability on summary conviction to six months' imprisonment with hard labour (ibid, s 94). As to liability when the return furnished is incorrect owing to neglect or carelessness, see A-G v. Tull, [1910] A. C. 50.

(a) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 22 (4); and see note (p.), p 569, ante

(c) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), ss 20 (4), 22 (5). As between the lessor and the lessee, the duty must be paid by the former, notwithstanding any contract to the contrary (ibid.).

1114. Reversion duty is a duty chargeable on the value of the benefit deemed to accrue to a lessor by reason of the determination of a lease (e). Nature of duty.

SUB-SECT 2.—Assessment and Collection of the Duty

1115. On the determination of a lease on the determination of which reversion duty is payable, an account of the benefit accruing to him from the determination must be sent to the Commissioners by the person in whom the lessor's interest was vested immediately before the expiration of the term for which the lease was granted, or, if the lease had determined before that time, immediately before the transaction or event in consequence of which the lease had determined (f). If any person who is under an obligation to send in such an account knowingly (g) fails to do so within a period of three months of the determination of the lease, he becomes liable to pay to the Crown a sum not exceeding 10 per cent. upon the amount of duty payable, and a like penalty for every three months after the first month during which the failure continues (h). If an account is not sent in, the Commissioners may cause one to be Liability of accounting party.

taken by any person or person appointed by themselves for that purpose (1).

1116. When the account has been obtained, an assessment is made of the benefit accruing to the lessor. This is taken as the amount, if any, by which the total value of the land at the time the lease determined exceeds the total value of the land at the time of the original grant of the lease (k).

The value at the time of the grant is ascertained on the basis of the rent (l) reserved and payments made in consideration of the lease, including, where a nominal rent only has been reserved, the value of any covenant or undertaking to erect buildings or to expend any sums on the property (m).

The total value at the time the lease determined is the total value as defined for the purpose of the charge of the land values duties (n), subject to deductions for any part of the value attributable to any works executed, or expenditure of a capital nature incurred, by the lessor during the term of the lease, and any sums payable by the lessor as compensation on the determination of the lease (o).

1117. The duty is assessed on the value of the benefit accruing at the rate of £1 for every complete £10 of that value (p)

1118. The sum to be collected on any occasion of charge is subject to the following deductions and allowances:-

(1) Any part of the duty which can be shown to the Commissioners to have been assessed on a benefit which is identical with an increase in value on which increment value duty has already been paid (q).

1119. The duty when assessed becomes a debt due to the Crown from the lessor to whom the benefit accrues, but ranks pari passu with debts due to his other creditors (b).

1120. Where the lessor is himself entitled to only a leasehold interest, the duty payable by him is such a sum as he would be liable to pay if the value of the benefit on which duty is calculated were reduced in proportion to the amount by which the value of his interest is less than the fee simple (c).

(s) Revenue Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 2), s. 3 (2). The "full duty" is the duty, if any, which would have become payable if the lease had not determined until the expiration of the term for which it was granted, and if the total value of the land were at that time the same as it is when the lease actually determines. If the lease contains an obligation to renew, the term of the lease is regarded as including the period for which it may be renewed. In the case of a lease for a life or lives, the term is deemed to be a number of years equal to the mean expectation of life of the person for whose life it was granted, or, in the case of a lease for lives, of the youngest of the persons for whose lives the lease was granted (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 41).

SUB-SECT. 4 — *Exemptions.*Reversion Duty.

Determinations of leases not giving rise to claims for duty

1121. Reversion duty is not chargeable on the determination of a lease of land where

(1) The land at the date of the determination was agricultural land (d);

(2) The original term of the lease did not exceed twenty-one years, or the lessor's interest is a leasehold interest not exceeding that number of years (e);

(3) The reversion having been purchased prior to the 30th April, 1909, the lease determined within forty years of the purchase otherwise than by an agreement, express or implied, between the lessor and lessee not contained in the lease itself (f);

(4) The lease was determined in pursuance of an agreement between the lessor and the lessee for the acquisition by the lessee of the lessor's interest, provided that, at the time of the determination, the lease had at least fifty years of its term to run and the total value of the land did not exceed £500 (g);

(5) The land being held upon trust for any body of persons, the lease was determined before the expiration of the term by its surrender to the lessor upon the terms that he should grant to those persons severally leases of various plots of land representing in the aggregate the whole of the land comprised in the original lease for a term in each case equal to the unexpired term (h) of the residue of the original lease, and at rent amounting in the aggregate to, but not exceeding, the rent reserved by the original lease (i).

(6) Land, or any interest in land, is held by or on behalf of a rating authority, or any statutory combination representative of two or more rating authorities, so far as respects the land or interest (k);

(7) Land, or any interest in land, is held and used for charitable purposes by or on behalf of any governing body constituted for such purposes in respect of the land or interest so held and used, and including land held by any registered society or by any incorporated body where such body by its memorandum or Act is precluded from dividing any profits amongst its members (l), or

SECT. 4.
Reversion
Duty.

SECT. 5.—Undeveloped Land Duty.

SUB-SECT. 1—Definition.

1122. Undeveloped land duty is a duty on the site value of undeveloped land. Definition.

Undeveloped land is land which has not been developed by the erection on it of dwelling-houses, or of buildings (n) for the purposes of any business (o), trade, or industry other than agriculture (p) (but including glasshouses or greenhouses), or is not otherwise used bonâ fide for any business, trade, or industry other than agriculture (q). It includes land which after having been developed has reverted to the condition of undeveloped land and continued in that condition for the space of a year (r). Undeveloped land.

SUB-SECT. 2—Assessment and Collection of the Duty

1123. The duty is assessed on the site value of the land. Up to the year 1914 this is the original site value as found on the general valuation (s). Assessment on site value.

From that year inclusive, the charge will be raised upon the site value found on the quinquennial valuation to be made of undeveloped land in that year, and this will continue to be the basis of charge until the next following quinquennial valuation takes place, when the new site value then found will be substituted and will form the basis until it is superseded by the site value found when the next succeeding quinquennial valuation takes place (t). Quinquennial valuation.

(o) "Business" means everything which occupies the time and attention and labour of a man for the purpose of profit (Smith v. Anderson (1880), 15 Ch D 247, C A, per JESSEL, M R, at p. 258)

(p) For definition of "agriculture," see note (q), p. 551, ante The use of land for agricultural purposes does not include use as the site of glass-houses (Smith v. Richmond (1899), 4 Tax Cas 131, H L.)

(q) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 16 (1), (2).

(r) Ibid., s 16 (2) (a) The liability ceases as soon as the land is again developed or used (ibid.).

(s) Ibid., s. 16 (3). For original site value, see p. 549, ante. For the purpose of the assessment of land to undeveloped land duty, the land does not include minerals (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c 8), s 16 (4)). This exemption extends, it is submitted, beyond the exemption granted to certain mineral substances from mineral rights duty, as to which see p. 579, post. It excludes from the assessment for undeveloped land duty all substances forming part of the crust of the earth other than the layer of soil which contains vegetable life, see Glasgow (Lord Provost and Magistrate) v. Fane (1888), 13 App Cas 657; Great Western Railway v. Coppalla United China Clay Co, Ltd, [1910] A. C. 83).

(t) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), ss 16 (3), 28. Where the periodical valuation has been begun but not completed in the year of valuation, the Commissioners may complete it after the expiration of that year (ibid., s. 28).

SECT. 5.

Undeveloped Land Duty.Deductions from site value assessment.

1124. Before the charge for duty is raised, the site value assessed is subject to the following deductions:—

(1) If increment value duty has been paid in respect of the increment value of the land, a deduction is made from the value assessed of five times the amount paid for increment value duty (a).

(2) In the case of land included in any scheme of land development, a remission is allowed of the land assessed to the extent of one acre for every complete £100 expended by the owner or by his predecessors in title with a view to the land being developed (b) under the scheme, provided that the expenditure has been incurred within twenty years and the land has not since the date of the expenditure reverted from the condition of developed to that of undeveloped land (c). If the expenditure does not cover the whole of the land included in the scheme of land development, the Commissioners may fix upon the part of the land to which the expenditure shall be attributed so as to take it out of the category of undeveloped land liable to the duty (d).

(3) Any sum may be deducted which has been paid to a rating authority in respect of an increase in the value of the land due to any improvements made or action taken by the authority (e).

Rate of duty.

1125. The duty is levied annually for the year ending the 31st March and is payable at any time after the 1st January of the year for which it is charged. The charge is at the rate of $\frac{1}{2}d$. for every 20s. of the net site value (f).

SUB-SECT. 3 - *Recovery of the Duty*Recovery of the duty.

1126. When assessed, the duty becomes a debt due to the Crown from the owner of the land for the time being, and must

(b) Ibid, s. 16, provides for the expenditure being incurred on roads (including paving, curbing, metalling, and other works in connection with roads) or sewers, but it is submitted that any expenditure incurred with a view to taking the land out of the category of undeveloped land liable to the duty would be properly taken into account; and where an urban authority under the Private Street Works Act, 1892 (55 & 56 Vict. c. 57), s. 6 (see title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI, p. 228), expends money in sewerage, levelling, paving, metalling, or flagging, and charges the cost of so doing on the premises fronting, adjoining, or abutting, the expenditure incurred in respect of this charge on those premises would be properly taken into account in the assessment of the duty upon an area embraced in a scheme of land development which includes the premises upon which the charge is made.

This, it is submitted, will not apply unless the land has continued in the condition of undeveloped land for the space of a year, as it is only in such an event that the change in its character would be officially recognised; see the text, p. 575, ante.

(d) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 16 (2) (b). But an appeal lies from the determination of the Commissioners; see p. 582, post.

be borne by that owner notwithstanding any contract to the contrary. If the assessment is for any reason not made within the year for which the duty is charged, the duty becomes payable at the expiration of two months from the date of the assessment; but no duty may be assessed more than three years after the expiration of the year for which it is charged (g)

Un-

Land Duty.

SUB-SECT. 4.—Exemptions

1127. Undeveloped land duty is not charged in the following cases.—

Exemptions
from undeveloped
land duty.

(1) On land, or an interest in land, held by or on behalf of the Crown or of any Government department (h),

(2) On any land the site value of which does not exceed £50 an acre (i);

(3) On any parks, gardens, or open spaces which are open to the public as of right (l);

(4) On any woodlands (l), parks, gardens, or open spaces reasonable access to which is enjoyed by the public or by the inhabitants of the locality, including access regularly enjoyed by any of the naval or military forces of the Crown for the purpose of training or exercise, where in the opinion of the Commissioners the access is of public benefit (m);

(5) On land kept free from buildings in pursuance of a building scheme (n), where it is shown to the Commissioners to be reasonably necessary in the interests of the public, or in view of the character of the surroundings or neighbourhood, that the land should be kept unbuilt upon (o);

(g) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 19 The year here referred to is the financial year ending the 31st March (Interpretation Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict c 63), s 22; Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c 8), s 16 (1)).

(l) As the use of land as woodland is a use for agricultural purposes, woodlands would also be entitled to exemption or abatement as land so used, see pp 551, ante, 578, post.

(m) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c 8), s 17 (3) It is doubtful whether access allowed to a limited number of the inhabitants, e.g., the tenants of the houses built around the open space, would satisfy this condition

(n) A building scheme should be sufficiently definite to give contractual rights within the area for which it is operative to the persons who are parties to it (Reid v. Brokerstaff, [1909] 2 Ch 305, C A; Wallé v. St John, [1910] 1 Ch 325, C. A.) But if the scheme is complete this will be sufficient, notwithstanding that the vendors of the land may have reserved a power to dispense with some of the restrictions of the scheme (Elliston v. Reacher, [1908] 2 Ch 665, C. A., applying Osborne v. Bradley, [1903] 2 Ch. 446, and Formby v. Barker, [1903] 2 Ch 539, C A.).

(o) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c. 8, s. 17 (3) (c). When exemption from the duty has been granted in respect of land under this head, the land cannot afterwards be built over without the consent of the Local Government Board, who may attach to its consent such conditions as it thinks desirable in the circumstances (ibid.). As to the power of parties interested in a building scheme to abandon the scheme, see Whitehouse v. Hugh, [1906] 2 Ch. 283, C. A.

developed
Land Duty

(6) On land bonâ fide used for the purposes of games or other recreation under an agreement with the owner which as originally made could not be determined for a period of at least five years, or where the circumstances are such that the Commissioners are of opinion that the land will continue to be used for these purposes (p);

(7) On land not exceeding one acre in extent occupied together with a dwelling-house, or on land not exceeding five acres occupied with the dwelling-house and used as gardens or pleasure grounds, provided that the site value of the gardens and pleasure grounds together with the site value of the dwelling-house does not exceed twenty times the annual value of the gardens, pleasure grounds, and dwelling-house as assessed to income tax under Schedule A (q);

(8) On any agricultural land occupied and cultivated by the owner, where the total value of the land together with any other land belonging to the same owner does not exceed £500 (r);

(9) On any land held by or on behalf of a rating authority, or any statutory combination representative of two or more local or rating authorities (s);

(10) On any land, or an interest in land, held by or on behalf of any governing body constituted for charitable purposes while the land is used for the purposes for which the body was constituted, and including any land held by a registered society, or by a company incorporated in such circumstances as to be precluded by its Act or charter from dividing any profits amongst its members (t), and

(11) On land held by a statutory company for the purposes of its undertaking, which cannot be appropriated by the company except to those purposes, including land which is intended to be ultimately used for works in connection with the undertaking, although pending the carrying out of these works it is used for other purposes (a).

(q) Ibid, s. 17 (4). If the land occupied with the dwelling-house exceeds five acres in extent, the Commissioners may apportion to the gardens and pleasure grounds, so as to exempt them from the duty, those five acres which in their opinion are most adapted for this use. They may also make any apportionment of the income tax assessment (ibid), and see title INCOME TAX, Vol. XVI, pp. 619 et seq.

(r) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 18. "Owner" here includes a person who holds land under a lease which was originally granted for a term of fifty years or more (ibid). The effect of this exemption is that all the lands of the company other than "superfluous lands" within the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 18),

SUB-SECT. 5—Abatements and Allowances

SECT. 5.

Undeveloped
Land Duty

1128 Abatements and allowances are granted as follows.—

(1) Where agricultural land was, on the 30th April, 1910, held under a lease or agreement entered into before the 30th April, 1909, and the landlord has no power to determine the tenancy of the whole or of any part of the land, exemption from the duty is granted during the original term while the tenancy continues thereunder. If, however, such a power exists, the exemption of that part of the land to which it applies ceases as from the earliest date after the 30th April, 1910 (b), at which the power might have been exercised (c).

(2) In the case of any agricultural land the site value of which exceeds £50 an acre, the duty is chargeable only on the amount by which the site value of the land exceeds the value of the land for agricultural purposes (d).

SECT. 6—*Mineral Rights Duty.*SUB-SECT. 1.—Definition

1129. Mineral rights duty is a charge raised annually in respect of minerals (c) which are the subject of a mining lease (f) or which are being worked by the proprietor (g). Nature of duty.

SUB-SECT. 2—Assessment and Collection of the Duty

1130 The assessment is made upon the rental value of the right to work the minerals, and of the mineral wayleaves (h). Where the right to work the minerals is the subject of a mining lease, this is the amount of rent paid in the last working year by the working lessee, except where the lessor is liable under any Act to pay any sum on account of rates, in which case the rental value is the sum which would be payable as rent if the lessee were liable for these rates instead of the lessor (i). Where the proprietor Basis of assessment s 127 (as to which see title COMPULSORY PURCHASE OF LAND AND COMPENSATION, Vol VI, pp 26 et seq), are not chargeable to undeveloped land duty

(b) The date of the passing of the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c 8), imposing the duty. The charge would, if raised, be subject in any event to an abatement under the next head of allowance, see the text, supra

(d) Ibid., s 17 (2). Where the site value and the value for agricultural purposes differ, provision is made for the keeping of an official record of each, see p 557, ante

(e) As to the general meaning of the term "minerals," see title MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES, Vol XX, pp 502—504. Exemption from the duty is allowed to common clay, common brick clay, common brick earth, or sand, chalk, limestone or gravel (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c 8), s 20 (5)) himself works the minerals, the rental value is the sum which would have been received as rent by him in the last working year if the right to work the minerals had been leased to a working lessee for a term and at a rent and on conditions customary in the district and on the basis of the lessee paying all rates in respect of the minerals (k). The rental value of a wayleave (l) is the amount of rent (m) paid by the working lessee in respect of the wayleave (n).

Returns to Commissioners.

1131. To enable the duty to be assessed, every proprietor of minerals, and every person who receives rent in respect of the right to work minerals or of any mineral wayleave, must furnish the Commissioners when called upon to do so with a return showing the rent received by him or, in the case of a proprietor who himself works the minerals, the particulars of the minerals worked (o).

which would ordinarily have been borne by the lessee, the Commissioners must substitute as the rental value of the right to work the minerals, or the mineral wayleaves as the case may be, the rent which they determine would have been the rent customary in the district had the expenditure been borne by the lessee (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s. 20 (2)). There is a right of appeal by any person aggrieved by the determination of the Commissioners (ibid, s 33 (1)).

(k) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 20 (2) (a), (b), as amended by the Finance Act, 1912 (2 & 3 Geo 5, c 8), s 11 (2). The Commissioners may fix what this rent would be (ibid). Where the circumstances of a district are such that the rent customary in the district cannot be satisfactorily arrived at, the rental value adopted is the rent which would be payable under similar conditions elsewhere (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 24).

(l) "Mineral wayleave" means any wayleave, airleave, waterleave, or right to use a shaft, granted to or enjoyed by a working lessee, whether above or under ground, for the purpose of access to or for the conveyance of the minerals, or the ventilation or drainage of the mine, or otherwise in connection with the working of the minerals (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s. 24). As to wayleaves generally, see title MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES, Vol XX, pp 586, 587.

(m) For the general definition of "rent," see note (f), p 572, ante. In addition to the meaning there given, it includes for the purposes of the charge of duty on mineral rights any fine, premium, or foregift, or any payment in the nature of a fine, premium, or foregift, and where any rent paid is not in money or money's worth the Commissioners may fix its value (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c 8), s 24). For consideration paid other than in money's worth, see title ESTATE AND OTHER DEATH DUTIES, Vol. XIII, pp 277, 278; Wolerton (Baron) v A.-G., [1898] A C. 535, Holwell Iron Co, Ltd v Midland Railway, [1910] 1 K B. 296, C A. For the purpose of the charge of mineral rights duty, rent includes arrears of rent paid during the working year (Beaufort (Duke) v Inland Revenue Commissioners, [1912] 2 K B 281).

(n) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c 8), s 20.

(o) Ibid, s 20 (3). Minerals which are being won for the purpose of being immediately worked, that is, which are being put in such a condition that they can be continuously worked in the ordinary way, are deemed minerals which are being worked (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 24; Lewis v. Fothergill (1869), 5 Ch App 103). And minerals which are being worked are deemed to include all which would in the ordinary course of events be worked by the same colliery, mine, quarry, or open working (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c 8), s 24), provided that, in the case of leased minerals, the lessee has the right to work all the minerals under the lease; see Hodgson v. Field (1806), 7 East, 613, 620. But it is submitted that this would not apply to two sections of a coalfield between which a strip of land intervened, where, but for the strip, the whole of the SUB-SECT. 3 — Recovery of the Duty.

1132. Minerals which are exempt from increment value duty, and are liable only to mineral rights duty, as being, on the 30th April, 1909, the subject of a mining lease or being worked by the proprietor, become liable also to increment value duty if at any time subsequently they cease for a period exceeding two years to be the subject of a mining lease or to be worked, as the case may be (q).

Additional liability to increment value duty.

1133. The duty is charged (r) at the rate of 1s. for every 20s of the net rental value, and when assessed becomes payable at any time after the 1st January in the year for which it is charged (s).

Rate of duty

Duty unpaid is recoverable as a debt due to the Crown from the proprietor of the minerals where the minerals are worked by him, and in any other case from the immediate lessor of the working lessee, and a contract made between the immediate lessor and the working lessee that the latter shall pay the duty is void (t).

By whom payable.

1134. Any proprietor or any lessor of minerals who is liable to pay mineral rights duty in respect of the minerals is entitled to deduct from the sum payable by him any amount paid by him in the same year in respect of annual increment value duty on the minerals (a).

The rent to be returned is the gross rent, including dead rent, royalty, overgettings, and all payments of a similar nature, see forms of notice and return issued by the Commissioners. The notice requiring a return to be made may be sent by post (ibid., s. 31 (4)). It must specify with sufficient particularity the mineral parcel of land for which the return is required, and it must not call upon the person to whom it is addressed to send in the particulars within less than the thirty days allowed by the Act, the person to whom it is addressed may be called upon to furnish the particulars to some person nominated for the purpose by the Commissioners as well as to the Commissioners themselves (*Dyson v. (q) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 22 (2); see pp. 568, 569, ante.

(r) The duty is chargeable on the rent actually received within the working year, including arrears due on account of working in a previous year, but only on the net amount of such arrears less income tax (Beaufort (Duke) v. Inland Revenue Commissioners, [1912] 2 K. B. 281). Super-tax is not to be deducted from the gross assessment for mineral rights duty (ibid.).

But a lease which provided that the duty should be paid by the lessee would not on that account be wholly void, but only as regards the payment of the duty; see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., p. 476, note (b). Mineral
Rights
Duty.

Right of intermediate lessor to deduct duty.

1135. If an immediate lessor, who has paid the duty, is himself a lessee of the right to work the minerals or of the mineral wayleave in respect of which the duty was paid, he may deduct from the rent payable by him a sum equal to the duty chargeable on a rental value of the same amount as the rent which he pays (b). In the same way, anyone from the rent payable to whom such a deduction has been made may himself make a corresponding deduction from any rent payable by him in respect of the right to work the minerals, or of the mineral wayleave (c). Any person refusing to allow a deduction properly claimed for duty so paid is liable to a penalty not exceeding £50 recoverable in the High Court (d).

SECT. 7.—*Appeals to a Referee.*SUB-SECT. 1 —Grounds of Appeal

Grounds of
appeal

1136. Except in cases where the decision of the Commissioners is expressly declared to be final (e), any person aggrieved may appeal against—

- (2) The amount of their assessment of any duty (g),
- (3) A refusal by them to make the allowance claimed where they are competent to make the allowance;

Where the rental value upon which the duty was assessed is a reduced rent substituted for that actually paid by the working lessee, a corresponding reduction must be made in the sum which the immediate lessor is entitled to deduct from the rent payable by him to his lessor (ibid, s 21 (4)). The deduction must be made on the first occasion of the payment of rent next after the date when the duty was paid, see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol XVIII, p 477.

They should be commenced within two years next after the penalty was incurred (ibid, s 22 (2)). As to the right to a penalty so recovered, see A-G. v Exeter Corporation, [1911] 1 K. B 1092.

(f) For definitions of "total value" and "site value," see p 550, ante.

(g) On an appeal under this head the appellant cannot raise the question whether the original total or original site value was correctly fixed (ibid, s. 33 (1) (b)).

(h) The Commissioners have power to apportion any original site value or other site value where a part only of the parcel of land as originally valued is the subject of the charge of duty (ibid, s 29). The unit for valuation purposes is normally each piece of land in separate occupation

SECT 7.

Appeals to a Referee

SUB-SECT 2—Conditions of Appeal.

1137. An appeal against a valuation can only be brought by a person who has formally given notice of objection and who is an owner of the land (j), or a person having a statutory interest in the land; but, where a lessee is the owner, the person entitled to the fee simple reversion, or to a leasehold reversion for a term of more than twenty-one years, may also appeal (k). If the tenant for life and the trustees of settled land exercise a discretion as to whether they will accept a provisional valuation, the court will not interfere at the instance of the reverser (l).

Who may
appeal.

1138. The appellant must give notice in writing of his intention to appeal, setting forth the grounds of the appeal, and he is not entitled to rely at the hearing upon any grounds other than those thus set out (m).

Notice of
appeal

SUB-SECT 3—Constitution of Court

1139. The appeal is to a referee who is selected from a panel of referees appointed by a Reference Committee consisting of the Lord Chief Justice of England, the Master of the Rolls, and the President of the Surveyors' Institution (n).

Referee

(see p 553, ante), or, on the request of an owner of contiguous pieces of land, any number of such pieces the aggregate area of which does not exceed 100 acres (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 26 (1), as amended by the Revenue Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo 5, c 2), s 5). Where a part only of the fee simple of the land is the subject of a transfer or lease, an apportionment of the whole increment value duty payable on the fee simple value must be made, see Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), ss 29 (2), 32 (3), Stat R & O, 1910, p 395, rr 2, 3.

(j) For definitions of "owner," see note (c), p 551, ante, and, for definition of "interest," see note (b), p 558, ante.

(k) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), ss 27, 33. But the referee may, should he see fit, allow any third person who appears to him to be interested in the land, or in the matter of the appeal, to put his case before him in writing, or to take part in any consultation with reference to the appeal (Land Values (Referee) Rules, 1910 (Stat. R & O, 1910, p 398), r. 11).

(m) This may, however, be done with the leave of the referee (Land Values (Referee) Rules, 1910, r 8). In the case of an appeal against a valuation, the notice of appeal must not be given before the expiration of thirty days after notice of objection to the valuation has been given by the appellant, and, if the Commissioners have given him notice that they do not intend to amend their valuation, the notice of appeal must be given within thirty days after such notice. If the appeal is against an assessment, apportionment, refusal to grant an allowance, or other determination of the Commissioners, the notice to appeal must be given within thirty days after the determination of the Commissioners has been notified to the appellant (ibid, r 4).

(n) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), ss. 33 (2), (5), 34. In the case of the death or incapacity of the referee originally selected, or if it is shown to the Reference Committee in any other case that it is expedient to do so, they may, at any time before he has given his decision, revoke the reference to the selected referee and select another referee to try

The referee must, without delay, arrange with the Commissioners and the appellant as to the time and place of hearing, and both parties must furnish him on his request with any documents or other information which it is in their power to give, and which he may require for the purposes of the appeal (p).

1141. The decision of the referee must be in the form contained in the Schedule to the Statutory Rules or to the like effect, and copies of it must be furnished by him to the Reference Committee, the Commissioners, and the appellant (q).

When the Commissioners have received notice of the decision of a referee, they must without delay make such alterations in their records and other documents as may be necessary to give effect to it (r).

Part V.—Customs Duties.

SECT. 1.—*Introductory.*SUB-SECT. 1 —In General

SECT. 1.

Introductory.

1153. “Duties of customs” or “customs duties” are duties or tolls payable upon commodities exported from or imported into this country, as opposed to “excise duties,” which are payable upon articles produced and consumed at home (n)

Duties on exports and imports

1154. Goods liable to a customs duty may be imported into the United Kingdom only by such legal quay, wharf, or other place (o), and subject to such regulations, as the Commissioners of Customs and Excise (p) may from time to time prescribe. Goods landed otherwise are liable to forfeiture (q)

Place of importation

1155. Upon the arrival in any British port of a vessel from beyond the seas, the master or other responsible officer must, within twenty-four hours and before breaking bulk, make report in the prescribed form to the proper officer of customs of the particulars of the cargo (r). Failure to make due report involves a penalty of £100, and the goods not reported may be detained (s).

Report on arrival at port

1156 If the cargo includes dutiable goods, the importer (t) must make due “entry” (n) of such goods on the prescribed form within fourteen days (exclusive of Sundays and holidays) after the arrival

“Entry”

(n) See Street's Law Dictionary, Wharton's Law Lexicon; Murray's New English Dictionary. In modern times customs duties have seldom been imposed upon exported commodities

(o) Legal quays for the lading and unlading of goods are appointed by Treasury Warrant (Harbours, Docks and Piers (Clauses) Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict c 27), s 24, Customs Consolidation Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict c 36), s 11), see title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol VI, p 459. The importation of some classes of goods, such as saccharin, tobacco and wine in cask, is restricted to special ports, see pp 599, note (v), 607, note (p), 609, note (h), post. As to the right of public user of ports, and as to the limitation of importation and exportation in time of war, see title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol VI, pp 460, 461. As to quays and harbours generally, see title WATERS AND WATERCOURSES

(p) As to the Commissioners of Customs and Excise, see pp 544, 545, ante

(q) Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict c 12), s 13. This restriction is not limited to goods liable to a customs duty

(r) Customs Consolidation Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict c 36), s 50. A vessel is considered to have arrived when she comes within the limits of the port (ibid, s 40; and see Algoma Central Railway v R, [1903] A C 478, 1 P C). It is part of the prerogative of the Crown as incident to the duty of customs to appoint officers to gauge all gaugable articles imported into the kingdom (London Corporation v Long (1807), 1 Camp 22). As to officers of customs and excise, see pp 545 et seq., ante

(s) Customs Consolidation Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c 36), s. 51. As to the recovery of customs penalties, see pp 737 et seq., post

(t) “Importer” means, includes, and applies to any owner or other person for the time being possessed of, or beneficially interested in, any goods at and from the time of the importation thereof until the same are duly delivered out of the charge of the officers of customs (Customs Consolidation Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict c 36), s 284)

(u) A customs “entry” of goods is a description of the goods, their origin and destination, given in one of the forms set out in the Customs Consolidation Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict c 36), Sched. B.

of the vessel and before unshipment of the goods. This may be done either by perfect entry or by entry by bill of sight (v).

Perfect entry may be either for goods to be immediately cleared for home use on payment of the duty found to be chargeable thereon (a) or it may be for goods to be deposited in a duty-free warehouse (b).

The entry by bill of sight is a provisional entry of the goods made when the importer or his agent is unable for want of full information to make a perfect entry of the goods (c). Where goods have been landed on a bill of sight, full and perfect entry must be made within three days after the landing (d).

All entries are made in duplicate, and delivered to the collector or other proper officer of customs at the port (e).

1157. Entry having been made, the importer is required within fourteen days of the arrival of the vessel, or such further time as the Commissioners may allow, to land the goods (f), but unless by special permission of the Commissioners they must not be landed or put on shore on Sundays or holidays, nor on any other days except between the hours of 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. from the 1st March to the 31st October, both inclusive, nor except between the hours of 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. during the remainder of the year (g).

1158. All dutiable goods imported must be produced to the proper officer of customs for the purpose of examination and account (h). If not entered, the goods may be conveyed to the King's warehouse, and, if all duties and charges on them are not paid within three months, they may be sold (ibid). This applies to imported goods in general, but neither entry nor report is required of diamonds or bullion, or of lobsters or fresh fish of British taking imported in British ships: the Commissioners may, however, require an account to be rendered of gold, bullion and diamonds (Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict c 12), s 13; Revenue Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict c 46), s 3).

(e) Customs Consolidation Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict c 36), s. 65. Entry is not required for the re-importation of British goods of a kind which, had they been foreign, would have been liable to a duty of customs, provided they are brought back within five years from the date of exportation, that their identity is established to the satisfaction of the Commissioners, and that the drawback, if any, paid upon them is repaid (Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 21), s. 6). In the case of British spirits exported, the excise allowance paid on exportation must also be repaid when they are brought back (Spirits Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict c 24), s 59); and, as to drawbacks and excise allowances, see pp. 697 et seq, post.

SECT. 1.
Introductory.

Any person making a false declaration, or signing or using a false document, or untruly answering questions put to him by any officer of customs as to matters under the direction of the Commissioners is liable to a penalty of £100 (k).

Penalty for false declaration.

1159. Upon completed entry and examination of the goods, the duty found chargeable thereon may be paid, and they may be cleared for home use (l), or they may be deposited in a duty-free warehouse approved for the custody of goods of that kind, in which case payment of the duty is postponed until their delivery for home consumption (m).

Clearance or deposit in duty-free warehouse

SUB-SECT. 2 — Warehousing

1160. When warehoused, the goods are required to be kept so as to be readily accessible, and the warehouse-keeper must produce them when required to do so by an officer of customs and excise (n).

Access to goods

The warehouse-keeper is alone responsible to the proprietor of the goods for their safe keeping while in warehouse, but should goods warehoused be destroyed or embezzled by an officer of customs and excise not acting in the execution of his duty (o) or by the aid or assistance of such officer, the Commissioners may, with the consent of the Treasury, make good the damage suffered by the importer or consignee, provided that the guilty official has been prosecuted to conviction by the importer, consignee, or warehouse-keeper (p).

Liability of warehouse-keeper

Embezzlement by customs officer.

(i) The value to be taken is to be estimated according to the rate and price for which the best goods of the like sort or kind and denomination for which the duty or duties thereon have been paid were sold in London at or about the time of the commission of the offence (Excise Management Act, 1827 (7 & 8 Geo. 4. c. 53), s. 69; Customs Consolidation Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 36), s. 214).

For special provisions as to penalties on the importation of tobacco, see p. 603, post. On a suit for the penalty the jury find the single value (A-G v Hatton (1824), M'Cle. 214, A-G v Goldstein (1905), Times, 26th July). (m) Customs Consolidation Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 36), s. 77. The liability of the importer for the duty on the goods is not done away with by their being warehoused (A-G v Ansted (1844), 12 M. & W. 520). If delivered out of warehouse without being duly entered the goods are forfeited (A-G v Vondiere (1834), 1 Cr. M. & R. 570; Lowe v. A-G (1835), 2 Cr. M. & R. 514, Ex. Ch.).

Discharge from payment of duty

Calculation of duty.

The duty chargeable on the goods is also remitted in such a case; and the Commissioners may remit or return any duties due or paid on goods warehoused or to be warehoused, which are lost or destroyed by unavoidable accident, either on board ship or in warehouse, or in course of removal thereto or receipt therein (q).

1161. While the goods are in the bonded warehouse (i), the duty is secured by bond or such other security as the Treasury or the Commissioners may approve (s)

The liability to pay the duty is discharged if the goods are exported under the regulations, or are so dealt with while in warehouse as to cease to be dutiable (t), or if they are removed under bond to another warehouse (u)

Sub-Sect. 3 — Delivery from Warehouse

1162 The duty payable on goods upon their delivery from warehouse for home consumption is that chargeable according to the account taken on importation, except in the case of tobacco,

Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 24), s. 52, Distillers' Co., Ltd. v. Russell's Trustee (1889), 16 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 479, Bleas v. Cumming & Co's Trustee v. Robertson and Barden (1891), 28 Sc. L. R. 449

(q) Customs Consolidation Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 36), ss. 87, 116 Should the Commissioners not be satisfied that the circumstances were such as to justify their repaying or remitting the duty, an action will not lie to compel them to remit or repay it (Macfarlane v. Inland Revenue Commissioners (1859), 22 Duul. (Ct. of Sess.) 266, and see Leakey and Haug v. Dunlop (1891), 65 L. T. 152)

(r) A bonded warehouse is a secure place approved by the Commissioners of Customs and Excise, for the service of the public, for the deposit of dutiable goods upon which the duty has not been paid (Code, Par. 13)

(s) Customs Consolidation Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 36), s. 13 All bonds and other securities relating to customs are taken to the use of His Majesty. Such bonds may be given by minors, but it is the practice of the Commissioners in the case of a bond given by a minor to require that the sureties shall be of full age. All bonds, except such as are given for securing the due exportation of, or the payment of duty upon, warehoused goods, may, after the expiration of three years from the date thereof, or from the time, if any, limited therein for the performance of the condition thereof, be cancelled by order of the Commissioners (Customs Consolidation Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 36), s. 165). A surety to the bond is entitled to the Crown's priority in bankruptcy (Re Churchill (Lord), Manisty v. Churchill (1888), 39 Ch. D. 174). Stamp duty is payable upon customs and excise bonds at the following rates —

		£ s d

(Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), Sched. I, sub voce). But this does not apply to bonds given for the purpose of obtaining drawback upon dutiable goods exported (ibid), or given in respect of the removal, transhipment, exportation, carriage coastwise, or shipment as stores, of any goods. These bonds are exempt from stamp duty (Finance Act, 1905 (5 Edw. 7, c. 4), s. 4). As to bonds generally, see title BONDS Vol. III, pp. 79 et seq.

(t) As in the case of spirits used in bond to fortify wine or lime or lemon juice, or spirits methylated in bond, or tobacco denatured, see pp. 608, 609, 624, 627, 639, post

(u) Customs Consolidation Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 36), ss. 88, 89. No duty is chargeable on spirits removed under bond to the premises of an authorised methylator; and where spirits, other than methylic alcohol, spirits, wine, figs, currants and raisins, sugar and sugar goods, and molasses, upon which duty is charged upon the account taken on delivery (i).

All duties are calculated according to imperial weight and measure (a).

1163. In the case of goods cleared for home consumption or importation, the rate of duty applicable is that in force at the time when the entry was passed (b). Where goods are warehoused and subsequently delivered for home consumption, the rate of duty applicable is that chargeable at the date of the actual removal of the goods from warehouse (c). If the goods have been delivered under bond for removal to another warehouse to be re-warehoused, and the duty is paid on them prior to re-warehousing, the rate of duty applicable is that in force at the time the duty is actually paid (d).

1164 In the case of restricted goods subject to a duty of customs, which are found or seized within the United Kingdom (e), and in are removed to be used in an art or manufacture under the Finance Act, 1902 (2 Edw. 7 c. 7), s. 8, the only duty chargeable is the difference between the customs duty on the spirits and the excise duty which would be payable on home-made spirits of the same kind, see note (o), p. 624, post. As to delivery from warehouse, see the text, infra.

(a) Customs Consolidation Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 36), s. 98, Revenue Act, 1903 (3 Edw. 7, c. 46), s. 3. If, however, the officer in charge of the warehouse has reasonable grounds for supposing that any deficiency shown on the delivery account of the excepted goods is due to fraud, duty may be charged on such deficiency or any part of it (Customs Consolidation Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 36), s. 99), and when any deficiency not due to natural waste in such goods while in bond is discovered, the Commissioners may call upon the warehouse proprietor forthwith to pay the duty on such deficiency (Revenue Act, 1909 (9 Edw. 7, c. 43), s. 2). In taking accounts, the officer has some if not absolute discretion, provided he does not exercise it improperly (R v Speller (1847), 1 Exch. 401).

(K.B.) 219). As to "entry" of the goods, see note (u), p. 587, ante.

(c) Finance Act, 1900 (63 & 64 Vict. c. 7), s. 9. Where a sale of goods in bond has taken place, and, prior to the delivery, an increase has taken place in the rate of duty, the seller may, in the absence of agreement to the contrary, add to the contract price a sum equal to any amount paid by him in respect of the increase of duty (Conway Brothers and Savage v Mulhern & Co, Ltd (1901), 17 T.L.R. 730); and see title SALE OF GOODS. As to a conditional sale where the duty on the article sold, has been increased, see Newbridge Rhondla Brewery Co v Evans (1902), 86 L.T. 453. If any duty has been reduced or repealed under like circumstances, the buyer is entitled to deduct from the contract price a sum equal to the amount of the decrease. In case of a dispute arising between the parties as to the sum to be added or deducted, the Commissioners may determine the proper amount (Finance Act, 1901 (1 Edw. 7, c. 7), s. 10; Finance Act, 1902 (2 Edw. 7, c. 7), s. 7).

1166. Goods the growth or produce of the Isle of Man may be imported into Great Britain or Ireland on a certificate being furnished of their origin, and on the payment of such a duty as may counterbalance the duty of excise payable on the same class of goods in the United Kingdom, regard being had to any insular duties already paid on them (i).

Administra-

1168. In addition to the functions for which the Commissioners of Customs and Excise are primarily constituted (l), the department undertakes administrative duties at the ports in connection with postal letters and stamps (m), merchant ships (n), infectious diseases of human beings (o), animals (p) and plants (q), the assaying and marking of plate (r), and the importation of copyright

SECT 1
Introductory.

Importation of gold and silver plate.

1169 All gold and silver plate imported into the United Kingdom (c) must be entered to be warehoused and must not be delivered except for private use until it has been assayed, stamped or marked (d). The Commissioners may make regulations for the removal of plate from warehouse in charge of an officer to the nearest assay office to be assayed (e). If upon assay it is found to be of standard quality, it may be stamped and delivered for home use. If it is found not to be of standard quality it must be returned to warehouse in charge of an officer, and may, within one month from the date of such return, be exported under bond; and if it is not exported within this period, or at an earlier date should the importer so desire, any part not exported must be cut, broken, and defaced by the proper officer of customs and delivered from warehouse upon payment of all proper charges (f).

1170. Officers of customs also enforce the laws restricting the exportation of unclean salmon or salmon caught at unreasonable times (g), assist in carrying out certain duties in connection with foreign enlistment (h), and collect pilotage dues on behalf of the Trinity House (i).

SECT. 2.—The Duties.

The Duties.

SUB-SECT. 1 — Beer (j)

Classification
of beer.

1171. For the purposes of the charge of a duty of customs, all beer imported is classified as either (1) mum, spruce or black beer, Berlin white beer and other preparations, whether fermented or unfermented, of a character similar to mum, spruce or black beer, or (2) beers of any other description (l).

The duty
charged

1172. Duty is charged on mum, spruce or black beer, Berlin white beer and other beers of that character, according as the original gravity of the preparation exceeded or did not exceed 1,215 degrees (l). In the case of beers of any other description, the charge is raised by reference to the quantity and the original gravity of the beer (m).

Testing of gravity

1173. The importer of beer is required to deliver to the proper officer of customs of the port a declaration in the prescribed form of the original gravity of the beer to be imported (n). Samples of the beer landed are taken to be officially tested by distillation for original gravity, and the charge for duty is raised on the gravity stated by the importer or that found on testing, whichever is the highest (o). If the gravity as ascertained on testing exceeds by

(j) For the excise duties on beer, see pp 613 et seq, post. For the law relating to licensing, generally, see title INTOXICATING LIQUORS, Vol XVIII, pp 1 et seq.

(k) The importer is required to specify in his entry to which description any beer imported belongs (Import Code, par 45), see the text, infra.

(l) A degree of gravity is taken as equal to the one-thousandth part of the gravity of distilled water at 60° Fahrenheit (Inland Revenue Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict c 20), s 14). For definition of beer, see note (g), p 630, post, and see Faulkner v Price, [1912] 1 K B 404.

(m) The rates at present in force are — £ s. d.

(n) Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict c 12), s 5 (1). The beer may be delivered from official custody after it has been gauged and sampled, but before the strength is tested, if the importer makes a deposit to cover the duty and hands in a "request note," as in the case of perishable goods, and makes perfect entry and pays the duty chargeable when ascertained. It may also be delivered on payment of duty on an assumed gravity of 1.055 degrees, an adjustment being made when the test of the sample has been completed (Import Code, par 55).

(o) Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict c 12), s. 5 (2). The original gravity is obtained by distillation of a sample in the manner prescribed in the Inland Revenue Act, 1880 (43 & 44

2 per cent. that declared by the importer, the beer is forfeited, and if the gravity so ascertained exceeds the gravity declared by more than 5 per cent., the importer or person bringing the beer in and the person declaring are liable to a penalty of £100 (p).

SECT 2
The Duties.

1174. The quantity of beer to be charged is calculated to the gallon, and the duty is assessed and paid before delivery of the beer from official custody, except where entry has been made by bill of sight and a deposit made to cover the duty which might be found to be due when the testing is completed (q). Calculation of Charge.

1175. When beer which has been imported into Great Britain or Ireland is subsequently exported as merchandise or shipped for use as ships' stores or removed to the Isle of Man, a repayment of the duty paid on import is made by way of drawback (r). Drawback on subsequent export

SUB-SECT 2—Chicory.

1176. Imported chicory is chargeable with a customs duty, which varies according as the chicory is raw, or kiln-dried only, or is roasted to such a degree as to be fit for grinding (s). Chicory.

When imported, chicory may be warehoused in a bonded warehouse, either for exportation as merchandise or as ship's stores or to be subsequently delivered for home consumption (a); whenever delivered for home consumption, duty must be paid on the account taken at the landing (b). Warehousing and payment of duty.

(q) Customs Consolidation Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict c 36), s 58 In such a case it is the practice to require a deposit to be made to cover the duty calculated on an original gravity of 1,110 degrees The importer does not cease to be liable for the full duty (A-G v Hurel (1843), 11 M & W 585). The rate of drawback at present in force is —

regulations

1188. The Commissioners may make regulations as to the importation, labelling, wrapping and sale of any saccharine, including substances of a like nature or use, and may by these regulations apply to the labels any of the laws relating to stamps (i). Any person importing saccharine contrary to such regulations, or selling, exposing for sale, offering or keeping for sale, saccharine so imported, is liable to a penalty of £50, and the saccharine in respect of which the offence is committed is forfeited (i).

Where an offence is committed in respect of a quantity of saccharine which does not exceed 5 lbs, justices may try the case summarily without any information or direction of the Commissioners, and, on conviction, may impose a penalty of not less than the single, nor more than the treble, value of the goods, including the duty, and if the offence is in respect of more than 5 lbs the offender is liable to a penalty of treble the duty-paid value of the goods or of £100 at the option of the Commissioners. If more than 20 lbs of saccharine are in question the justices have no power to mitigate the penalty (a).

1189 Where goods, other than beer, in which any duty-paid saccharine has been used are exported or deposited in a bonded warehouse for use as ship's stores or are removed to the Isle of Man, a drawback equal to the duty paid on the saccharine used is paid to the person exporting or depositing (b).

Importation regulations

1191. Spirits, other than cordials or perfumed or medicinal spirits, may not be imported unless in ships of 40 tons burden at least, and in casks or other vessels capable of containing 9 gallons at least, or in glass or stone bottles which are properly packed in cases (f).

1192 Upon importation, the spirits may be at once cleared for home consumption on payment of the duty, or they may be warehoused in an approved bonded warehouse duty free (a). Spirits warehoused may be used in bond without payment of duty in fortifying wine or lime or lemon juice (b). They may also be methyiated duty free under the regulations (c), or may be sent without payment of duty under bond for exportation as merchandise or for ship's stores (d). They may be removed for use in an art or manufacture under the Finance Act, 1902 (e), s. 8, or for methylation at the premises of a licensed methylator (m); but in the case of spirits delivered for use in this way, or for methylation, payment is required to be made before delivery of the difference between the customs duty on the spirits at the time of delivery and the duty of excise which would be chargeable upon spirits of the same kind (n).

Clearance and use of spirits duty free.

1193. Spirits may be operated upon in bond under the regulations, and the duty remitted upon any spirits lost in the course of the operation where the loss does not exceed 1 per cent. in the case of spirits racked or blended and 2 per cent. in the case of spirits bottled (o), and the Commissioners may, on the request of the

Where foreign spirits which have been bottled in bond are subsequently delivered for home consumption, an additional duty of 3*d* for every one dozen quart bottles, or two dozen pint bottles, is levied on them (Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1880 (43 Vict. c. 14), s. 3). (l) 2 Edw. 7, c. 7. Spirits removed for this purpose must not be less than 9 bulk gallons; but this does not apply to absolute alcohol or to methyl alcohol purified so as to be potable, which may be removed from warehouse in the original packages as imported (Regulations of the Commissioners, August, 1906).

1194. Upon delivery of spirits from warehouse for any purpose, an account of them must be taken, and where the delivery is for home consumption the charge for duty is to be raised on the quantity at proof then found, unless it should appear that any deficiency between the delivery account and the account taken on landing was caused by illegal or improper means (q). In the case of delivery for exportation, no such deficiency nor any part thereof is to be charged with duty, unless the officers of customs have reasonable ground to suppose that it arose from illegal abstraction (r).

British spirits
re-imported

1195. British spirits re-imported are treated as foreign, and duty is charged on them at the appropriate rate accordingly, unless they are brought in on the issue of a "bill of store," and on repayment of the excise allowance granted on the exportation (s).

SUB-SECT. 10 — Substances Prepared with Spirits

(q) Customs Consolidation Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 36), s. 98. Allowances are in practice granted on all spirits except bottled spirits on delivery from warehouse according to a fixed scale. The rate allowed depends partly upon the content of the cask containing the spirits, and partly upon the time that has elapsed since the landing account upon which the spirits were warehoused was taken. All deficiencies in excess of the scale are charged with duty. Where spirits have been racked, vatted, or blended while in warehouse, the account taken at the completion of the operation is substituted for the landing account. Where any deficiency found in warehoused goods cannot be accounted for by natural waste or other legitimate cause, the occupier of the warehouse may be called upon to pay the duty forthwith upon it (Revenue Act, 1909 (9 Edw. 7, c. 13), s. 2).

A "bill of store" (Form No. 39, sale) is required in all cases of dutiable British goods exported and brought back into the United Kingdom if they are not to be regarded as foreign goods and liable to duties of customs accordingly. It is issued in the manner and form directed by the Commissioners, who must be satisfied that the goods are of British manufacture. It may be either for goods on which duty has been paid prior to exportation and on which no drawback has been received, or for goods on which drawback might have been received. In the case of goods of the latter class repayment of the drawback must be made before the bill is issued. The goods must in all cases have been brought back within five years from the time of exportation (Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 21), s. 6).

Charge on delivery for home consumption. 1200. On delivery from the bonded warehouse for home consumption, duty is chargeable according to the quantity ascertained either at the time of landing or of actual delivery (b). Where the sugar is removed under bond duty free from a warehouse to a sugar refinery or factory, it is liable on delivery for home consumption from the refinery or factory to duty at the same rate as that which would be payable on importation (c).

Drawback on molasses. 1201. Repayment of duty by way of drawback is made upon molasses produced by a refiner of sugar in Great Britain or Ireland from sugar on which duty has been paid on importation, and delivered by him to be used solely for purposes of food for stock (d), and in respect of molasses produced by a refiner otherwise than from non-duty paid sugar in a bonded refinery (e) and delivered by him to a licensed distiller for use in the manufacture of spirits (f).

Drawback on exports, deposits for ship's stores etc. A drawback equal to the duty on sugar of the like polarisation is also payable upon sugar which has passed a refinery in Great Britain or Ireland, and on which the proper import duties have been paid, when it is exported, deposited in warehouse for ship's stores, or removed to the Isle of Man (g).

SUB-SECT. 1.—Excise Entries.

Duty to make an entry.

1216. A licensed excise trader is generally required to deliver an entry of his business premises to the proper surveying officer of customs and excise; and any person carrying on a trade or business for the carrying on of which an excise entry is required without having made an entry is liable to a penalty of £200^(v). Not more than one entry is to be in force for the same premises at the same time^(p).

Definition of
"entry"

1217. An "entry" is a statement in a prescribed form of the premises and plant to be used in the business, distinguishing in each case, by reference to a mark or number, each place, room, vessel or utensil, and defining the use to which each is to be put^(q).

By whom
made.

1218. The entry must be made in the name of the real owner or owners of the business^(r). In the case of a corporation, the entry is to be under the seal of the corporation and signed by the chairman or a director, or by the secretary or other principal officer^(s).

Any British wine manufactured in conformity with the regulations may not by reason of the admixture with it of foreign wine be exposed for sale, sold, or sent out otherwise than under the designation of a British wine. As to provisions affecting makers of sweets, see p. 643, post, wine dealers and retailers, pp. 680 et seq., post, rectifiers and compounders, p. 641, post, and dealers in and retailers of spirits, pp. 667 et seq., post.

(r) But the ostensible owner is liable to the revenue authorities as if he were the real owner. A minor cannot make a legal entry (Excise Management Act, 1827 (7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 53), s. 20). The Commissioners may allow a married woman to make entry (Excise Management Act, 1841 (4 & 5 Vict. c. 20), s. 7).

(s) Revenue Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 46), s. 15. Both the person or persons signing and the corporation are bound by the entry (ibid.).

1219. An officer of customs and excise is authorised to go upon and examine any entered premises and to take account of any dutiable commodities he may find there (t). The places and utensils entered must not be used for any other purpose than that specified in the entry (a). A trader making entry is responsible for the proper conduct of the business carried on under his licence (b).

SUB-SECT 3—Recovery Back of Duty Paid

1222. When duties which are not properly exigible are paid to the revenue they cannot, in the absence of express statutory provision, be afterwards recovered back as money not due and paid under a mistake (e); nor can they be recovered from the individual officers to whom they were paid (f).

Only recoverable by statute

And where an excise licence ceases to be in force owing to the justices' licence on which it was granted having expired, repayment is made of a proportional part of the licence duty, except where the justices' licence was forfeited on a conviction of the holder (Excise Licences Act, 1825 (6 Geo 4, c 81), s 22; Finance Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo 5, c 48), s. 7). SUB-SECT. 4—Signboards.

1223. Sellers of tobacco, retailers of sweets, and all excise traders who make entry of their premises, with the exception of methylated spirit retailers, are required to put up signboards over the premises occupied by them for the purposes of their respective trades. The signboard must set out in legible letters at least one inch long the full name of the trader and that he is licensed to carry on the trade to which his licence applies (g).

SUB-SECT. 5—Grant of Licences.

By whom licences are granted.

1224. Excise licences, with the exception of those transferred to the county councils in England and Wales under the Finance Act, 1908 (h), s. 6, are granted by the Commissioners of Customs and Excise or by such persons as are appointed by them for that purpose (i).

Payment with licence
duty.

1225. In the case of an intoxicating liquor licence for consumption on the premises, granted for the first time since the 15th August, 1904, other than a licence for the sale of wine alone or of sweets alone, the compensation fund charge at the appropriate rate must be paid in full together with and as part of the duty payable on the grant of the excise licence (j).

SUB-SECT. 7—Effect on Contracts of Violation of Revenue Statutes.

Effect of intention of legislature

1226. In considering the effect on the validity of a contract of failure to comply with a revenue statute, regard must be had to the intention of the legislature in making the statute. If the object of the statute was the benefit of the revenue only, the contract is not voided by failure to comply with its provisions. If, on the other hand, the statute has in view the advancement of some matter of social or public interest, a contract entered into in contravention of its provisions cannot be sued upon (k).

The Duties.SUB-SECT. 1.—Beer (l)

1227. Beer duty is payable at the current rate (m) by a brewer of beer for sale (hereafter referred to as a “brewer for sale”), and in some cases by a brewer of beer not for sale (n) (hereafter referred to as a “brewer not for sale”), on the beer brewed or presumed to have been brewed by him. Beer duty.

The charge for beer duty payable by a brewer for sale is raised either upon the quantity of the worts (o) actually produced in each brewing, or upon the quantity of the worts deemed to have been produced from the materials used in the brewing, whichever is the greater (p). Where a brewer not for sale is chargeable with beer duty, the charge for duty is always raised on the worts deemed to have been produced from the materials used (q). Basis of charge.

1229. The charge on the worts actually produced is calculated on the quantity and gravity of the worts of each brewery as declared by the brewer in his entry in the official book (r) kept by him for the purpose, or as found by the excise officer who visits the brewery after Calculation of charge on worts.

(m) The rate at present in force is 7s 9d for every barrel of 36 gallons, calculated at the standard gravity of 1,055 degrees, and so in proportion for any difference in quantity or gravity (Inland Revenue Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict c 20), s 11, Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict c 7), s 3, Finance Act, 1896 (59 & 60 Vict. c. 28), s 8, Finance Act, 1900 (63 & 64 Vict c 7), s 6).

(n) For the cases where beer duty is payable by a brewer not for sale, see p 632, post.

(o) For the meaning of “worts,” see note (b), p 623, post.

(p) Inland Revenue Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict c 20), s 13 (3); Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict c 7), s 3 (1). Whether the charge is upon the actual produce or the deemed produce, a deduction from the gross quantity of 6 per cent for waste is first allowed (Inland Revenue Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict c 20), s 13 (3) (b)); compare the text, infra (as to materials charge). The Commissioners of Customs and Excise may cause the charge for duty to be made up at the close of each month in respect of all brewings during that month (Inland Revenue Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 20), s 16).

(q) Inland Revenue Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c 20), s. 13 (1); but subject to a deduction of 6 per cent for waste (Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 12), s 15 (1)); compare the text, infra (as to materials charge).

(r) For the official book kept by a brewer for sale, and the entries to be made therein, see p. 631, post.

SECT. 2. the brewing is completed and the brewer's entry has been made, whichever gives the higher charge (s). The gravity entered by the brewer must in all cases be the true original gravity of the worts before fermentation (t). Where fermentation has not commenced, the original gravity is the gravity as shown by the saccharometer and tables approved by the Commissioners of Customs and Excise (u), where fermentation has commenced, the original gravity may be ascertained by distillation (a). If at any time after the worts of a brewery have been collected, and the account of them has been entered in the official book by the brewer, their original gravity is found to exceed by 5 degrees that entered by the brewer, such worts are deemed to be the produce of a fresh brewing, and the brewer is charged beer duty in respect of them accordingly (b).

Materials
charge.

1230. A brewer of beer is deemed to have obtained 36 gallons of worts at the standard gravity (c) when he has used in brewing — either 81 lbs. weight of malt or corn (other than rice, flaked maize, maize grits, and corn similarly prepared or dressed (d)); or 56 lbs. weight of sugar (e), or of rice, flaked maize, maize grits, or corn similarly prepared (f).

When duty levied on materials
charge

1231. Beer duty is only levied on the materials charge when this exceeds the worts charge by more than 4 per cent., and such levy is subject to a deduction, in the case of a brewer for sale, of 4 per cent from the gross materials charge as well as to the further deduction of 6 per cent. for waste (g). In the case of a brewer not for sale, the only allowance made is that of 6 per cent. for waste (h).

(s) Inland Revenue Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict c 20), s 13 (3). But this account is not conclusive in the event of collusion between the officer and the brewer (A-G v Brewster (1795), 2 Anst 560).

(t) Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1885 (48 & 49 Vict c 51), s 6.

(u) Inland Revenue Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict c 20), s 14 (1). The approved saccharometer and tables must be such that a degree of gravity indicated on the instrument shall be equal to one-thousandth part of the gravity of distilled water at 60° Fahrenheit.

(a) Ibid, s 15, Sched I.

(b) Ibid, s 24.

(c) Ibid, ss 12-13.

(d) The Commissioners of Customs and Excise may determine when corn is so prepared or dressed as not to be properly classed with malt or corn for the purposes of the materials charge (Finance Act, 1896 (59 & 60 Vict c 28), s 10). They may also, in the case of a brewer for sale, make such a deduction from the quantity of worts chargeable in respect of the materials as the special character of the materials seems to require (Inland Revenue Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict c 20), s. 13 (4)). This power has been exercised in the case of syrups, glucose, saccharum and dressed grain, which under the regulations are now deemed to produce one barrel of beer at the standard gravity for either 84 lbs of liquid syrups of a density not exceeding 13 lbs 2 oz the gallon, or 68 lbs of similar syrup of a density not exceeding 14 lbs the gallon, or 64 lbs of solid glucose, saccharum or dressed grain.

(e) Inland Revenue Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict c 20), s. 12.

(h) Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict c. 12), s. 15 (1).

1232. The duty on beer brewed by a brewer for sale is due immediately the excise officer has taken his account of the worts produced in a brewing, but the Commissioners of Customs and Excise may allow the payment to be deferred to a date not later than the fifteenth day of the month succeeding that in which the duty was charged (v). Where duty is payable by a brewer not for sale, the Commissioners may fix the date at which it is to be paid (l).

SECT 2.
The Duties.
When duty is payable.

1233. When any beer duty remains unpaid after the time within which it is payable, the collector of customs and excise for the district may issue his warrant authorising any person to distrain all beer and brewing materials, vessels and utensils in possession of the brewer, or of any person on his behalf or holding them in trust for him, and to sell them by public auction in satisfaction of the claim for duty (l).

Power of distress and sale.

1234. Where any worts, beer, or materials in respect of which duty was paid are destroyed by fire or other unavoidable cause while on the brewery premises, the Commissioners of Customs and Excise are empowered to repay the duty on proof to their satisfaction of the loss (m).

Repayment of duty on loss of materials.

1235 Repayment of beer duty by way of drawback is allowed on all beer exported as merchandise abroad or to the Channel Islands or the Isle of Man, or shipped as ship's stores. The duty repayable is calculated at the rate in force at the time of shipment, and upon the quantity and original gravity of the beer actually shipped (n).

Repayment on exports etc

SUB-SECT 2 -- Chicory

1236 Chicory duty is the charge at the current rate paid by an authorised chicory dryer on the raw or kiln-dried chicory

Nature of the charge.

(l) Ibid., s 33 (2) In practice beer duty charged against a brewer not for sale is payable quarterly in January, April, July, and October

(b) Ibid., s 17 (1) Six days' previous notice of the sale must be given, and the brewer is entitled at any time prior to the day fixed for the sale to redeem the whole or any part of the goods distrained upon by paying to the collector their true value (ibid., s 17 (3)). For the general power to distrain for duties in arrears, see Excise Management Act, 1841 (4 & 5 Vict c 20), s 24 As to the general law of distress, see title DISTRESS, Vol XI, pp 115 et seq

(m) Inland Revenue Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict c 20), s 18 The Commissioners may also remit duty charged but not yet paid Their decision as to whether the loss is due to some unavoidable cause is final, and not subject to review by the courts (Macfarlane v Inland Revenue Commissioners (1859), 22 Dunl (Ct of Sess.) 266)

Where a certificate of landing is required, as in the case of beer exported to the Isle of Man, drawback is not payable until the certificate is produced (Inland Revenue Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict c 20), s 39 (3)). Drawback is not payable in respect of beer exported, unless at the time the beer is shipped it is worth at least the duty of excise chargeable on it (Excise Drawback Act, 1817 (57 Geo 3, c 87), s. 10) Nor may drawback be paid after the expiration of two years from the date of shipment of the beer (Finance Act, 1895 (58 & 59 Vict c 16), s. 7). As to drawbacks generally, see pp. 697 et seq., post.

Spec. 1. dried by him or received by him from another authorised
The Duties. dryer (o).

How charged.

1237. The duty is charged on the quantity delivered for home consumption from the dryer's warehouse, according to the account taken at the time of delivery by an officer of excise (p). The chicory of which account is taken may have been dried by any means and to any degree less than that at which it would be in a fit state to grind into powder (q).

Delivery account and payment of duty.

1238. An account of the quantities delivered from warehouse must be made up at the expiration of every six weeks or such other period as the Commissioners of Customs and Excise may fix. The duty is then payable on demand, and failure to pay in accordance with notice given to him subjects the dryer to a penalty of double the amount of the duty (r).

SUB-SECT 3—Liquors supplied to Clubs

Rate of duty

1239. A duty of 6d per pound is levied on the amount of the purchases of intoxicating liquor supplied in or to a club, or on behalf of a club to its members (s).

How charged

1240 The duty is charged on the statement, which the secretary of the club is required to make in the January of each year, of the purchases during the preceding calendar year (t).

(o) The rate at present in force is 12s 1d per cwt, and so in proportion for any greater or less quantity than 1 cwt (Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict c 20), s 5). A licence need not be taken out by a dryer of chicory, but no one is allowed to dry chicory, or to have in his possession more than 14 lbs of dried chicory, unless he has made entry of his premises and plant with the proper officer of excise, and provided on the premises a secure warehouse to be approved by the Commissioners of Customs and Excise (Excise Act, 1860 (23 & 24 Vict c 113), s 8, Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict c 41), s 4). The business of a dryer of chicory and of a roaster of chicory or coffee cannot be carried on upon the same or communicating premises (Excise Act, 1860 (23 & 24 Vict c 113), s 18). As to customs duties on chicory, see p 595, ante.

(p) Excise Act, 1860 (23 & 24 Vict c 113), s 15.

(q) Ibid s 21.

(r) Ibid, s 15. The special official procedure established by the Excise Management Acts for securing the duties on excisable commodities applies also to chicory duty (Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict c 20), s 5). As to these, see p 737, post. In practice the account is made up to the end of each calendar month in respect of the deliveries which took place within the month.

(s) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 48. The charge is not limited to registered clubs, although the rules as to registration must in effect confine its levy to such clubs. The clerk who keeps the register of clubs is required to send notice to the Commissioners of Customs and Excise of the entry of any new club on his register and of any case of a club ceasing to be registered (ibid, s. 48 (6)). As to clubs generally, see title CLUBS, Vol IV, pp 405 et seq.

(t) Finance (1900-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s. 48 (1). The Commissioners may make regulations for assessing and charging the duty payable in the case of a club which is discontinued as a registered club during the year. By these the secretary is required to furnish the particulars within seven days of the discontinuance of the club (Stat R. & O., 1910, p 404).

The secretary must furnish the statement upon service on him of a notice in writing requiring him to do so (a). If no statement has been delivered by the 1st February in any year, the supply of intoxicating liquor in the club is to be treated, so long as the failure to furnish the statement continues, as a sale of intoxicating liquor without licence (b).

SECT. 2.
The Duties.
Secretary's statement.

1241. If, by the 1st March in any year, the duty due remains unpaid, the collector of customs and excise may, after notice in writing has been served on the secretary requiring payment, issue his warrant authorising distraint to be made on the club premises for the duty due and unpaid (c).

Power of distress in default of payment.

SUB-SECT 4.—Coffee Substitutes and Mixtures.

1242. This duty is charged, according to the scale in force and the weight of the package, upon substances which are sold as substitutes for coffee or chicory, and upon all mixtures of coffee or chicory with one or more of such substances or with any other ingredient except chicory or coffee (d).

How the duty is charged.

1243. The substance or mixture must be made up in packets of prescribed weight and labelled (e).

Packets and labels.

(a) The secretary is liable to a fine not exceeding £20, recoverable summarily, if he fails to furnish the statement as required, and, in the case of a second or subsequent offence, to imprisonment with or without hard labour for a term not exceeding one month or to a fine not exceeding £50, or to both, and if he knowingly delivers an untrue statement, he is liable, on summary conviction, to imprisonment with or without hard labour for a term not exceeding three months, or to a fine not exceeding £50, or to both (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 48 (2), Stat R & O, 1910, p 404). As to procedure before courts of summary jurisdiction, see title MAGISTRATES, Vol XIX, pp 589 et seq. The notice requiring the statement may be sent by post addressed to the club (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c 8), s 48). In case of a change of secretary between the date when the notice requiring the statement was served and the 31st January, the secretary in office on the latter date would be the person liable (Booth v. Weightman (1904), 91 L T 532).

(b) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s. 48 (4). As to unlicensed sales of intoxicating liquors, see title INTOXICATING LIQUORS, Vol XVIII, pp 107 et seq, 113 et seq.

(c) The proceeds of the distress must be sold by public auction after six days' previous notice has been given of the sale. Any surplus remaining after the discharge of the claim for duty and the costs and expenses of the distress and sale must be handed over to the secretary for the benefit of the club (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 48 (3)).

(d) Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict c 41), ss 5, 6. The rate now in force is $\frac{3}{4}$ d for every $\frac{1}{2}$ lb of the substitute or mixture. The duty is not charged upon mixtures of pure coffee with pure chicory. Compliance with the Act requiring the payment of the duty is no answer to a charge under the Acts relating to the adulteration of food (ibid, s 6 (4)). As to the adulteration of coffee and chicory, see title FOOD AND DRUGS, Vol XV., p 63. As to the customs duties on coffee and chicory, see pp. 596, 596, ante.

(e) Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict c 41), s 6 (1). Labels denoting the duty are issued by the Commissioners of Customs and Excise in sheets containing either halfpenny or penny labels. No one is allowed to have in his possession labels which have already been used (ibid s. 7.), and see, further, title FOOD AND DRUGS, Vol XV,

SECT. 2. The label must be affixed to the packet before or at the time the substance is sold, exposed, or made up for sale, or is delivered out of the custody of the person making or importing the substance (f).⁴

SUB-SECT. 5—Glucose.

Nature of the duty. 1244 Glucose duty is the charge at the current rate (g) payable by a licensed manufacturer of glucose upon the glucose actually made or deemed to have been made by him.

How charged 1245. The Commissioners of Customs and Excise may determine whether the duty shall be charged on the final product or on the quantity of glucose deemed by them to be capable of being obtained from the saccharine solution collected during the process of manufacture in a fixed and secured receiver (h). They are also authorised to apply to the payment and recovery of the duty upon glucose the provisions of the Act, governing the payment and recovery of the duty upon beer (i).

Repayment and remission of duty. 1246. Repayment or remission of glucose duty may be granted in the case of an accidental destruction of glucose on the premises of a glucose manufacturer; and repayment of the duty may be made by way of drawback on glucose exported as merchandise or shipped as stores. Where goods other than beer, in the manufacture or preparation of which glucose has been used, are exported or shipped as stores, a drawback is allowed equal to the duty on the quantity of glucose used in the manufacture or preparation (h).

(h) Finance Act, 1901 (1 Edw 7, c 7), s 9, applying the Acts relating to the excise duty on beer (as to which see pp 613 et seq, ante). The Commissioners by regulations have provided that the duty is to be charged on the quantity of saccharine solution in the receiver by relation to gravity as ascertained by an approved saccharometer and tables, one degree of gravity thus found being taken to be equal to one thousandth part of the gravity of distilled water at 60° Fahrenheit. The quantity thus determined is subject to a deduction of 10 per cent for waste in the subsequent stages of manufacture.

(i) Finance Act, 1901 (1 Edw 7, c 7), s 9. Under this power the Inland Revenue Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict c 20), ss 16—18, 26—30, and 37—39, have been made to apply to the duty on glucose; see p 615, ante.

(k) Finance Act, 1901 (1 Edw 7, c 7), s 7. The Treasury must be satisfied as to the quantity of glucose claimed to have been used. As to drawbacks in general, see pp 697 et seq, post. The following scale of drawback has been adopted for caramels made from British-made glucose:—

(1) Solid caramel, black, made from solid glucose	the cwt.	s	d.

SUB-SECT. 6—Medicine Labels (l).

SECT. 2.

The Duties.

1247. Medicine label duty is charged at an ad valorem rate (m) on every inclosure containing certain drugs, or other preparations usually termed “proprietary medicines” (n).

1248. The duty is chargeable whenever any person makes, prepares, exposes for sale, or sells such a medicine, and in doing so either has or claims to have any secret or art in making or preparing it, or any exclusive right to make or prepare it, or if it is or has been made or sold under the authority of a patent, or if, by means of some document, it is held out as a specific for the prevention, cure, or relief of any human ailment (o). When duty is chargeable

The duty is payable by the maker or first vendor before the preparation is sold, exposed for sale, or delivered out of his possession (p). By whom payable

The Duties.

(2) Known admitted and approved remedies sold by a duly qualified surgeon, chemist or druggist, where the label contains an adequate indication of the ingredients, or the medicine is prepared in accordance with a formula in the British Pharmacopœia or other recognised book of reference, and this is stated on the label (s),

(3) Ginger and peppermint lozenges and other articles of confectionery, unless sold as medicines (t),

(4) Artificial mineral waters containing effervescing ingredients, and the compositions from which these waters are made (u).

Sub-Section 7 — Motor Spirit

Nature of the charge.

1250. Motor spirit duty is a charge at the current rate (i) payable by every licensed manufacturer of motor spirit upon any inflammable hydrocarbon or mixture containing a hydrocarbon which in the opinion of the Commissioners of Customs and Excise (a) is capable of providing reasonably efficient motive power for a motor car.

Time and manner of charge.

1251. The Commissioners may make regulations as to the time and manner in which motor spirit duty shall be charged and recovered, and they may for this purpose apply any of the provisions of the law in force for securing the duty on saccharine and on spirits (b).

Exemptions and remissions

1252 Duty is not chargeable on motor spirit used for other purposes than supplying motive power to motor cars (c) Half the

(r) Medicines Stamp Act, 1812 (52 Geo. 3, c. 150), see p. 660, post. This exemption does not extend to tinctures (Smith v. Mason & Co., [1894] 2 Q. B. 363).

The two preceding exemptions (see the text, supra) do not in terms apply to limited companies, but in practice they are extended to companies holding patent medicine licences.

(t) Stamp Act, 1815 (55 Geo. 3, c. 184), s. 54. The recommendation for use as a medicine beneficial for the cure of some human ailment need not be affixed to or delivered with the medicine (Smith v. Mason & Co., supra), nor need it be direct (Ransom v. Sanguinetti (1903), 67 J. P. 219). An article of food may be a medicine (Harding v. Midge, (1909), 101 L. T. 459).

The account for duty is raised against the manufacturer on the quantity of motor spirit collected in an approved fixed and gauged vessel into which all motor spirit produced by distillation must run direct from the still. The manufacturer is required to declare this quantity in an official book kept on the premises. The duty when charged may, if unpaid, be recovered by summary distress on an official warrant, as in the case of spirit duty payable by a distiller (Stat. R. & O., 1910, p. 679). As to such recovery by distress, see p. 625, post.

Where duty-paid spirit has been used for a purpose entitling to exemption or allowance in respect of the duty, the person who used the spirit is entitled to repayment in whole or in part of the duty which has been paid (g).

SECT 2
The Duties

1253 If any maker of motor spirit fails to pay within the prescribed time and prescribed manner the duty with which he is charged, he incurs a fine of £20 and forfeits double the duty (h).

Penalty for non-payment of duty.

SUB-SECT 8 — Playing Cards.

1254. The duty on playing cards is charged at the current rate (i) upon each pack of fifty-two cards made fit for sale and use in the United Kingdom.

Nature of charge

The cards, before being sent out by the maker, must be made up in packs and inclosed in stamped wrappers, to which an excise label is securely affixed, indicating the duty (j).

Packing and wrappers

Any person may sell second-hand cards without wrappers to a licensed maker of cards (k).

Exemptions from wrappers

Toy cards not exceeding $1\frac{1}{4}$ inches in length and $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches in width may be sold without wrappers (l).

1255. Any maker of cards who sends out or delivers from his premises, except for exportation, any cards not in packs and enclosed in stamped wrappers incurs a penalty of £100 (l).

SECT. 2.

SUB-SECT. 9.—*Railway Passenger Fares.The Duties.

Nature of charge

Fares not chargeable.

1256. Railway duty is a percentage charged upon all fares exceeding 1*d.* a mile paid by passengers upon railways other than light railways (m).

Fares are deemed not to exceed 1*d.* a mile if they do not exceed 1*d.* for a journey of a distance less than a mile, and, if the distance, being more than a mile, is any number of complete half-miles and a fraction not less than a quarter-mile, they do not exceed $\frac{1}{2}$ d. for the half and $\frac{1}{2}$ d. for the fraction. If an Act allows special charges upon any part of a railway, that part is for the purposes of the duty regarded as a separate railway (n).

SUB-SECT. 10.—Saccharine.

Nature of charge.

Regulations as to duty.

1257. Saccharine duty is a duty at the current rate charged upon saccharine and substances of a like nature or use made by a licensed manufacturer of saccharine (o).

The Commissioners of Customs and Excise may make regulations for the payment, recovery, remission, and repayment of the duty on saccharine, and, for this purpose, apply any of the enactments relating to the duty on beer (p).

Any manufacturer of saccharine who fails to comply with the

The rates at present in force are 5 per cent. on fares other than urban traffic, and 2 per cent. in the case of fares exceeding 1*d.* a mile between stations certified by the Board of Trade as within the same urban district. But, if proper third-class accommodation and workmen's trains are not provided, the Commissioners of Customs and Excise may charge 5 per cent. on urban fares (Cheap Trains Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 34), s. 3). Railway passenger duty is not payable in respect of the carriage of royal forces under a duly signed route or order, see title RAILWAYS AND CANALS, Vol. XXIII, pp. 639, 699. As to the accounts of passenger fares to be rendered to the Commissioners (now the Commissioners of Customs and Excise), see Railway Passenger Duty Act, 1842 (5 & 6 Vict. c. 79), s. 4; Cheap Trains Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 34), s. 7, title RAILWAYS AND CANALS, Vol. XXIII, p. 640. In practice these accounts are sent in within ten days of the second month succeeding that in which the charge arose. A lessee of a railway is in the position of a proprietor, and must furnish accounts (Cheap Trains Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 34), s. 8).

(n) Ibid., s. 4. In every case the total amount paid by the passenger for accommodation is that on which duty is charged (A-G. v London and North Western Rail. Co (1881), 6 Q. B. D. 216, C. A.; and see A-G v. Furness Railway, [1899] 2 Q. B. 267).

(o) The rate at present in force is 7*d.* per ounce (Finance Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 16), s. 2, Sched.). It is submitted that the duty becomes chargeable at the stage in the manufacturing process when the sulpho-namide is oxidised, if not earlier, see McNicol v Finch, [1906] 2 K. B. 352. As to customs duty on saccharine, see note (u), p. 599, ante.

(p) Finance Act, 1901 (1 Edw. 7, c. 7), s. 9; Revenue Act, 1903 (3 Edw. 7, c. 40), s. 2. Duty is paid on the delivery for home consumption of saccharine from the bonded warehouse on the maker's premises, the charge being raised on the net quantity warehoused. The Commissioners have, by statutory order, provided for the repayment or remission of the duty on saccharine accidentally destroyed while on the maker's premises, under the same conditions as beer duty may be repaid or remitted (Stat. R. & O., 1904, p. 133, rr. 14, 15), and see p. 615, ante.

SUB-SECT. 11.—Spirits

1259. Spirit duty is a charge at the current rate (s) upon every gallon computed at proof (t) of spirits made in the United Kingdom by a licensed distiller (a). Nature of charge.

1260. It is levied at the distillery according to that one of the three following modes of charge which produces the greatest amount — How levied.

(1) The attenuation charge is a presumptive charge based upon the quantity of spirits which it is considered will be distilled from the wort or wash (b) prepared and fit for distillation. For this purpose every 100 gallons of wort or wash is deemed to yield 1 gallon of spirits at proof for every 5 degrees by which the gravity (c) of the liquor has been decreased during the course of the fermentation which it has undergone to render it fit for distillation (d). Attenuation
charge.

(2) The low wines charge is raised on the intermediate product in the course of distillation, which is known as low wines and collected in a special vessel pending its redistillation into finished Low wines
charge.

(r) Finance Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c 16), s 2; Finance Act, 1901 (1 Edw. 7, c 7), s 7. As to drawbacks, see pp 697 et seq., post

(s) The rate at present in force is 14s 9d per proof gallon (Excise on Spirits Act, 1860 (23 & 24 Vict c 129), s 1, Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c 8), s 6; Finance Act, 1900 (63 & 64 Vict c 7), s 6; Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s. 81 (3)).

(t) "Proof" means the strength of proof as ascertained by Sykes's hydrometer, in accordance with the table of the strength of spirits lodged with the Commissioners, or by any means described in regulations published by the Commissioners of Customs and Excise (Spirits (Strength Ascertainment) Act, 1818 (58 Geo 3, c 28), ss 2, 3, Spirits Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict c 24), ss 3, 134; Finance Act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. 13), s 4) Proof spirits are spirits which at 51° Fahrenheit weigh $\frac{1}{2}$ parts of an equal bulk of distilled water (Spirits (Strength Ascertainment) Act, 1818 (58 Geo 3, c 28)); and see Newby v. Sims, [1894] 1 Q B 478, per DAY, J., at p 481 As to the customs duties on spirits, see pp 599 et seq., ante

(a) See p 637, post

(b) "Wort" or "wash" is the saccharine solution in which alcohol is formed by the process of fermentation It may be made from any material whatever, provided that when made its gravity can be ascertained by the prescribed saccharometer (Spirits Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 24), s 21; and see p. 639, post)

(c) A degree of gravity is taken as the one-thousandth part of the gravity of distilled water at 60° Fahrenheit (Spirits Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 24), s. 37 (1))

(d) Ibid., s. 46 (2) Under normal circumstances this charge is considerably less than that from spirits and feints, and is therefore seldom that on which the duty is levied.

spirits (e). The charge is the quantity of spirits at proof contained in the low wines less a deduction of 5 per cent. (f).

(3) The spirits charge is calculated on the quantity of spirits at proof strength in the spirits and feints (g) collected in the spirits and feints receivers (h).

Payment of
duty.

1261. Duty is payable at the time and in the manner prescribed in regulations made by the Commissioners of Customs and Excise (i). Where the conditions laid down in the regulations are complied with, payment may be deferred, or may be remitted altogether.

Deferred.

Payment is deferred when the spirits are deposited in a duty-free bonded warehouse, the duty being payable only on their delivery from the warehouse for home consumption (k).

Remitted

The duty is remitted altogether on spirits delivered for exportation as merchandise (l); for ship's stores (m); for methylation (n); for use in arts and manufactures (o); or for use in fortifying wine in a duty-free warehouse (p).

Penalty for non-payment

(f) Ibid., s. 46 (3). The strength of the liquor is ascertained by the hydrometer in the ordinary way. The deduction is on account of anticipated loss on redistillation. It is not practicable to raise the charge from low wines where continuous distillation is followed. Purified methyle alcohol is deemed to be low wines and chargeable with duty as such, and the person purifying methyle alcohol is regarded as a distiller (Spirits Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 24), s. 133 (1)).

(g) "Feints" are the impure portions of the distillate which are separated from the pure spirit and collected apart in the "feints receivers."

(h) Spirits Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 24), s. 46 (4). Every distiller is required to provide both a spirit receiver and a feints receiver at his distillery, see note (c), p. 638, post. As to offences against excise regulations as to spirits, see also title INTOXICATING LIQUORS, Vol. XVIII, pp. 146 et seq.

(i) Spirits Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 24), s. 47, see regulations in Stat. R. & O., 1906, p. 161, Part I. Except where payment is postponed or the duty is remitted as set out in the text, infra, it is to be paid on the delivery of the spirits from the store at the distillery, and this must take place at the latest within ten days of the close of the distilling period within which the spirits were distilled (Spirits Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 24), s. 43 (8)).

(k) Ibid., s. 76. Duty is then charged on the quantity actually delivered, if the Commissioners are satisfied that any loss which took place in the spirits while in warehouse was not due to fraud. The rate of duty is that chargeable at the date of the actual removal of the spirits from warehouse (Finance Act, 1900 (63 & 64 Vict. c. 7), s. 9).

SECT. 2.
The Duties

1263. If spirit duty payable by a distiller is in arrear, the collector of customs and excise may issue a warrant empowering any person to distrain all the spirits, malt or other materials for distilling, and all vessels and utensils belonging to the distiller and all spirits warehoused in his name, and sell the effects thus seized in payment of the duty and costs (i).

Power of distress and sale.

1264. On their deposit in a duty-free warehouse, repayment of spirit duty, at the rate then in force, is made to a licensed rectifier or compounder (s) on all British compounded spirits (t) and spirits of wine (u) rectified or compounded by him from spirits upon which the duty has been paid (a).

Repayment :
(1) on spirits rectified,

1265. Repayment of the duty is also allowed on tinctures (b) and spirits of wine exported or shipped as stores direct from the premises of a licensed rectifier or compounder, the duty being calculated in this case on the quantity actually exported, together with such an addition in respect of spirits lost in manufacture as the Commissioners of Customs and Excise think just (c).

(2) exports,

1266. Repayment or remission may be allowed of any duty payable in respect of spirits or wash accidentally lost or destroyed at a distillery, or spirits accidentally lost or destroyed on removal into or out of a distillery, store or bonded warehouse, or under bond to be put on board ship for exportation or use as ships' stores (d).

SECT. 2.

SUB-SECT. 12 — *Tobacco (Home Grown).The Duties.

Nature of charge.

1267. Tobacco duty is a charge at the current rate (e), payable upon all tobacco grown in the United Kingdom by a person holding a licence to grow, cultivate, or cure tobacco.

Regulations as to duty and cultivation of tobacco.

1268. The Commissioners of Customs and Excise may make regulations for securing and collecting the duty, and for prohibiting the growth, cultivation, or curing of tobacco, except by a person duly licensed (f) and upon premises of which entry has been made and on land approved by them; and for this purpose to apply the provisions of the Manufactured Tobacco Act, 1863 (g), or any amending Act (h).

How duty is charged

1269. The tobacco leaf is first weighed for charge as soon as it is in a condition to be weighed, and not later than the 1st January following the cutting or gathering, and again as soon as it is sufficiently cured to be fit for use by a manufacturer. When the second and final weighing takes place for assessment of the duty, if the difference between the weight found on the first and that found on the final weighing is not such as to be accountable by legitimate loss during the curing process, the Commissioners may assess the duty upon the weight found on the first weighing, less such a deduction on account of loss in curing as they think proper (i).

Penalties for breach of regulations and unlawful removal.

1270 Any person licensed to grow, cultivate, or cure tobacco who infringes any of the regulations made by the Commissioners is liable to a penalty of £50, and if any person is found removing tobacco grown in the United Kingdom exceeding 3 lbs in weight without having an official permit or certificate authorising its Part VII.—Excise Licences.

SECT. 1.—In General.

SUB-SECT. 1.—What a Licence Covers

1273 Except in the case of appraisers, auctioneers, and hawkers, every excise licence granted in respect of any trade or manufacture authorises the carrying on of such trade or manufacture at one set of premises only, which must be specified in the licence (m). One licence may be granted for the same person to carry on more than one trade on the same premises, provided that the licences, if granted separately, would by law expire on the same date (n).

Licence
covers only one set of premises.

Where two or more persons carry on any trade or business in partnership, except the trade of an appraiser, auctioneer, or hawkers, they need not in any year take out more than one licence for each set of premises in which the trade or business is carried on (o).

SUB-SECT. 4.—Transferability of Licence.

On death or removal

1276. Where the holder of an excise licence in respect of any premises dies or removes from the premises, the licence may be transferred by indorsement to his executor, administrator, widow or child, or to his assignee (as the case may be), in occupation of the premises, and if the licensed premises are destroyed by fire or other unavoidable cause the person licensed may have the licence transferred to other premises (v).

Licences depending on justices' licences

If the excise licence is one for the holding of which a justices' licence is necessary (s), a transfer made without the authority of a justices' licence is void (t). Such a licence also becomes void if for any reason the justices' licence on which it is granted is forfeited or becomes void (u).

SUB-SECT. 5.—Irregularity in Form.

Irregularity

In General.

1278. Where the justices' licence on which an excise licence has been granted expires before the end of the term of the excise licence, otherwise than because of a conviction of the licensee, and it is not renewed, the licensee is entitled to repayment of a proportionate part of the licence duty on the unexpired licence (c). On expiration of justices' licence during term.

SUB-SECT 7 — Offence against Terms of Licence

1279. Where a person holding an excise licence for the sale of any goods deals in or sells the goods otherwise than he is authorised by his licence to do, and no specific penalty is imposed by any Excise Act for the contravention of the terms of the licence, he is liable to the excise penalty incurred for dealing in or selling the goods without a licence, or to an excise penalty of £50 (d). Irregular sale.

Where anyone is charged with trading without a licence it is not necessary to give evidence negativing the existence of a licence (e). Burden of proof.

SUB-SECT 8 — Taking Orders for Excisable Goods

1280. If any person, not being a bond fide traveller taking orders on behalf of a duly licensed employer, solicits, takes, or receives orders for goods for the dealing in or selling of which an excise licence is required, he must hold the appropriate licence for dealing in or selling such goods. But this does not apply in the case of foreign goods imported and lodged in a duty-free warehouse, provided that the quantity sold at any one time is, in the case of wine or spirits, not less than 100 gallons, and, in the case of any other goods, not less than an entire package as imported (f). When licence necessary

(c) Finance Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo 5, c 48), s 7 The repayment is of such sum as bears to the full amount of the duty the same proportion as the unexpired period of the licence bears to the whole year (ibid) In the case of all payments by, or repayments to, any person in respect of the duty on a licence, fractions of a penny are disregarded (Revenue Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict c 42), s 22) As to repayment of duties generally, see p 611, ante

(d) Revenue Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict c 42), s. 24, Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 50 (4) Any person holding an excise licence must, within a reasonable time after demand, produce and deliver it to be read and examined by any officer of customs and excise (Excise Licences Act, 1825 (6 Geo 4, c. 81), s 28)

(f) Revenue Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict c 90), s 17; and see, further, title INTOXICATING LIQUORS, Vol XVIII, p. 115. It is a question of fact in any particular case whether a person is or is not a bond fide traveller (Stuckbery v. Spencer (1886), 55 L J (M. C.) 141) But if the substantial occupation of a person is not that of travelling and journeying from town to town soliciting orders he is not entitled to the exemption (Kulack v. Graham, Luntorn v Burchell, [1896] 2 Q B 196, Hepple v. Brumby (1896), 60 J. P. 792; Scott & Co v Solomon, [1905] 1 K B. 577) The offence of unlawfully soliciting, taking, or receiving may be committed through an agent, and at an unlicensed shop in the same town in which the person holds a licence (Rhas v Dunlop, [1906] 1 K. B. 266) A drayman taking orders and then going out and delivering the goods is not a traveller (Stansfeld & Co, Ltd. v. Andrews (1909), 100 L T 529). For the exemption, allowed to manufacturers, see pp. 631, 635, 639, post.

1281 Any person who brews beer (g) for the use of any other person at any place other than the premises of the person for whose use the beer is brewed, and any person licensed to deal in, or retail, beer, who brews beer, is deemed a brewer for sale, and must take out an annual licence (h), the rate of duty upon which depends on the quantity of beer brewed by him during the preceding year (i).

1282. Licences are granted by the Commissioners of Customs and Excise, who may refuse to grant a licence in any case in which in their opinion, having regard to the situation of the proposed brewery with respect to a distillery, it would be inexpedient to allow the brewing of beer to be carried on (k)

1283. A brewer for sale must, before he begins to brew, deposit with the local officer of customs and excise a written entry (l) or description of the places, vessels and utensils to be used by him in his business, and stating the purpose for which each is to be used (m). He must also keep on the brewery premises and accessible to the excise officials an official book in which to give notice from

(g) "Beer" includes ale, porter, spruce beer, black beer, and any other description of beer, and any liquor which is made or sold as a description of beer or as a substitute for beer, and which on an analysis of a sample thereof is found to contain more than 2 per cent of proof spirit (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 52). A liquor is a description of beer when sold as beer with any epithet describing it (Howarth v Manns (1886), 51 J P 7). And where a liquor was made from liquid glucose and hops and was fermented with yeast, had the ordinary gravity of beer, and was sold as a beer, it was held to be beer, although it contained only 2 per cent of proof spirit (Fairhurst v Price, [1912] 1 K B 404). For definition of "proof spirit," see note (e), p 600, ante.

(i) Ibid., s. 10; Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s. 51, Sched 1, A. The scale for licence duty is:—

Not exceeding 100 barrels brewed	1	0	0
Exceeding 100 barrels—
For the first 100 barrels	1	0	0
For every further 50 barrels or fraction of 50 barrels	0	12	0

In calculating the duty the barrels taken may, at the option of the brewer, be either the bulk barrels or the barrels brewed at the standard original gravity of 1,055 degrees (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c. 8), Sched. I, A, scale 2). If the brewer neglects or refuses to exercise the option, it is the practice to charge the duty by the method which gives the lowest charge. The year taken is the year ending the 30th June, or such other day as the Commissioners of Customs and Excise may fix (ibid, provision 4).

time to time of his intention to brew and of the quantity and kind of the materials to be used in the brewing (n).

1284. A brewer must follow the customary order of brewing in making beer, must collect the whole produce of each brewing separately in the vessels set apart for the purpose, and immediately the collection is completed the brewer must enter an account in the official book of the quantity and gravity of the beer (o). Beer duty at the rate for the time being in force is payable not later than the fifteenth day of the following month on the quantity thus produced in each month (p).

1286. A brewer of beer for sale is not allowed to use in brewing or to have in his possession any substance or liquor which, in the opinion of the Treasury, is of a noxious or detrimental nature, or which, being a chemical or artificial product, would, if used, prejudicially affect the interests of the revenue (r).

1287. Power is given to the Treasury, by notice in the London Gazette, to prohibit the use and possession by brewers for sale of any substances. Brewers are now prohibited from keeping or using saccharin, sucramine, sugarol, or the compounds of these substances respectively, or any substance which, being a chemical or artificial product, furnishes the chemical tests of saccharin. The use of any material which contains arsenic is also forbidden. The penalty for the use of a prohibited article is £50 and forfeiture of the beer in which it was used, the penalty for having a prohibited article in possession is forfeiture of the article (London Gazette of 18th May, 1888, p. 2832). SUB-SECT 2.—Brewers of Beer Not for Sale

Definition.

1288. A brewer of beer not for sale is a person who brews beer for his own domestic use or for use by farm labourers employed by him in the actual course of their employment (u). He can brew only at a house (v) occupied by him or, in case the house he occupies is of an annual value not exceeding £10, at a house gratuitously lent to him by another brewer not for sale (z).

Brewing in house under
£8 value

If he occupies a house of an annual value not exceeding £8, he may brew beer, but only for his own domestic use, without taking out a licence to brew and without being liable to pay beer duty on the beer brewed (b). If he brews also for the use of his farm labourers he must take out an annual licence at 4s., but is exempt from beer duty (c).

House under
£10 value.

If he occupies a house of an annual value exceeding £8, but not exceeding £10, he must take out a 4s licence, but he may brew beer for domestic use and for his farm labourers without payment of beer duty (d).

House under
£15 value

If he occupies a house of an annual value exceeding £10 and not exceeding £15 and brews beer solely for his own domestic use, he must take out a licence at the 9s rate, but is exempt from beer duty on the beer (e). If he brews for any other than his own domestic use, he must pay beer duty on the beer and take out a licence at 4s. (f)

House over

In the case of a brewer not for sale who occupies a house of an annual value exceeding £15, beer duty must in all circumstances be paid on the beer brewed and a 4s licence taken out (f)

The Commissioners may further apply any of the Acts relating to the excise duty and drawback on beer, and to brewers of beer, to the duty on saccharine and to manufacturers of saccharine (o).

SECT. 2.
Licences
to Manufacture.

1308. Any person who manufactures saccharine without having in force the necessary licence is liable to a penalty of £50, and the saccharine in respect of which the offence is committed is forfeited (p).

SUB-SECT. 8—Distillers of Spirits.

Penalty for making with-

Distillers who must be licensed.

1309. Every person who has or uses a still for distilling spirits (q), or who makes wort or wash (r), or who makes or keeps wort or wash prepared and fit for distillation, and has in his possession or use a still, must take out an annual licence at the current rate as a distiller (s).

1310. Where the largest still to be kept by a distiller is of less capacity than 400 gallons, a licence cannot be granted unless the applicant produces to the Commissioners of Customs and Excise a certificate of three justices that he is a fit person to have a licence, and that the premises proposed to be licensed are in his actual possession and of a yearly value of at least £10 (t).

Conditions
attachable to licence.

No person is entitled to a licence for a distillery unless the proposed premises are situate in or within a quarter of a mile of a market town (u).

The Commissioners may refuse to grant a licence to a distiller unless he provides a secure spirit store to their satisfaction (v). They may also refuse where, having regard to the proximity of the proposed distillery to a rectifying house, brewery,

Bailey* (1847), 1 Exch 281; Hailey v Harris (1849), 12 Q B 905)

The rate depends on the numbers of gallons at proof distilled during the preceding year. Where this was less than 50,000 gallons, £10 is charged, and, for every further 25,000 or fraction of 25,000, an additional sum of £10 (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), Sched. I, A, scale 1) All distillers' licences expire on the 30th September in each year (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 49 (2)) Beginners may obtain a licence at a proportional part of the rate according to the period of the year in which the licence is taken out (Excise Licences Act, 1825 (6 Geo 4, c 81), s 17) The extraction of spirits absorbed in the wood of casks by the addition of water to the casks is not distillation, but "grogging," and is an offence (Finance Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict c. 10), s. 4; Lord Advocate v. Stewart (1899), 63 J. P. 311. Lord Advocate v. Carse (1899), 63 J. P. 472).

A licence granted on these terms may be suspended or revoked on failure of the distiller to fulfil the conditions imposed (ibid, s. 9 (4)).

or vinegar factory, they think it inexpedient that the distilling of spirits should be allowed (b).

1311. No person may use premises as a distillery (c) within a quarter of a mile from the premises of a rectifier or compounder of spirits (d).

1312. After a distiller has taken out a licence, and before commencing to distil, he must provide certain vessels which are necessary for the purpose of assessing the duty to be charged on the spirits made at his distillery (e).

Entry of places and vessels

When the distillery premises and plant are completed, the distiller must make entry (f) with the local officer of excise of all the places, vessels, and utensils intended to be used by him in the course of his business as distiller. No vessel or place must be entered for use for more than one purpose, nor used for any other purpose than that for which it was entered (g).

Order of working

1313. A distiller must follow the prescribed order of working at his distillery (h), and is required to give the officer in charge of the premises notice beforehand of all the brewing or distilling operations he intends to carry out (i)

(b) Spirits Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 24), s. 11 (4). There is a corresponding power to refuse a licence to a brewer, vinegar maker, or rectifier for premises in undesirable proximity to a distillery (ibid, ss. 12, 88 (4)); and compare title INTOXICATING LIQUORS, Vol. XVIII, p. 147.

(c) For further restrictions as to the use of the premises and prohibition against carrying on certain trades therein, see ibid, s. 11 (1), (2), title INTOXICATING LIQUORS, Vol. XVIII, p. 147.

(d) Spirits Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 24), s. 10 (1). This restriction only applies where the licensed rectifier or compounder keeps a still (ibid). A retailer of spirits may not be interested in the business of a distiller carried on within two miles of the premises for which he holds his retailer's licence (ibid, s. 101 (2)).

(e) Ibid, s. 14, and Sched. I, Part I. These vessels, which must be kept while the distiller's licence continues in force, are prescribed according to the nature of the operations to be carried on. If the still to be used is of such a kind that the produce of the wash on the first distillation is feints (see note (g), p. 624, ante) and spirits, the vessels to be provided are one wash charger, one feints receiver, and one spirit receiver, while, if the produce of the first distillation is low wines, the distiller must provide in addition one low wines receiver and one low wines and feints charger (Spirits Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 24), Sched. I, Part I.). There is also a maximum fixed for the number of vessels which may be kept in any distillery; and the Commissioners have a discretionary power to allow the use of any vessels in addition to or substitution for those prescribed (ibid, s. 16, and Sched. I., Part II.). For the penalty for unlawfully altering or removing such vessels, see title INTOXICATING LIQUORS, Vol. XVIII, p. 147.

(f) For excise entry, see p. 610, ante.

(g) Spirits Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 24), s. 19 (1). In addition to the particulars required to be supplied in the entry of an excise trader, the distiller is required to state the distilling capacity or the content in gallons of every still to be used by him, and to furnish a model drawing of the plant and premises (ibid, s. 19 (4)). An entry made by a distiller cannot be withdrawn while any of the utensils mentioned in it, or any spirits or other materials liable to duty, remain on the premises (ibid, s. 20).

PART VII.—EXCISE LICENCES.

SECT 2 Licences to Manu- facture.

1314. A distiller must at the prescribed intervals render to the officer accounts (k) of all the wort and wash made, and of the spirits distilled, at the distillery (l), and he must at all times give the officer the necessary assistance in taking account of the spirits or other goods on the distillery premises (m).

1315. Any person who, without being licensed to do so, keeps or uses a still for distilling spirits, or brews or makes wort or wash fit for distillation, or distils low wines or feints, is liable to a fine of £500 and forfeiture of all the vessels and materials used and spirits made by him (n).

1316. A distiller may sell and send out from his distillery premises to any one person at one time not less than nine gallons in cask or five dozen quart or ten dozen pint bottles of the spirits made by him at that distillery (o).

Sales from 1317. A distiller's licence does not authorise the holder to obtain spirits from casks by "grogging." Any person is liable to a fine of £50 (p) who subjects any cask to any process (q) for the purpose of extracting any spirits absorbed in the wood thereof or who has on his premises any cask which is being subjected to any such process, or any spirits extracted from the wood of any cask (u).

Grogging.

Sub-SECT 9—Makers of Methylated Spirits

1318. Every maker of methylated spirits (b), other than a licensed distiller (c) or rectifier duly authorised by the Commissioners of Customs and Excise to methylate, must take out a licence for the premises on which he carries on the business of a methylator (d).

(p) If more than one cask is grogged, cumulative penalties are incurred (Lord Advocate v Stewart (1899), 63 J. P. 311).

(q) Some actual process must be applied for the purpose of extracting the spirits. If spirits exude from an empty cask kept on the premises, this does not constitute grogging (Robinson Brothers v Diron, [1903] 2 K. B. 701). But where water has been added to a cask for the purpose of keeping it sweet, and spirits are thereby extracted from the wood, this constitutes the offence (Lord Advocate v Carse (1899), 63 J. P. 472).

(a) Finance Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 10), s. 4.

(b) The term "methylated spirits" means spirits mixed with any substance or combination of substances approved for the purpose of methylation by the Commissioners (Spirits Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 24), s. 123 (3); Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 8), s. 32 (1)). The substance commonly used in methylation is approved wood naphtha of a strength not less than 60 degrees over proof. As to the duty on foreign spirits used in making methylated spirits, see p. 601, ante.

(c) A distiller authorised to make methylated spirits can employ spirits made at his own distillery only (Regulations of the Commissioners, made under the Spirits Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 24), ss. 118, 120).

1319. A licence is granted only in respect of premises of which entry has been made by the methylator and which have been approved by the Commissioners of Customs and Excise (e), who are also empowered to suspend or revoke the licence (f). It may be obtained on payment of a proportional part of the yearly rate according to the quarter of the year in which it is granted, but, whenever issued, it expires on the 30th September next following (g).

Penalty for acting without licence

1320. Any person who makes methylated spirits without being duly licensed or authorised to do so is liable to a penalty of £50 (h).

Classification of spirits

1321. There are two kinds of methylated spirits—(1) industrial, which is intended for use in any art or manufacture within the United Kingdom, and in which the proportion of wood naphtha or other substance approved for the purpose of methylation is not less than one-nineteenth of the bulk of the spirits methylated (i), and (2) mineralised, in which the proportion of wood naphtha or other substance approved for methylation is not less than one-ninth of the bulk of the spirits methylated, and which in addition have mixed with them such quantity of mineral naphtha as may for the time being be prescribed by the Commissioners (j).

Regulations as to methylation.

1322. The spirits to be methylated are received duty free under bond from a warehouse or distillery, and must be either plain British or unsweetened foreign spirits (k) of a strength not less than 50 degrees over proof, or rum of not less strength than 20 degrees over proof (l).

licence as a maker may also, with the permission of the Commissioners, make methylated spirits in a duty-free warehouse (Spirits Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict c 24), s 122, Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict c 8), s 34)

(e) Approval is not given unless a special room in which the mixing is to take place is provided, as well as a secure store-room for storing the naphtha or other substances approved for methylation, and a mixing vat capable of containing at least 550 gallons. Bond must also be given by all makers of methylated spirits for the due receipt and mixing of the spirits (Regulations dated 11th August, 1906 (Stat R & O 1906, p 161), made under the Spirits Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict c. 24), s 123)

By the Regulations, dated 11th August, 1906, the quantity of mineral naphtha prescribed is to be not less than three-eighths of 1 per cent by volume of the spirits to which it is added. Such mineral naphtha must be of a specific gravity not less than 800, and must have been officially examined and approved before use.

(k) But, in the case of foreign spirits, the difference between the duty actually chargeable on them and the duty to which they would have been liable as plain British spirits must be paid before they are allowed to be methylated (Spirits Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict c. 24), s 123 (5)).

(l) Ibid., s 123 (1).

SECT. 2
Licences
to Manufacture.

The quantity of British spirits which may be methylated at one time must not be less than 450 gallons. In the case of foreign spirits, the contents of the cask in which the spirits were imported may be used at one time in a methylation (m).

The methylation of spirits must be carried out in the time and mode laid down in regulations made by the Commissioners of Customs and Excise (n).

1323. Every methylator of spirits is required to keep a stock account in the prescribed form of all methylated spirits made or received by him, distinguishing between industrial and mineralised spirits (o). The two kinds of spirits must be kept and stored apart in vessels marked to indicate to which of the two classes the contents of each vessel belongs (p).

Stock
accounts

1324. A maker of methylated spirits may send out the spirits for exportation in quantities not less than 10 gallons (q), or he may send out not less than 5 gallons (which may be in quart vessels) (r) on sale to a person who produces to him a requisition containing an official certificate that the person to whom the spirits are being sent is authorised by the Commissioners of Customs and Excise to receive the spirits applied for (s). Spirits sent out must in all cases be accompanied by a permit (t). If a maker supplies spirits to a person after he has been officially informed that such person is not authorised to receive them he must pay duty on the spirits sent out at the rate payable on British spirits (u).

Delivery on exportation or sale

1325 An allowance of 3*d.* per proof gallon is payable to a methylator on the quantity of dutiable spirits used by him in making industrial methylated spirits and on the quantity of dutiable spirits used by him in making mineralised methylated spirits exported (a).

A rectifier or compounder must not mix any British wine with any British spirits for any purpose whatsoever (n). 1362. A retailer of beer may not receive or have in his custody or possession any sugar or other saccharine substance, except for his domestic use, or in the course of his trade as a grocer where he carries on the business of a grocer upon his beer retailer's premises, or any preparation for increasing the gravity of beer (o)

In the case of a bonâ fide restaurant in which the receipts from the sale of intoxicating liquors do not exceed two-thirds of the total receipts, and in the case of a bonâ fide hotel in which they do not exceed one-third of such receipts, a licence may be granted on payment of an amount bearing the same proportion to the full duty payable as the receipts from the sale of intoxicating liquor bear to the total receipts, but so that the duty paid shall not in any case be less than one-fifteenth of the full duty nor less than the minimum rates given above (ibid., s. 45 (1)). A licence at a proportionate part of the full year's duty may be obtained by a beginner according to the proportion which the period for which it will be in force bears to the whole year (Finance Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 48), s. 8). This reduction applies in the case of a licence obtained on payment of a reduced duty under the conditions set out in note (m), supra, provided that the duty thereby payable is not less than one-third of the annual licence value of the premises (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 45 (6), as amended by the Finance Act, 1912 (2 & 3 Geo. 5, c. 8)). 1363. A beer retailer's "off" licence must be taken out annually in respect of any premises (q) used for the sale, for consumption off the premises only, of beer in quantities not exceeding $4\frac{1}{2}$ gallons or two dozen reputed quart bottles at any one time to one person (r). Nature of licence.

Any person who sells beer by retail "off" the premises without having in force the necessary licence incurs a penalty of £50, or treble the amount of the duty, at the election of the Commissioners (s).

A retailer's "off" licence for the sale of any intoxicating liquor cannot be granted to the holder of a retailer's "on" licence if the "off" licence authorises the sale of any liquor which the holder of the "on" licence is not authorised to sell by retail (t).

1364. It can only be granted to the holder of a justices' licence (u) who is not a person disqualified by law to sell beer by retail (a), and expires on the 30th September in each year, except in the case of a licence taken out by a person who holds a wholesale beer dealer's licence for the same premises, when it expires on the 30th June (b). Grantees and term of licence.

1365. An applicant for the licence must make entry (c) of the premises to be licensed with the local officer of customs and excise Entry of premises 1367. A holder of a beer retailer's "off" licence is subject to the same restrictions as a holder of a beer retailer's "on" licence as to the receipt, custody, or possession of sugar or other saccharine substances, as to beer dilution (e), and as to the use of saccharine in beer (f).

SUB-SECT. 5 — Canteens

1368. Except in the case of canteens which are under the control of a committee of the officers of the regiment and managed by an officer who has no interest in the profits (g), a licence is required for the sale of intoxicating liquors in a military or naval canteen.

It is granted only to a person who holds the prescribed authority from a Secretary of State or the Admiralty, and it follows the terms of the certificate of authorisation under which it is issued. No justices' licence need be held (h).

Who must be

1370. Any person, not being the holder of a publican's or a beer-house licence, who sells cider or perry in retail quantities (i) for consumption on the premises must take out a licence, the rate of duty upon which depends on the annual value of his premises (k).

The supply of liquor is on the same footing as in the case of a club, as to which see p. 616, ante, and see title CLUBS, Vol. IV, pp. 429 et seq. The licence duty is charged at the minimum rates applicable to the sale of liquor under a publican's licence (see note (m), p. 671, post) and a beer retailer's on-licence (see p. 652, ante) respectively, that is £5 and £3 10s. per annum. In the case of a temporary canteen granted for a short period specified in the authority (see the text, infra), it is the practice to charge licence duty only for the period during which the canteen is actually authorised to be in operation.

1412. Except in the case of a pawnbroker licensed before the 1st January, 1873 (r), or the successor in the business of such a pawnbroker, a licence may not be issued to anyone unless he produces a certificate granted by the district, borough or county council having jurisdiction in the place where the shop is situated, or, in London, by a metropolitan police magistrate or a justice of the peace in the City (s).

Penalty for acting as pawnbroker without licence
Term of licence

1413. Any person who acts as a pawnbroker without having in force the necessary licence is liable to an excise penalty of £50 (t).

1414. A pawnbroker's licence, whenever taken out, is granted only on payment of the full licence duty for the year, and expires on the 31st July next following the date of issue (u). It may also expire during the period for which it was granted, if a court before which

(r) Such a privileged pawnbroker is entitled to open any number of new businesses and to obtain excise licences for the places thus opened without the production of a certificate (R v Inland Revenue Commissioners, Ohlson's Case, [1891] 1 Q B 485). If he has ceased for a time to carry on the trade, he may recommence business and obtain an excise licence as before without obtaining a certificate (R v Inland Revenue Commissioners, Garland's Case, [1891] 1 Q B 485). But the assignee of a pawnbroker's business established prior to 1873 is not entitled, without the production of a certificate, to obtain an excise licence for a pawnbroker's business established since 1873 which he has acquired (R v Inland Revenue Commissioners, Ex parte Silvester, [1907] 1 K B 108); and see title PAWNS AND PLEDGES, Vol. XXII, p 248

A certificate is valid for a year from the date of its issue without reference to the date of the expiration of the excise licence, (ibid, s 41).

1415. The licence does not authorise the taking in pawn or delivering out of pawn of any gold or silver plate, unless the requisite plate dealer's licence is also held for the same premises (c).

SUB-SECT 16—Plate Dealers

1416. Every person who trades in or sells (d) any article composed wholly or in part of gold or silver, and wherein the gold is above 2 dwt or the silver above 5 dwt, every pawnbroker who takes in pawn or delivers out of pawn any such article, and every refiner of gold or silver, must take out a licence as plate dealer in respect of every shop or other place in which he carries on his business (e).

Who must be licensed.

1417. The licence, whenever taken out, expires on the 5th July next following the date of issue (f). It is issued at a higher and a lower rate. The higher rate is in all cases payable by a pawnbroker or a refiner. An ordinary dealer in plate only becomes liable to take out a licence at the higher rate if he sells articles containing 2 oz. or upwards of gold or 30 oz. or upwards of silver (g).

Duration of licence and

1418. Any person dealing in plate without having in force the necessary licence is liable to a penalty of £50 (h).

(g) Ibid, s 1. The lower rate is £2 6s yearly, and the higher £5 15s (ibid). Liability to duty at the higher rate is incurred by a dealer who sells as gold an article of more than 2 oz in weight, although it does not contain 2 oz of pure gold (Young v Cook (1877), 3 Ex D 101). Where the quantity of gold or silver in an article is disputed, proof of the quantity rests on the defendant (Revenue Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict c 90), s 5). A licence may be obtained by a beginner at a proportionate part of the year's duty (Excise Licences Act, 1825 (6 Geo 4, c 81), s 18).

(h) Revenue Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict c 90), s 3. A sale, in order to involve liability to licence duty, need not be a direct sale of the plate. The purchase of an article which on sale is delivered to the purchaser with a coupon or ticket, the possession of a sufficient number of which entitles the holder to a piece of plate, is a transaction involving the seller of the article in liability to take out a plate licence (Scott & Co v Solomon, [1905] 1 K B 577).

A person who in the course of exercising his trade of a hawker, pedlar, or petty chapman (m) sells any article containing more than 2 dwt. of gold or 5 dwt. of silver, must take out a hawker's plate licence at the appropriate rate (n), but such a licence does not authorise the sale of plate at any shop or permanent place of business.

1421. A licence must be taken out annually by the railway company or other person owning a railway restaurant car upon which intoxicating liquor is supplied by retail to passengers for consumption on the car (o)

1423. Every person who keeps a house, room, shop, or other building which is open for purposes of public refreshment, resort, and entertainment at any time between 10 p.m. and 5 a.m., and not being premises licensed for the sale of intoxicating liquor, must take

The secretary of a watch club who collects subscriptions from members and, by arrangement with a licensed plate dealer, forwards the total amount in return for a watch which one of the members of the club fixed upon by ballot is to receive, is not a bonâ fide traveller, and must hold a licence to deal in plate (Killick v. Graham, Lantern v Burchell, [1896] 2 Q B 196); nor is a pedlar carrying round watches to sell on behalf of a licensed dealer, and disposing of them at other persons' houses by hire-purchase agreement (Hepple v Brumby (1896), 60 J P 792).

(m) It is immaterial whether he does or does not hold a licence also as a hawker, or a pedlar's certificate (Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict c 8), s 9 (2)) As to hawkers' licences, see pp. 657 et seq., ante.

1424. Every person who keeps a refreshment house without having in force a proper licence is liable to an excise penalty of £20 (c).

SUB-SECT 19 — Spirit Dealers (Wholesale)

1425. Every person who sells spirits in quantities of not less than 2 gallons or not less than one dozen reputed quart bottles, or who sells spirits in any quantities to a rectifier, a retailer, or another dealer, must hold a wholesale dealer's licence(d), which, whenever taken out, expires on the 30th June (e)

Where it is shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioners that the place where premises are situated, though within an urban area, is essentially rural, the area may for the purposes of the charge of duty be taken to be non-urban (Finance Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo 5, c 48), s 5)

(a) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8) A licence may be granted to a bonâ fide hotel or restaurant at the special reduced rate, if it is shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioners of Customs and Excise that the receipts from the sale of intoxicating liquors in the preceding year were less in the case of the hotel than one-third and, in the case of the restaurant, than two-fifths of the total receipts from the business of all descriptions carried on by the licence-holder in the premises. The reduced duty payable is taken at the option of the licence-holder as a sum bearing the same proportion to the full duty that the receipts from the sale of intoxicating liquors bear to the total receipts, or a duty of 25 per cent on the annual licence value of the premises, but subject, in either case, to a minimum of not less than one-thirtieth of the annual value (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 45 (1), (3), (4)). A licence is granted to a seasonal hotel at the rate of £30 where the annual value of the premises does not exceed £100, and at £50 in any other case (ibid, Sched. I, C, Provisions applicable to Retailers' On-Licences, 3) The duty payable on premises adapted to be used and bonâ fide used as refreshment rooms at a railway station is not to exceed £50 (ibid, 5). In the case of a theatre of an annual value not exceeding £2,000 the licence duty payable is £20, and for any higher value £50. The same rates are applicable to licences for premises bonâ fide used for judicial or public administrative purposes, public gardens, galleries or the like (ibid, 4) Where premises include a music-hall, or similar place of public entertainment, the licence may be granted, at the option of the licence-holder, on payment of a duty of £50, together with such sum as would be payable on the rest of the premises if they were separate from the place of entertainment (ibid, 6) A licence granted for a theatre, music-hall, or similar place of entertainment, or in respect of premises used for judicial or administrative purposes, or as public galleries, gardens, or the like, only authorises the sale of intoxicating liquor while the premises are open and being used for these purposes and to persons bonâ fide so using them (ibid, 4). As to theatres generally, see titles THEATRES AND OTHER PLACES OF ENTERTAINMENT.

(b) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), Sched. I., C, Provisions applicable to Retailers' On-Licences, 4. The annual value is the assessment to inhabited house duty, if any (see title INHABITED HOUSE DUTY, Vol XVII, pp 186 et seq.); in other cases the assessment to income in two equal instalments at the option of the licence-holder, one at the time of the grant and the other six months thereafter (c).

1438. The holder of the licence may sell intoxicating liquors on the entered premises at any hour of the day or night without taking out a further excise licence (d).

1439. A spirit retailer must not buy or receive spirits except from a licensed distiller, rectifier, or compounder, or a wholesale dealer (e); he must not receive, send out, or have in his possession British spirits at a strength under 20 degrees under proof or between 25 and 43 degrees over proof (f), and he must not mix British wine with any spirits except for the sole purpose of colouring or fining the spirits (g).

All spirits received by him must be accompanied by an official tax is taken (see title INCOME TAX, Vol. XVI, pp. 620 et seq.) If neither value is applicable the Commissioners may determine the value by such means as they think fit (Revenue Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo 5, c 2), s. 8, Excise Licences Act, 1825 (6 Geo 4, c 81), s. 5) Where a part of the premises occupied by the licence-holder has no internal connection with the portion used for the purposes of the business, the annual value of such part is to be excluded in ascertaining the annual value for the purposes of the charge of licence duty (Lawrence v. Lord Advocate (1889), 53 J. P. 167; Kirk v. Lord Advocate (1897), 62 J. P. 22, Peterson v. Lord Advocate (1906), 8 F. (Ct. of Sess.) 880) The annual licence value is the difference between the value of the premises licensed and the value they would have if unlicensed (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s. 44 (2)), but in calculating the value of the premises as licensed no regard is to be had to profits derived from sources other than the sale of intoxicating liquors (Truman, Hanbury, Burton & Co., Ltd. v. Inland Revenue Commissioners, [1912] 3 K. B. 377, C. A., varying the rule applied in Ashby's Cobham Brewery Co., Re The Crown, Cobham, Ashby's Staines Brewery Co., Re The Hand and Spear, Woking, [1906] 2 K. B. 754). A remission of one-seventh of the duty is allowed where the licence is a six-day or early-closing licence, and of two-sevenths where both these conditions apply (Licensing (Consolidation) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7 & 1 Geo 5, c 24), s. 60) But this reduction, in the case of a six-day or early-closing licence granted at the minimum duty referred to at p. 671, ante, is not allowed if the reduction would operate to make the duty payable less than one-third of the annual licence value of the premises (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s. 45 (6), as amended by the Finance Act, 1912 (2 & 3 Geo 5, c 8), s. 3) (c) Finance Act 1911 (1 & 2 Geo 5, c 48), s. 6 (1)

(d) An occasional licence need not, therefore, be taken out for sale beyond the usual closing hours where a general order of exemption or a special order of exemption under the Licensing (Consolidation) Act, 1910 (see title INTOXICATING LIQUORS, Vol. XVIII, pp. 95-97), has been granted to a licence-holder by the local authority, see *Devine v. Stock-book.

1440. A spirit retailer is required to supply himself with a stock-book of the official pattern, in which he must enter on the day of receipt or delivery, as the case may be, particulars of all spirits received by him, and of all spirits sent out accompanied by a certificate. The book must be kept on the entered premises at all times, and be accessible to any officer of customs and excise (i).

Account

An account of the stock of spirits in the possession of a spirit retailer may be taken at any time by an officer of customs and excise (k). The licence-holder is required to furnish the necessary weights and measures for this purpose, and to render any assistance demanded of him (l). Any increase found on the quantity which, according to the stock-book, ought to be in the possession of the licensee is forfeited, and may be seized (m).

1441. Intoxicating liquors may be sold without licence in a bona fide registered club to the members of the club for consumption either on or off the premises (n); or at a military canteen conducted on the regimental system (o). Duly qualified chemists and druggists may sell without a spirit licence bona fide medicated spirits made from spirits upon which the full duty of customs or excise has been paid (p).

(i) Spirits Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict c 24), s 112. An officer may call upon the licence-holder to enter up these at any time. The book must be preserved for twelve months after it has been filled up (ibid, s. 112 (4)).

(l) Ibid, s 42. Where the strength of any spirits in stock cannot be ascertained by the official hydrometer, the licence-holder is required to mark the strength, as ascertained by distillation, on the cask containing them (ibid, s 99), and see title INTOXICATING LIQUORS, Vol. XVIII, p 153.

(m) Spirits Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict c 24), s 103. Illicit spirits found in stock are also liable to seizure, as are also spirits obtained by extraction from the wood of empty spirit casks (Finance Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict c. 10), s. 4); and see title INTOXICATING LIQUORS, Vol XVIII, p 156. An illegal increase may also be due to the presence of spirits thus extracted (M'Intosh Brothers v. Inland Revenue Commissioners (1879), 16 Sc L. R. 477).

(n) This supply of liquor is not a sale (Graff v Evans (1882), 8 Q B D. 373); see title CLUBS, Vol IV, p. 429. The exemption does not apply to sales in a proprietary club (Bowyer v. Percy Supper Club Co, [1893] 2 Q B. 154).

(o) See p. 654, ante.

(p) Spirits Act, 1742 (16 Geo. 2, c. 8), s 12, Licensing (Consolidation) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7 & 1 Geo 5, c 24), s 111; and see title INTOXICATING LIQUORS, Vol XVIII, p. 16. The exemption granted under the Act to a person "who hath served a regular apprenticeship" does not extend to cover one who under an oral agreement has actually served his time as a chemist (Kirkby v Taylor, [1910] 1 K B. 529). It is submitted that this exemption does not extend to cover the sale of medicated preparations made up with wine. It is not the practice to require a licence

When the justices' licence expires during the currency of a spirit retailer's excise licence, and the determination of the justices' licence was not brought about by a forfeiture on conviction, the licence-holder is entitled to a repayment of such sum as bears to the full amount of the duty the same proportion as the unexpired period of the licence bears to the whole year (g). This does not apply to any payment made of a compensation fund charge (r).

(u.) "Off" Licences

1443. Any person, including the holder of a wholesale spirit dealer's licence not being also a rectifier or compounder (s), may obtain a licence to retail spirits for consumption off the premises only (t).

1444. The rate of licence duty depends on the annual value of the licensed premises, fixed in the same way as in the case of premises for which a beer retailer's on-licence is taken out (u).

1445. Entry of the premises must be made by the applicant with the local officer of customs and excise (v).

Where the total duty is £20 or upwards, it may at the option of the licence-holder be paid in two equal half-yearly instalments (Finance Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 48), s. 6). A licence at a proportionate part of the year's duty may be obtained by a beginner according to the proportion which the period for which the licence will be in force bears to a whole year (Excise Licences Act, 1825 (6 Geo. 4, c. 81), s. 17, as amended by the Finance Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 48), s. 8); and see title INTOXICATING LIQUORS, Vol. XVIII., p. 18.

1447. The licence only authorises the sale of spirits in closed vessels and in quantities not exceeding two gallons or one dozen reputed quart bottles, and not less than one reputed quart bottle (b).

Whenever taken out it expires, in the case of a licence taken out by the holder of a wholesale dealer's licence, on the 30th June next following the date of issue, and in other cases on the 30th September (c).

SUB-SECT 21.—Still Users

1448. Every person, not being a licensed distiller, rectifier, or compounder of spirits, vinegar maker, or refiner or manufacturer of motor spirit, who keeps or uses a still or retort, must take out a still licence (d), which expires on the 5th July next following the date of issue (e).

A penalty of £50 is incurred for failure to take out a still licence where such licence is required (f).

1449. The premises of the licensee must be open at any hour of the day or night to the inspection of an officer of customs and excise, who may examine any still kept thereon (g).

1450. A licence is not required to be taken out for stills used at alkali works for which a certificate of registration granted by the Local Government Board is in force (h); and the Commissioners of Customs and Excise may make regulations permitting the use without licence of stills for experiments in chemistry, or in the manufacture of articles other than spirits or spirit mixtures (i).

1451. A person who sells “sweets” (j) or made wines, mead or metheglin in quantities of or exceeding 2 gallons or one dozen reputed quart bottles at one time to any person must take out a licence as a wholesale dealer in sweets (k).

Any person who deals wholesale in sweets without having in force the licence required for the purpose is liable to an excise penalty of £100 (l).

1452. The licence is granted at a fixed rate (m) irrespective of the value of the premises, and expires on the 30th June next following the date of issue (n).

1453. A licensed sweets manufacturer may, without further licence, sell in wholesale quantities at his factory sweets the produce of his factory, or he may by himself or an agent sell such sweets elsewhere if they are supplied direct to the purchaser from the factory (o). A licensed wine dealer may also without further licence sell sweets in wholesale quantities (o). The holder of a university wine permit may sell sweets without licence (p), and so may a free vintner within the local limits of his privilege and provided he makes entry of the promises on which he sells (q).

1454. A dealer in sweets for sale must not—(1) mix for sale any foreign wine with any British wine; or (2) sell or expose for sale any British wine containing more than 15 per cent. of foreign wine; or exemption is registered with the local officer of customs and excise, and to professors of chemistry and analytical chemists in respect of stills used by them in the bonâ fide exercise of their profession, provided they carry on no trade or business which involves the manufacture from or with spirit of any article for sale. The official right to enter upon and inspect the premises on which the still is allowed to be kept is reserved in these cases (Orders of the Commissioners, made under ibid.)

(j) The term “sweets” means any liquor made from fruit and sugar or from fruit or sugar mixed with any other material, which has undergone a process of fermentation in the course of manufacture (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 52).

1488. The following persons are exempt from liability to make any declaration or to take out establishment licences, namely:— (1) members of the Royal Family (i); (2) every representative Irish peer (k) or Irish member of Parliament who is ordinarily resident in Ireland and who does not reside in Great Britain except during the session of Parliament and for forty days before and forty days after the session; and (3) persons ordinarily resident in Ireland, and residing in Great Britain by order of the Lord-Lieutenant for the purpose of public business (l). The sheriff of any county, or mayor or other officer of any corporation or Royal burgh, is exempt from liability to take out an establishment licence in respect of any servants or carriages kept by him for the purposes of his office during his year of service (m).

Repayments

1489. When licence duty at a higher rate becomes due and is paid in respect of any carriage or armorial bearings by any person who holds a licence, the duty paid on the licence held is repaid to him (n).

1490. Every person who keeps (o) a dog of the age of six months or upwards (p) is required to take out a dog licence annually (q). The licence whenever taken out (r) is granted only on payment of the full year's duty, namely, 7s. 6d. for each dog, and expires on the 31st December of the year of issue (s). Production of licence.

The holder of a licence is required to produce it when requested to be read and examined by an officer of the county council of the county within which he keeps the dog (b) 1491. A dog licence need not be taken out by a blind person in respect of a dog kept and used solely by such person for his or her guidance (c), nor by the master of a duly licensed pack of hounds for whelps under the age of twelve months and never entered or used with the pack (d).

Exemption from dog licence duty may also be obtained for not more than two dogs by a farmer keeping them solely for tending sheep or cattle on a farm, or by a shepherd using the dogs in the exercise of his calling or occupation. The occupier of an unenclosed sheep farm who owns a certain number (e) of sheep may obtain exemption in respect of a number of dogs and kept by him solely for tending sheep on the farm (f).

On a conviction for a second or subsequent offence the justices may not mitigate the penalty to less than one-fourth (Murray v Thompson (1889), 22 Q. B. D. 142); and as to recovery of duties and penalties, see p. 737, post.

(f) Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1878 (41 & 42 Vict c. 15), s 22. In these cases a certificate of exemption must be held. This certificate is granted by the proper officer of the county council, and expires on the 31st December next following the date of issue (Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1878 (41 & 42 Vict c 15), s 22; Finance Act, 1908 (8 Edw 7, c 16), s 6, Stat R & O, 1908, p 470, clause XIII.). The grant of the certificate requires the previous consent of a petty sessional court (Dogs Act, 1906 (6 Edw 7, c 32), s 5; Dogs Act Rules, 1906 (Stat R & O., 1906, p. 144). Where a certificate of exemption is claimed by a farmer for two dogs, the justices are not entitled to refuse their consent to the grant of such certificate solely on the ground that only one dog is necessary for tending the stock on the farm (Johnson v Wilson, [1909] 2 K B. 497). But the county council has an absolute discretion to give or refuse a certificate of exemption (Graham v Harg (1894), 58 J. P. 835; Phillips v. Evans, [1896] 1 Q. B. 305; Stat R. & O, 1908, p. 470, clause I.). The possession of the certificate does not exempt, unless the dog is kept solely for the purpose of tending sheep and cattle (Mackenzie v Scott (1906), (K B. D.), 7th March, unreported); but some evidence must be given to show that the dog for which the certificate is held was used otherwise than in tending sheep and cattle on the farm (James v. Nicholas (1886), 50 J. P. 292). An isolated instance of the use of the dog for catching rabbits with the knowledge of, but without encouragement on the part of, the owner would not be sufficient to destroy the exemption (Egan v. Floyde (1910), 102 L. T. 745), and see, further, title ANIMALS, Vol. I., p. 404, note (u). .

(p) The "keeping" in order to involve liability must be by the person for his own use or for the purpose of letting on hire (Davey v. Thompson (1886), 34 W. R. 411, and a cab proprietor who has in reserve in his yard a number of spare cabs ready for use and intended to be used does not "keep" them in this sense until he begins to use them (London County Council v. Fairbank, [1911] 2 K. B. 32)

(a) The term "carriage" includes a tramcar and a motor car, but does not include a railway carriage (Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 8), s. 4 (1), Locomotives on Highways Act, 1896 (59 & 60 Vict. c. 36), s. 1), and see title TRAMWAYS AND LIGHT RAILWAYS. A railway carriage for this purpose includes an electric tramcar running along a public road on lines constructed under an order made under the Light Railways Act, 1896 (59 & 60 Vict. c. 48) (*A.-G. v. (c) Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 23), s. 11. This applies where the carriage is let on a hire-purchase agreement, a right to resume possession on default in payment of any instalments of the purchase-money being reserved to the person letting on hire (Barker v. Callow (1877), 2 C. P. D. 558)

(d) Revenue Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 14), s. 27

(e) For definition of "hackney carriage," see pp 691, 692, post.

(f) For definition of motor car, see note (l), p 690, post. Motor bicycles and motor tricycles are liable to motor car duty (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 86 (9), Sched. V, Part II).

(g) Where the carriage has four or more wheels, and is fitted or adapted to be drawn by two or more horses or mules, or drawn or propelled by mechanical power, the annual rate of duty is £2 2s., for such a carriage if drawn by one horse or mule only, £1 1s., on a carriage having less than four wheels, 15s (Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 8), s. 4). Liability to duty at the higher rate is incurred if the carriage is fitted to be, though not proved to have been, drawn by two or more horses or mules (Flint v. Muller (1891), June 5th, Q. B. D. (unreported)). Where a person commences to keep or use a carriage on or after the 1st October in any year, he is entitled to obtain a licence at half the usual duty (Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 8), s. 4 (2)).

(1) for a waggon or cart constructed or adapted for use and used solely for the conveyance of goods or burden in the course of trade or husbandry, provided that the owner's name and residence or place of business are legibly painted on it in letters at least one inch in length (h);

(2) for a waggon or cart used for conveying the owner or his family to or from any place of worship on Sunday or on Christmas Day or Good Friday or any day appointed for a public fast or thanksgiving, provided such vehicle is otherwise non-taxable (i);

(3) for any carriage by reason only of its use, without payment or promise of payment, for the conveyance of electors to or from the poll at an election (k).

Licence duty
on motor cars,

1501. The licence duty upon motor cars weighing less than 3 tons unladen is assessed upon a scale based on the horse-power of the car, the unit of horse-power being calculated according to regulations made by the Treasury (l). Licences for motor bicycles or tricycles are granted at a fixed rate (m).

As to when a person commences to keep the carriage so as to become liable to pay duty, see London County Council v. Farnbank, [1911] 2 K B 32.

(h) Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 8), s. 4 (3). The vehicle in order to be non-taxable must be ejusdem generis with a waggon (Danby v. Hunter (1879), 5 Q. B. D. 20). It must be inscribed before use (Whitrow v. Brown (1891), 56 J. P. 374); and it must be constructed or adapted solely for use, and solely used, for the conveyance of goods or burden (Hanworth v. Williams (1903), 67 J. P. 315, Moore v. Lewis, [1906] 1 K. B. 27; Strutt and Parker v. Clift, [1910] 1 K. B. 1, distinguishing Egan v. Floyd (1910), 102 L. T. 745). Where the cart is non-taxable, it does not cease to be entitled to exemption if used occasionally by the owner to drive his farm hands to and from their work (Latchford v. Kelsey (1907), 96 L. T. 620); nor from the mere fact that persons are driven in it to market for the purpose of selling goods at such market (Ook v. Hobbs, [1911] 1 K. B. 14). The use of a properly inscribed vehicle for carrying circus accessories and performers in a parade is not a use "in the course of trade or husbandry" (Speak v. Powell (1873), 1 R. 9 Exch. 25), nor is use by a traveller for the purpose of collecting debts and obtaining orders (Whitlam v. Morris (1905) 70 J. P. 11), but a dog-cart fitted and used for carrying samples may be, if so found by the magistrate (Collman v. Stokes (1910), 103 L. T. 592).

(i) That is, when the waggon or cart is duly inscribed and is otherwise used solely for the conveyance of burden in the course of husbandry (Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 20), s. 6); see the text, supra.

(l) The car must be one propelled by mechanical power, must not be used for the purpose of drawing more than one vehicle, and the combined weight of the car and vehicle unladen must not exceed 4 tons (Locomotives on Highways Act, 1896 (59 & 60 Vict. c. 36), s. 1; Motor Car Act, 1903 (3 Edw. 7, c. 36), s. 20; Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 86 (1)); and see title STREET AND AERIAL TRAFFIC. horse-power of the car (London County Council v. Turner (1911), 105 L. T. 380). The Treasury regulations provide that the horse-power of any motor car deriving its motive power wholly from a steam or other engine worked by a cylinder or cylinders is to be taken as. — (1) In the case of a single-cylinder engine, the horse-power attributable to the cylinder of the engine, and in the case of an engine having two or more cylinders, the sum of the horse-powers of the separate cylinders. The horse-power attributable to any cylinder is taken as proportional to the square of the internal diameter of the cylinder calculated on the basis of 1 horse-power for every $2\frac{1}{2}$ square inches in the case of a single-acting cylinder having a single piston, or for every $1\frac{1}{2}$ square inches in the case of such a cylinder having two pistons, or for $1\frac{1}{2}$ square inches in the case of a double-acting cylinder having a single piston. (2) Where a motor car derives its motive power otherwise than from an engine worked by a cylinder or cylinders, it is to be deemed to be of a horse-power exceeding 12, but not exceeding 15, provided that where the motive power is derived in part from an engine worked by a cylinder or cylinders, the horse-power is not to be taken to be less than that attributable to such cylinder or cylinders. (3) Where, in consequence of exceptional design or construction of the engine, the horse-power calculated according to these rules is substantially less than the actual horse-power, it is to be taken to be the same as that of a car of equal efficiency deriving its motive power from an ordinary cylinder engine. A motor car of a weight exceeding 3 tons might be liable to carriage licence duty at the ordinary rate.

(r) The rate at present in force is 15s. When the carriage is first kept or used after the 1st October in any year, a licence is granted at half the yearly rate (Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict c 8), s 4) It is submitted that the licence at the reduced rate might be obtained where the carriage was kept before the 1st October in any year, provided it was not also used prior to that date; see London County Council v. Fairbank, [1911] 2 K B 32

(s) Locomotives on Highways Act, 1896 (59 & 60 Vict. c 36), s 8; Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 86 (3) This duty is charged at the following rate —

Where the weight exceeds 1 ton but does not exceed 2 tons unladen	2	2	0
Exceeds 2 tons unladen	3	3	0

The full duty for the year must be paid for the light locomotive, no matter when the licence is taken out. The Local Government Board having, by regulations (Stat R. & O., 1904, p 522) dealing with the use of motor cars on highways, provided that, subject to the conditions laid down in the Order, a motor car might be used on a highway if the weight of the car unladen does not exceed 5 tons, or, with the weight of any unladen vehicle drawn by it, 6½ tons, the additional light locomotive duty has, since the coming into force of the regulations been levied on cars not exceeding 5 tons weight unladen. It is difficult to see what is the legal justification for this impost on cars between the weights of 3 tons and 5 tons.

(t) Revenue Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict c 14), ss 18, 19 (3), Motor Car Act, 1903 (3 Edw 7, c 36), s. 13. The employment, to involve liability to pay the licence duty, must be in one of the enumerated capacities (Whitely v. Burns, [1908] 1 K. B. 705). The person who furnishes a male servant on hire is regarded as the employer of the servant (Revenue Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict c 14), s 19 (4)). The occasional or partial use in a taxable capacity of a male servant ordinarily employed in a non-taxable capacity does not involve liability to pay licence duty (Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 16), s. 5; Yelland v.

1506. Any person employing a male servant without a licence, or employing a greater number of male servants than he is authorised by any licence held by him to employ, is liable to a penalty of £20 (u).

1507 The licence covers the employment, by the person to whom it was granted, at any time during its currency, of a number of male servants not exceeding the number for which it was taken out (a); and, whenever issued, it is granted only on payment of the full duty for the year and expires on the 31st December following (b).

Exemptions.

(1) Officers in the Army or Navy, in respect of any soldiers or sailors employed by them in accordance with the regulations of His Majesty's Service (c);

(2) Hotel keepers, publicans and refreshment house keepers, in respect of any servants wholly employed by them in the course of their business (d);

Winter (1885), 53 L. T. 912; Helsby v. Wintle (1895), 59 J. P. 309; Bedford (Duke) v. London County Council (1911), 104 L. T. 889; but if the servant was bond fide employed in both capacities, a licence must be taken out (Yelland v. Vincent (1883), 47 J. P. 230). Where a male servant is employed for a portion only of each day and does not reside in his employer's house, no licence need be taken out, unless the portion during which he is employed is a substantial one (Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 16), s. 5; Schulze v. Steele (1890), 27 Sc. L. R. 636; see Bedford (Duke) v. London County Council, supra, Braddell v. Baker (1911), 27 T. L. R. 182). In a case not coming within the exemption, employment in one of the enumerated capacities for a period, however short, makes a licence necessary (Spencer v. Sheerman (1871), 23 L. T. 873). The term "male servant" does not include an apprentice employed under a bond fide contract of apprenticeship, whatever be the nature of his duties (Horan v. Hayhoe, [1904] 1 K. B. 288); and men employed to work in a garden, and found by the justices to be labourers, are not taxable as under-gardeners (Dillon v. Bath (Marquis) (1899), 81 L. T. 186; Bedford (Duke) v. London County Council, supra). A "jobbing gardener" is not a taxable male servant (Braddell v. Baker, supra). Three drivers employed by a carman under contract with a local education authority to drive defective children from their homes to provided schools have been held not to be "coachmen" within the Act (London County Council v. Allen (1912), 29 T. L. R. 30). The steward of a club may be taxable as the male servant of the committee of the club, although he is himself a member of the club (Solomon v. Cropper (1898), 79 L. T. 301). The committee of a club are liable for male servant's licence duty on male cooks employed at the club, although the club is subsidised by the Government (London County Council v. Houndle (1911), 105 L. T. 211).

R. 564), but it would not cover male servants employed in one of the enumerated capacities in an ordinary trading establishment (Whiteley v. Burns, [1908] 1 K. B. 705, as explained in Marchant v. London County Council, [1910] 2 K. B. 379).

SUB-SECT. 6 — Game, to Kill.

Who must be licensed

1509. Every person who takes, kills, or pursues, or assists in the taking, killing, or pursuing of any game (f), or any woodcock, snipe, quail, landrail, conies, or deer, must take out a licence (g).

Penalty for acting with-

1510. A penalty of £20 is incurred by any unlicensed person who does any act for which he is required to hold a game licence (h).

Effect of trespassing

1511. A licence to kill game (i) becomes void on the conviction of the holder of the offence of unlawfully trespassing in pursuit of game, or of refusing to quit the lands trespassed on, or to give his name and address when requested to do so by the landowner or his servant by whom he is found trespassing (j).

The taking of game out of a trap in which it had been accidentally caught with a view to killing or keeping it is a taking for which a licence must be held (Watkins v. Price (1877), 47 L. J. (M. C.) 1), and see title GAME, Vol. XV., p. 209. The taking, killing, and pursuing game without a licence constitutes only one offence (Lorton v. Jefferies (1893), 58 J. Where during the currency of a licence the gamekeeper ceases to be in the service of the master, the licence may be transferred to the licensed male servant who succeeds him in the employment (o).

SUB-SECT 7.—(Guns)

1515. Every person (p) who uses or carries a gun (q) elsewhere than in a dwelling-house or the curtilage (r) of a dwelling-house, and who does not hold a licence to kill game, must take out a gun licence (s). Where a gun is carried in parts by two or more persons in company, each is required to hold a licence (a).

In the latter case a deputation or appointment signed by the master who took out the male servant's licence is required before the game licence is issued (Game Licences Act, 1860 (23 & 24 Vict c. 90), s 7)

(n) Ibid The duty for the year is £2. The full duty is chargeable irrespective of the date when the licence is taken out, and the licence expires on the 31st July following (Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict c. 10), s 4). (r) See title GAME, Vol XV, p. 251, note (g). The curtilage of a dwelling-house must be a space occupied in connection with the house and not separated from it by any intervening land (Asquith v. Griffin (1884), 48 J. P. 724). It is the practice to grant a gun licence to the proprietor of a travelling shooting gallery, to cover the use of a gun by customers resorting to the gallery.

SECT. 1

Drawbacks.

1520 “Drawback” is the repayment, upon the exportation of a commodity, of duties previously paid upon it (i). Definition

Drawbacks are under the management of the Commissioners of Customs and Excise (j), and must be paid in British currency (k). Management

Excise drawbacks are allowed on the exportation of beer, spirits, glucose, saccharine, and home-grown tobacco manufactured (l). Excise drawbacks

Customs drawbacks are allowed on the exportation of beer, coffee, sugar and sugar goods, saccharine, and imported tobacco manufactured in the United Kingdom (m). Customs drawbacks

SUB-SECT. 2 — Conditions of Payment.

1521 Every exporter of goods on drawback must enter into bond for the due shipping and landing of the goods (n). He must give a shipping notice bill in a prescribed form for every consignment of goods to be shipped (o). Goods on which drawback is claimed must be of merchantable quality (p); they must be correctly described in the shipping notice to export; and goods found on examination to be of less value than therein stated, or to vary from the description given, are liable to forfeiture, and the person entering the goods and claiming the drawback incurs a penalty of Entry for shipping and landing.

(i) See Wharton's Law Lexicon. It is also sometimes paid under special enactments on duty-paid commodities consumed within the United Kingdom, e g, motor spirit used for purposes other than supplying motive power for motor cars under the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 85 (3) (see p 621, ante), molasses delivered under the Regulations of the Commissioners by a refiner of sugar to a licensed distiller to be used in the manufacture of spirits under the Finance Act, 1901 (1 Edw 7, c 7), s 2, Sched. (f) This allowance is intended to compensate the distiller for the increased cost of producing plain British spirits, owing to the restrictions placed on the manufacture in order to secure the revenue against evasion. The distiller is thus placed in a position to compete in neutral markets with producers of foreign spirits, who enjoy comparative freedom from revenue restrictions in producing their spirits. No stamp duty is payable upon any receipt given for any allowance paid on goods exported (Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), Sched. I (12)). As to stamp duties generally, see pp. 700 et seq. post.

(g) British plain spirits are spirits which are liable to a duty of excise and which have had no flavour communicated thereto or ingredient or material mixed therewith (Spirits Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 24), s. 3; and see pp. 623 et seq. ante).

(5) Spirits, other than methylic alcohol, received for use in arts or manufactures duty free under the Finance Act, 1902 (l), s. 8 (m).

1528. An allowance of 5*d*. per proof gallon is paid on (n)—

(1) British compounded spirits of a strength exceeding 11 degrees over proof, upon their deposit on drawback in a duty-free warehouse by a licensed rectifier (o),

(2) British compounded spirits of a strength not exceeding 11 degrees over proof on being exported, shipped as stores, or used in a bonded warehouse for a purpose to which foreign spirits may be applied (p);

(3) British liqueurs, tinctures or medicinal spirits, essences, and perfumed spirits, on exportation or shipment as stores (q).

1529. No payment in respect of these allowances may be made after the expiration of two years from the date of the deposit, user, or shipment of the spirits, as the case may be (r).

General

Revenue.

1530. All duties chargeable as stamp duties, and all fees collected by means of stamps, are under the management of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue (s), who, in addition to their general powers in respect of the Inland Revenue (t), are specially empowered

(m) Revenue Act, 1906 (6 Edw 7, c. 20), s. 1 (1), and see note (o), p. 624; ante

(n) The increased allowance is intended to cover the further loss in the production of compounded spirits which arises from the waste of duty-paid spirits used in the manufacture of compounds, and also to compensate the producer for the revenue prohibition (see p. 642, ante) against making compounds on or near the premises of a licensed distiller; see Spirits Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict c. 24), s. 88. To be entitled to the higher rate of allowance, the spirits must have been distinctively altered from the character of British plain spirits (Finance Act, 1902 (2 Edw. 7, c. 7), s. 5 (2))

(q) Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1885 (48 & 49 Vict c. 51), s. 3; Finance Act, 1902 (2 Edw 7, c. 7), s. 5. In the case of tinctures, or medicinal spirits, essences and perfumed spirits, the allowance is payable whether the goods are exported through a duty-free warehouse or direct from the premises of a rectifier or compounder; see p. 643, ante. If intended to be exported in cask, they must first be deposited on drawback in a duty-free warehouse for exportation (Spirits Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 24), s. 95 (1), (2)); and see note (r), p. 643, ante in relation to stamps to compel any person who receives such fees and duties to account for the receipts (a); to grant and revoke licences to deal in stamps (b); to frame regulations with regard to allowances for spoiled or misused stamps (c); to repurchase stamps which have not been spoiled or used and were legally purchased within two years before the application for repayment (d); to discontinue the use of an old die with or without the provision of a new one (e); and to issue warrants for the search of premises of persons suspected of possessing forged stamps (f).

1531. The term "stamp duties" as here used includes all duties collected by means of stamps; it is, however, frequently used in a narrower sense to describe the duties imposed by the Stamp Act, 1891 (g), or of a similar character. It is not possible to frame a logical definition which would include all the latter duties and no others; but the characteristic of most of them is that the instrument to be stamped is itself the subject-matter of taxation, whereas

By the Finance Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo 5, c 48), s 20, provision may be made by Order in Council for the exercise of certain powers and duties by the Postmaster-General either concurrently with, or to the exclusion of, the Commissioners of Inland Revenue. As to national health and unemployment insurance stamps see the National Insurance Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo 5, c 55), s 108; and title WORK AND LABOUR.

The proceedings are by writ sued out of the High Court, compliance with the terms of which may be enforced by attachment (Re Coulson (1894), cited in Highmore, Stamp Laws, 3rd ed, p 18). If cause is shown, the court may make such order as seems just; as to legal proceedings, see, further, p 737, post.

(e) Stamp Duties Management Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict c 38), s 22. Notice of the discontinuance of the use of a die is given by the Commissioners of Inland Revenue in the London, Edinburgh, and Dublin Gazettes, naming a day not less than one month after the publication of the notice, after which the die shall not be a lawful die for denoting the payment of duty. No instrument first executed or dated after such day, and no postal packet posted after such day, is deemed to be duly stamped if the payment is denoted by the discontinued die; but if any such instrument has been first executed outside the United Kingdom, it may be stamped with the lawful die without payment of any penalty, if presented within fourteen days of its being received in the United Kingdom. Persons having stamped material rendered useless by the discontinuance of a die may send such material to Somerset House or the head offices of the Commissioners in Dublin or Edinburgh, and the Commissioners may restamp the same material or issue other stamped material of an equal amount (ibid, ss 22, 27, as amended by the Revenue Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c 46), s 10). The definition of a postal packet in the Post Office Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 48), s 89 (see title POST OFFICE, Vol XXII., p. 630, note (h)), is applicable by virtue of the Interpretation Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 63), s. 38.

in other duties collected by means of stamps the instrument, whether it has any independent function or not, is regarded rather as a vehicle for the collection of a tax aimed at a specific object. Thus, the duties which originated as stamp duties (in the narrower sense) upon probates and letters of administration have now developed into a charge upon the devolution of property on death. The fact that, in respect of certain transactions which could formerly have been effected with or without a written instrument, the preparation of an instrument is now made obligatory for the purpose of protecting the revenue, though it obscures, does not destroy, the value of the distinction suggested above (h).

Dealers in stamps.

1532. No person, unless employed by the Post Office, may deal in stamps without a licence (i).

Allowances for spoiled or misused
stamps.

1533. Any application for an allowance in respect of spoiled or misused stamps must be made within two years after the stamp has been spoiled or become useless, or, in the case of an executed instrument, within two years after the first execution, or such further time as the Commissioners may in certain cases prescribe, and before the commencement of any legal proceedings in which the instrument could have been offered in evidence. If these conditions are complied with, and the instrument or stamps delivered up, allowance is made, subject to regulations (j) made by the Commissioners and to the production of such evidence as they may require, in a number of cases particularly specified in the Stamp

(h) Compare Minister of Stamps v Townend, [1909] A C 633, 639, P. C. For cross-references to various stamp duties, see note (r), p. 706, post; and as to excise duties collected by means of so-called stamps, see pp. 619, 621, ante.

(i) Stamp Duties Management Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c 38), ss 4, 7. Such a licence is granted by the Commissioners, or any officer authorised by the Commissioners, to a particular person or firm, and in respect of a particular place or places named in the licence. The licensee must give security for £100, and, at every place where he is licensed to deal, exhibit a notice with his name and the words "Licensed to Deal in Stamps." On the purchase of stamps a discount may be allowed by the Treasury, and on the determination of the licence, the value, subject to such discount, of all stamps properly obtained and in the possession of the licensee at the time of the determination of the licence, and presented within six months of the determination, may be repaid by the Commissioners (ibid., ss 3, 5, 8, 25). Discount is now allowed only on the sale of stamps appropriated to foreign bills. For offences in connection with dealing in stamps, see p. 703, post.

(j) The Commissioners require that claims made in London should be supported by the personal attendance at Somerset House, Strand, W.C., or Telegraph Street, E.C., of the person for whose use or benefit the stamps were purchased, or of an agent appointed by him in writing. The instrument must be presented in a complete state, and adhesive stamps which have been affixed must not be detached, unless a certificate is produced from the chief officer of any court, registry or office where the original instrument has been lodged that the stamps are a fit subject for allowance. A declaration is required in all cases where the claim amounts to 10s. or more. A special form of declaration is required in the case of policies of insurance (other than marine); see Highmore, Stamp Laws, 3rd ed., pp. 26 et seq.

Duties Management Act, 1891 (k); but, except as provided for by that Act, no claim can be enforced (l).

Affidavits and declarations.

Any affidavit or statutory declaration to be made for the purposes of any Act relating to stamp duties may be made before any of the Commissioners or any person authorised by them in that behalf, any commissioner for oaths (m), justice (n), or notary public (o) in the United Kingdom, or at any place outside the United Kingdom before any person duly authorised (p).

SECT. 2.—Offences in Relation to Stamps.

1535. In addition to the more serious offences, which are made respectively felonies or misdemeanours (g), fines (i) in connection with stamp duties generally are imposed upon any unauthorised person dealing in stamps or exhibiting a notice importing that he is licensed so to deal (s); any person, whether licensed or not, who hawks stamps (t); any person who defaces adhesive stamps before use otherwise than as sanctioned by the Commissioners (a); any person who fraudulently removes, or causes to be removed, any adhesive stamp from any instrument or postal packet with intent that it should be used again, or sells, offers for sale, or uses a stamp so removed (b); and any person who is concerned in any

This is unfortunate, as there is another description of penalty provided for by the Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), which is not recoverable except as the price of having the instrument stamped after execution; see ibid., s. 15 (1), as contrasted with s. 15 (2) (c). The result of the failure to observe this distinction may be seen in a passage from the speech of Lord MACNAGHTEN in Inland Revenue Commissioners v. Maple & Co (Paris), reported in 77 L. J. (K. (N s) 1133, per POLLOCK, C.B., at p 1134) It should also be observed that prior to the passing of the Stamp Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict c 97), duties on conveyances and leases were charged on the consideration expressed Since 1870 the duty has been chargeable on the true consideration Presentation for stamping with a statement of the true facts would afford evidence of no intent to defraud A similar provision requiring a statement of the consideration for an instrument chargeable with ad valorem duty has been held to apply in the case of failure to state the consideration paid by a purchaser of a house to a builder who, being entitled to have a lease granted to himself or his nominee, procured the grant of the lease to the purchaser as lessee (A.G. v Brown (1849), 3 Exch 662) As to the note for steward of a manor for entry on court rolls (fine, £50), see Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c 39), s 66 (3) (b), and see title COPYHOLDS, Vol VIII, p 63, see also Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 94

The persons respectively liable to the fine are specified in the Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c 39), s. 15 (2) (d); see Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict c 39), s 31, as to bank-notes (fine, £50 from the banker and £20 from the person taking the note), ibid., s. 38, as to bills of exchange or promissory notes (fine, £10), ibid., s. 40, as to bills of lading (fine, £50); ibid., s. 78, as to leases or agreements for certain transactions (e); and any person whose duty it is to enrol, register, or enter any instrument chargeable with duty who enrolls, registers, or enters an instrument not duly stamped (h).

These fines can only be recovered by information in the High Court (l).

1537. Proceedings for the recovery of fines cannot be strictly classified as either civil or criminal; they are in form civil, and the fine is recovered as a debt due to the Crown, but the liability is incurred as the punishment for an offence (m). The common law rules as to criminal liability are therefore inapplicable, and a master is liable for fines incurred through the acts of his servants if his knowledge or authority can be imputed (n), but the measure of his liability is apparently not, as in the case of certain acts prohibited by statute (o), so absolute as to prevent his proving non-complicity (p).

SECT 3.—Stamp Duties upon Instruments Generally.

1538 The development of taxation has led to a large increase in the duties collected by means of stamps. The duties dealt with in the following paragraphs are those collected under the Stamp Act, 1891 (q), or provisions amending or analogous to that Act (i). The duties charged are those specified in the Schedule, the instruments therein enumerated being in many cases further defined by reference to provisions in the Act.

1539. In some cases special penal consequences are imposed upon the failure either to stamp particular instruments (s) or to execute and stamp instruments in respect of particular transactions (t), but apart from such provisions there is no general obligation to stamp any instrument. The omission to do so is, however, visited with the consequence that, unless properly stamped, the instrument, if it is executed in the United Kingdom, or, wherever executed, relates to any property situated or any matter or thing to be done in the United Kingdom, cannot, except in criminal proceedings, be received in evidence or be available for any purpose whatever (a).

(g) 54 & 55 Vict c 39

(a) Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict c 39), s 14. As a result of this provision a purchaser may refuse to complete upon the ground that an instrument necessary to the vendor's title is not duly stamped (Whiting to Loomes (1881), 17 Ch. D 10, C. A.), but not where the instrument is unnecessary (Ex parte Birkbeck Freehold Land Society (1883), 24 Ch D 119), and see Re Weir and Pitt's Contract (1911), 55 Sol. Jo 536, and a purchaser of land subject to tenancies can insist on the leases or agreements being properly stamped (Smith v. Wyley (1852), 16 Jur 1136; Coleman v. Coleman (1898), 79 L T 66); and under appropriate circumstances the court will order production of an instrument for the purpose of its being stamped (Hall v. Bainbridge (1845), 9 Jur 451; compare Dyke v. Brewer (1849), 2 Car. & Kir. 828).

When an instrument is tendered, the court is not bound to take an objection of so doubtful a character as to raise a test case (Don Francesco v. De Moe, [1908] S. C. 7); but, where the objection is clear, it is the duty of 1540. The Schedule to the Stamp Act specifies the duties which are chargeable upon certain descriptions of instruments, and occasions may arise in which an instrument falls within more than one category. The statute deals specifically with two possible cases :

the court to take it (Dowker v Williamson (1889), 5 T L R 382, Viron v Albion Marine Insurance Co (1867), L R 2 Exch 338). The General Council of the Bar have expressed the opinion that it is undesirable that counsel should either object to the admissibility of any document upon the ground that it is insufficiently stamped, unless such defect goes to the validity of the document, or take part in any discussion in support of any such objection unless invited to do so by the court (see Annual Statement of the General Council of the Bar, 1901-2, p 5, title BARRISTERS, Vol II, p 411, note (b)), and the disavowal with which stamp objections are regarded is occasionally manifested by depriving the successful party of costs (Genforsikrings Aktieselskabet (Scandinavia Insurance Co of Copenhagen) v Du Costa, [1911] 1 K B 137, following Home Marine Insurance Co v Smith, [1898] 1 Q B 829). The ruling of a judge on a stamp objection that a document is sufficiently stamped or does not require a stamp is final (R S C, Ord 39, r 8, Blevitt v Triton, [1892] 2 Q B 327, C A ; Mander v Ridgway, [1898] 1 Q B 501, Lowe v Dorling (1905), 74 L J (K B) 794 (county court)), but an appeal lies from a ruling rejecting a document (Sharples v Rickard (1857), 2 H & N. 57), see The Belfort (1884), 9 P D 215. As to the meaning of "duly stamped," see pp 712 et seq., post. and as to the scope of this statutory provision generally, see titles CONTRACT, Vol VII, pp 530, 531, EVIDENCE, Vol XIII, pp 515—517.

(b) Inland Revenue Commissioners v Maple & Co (Paris), Ltd., [1908] A C 22. In that case the House of Lords held that the terms of the Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict c 39), s 14 (4), showed that it was intended to include in the general charge certain conveyances executed abroad. It is submitted that the sub-section also shows that general words throughout the Act which impose a liability to duty or fines must also be read as subject to such limitation as would exclude the cases in which that sub-section would have no application. The difficulty as regards the imposition of fines suggested in the same case ([1906] 2 K B 834, C A, per FLETCHER MOULTON, L J, at pp. 847, 848) would thus be avoided; and see note.(r), p 703, ante. Thus, an ante-nuptial contract executed in Calcutta and relating to property in Calcutta requires no stamp (Gilchrist v Herbert (1872), 20 W. R. 348), nor do receipts executed abroad relating to foreign transactions (James v. Catherwood (1823), 3 Dow & Ry (K B) 190, Bristow v Sequeville (1850), 5 Exch. 275), but a conveyance of land in Australia executed in the United Kingdom must be stamped (Re Wright and Inland Revenue Commissioners (1855), 11 Exch 458). As to shares registered in a colonial register, see title COMPANIES, Vol V., p. 158. As to cases where special provision is made in respect of instruments executed abroad, see p. 718, post.

(c) Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict c 39), s. 3 (2). As to cases of documents containing more than one instrument or relating to several and distinct matters, but bearing only one stamp, see p. 715, post. For special cases where exemptions are granted in respect of indorsements on

(2) an instrument which relates to several distinct matters must, except where express provision to the contrary is made, be separately and distinctly charged in respect of each matter, and for this purpose distinct provisions constituting together the consideration for an instrument liable in respect of one of them to ad valorem duty are treated as separate and distinct matters (d). But two other cases may arise:

(3) an instrument may relate to several matters which nevertheless cannot be regarded as distinct, and

(4) an instrument, though relating substantially to one matter, may fall into one category or another, according to the view adopted of its legal operation.

The line of division between classes (2) and (3) is not easy to draw, and it should be noted with reference to many of the cases cited here and throughout this title that, although useful for illustrating principles, they are decisions upon Acts of Parliament now repealed, and, in some cases, only decisions at non prius upon the admissibility of documents, and cannot be regarded as possessing the same authority as revenue cases decided upon the Acts now in force. It is, however, well established that where a provision in an instrument is such that, even if it had not been expressed, it would have been implied by law, such a provision is not distinct and no duty is chargeable in respect of it (e), and that the fact that several persons join in an instrument does not make their shares instruments already stamped, see under the several titles in the Stamp Act, 1851 (54 & 55 Vict c 39), Sched I. In such cases, if the space on the original deed is exhausted, a document may be added and indorsements made on it without a further stamp being required (Orme v Young (1815), 4 Camp 336).

in the transaction separate and distinct matters, provided, that there is a community of the same subject-matter, either as to property or interest (f), in all the parties. There are, further, a number of cases in which various instruments, which, in respect of their leading characteristic, were either not liable to duty, or if liable were properly stamped, have been held not to be chargeable with any further duty by reason of the inclusion of provisions considered to be merely ancillary to the leading object (g).

(f) Baker v Jardine (1784), 13 East, 235, n (bill of sale by the crew of a privateer of their shares in prize-money), Bowen v Ashley (1805), 1 Bos. & P. (N. R.) 271 (bond by performers in which none would have joined unless all had joined); Davis v Williams (1811), 13 East, 232 (agreement to contribute to the cost of making a clock), Cook v Jones (1812), 15 East, 237 (grant of an annuity), Goodson v Forbes (1815), 6 Taunt 171 (agreement by several underwriters to refer a dispute on a policy), Allen v Morrison (1828), 8 B. & C. 565 (letter of attorney signed by members of a mutual insurance club); R v South (Inhabitants) (1828), 8 B. & C. 247 (indenture to serve one man for four years and then another for three years), Ramsbottom v Davis (1830), 4 M. & W. 584 (agreement by three persons to indemnify a fourth to the extent of £50 each, to be paid severally), Cooper v Flinn (1841), 3 I. L. R. 172 (lease to joint tenants); Thomas v Bird (1841), 9 M. & W. 68 (release to an administrator by two next of kin; see, however, Freeman v Inland Revenue Commissioners (1871), L. R. 6 Exch. 101), Wall v Bridge (1849), 4 Exch. 193 (conveyance by three persons of a block of shares in which in fact their interests were several), Doe d Croft v Tidbury (1851), 14 C. B. 304 (conveyance by several encroachers upon a common in which each purported to convey the whole encroachment, though in fact their interests were several). So an admission of joint tenants of copyhold tenements was held under Acts now repealed to require only one stamp in respect of each tenement (Traherne v Gardner (1856), 5 E. & B. 913), although a contract of demise to different tenants with a several operation requires separate stamps (Doe d Copley v Day (1811), 13 East, 241). A joint affidavit or statutory declaration, though several persons join, requires only one stamp if it relates to only one matter (Reversionary Interest Society v Inland Revenue Commissioners (1906), 22 T. L. R. 740), but not unless it is really a joint affidavit (Athens v Reynolds (1822), 2 Chit. 14).

In the following cases more than one stamp was held to be necessary — Freeman v Inland Revenue Commissioners, supra (deed, whereby shares in a number of companies held by two executors were divided between them and two other residuary legatees, held to operate as a separate transfer as regards each of the four parties, but not as regards several blocks of shares transferred to one party so that four stamps and no more were required), R v Eton College (1846), 8 Q. B. 526 (deed containing admittances on the sale of a copyhold tenement by five tenants in common). The old cases in which it was held that if an affidavit was entitled in more than one cause as many stamps were required as there were causes (Anon (1811), 3 Taunt. 469, R. v Carlisle (1819), 1 Chit. 451) may still be referred to as illustrating the principle.

If a purchaser at an auction purchases several lots and signs only one instrument in respect of them all, the separate purchases are none the less separate and distinct matters, as to which the question whether any stamp is required must be separately determined (Emmerson v Heelis (1809), 2 Taunt. 38; Roots v Doimer (Lord) (1832), 4 B. & Ad. 77; Walling v Horwood (1847), 12 Jur. 48).

(g) Hughes v King (1815), 1 Stark. 119 (conveyance containing a penalty clause securing observance of certain stipulations by the vendor), Stead v Liddard (1823), 1 Bing. 196 (agreement containing a guarantee by a third party to secure performance), Pratt v Thomas (1831), 4 C. & P. 554, affirmed, sub nom Price v Thomas, 2 B & Ad 218 (lease containing a covenant for rent in which a third party joined; see, however, Wharton v Walton (1845), 7 Q B 474), Meering v Duke (1828), 2 Man & Ry (K B) 121 (agreement for sale of a ship including various provisions for receiving payment of the price), Worthington v Warington (1848), 5 C B 635 (agreement for a lease containing an option to purchase at the end of the term), Walker v Giles (1848), 6 C B 662, and Barnard v Pulsworth (1849), 6 C B 698, n. (mortgage containing an attornment by the mortgagor to the mortgagee), Limmer Asphalt Paving Co v Inland Revenue Commissioners (1872), L R 7 Exch 211, per curiam, at p 217 (provision for payment of part of the consideration by instalments), Kirkwood v Carroll, [1903] 1 K B 531, C A, following Yates v Evans (1892), 61 L J (Q B) 446, and overruling Kirkwood v Smith, [1896] 1 Q B 582 (promissory note containing provision that no time given by the creditor to the principal debtor should affect his right against the surety), General Accident Assurance Corporation v Inland Revenue Commissioners (1906), 8 K (Ct of Sess) 477 (policy of assurance against accident containing a provision as to return of part of the premiums upon death in certain events), Suffield (Lord) v Inland Revenue Commissioners, [1908] 1 K B 865 (mortgage containing provisions making expenses reasonably incurred in preserving the security a charge upon the property mortgaged), and see cases cited in title CONTRACT, Vol VII, p 510.

The following cases in which provisions were held to be "incident to the sale or conveyance of property" within the meaning of the Stamp Act, 1815 (55 Geo 3, c 184), Sched, tit Conveyance, may be referred to as illustrating provisions which are not separate and distinct: Wolsley v Cox (1841), 2 Q B 321 (covenant in a transfer of shares by the transferee to observe the rules of the company), Doe d Phillips v Phillips (1840), 11 Ad & El. 796 (stipulation in a surrender for the grant of a new lease).

On the other hand, in Brightman v Inland Revenue Commissioners (1868), 18 L T 412, an instrument by which land was sold to a trustee for the purchaser for three months, and the reversion conveyed to the purchaser, was held chargeable both as a lease and as a conveyance.

In the following cases provisions were held to be separate and distinct: Coster v Cowling (1831), 7 Bing 456 (lease reserving rent for house, and distinct rent for furniture and fixtures), Wharton v Walton (1845), 7 Q. B 474 (guarantee by a third party in a lease of licensed premises); Lovelock v Franklyn (1846), 8 Q. B 371 (covenant in a lease of one messuage to assign that and four other messuages); Hadgett v Inland Revenue Commissioners (1877), 3 Ex D 46 (appointment of new trustees and conveyance of property to them), Suffield (Lord) v Inland Revenue Commissioners, [1908] 1 K B 865 (provision in a conveyance that grantees should hold the property conveyed as security for a debt upon the terms of another indenture of mortgage). In Lewis v Inland Revenue Commissioners, [1898] 2 Q. B 290, it was admitted that two stamps were required for a separation deed which contained a provision securing an annuity, and a decision to that effect has been given in the county court (Hulse v Hulse (1910), 54 Sol. Jo 704).

bill of exchange payable at sight) The first of the above cases has been sometimes cited as an authority for the proposition that whenever an instrument falls within two categories, the Crown has a choice whether to charge it under one description or the other. Such a proposition does not cover the case of an instrument tendered as evidence, when the question of its being duly stamped or not would have to be decided without reference to any option on the part of the Crown. It is submitted that, subject to the case of an adjudication stamp (see p 716, post), an instrument is not duly stamped unless stamped with the highest duty with which it can be charged, but that the generality of the proposition that whenever an instrument falls within two categories it is chargeable with the higher duty must be limited by reference to the preceding paragraph (see pp 707 et seq., ante), and that where the legislature has imposed a particular rate of duty on a specific and well-defined class of instruments, it is to be inferred that the intention was that that duty, and no other, should be charged on all ordinary instruments of that class, even although there may be another category wide enough to bring such instruments within its scope. Thus, in Prudential Insurance Co v Inland Revenue Commissioners, [1904] 2 K B 658, it was not even argued that the instrument in question, if it should be (as in fact it was) held to be a policy of life insurance, ought to be charged as a "bond or covenant," although it undoubtedly fell within that description. As to documents which are both assignments and bills of exchange, see also title BILLS OF EXCHANGE, PROMISSORY NOTES, AND NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS, Vol II, p 571.

(i) County of Durham Electrical Power Distribution Co v Inland Revenue Commissioners, [1909] 2 K B 604, (C A (agreement for the supply of electricity, assumed for the purposes of argument to be an agreement for the sale of goods, wares, or merchandise, held, nevertheless, liable to duty as a security, on account of a provision for quarterly payments of a minimum sum). It is to be observed that the wording of the Schedule upon which this case was decided first appeared in the Stamp Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c 97), and that the words in the Stamp Act, 1815 (55 Geo 3, c 184), "exemptions from the preceding and all other stamp duties," are replaced by the word "exemptions" alone. Consequently the argument in Horsfall v Hey (1848), 2 Exch 778, by which PARKE, B., disposed of the suggestion that contracts for the sale of goods which also operated as conveyances might be chargeable as such, is no longer available. It is submitted, however, that the conclusion reached by PARKE, B., and also the decision in most of the cases cited in title CONTRACT, Vol. VII, p 540, to the effect that an agreement for the sale of goods was exempt, although it included collateral matters, may be supported by reference to the principles enunciated in the preceding paragraph (see pp 707 et seq., ante), and that the judgments in County of Durham Electrical Power Distribution Co v Inland Revenue Commissioners, supra, must be read strictly with reference to the particular instrument under consideration, which was effective as a security, although the consumer might not take any current.

which the statute is dealing would attribute to them (l), and, although no considerations as to what might be reasonable on the one hand, or oppressive on the other, can affect the conclusion (m), ambiguous words are construed in favour of the subject (n) and a liberal construction given to exemptions (o). The duty being imposed upon instruments and not upon transactions, the fact that it may be possible to devise a means for effecting the latter without resort to the former is no ground for straining the words of the Act in order to prevent such means of escaping liability (p). The court does, however, take every means of defeating an attempt to evade a general liability by a provision in a private Act of Parliament the effect of which might easily pass unnoticed (q).

Inland Revenue Commissioners* (1888), 21 Q B D 352, C A (instrument described as a policy held not to be such); Inland Revenue v. Olver, [1909] A C 427 (instrument held not to be a settlement though couched in the form of a trust), and see, as to cases on conveyances, title SALE OF LAND, and as to promissory notes, title BILLS OF EXCHANGE, PROMISSORY NOTES, AND NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS, Vol II, pp 572, 573) Where, however, an instrument possesses the characteristic of a class charged in the schedule by name and not further defined, the fact that the parties have described an instrument by that name may be a reason for holding it chargeable as such, rather than under some other category which might also include it (British India Steam Navigation Co v. Inland Revenue Commissioners (1881), 7 Q B D 165) As examples of resort to extrinsic evidence, see Tollans v. Fletcher (1847), 1 Exch 20, followed in Willey v. Parrall (1848), 3 Exch 211, and Moore v. Garwood (1849), 4 Exch 681, Ex Ch (letters of allotment shown to differ from the applications, and therefore to be inoperative); R v. Overton (1854), Deans C C 308 (entries shown to be receipts), Don Francesco v. De Alca, [1908] S C 7 (instrument purporting to be an agreement for sale shown to be a mere memorandum of a past transaction); compare Horsfall v. Hey (1848), 2 Exch 778, and Gunnell v. Inland Revenue Commissioners (1899), 81 L T 633 (where it was held that the mere use of the past tense was not sufficient to show that an instrument was merely a memorandum and not operative as a conveyance) Evidence may likewise be given to show that the stamp upon an instrument liable to ad valorem duty is not sufficient (Maynard v. Consolidated Kent Collieries Corporation, [1903] 2 K B 121, C A (deed of transfer), Carr v. Roberts (1831), 2 B & Ad 905, see Robinson v. Vernon (Lord) (1860), 7 C B (N S) 231, 235 (probate stamped for an amount less than the estate under the Stamp Act, 1815 (55 Geo 3, c 184)), or that a bill purporting to be executed abroad was in fact executed in the United Kingdom (Bartlett v. Smith (1843), 11 M & W 483), or that the nominal date upon an instrument is not the true date (Clarke v. Roche (1877), 3 Q B D 170 (instrument executed before a change in the Stamp Act, but dated afterwards))

The case of a post-dated cheque presents in some respects a peculiar problem and has been the subject of conflicting decisions, some of which, though inapplicable to the present law, require notice in view of the rules laid down as to the duty of the court Under the Stamp Acts, 1791 (31 Geo 3, c 25) and 1815 (55 Geo 3, c 184), bankers' cheques payable to bearer on demand and not post-dated were exempt, and the duty on bills of exchange payable after date depended on the period, and penalties were imposed on post-dating such cheques or bills of exchange In Allen v. Keeves (1801), 1 East, 435, and Field v. Woods (1837), 7 Ad & El 114, cheques payable to bearer and unstamped were refused admission upon evidence that they were post-dated On the other hand, in a series of decisions relating to stamped bills, which are summed up in Austin v. Bumyard (1865), 6 B & S 687, bills were admitted although post-dated, and the broad proposition laid down that the court would only look at the instrument as it appeared when tendered in evidence. The same proposition appears in the case of Gatty v. Fry (1877), 2 Ex. D. 265, decided after

SECT. 4.—Regulations as to Stamping Instruments.

1544. Stamp duties must be paid and denoted in accordance with regulations (a), and, except where express provision is made to the contrary, must be denoted by impressed as distinguished from adhesive stamps (b). Where one or more adhesive stamps are used, each must be cancelled in accordance with the regulations, and an instrument is not deemed to be duly stamped unless the stamps are so cancelled, or unless it is otherwise proved that the stamps were affixed thereto at the proper time (c). In the absence the repeal of the provisions against post-dating by the Inland Revenue Repeal Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 99), and the judgments in Royal Bank of Scotland v. Tottenham, [1894] 2 Q. B. 715, C. A., are susceptible of the same meaning. It is submitted, however, that such a proposition was unnecessary to the decisions, and, being inconsistent with the principle applied in Field v. Woods (1837), 7 Ad. & El. 114, which was cited with approval by the Court of Appeal in Maynard v. Consolidated Kent Collieries Corporation, [1903] 2 K. B. 121, C. A., cannot be relied upon. The actual decisions may be supported upon the ground that a post-dated cheque has no legal operation until the date upon its face, when it becomes a bill payable on demand, and as such is properly stamped. This is consistent with Field v. Woods, supra, inasmuch as the exemption within which it was sought to bring the instrument in that case did not cover all bills payable on demand, but only such as were not post-dated. The above reasoning is substantially that adopted by the House of Lords in Misa v. Currie (1876), 1 App. Cas. 554.

(a) Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), s. 2. The duties are paid by the purchase of stamped material or adhesive stamps or when the instrument is presented to the Commissioners for the purpose of being stamped. As to composition for stamp duties in certain cases, see p. 720, post.

(b) Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), s. 2. The use of adhesive stamps is obligatory in the case of foreign bills of exchange and promissory notes (ibid., ss. 34, 35, 38) and contract notes (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 78 (4)). The use of adhesive stamps is permitted in the case of agreements chargeable with 6d. (Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), s. 22), bills of exchange payable on demand (ibid., ss. 34 (1), 38. Finance Act, 1899 (62 & 63 Vict. c. 9), s. 10, Revenue Act, 1909 (9 Edw. 7, c. 43), s. 10), charterparties (Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), s. 49 (2)), certified copies or extracts from any register of births etc. (ibid., s. 64), leases for less than one year of a dwelling-house or part thereof, at a rent of less than £10, or of a furnished dwelling-house or apartments (ibid., s. 78 (1)), letters of renunciation (ibid., s. 79; Finance Act, 1899 (62 & 63 Vict. c. 9), s. 9), letters of attorney for the purpose of appointing a proxy to vote at a meeting and voting papers chargeable with 1d. (Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), s. 80 (2)), notarial acts and protests of a bill of exchange or promissory note (ibid., s. 90), policies of insurance other than sea or life, and chargeable with 1d. (ibid., s. 99), receipts (ibid., s. 101 (2)), transfers of shares in cost-book mines (ibid., s. 110), warrants for goods (ibid., s. 111 (2)), and writs of resignation and clare constat (Titles to Land Consolidation (Scotland) Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 101), s. 116). Except where the use of an appropriated stamp is required (as to which see p. 716, post), duties of less than 2s. 6d. on instruments for which the use of an adhesive stamp is permitted may be denoted by the same stamps as are used for postage (Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), s. 7).

(c) Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), s. 8. As to the persons required to cancel the stamps on the various instruments for which adhesive stamps must or may be used, see the enactments cited in note (b), supra. Having regard to the terms of the Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), s. 15 (see p. 717, post), it is conceived that the proper time for affixing of anything to the contrary appearing upon the face of the instrument, it is presumed that the regulations have been complied with, but the contrary may be proved (d). So also where it appears that an instrument has been stamped, but the stamp is obliterated, it is presumed to have been of sufficient amount (e)

1545. The position of the stamp and the writing upon an instrument must be so related that the stamp appears upon the face of the instrument and cannot be used for or applied to any other instrument written upon the same piece of material, and where more than one instrument is written on one piece of material, each instrument must be separately stamped (f), but, if the number of stamps is less than is required, it may nevertheless be possible for the court to determine which are the instruments to which the stamps are applicable and to admit those instruments (g); and where an instrument has been executed by several parties so as to require several stamps, and the names of some have been crossed out, it is presumed that the stamps relate to the executions by those whose names have not been crossed out (h).

Separate

1546 Where reference to several documents is necessary to prove what is in fact only a single transaction, so that they all really form only one instrument, it is sufficient if one of the documents is properly stamped (i); and it is no ground for objection to the admissibility of an instrument which is properly stamped that it refers to another instrument not properly stamped, provided that it is not sought to give the latter instrument in evidence (l).

the stamp, where no express provision is made, is before execution. A stamp may in general be effectively cancelled by a stamping machine, or by any mark of a defacing character (Viale v Michael (1874), 30 L. description 1547. Where the duty payable upon an instrument depends upon the duty paid upon another instrument, the payment of the latter duty is denoted by a special stamp known as a "denoting stamp" impressed by the Commissioners upon production of both the instruments (l).

1548. Certain instruments can only be duly stamped with a stamp which is appropriated to the description of instrument to which they belong by a word or words written across the face of the stamp, and a stamp so appropriated is not available for any other description of instrument (m).

Adjudication

1549. Upon compliance with the regulations and requirements which the Commissioners are authorised to make, any person may require the Commissioners to express their opinion as to whether any executed instrument, except an instrument chargeable with ad valorem duty and made as a security without limit (n), is liable to duty, and, if so, to what amount; and a voluntary disposition inter vivos is not duly stamped unless the Commissioners have so expressed their opinion (o). An instrument on which the Commissioners have expressed their opinion may not be stamped otherwise than in accordance with their assessment, but if so stamped, or adjudged not to be liable to any duty, it may be stamped with an adjudication stamp as duly stamped or as not liable (p). No objection relating to duty can be raised against an instrument so stamped unless the Commissioners have exceeded their powers;

(l) Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict c 39), s 11. The cases in which the occasion for such denoting stamps arise are —duplicates or counterparts of instruments liable to a higher duty than 5s (see ibid, s 72); securities which are collateral, substituted, or by way of further charge; simultaneous reconveyances of separate properties comprised in one mortgage security on payment thereof (see title MORTGAGE, Vol XXI, pp 134, 315), conveyances and leases executed in pursuance of agreements already stamped with ad valorem duty (see Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict c 39), ss 59, 75; titles LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol XVIII, p 398, note (i); SALE OF LAND), settlements effected by means of several instruments (Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict c 39), s 105); see title SETTLEMENTS

(m) Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict c 39), s 10. In cases not covered by statutory provision the power to direct the use or discontinuance of an appropriated stamp rests with the Commissioners of Inland Revenue by virtue of the Stamp Duties Management Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict c 38), s 22; see p 701, ante. The appropriated stamps now required are stamps for bills of exchange and promissory notes liable to ad valorem duty (impressed or adhesive, according as the instrument is drawn or made in or out of the United Kingdom) and contract notes under the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c 8), s 78 (4). see titles BILLS OF EXCHANGE, PROMISSORY NOTES, AND NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS, Vol II, pp 576—578; STOCK EXCHANGE

(n) For such instruments, see Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict c 39), s 88, Sched. I, title "Mortgage, Bond etc"; Suffield (Lord) v. Inland Revenue Commissioners, [1908] 1 K. B 865; titles BONDS, Vol III, p 103; MORTGAGE, Vol. XXI, pp 135—137

but an objection once upheld cannot be questioned on appeal by obtaining an adjudication stamp after the trial (g)

Persons dissatisfied with the assessment by the Commissioners may, upon payment of the duty, appeal to the High Court within twenty-one days of the assessment. The appeal is by means of a case stated by the Commissioners, and the function of the court is to determine the duty chargeable and, if necessary, order repayment to the appellant of any excess of duty paid by him. The unsuccessful party may be ordered to pay costs (l).

instruments
first executed in the United Kingdom

1550 The general rule as regards the time for stamping instruments first executed in the United Kingdom is that they must be stamped before execution (s), but this rule is subject to certain general qualifications and to many special provisions in respect of particular instruments. The stamping of certain instruments after execution is expressly prohibited (t); on the other hand, certain instruments may, without any penalty, be stamped within thirty days after the first execution, if in the United Kingdom, or fourteen days after assessment by the Commissioners in accordance with the provisions in that behalf (a), and special regulations are made with respect to certain other instruments (b). Subject to such

(g) Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict c 39), s 12 (5), see Tridentical Mutual Assurance Investment and Loan Association v Curzon (1852), 8 Exch 97, and see, generally, title EVIDENCE, Vol XIII. p 515. The Commissioners may exceed their powers by stamping as duly stamped an instrument on which they have no power to adjudicate (Morgan v. Pike (1854), 14 C B 473, per JERVIS, C J, at p 483), or which has been stamped after execution contrary to a statutory provision (Vallance v Forbes (1879), 6 R (Ct of Sess) 1099, Lamberton v Aiken (1899), 2 F (Ct of Sess) 189, see The Belfort (1884), 9 P D 215).

As to costs, see Manchester Corporation v Sugden, Gresham Life Assurance Society v Bishop, [1903] 2 K B 171 C.A. The decision of the court is an order, and not a judgment, and therefore an appeal to the Court of Appeal must be brought within fourteen days (Onslow v Inland Revenue Commissioners (1890), 25 Q B D 465, C.A., as affected by the subsequent alterations in the rules; see R S C, Ord 58, rr 3, 15); and see title PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE, Vol XXIII. p 196.

(s) Though not expressly laid down, this rule is to be inferred from the provisions as to stamping after execution hereafter mentioned, see the text infra. "Execution" with reference to instruments not under seal means signature (Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict c 39), s 122).

The instruments to which this provision applies are instruments chargeable with ad valorem duty and described in the Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict c 39), Sched. I, under the titles "Bond, Covenant etc.," "Conveyance on Sale," "Lease or Tack," "Mortgage, Bond etc.," "Settlement"; and also voluntary dispositions inter vivos, as to which, see p. 732, post.

express provisions any instrument may be stamped after execution upon payment of a penalty which the Commissioners have power to remit (c).

1551. Instruments first executed abroad, subject to any provisions expressly referring to them (d), may be stamped without a penalty within thirty days after their first receipt in the United Kingdom (e), and subsequently upon the same terms as regards payment of a penalty as instruments first executed in the United Kingdom (f)

1552. In general any material alteration in an instrument after it is complete renders a new stamp necessary, as the effect is to make it in substance a new instrument (g); and, in the case of a contract, the result is that the new agreement cannot be proved for

(c) Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict c 39), s 15 (1), (3), (4), as amended by the Finance Act, 1895 (58 & 59 Vict c 16), s 15 The practice of the Commissioners as to the exaction of the penalty in the case of instruments to which no express provisions apply is as follows - Instruments, the execution or issue of which unstamped is made punishable by fine (see p 704, ante, and note (h), ibid), are not allowed to be stamped without penalty, but an instrument chargeable as a lease of a furnished house, and within the Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict c 39), s 78 (1), (6), may be stamped without a penalty within fourteen days after execution. Agreements under hand only, chargeable with the fixed duty of 6d, are allowed to be stamped without penalty within fourteen days after execution, and all other instruments within thirty days after execution. Such agreements or other instruments, if presented for adjudication (see p. 717, ante), and note (a), ibid), within these respective times, may be stamped without penalty within fourteen days after notice of assessment on analogy of the Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict c 39), s 15 (2), (6). In the case of an instrument containing, with reference to instruments executed before or on the 16th May, 1888, any provision which would, under the Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict c 39), s. 115 (see p 720, post), be void if relating to instruments executed after that date, the full penalty is exacted, and see title CONTRACT, Vol. VII., p 529

(d) A general prohibition, not referring expressly to instruments executed abroad, is to be construed as referring only to instruments executed in the United Kingdom, see p 717, ante. Thus the Stamp Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict c 97), s 68, which corresponds to the Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict c 39), s 51, was so construed in The Belfort (1884), 9 P D 215. The opinion expressed by LINDREY, L.J., as to the Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict c 39), s 80, in Re English, Scottish and Australian Chartered Bank, [1893] 3 Ch 385, C.A., at pp 411, 412, was unnecessary to the decision, and, in so far as it is based on a construction of the second subsection inconsistent with that adopted in The Belfort, supra, in the case of the Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict c 39), s 51, must not be considered as authoritative. On this view the Finance Act, 1907 (7 Edw 7, c 13), s. 9, relating to the stamping of proxies, is merely declaratory.

want of a stamp, and the old agreement cannot be sued upon as it has been superseded (h).

Where, however, an instrument is still in fieri, an alteration may be made without rendering a new stamp necessary (i), but an instrument is not necessarily in fieri because execution by another party is still required (k). No further stamp is required if the instrument is altered by or among the parties, or if it contains certain a point left open (n), or made to correct a mistake (o) or by a stranger (p). Classification

1555. The exemptions from stamp duties fall into three classes:

(1) general exemptions from all stamp duties as provided by the Stamp Act, 1891 (n),

(2) special exemptions from the duty imposed on certain classes of instruments (o), granted in favour of particular instruments falling within those classes by the Stamp Act, 1891 (n), or other revenue Acts (p);

(3) special exemptions contained in Acts relating primarily to objects other than revenue, and made in favour of certain instruments created in pursuance of those objects (q).

1556. Exemptions are to be construed liberally (r), but the burden of proof lies on the party who seeks to bring an instrument within an exemption (s), and general words in an exemption contained in a statute not relating primarily to revenue must be construed with reference to the object of that statute (t).

(a) As to this body, see title MEDICINE AND PHARMACY, Vol. XX, pp. 309 et seq

(b) The duty is £3, unless the person is admitted in respect of birth, apprenticeship, or marriage, in which case it is £1. Admissions to the freedom of the City of London by redemption and to the Company of Watermen and Lightermen of the River Thames are exempt. An admission of more than one person upon a single stamp has been held good as regards the first person named, but void as to the others (R v Reels (1726), 2 Ld. (c) Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), Sched. I, title "Affidavit." "Affidavit" includes "declaration" as regards all persons entitled to affirm or declare instead of swearing, and "statutory declaration" means a declaration made by virtue of the Statutory Declarations Act, 1835 (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 62) (Interpretation Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 63), ss. 3, 21). The expression does not include a memorandum of a parol statement made upon oath (Dunn v. Lowe (1827), 4 Bing. 193). 1562. A general charge is imposed upon any attested or authenticated copy or extract (l) of (1) an instrument chargeable with any duty; (2) an original will, testament or codicil; (3) the probate or probate copy of a will or codicil, (4) letters of administration, or any confirmation of a testament; (5) any public register other than those specifically charged with a duty of 1*d.*, (6) the books, rolls or records of any court. The charge is 1*s.*, or the same duty as on the original, whichever is the least (m). Copies or extracts from any law proceedings are exempt, and copies or extracts from any register of births, baptisms, marriages, deaths or burials (including cremations) (n), for which the person giving the same is entitled to any fee or reward, are liable to a duty of 1*d.* (o), unless furnished by any clergyman, registrar, or other official person pursuant to any Act or under any general regulation, in which case they are exempt.

1563 A duplicate or counterpart must be stamped with the same stamp as is chargeable upon the original, unless the latter amounts to more than 5*s.*, in which case, upon presentation together with the original duly stamped to the Commissioners, it may be stamped with a 5*s.* stamp and a stamp to denote that the duty on the original has been paid (p).

(m) Copies under heads (1)—(4) (see the text, supra) may be stamped without a penalty fourteen days after the date of attestation or authentication on payment of the duty only (Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c 39), s. 63). As to the time for stamping instruments generally, see p 717, ante.

1565. A duty of 10s. is charged upon any exchange, partition or division of real or heritable property in which any consideration agreed to be paid for equality does not exceed £100 (r). or, by a party who has executed it, to the admission of a counterpart, on the ground that the original is not duly stamped (Paul v. Meek (1828), 2 Y & J 116) On the other hand, as against a party who has not executed it, a counterpart is only secondary evidence, and therefore the ordinary rule applies that it is inadmissible if it is proved that the instrument which is primary evidence was never duly stamped, or that an unstamped duplicate which would be primary evidence is available, see title EVIDENCE, Vol XIII, p 516 Under the Stamp Act, 1815 (55 Geo 3, c 184), the duty applicable to counterparts other than those of leases was the charge of £1 15s on deeds not otherwise charged, and accordingly a document tendered as a counterpart assignment, but only stamped with £1 10s, was refused (Baker v. Gosling (1834), 1 Bing (N c) 246) In Munn v. Godbold (1825), 3 Bing 292, the judgment of BEST, C J, suggests that an unstamped counterpart is admissible so long as it is not tendered as a deed, and is then better evidence than any other copy It is clear, however, that, under the present law, a counterpart unstamped cannot be received in evidence, but can only be used to refresh the memory of a witness who proves it to be a copy; see Braythwaite v. Hitchcock (1842), 10 M & W 494 Waller v. Horsfall (1808), 1 Camp 501, and *Smith v. (s) As to the duty on conveyances, see title SALE OF LAND In ascertaining the consideration regard must be had to the Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict c 39), s 57, so that if one party undertakes to discharge a debt or mortgage due from the other this would be part of the consideration, and in the case of a partition or division any disparity in the distribution of a mortgage might have to be taken into account, see also Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 73 (as to double duty)

(t) The expression "security" does not necessarily involve hypothecation (Speyer Brothers v. Inland Revenue Commissioners, [1908] A. C 92), and see title MORTGAGE, Vol. XXI, p 135 "Marketable security" is defined by the Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), s 122, as a security of such a description as to be capable of being sold in any stock market in the United Kingdom The words "of such a description" are important, the intention being, on the one hand, to include a security of such a description as to be capable, according to the use and practice of stock markets, of being there bought and sold, although there may in fact be no market for the particular security in question, and, on the other hand, not to include a security which is not of that description, although, having some value, it is in fact capable of being sold (Texas Land and Cattle Co v. Inland Revenue Commissioners (1888), 16 R. (Ct of Sess) 69; Brown, Shipley & Co. v. Inland Revenue Commissioners, [1895] 2 Q. B. 598, C A.). (e) If not transferable by delivery, the scale applicable is scale (1) (see note (a), supra, Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict c 39), Sched I, title "Marketable Security", and see ibid, s 82 (1) (a))

If transferable by delivery, and signed or dated before or on the 6th August, 1885 (and not signed, dated or offered for subscription after that date), section (2) is applicable (ibid., Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c 8), s. 76)

If transferable by delivery and signed, or dated, or offered for subscription after the 6th August, 1885, scale (4) is applicable, unless the security is given in substitution for a like security duly stamped in accordance with the law in force at the time when it became subject to duty, in which case scale (6) is applicable, the payment of duty on the original security being indicated by a denoting stamp (ibid.); and see p 716, ante. As to the meaning of the words "in substitution for a like security," see Mount Lyell Mining and Rail. Co. v. Inland Revenue Commissioners, [1905] 1 K. B. 161, C. A.

 date of the security.

(2) In the case of other marketable securities the liability to duty depends upon the occurrence of some event in the United Kingdom, and the amount depends upon various circumstances (g) and upon whether the security is transferable by delivery or not (h).

In ascertaining the proper stamp which an instrument should bear, the material date is the date at which the instrument first thereof to be an assignment, transfer, or negotiation (Finance Act, 1899 (62 & 63 Vict c 9), s 6); see, for example, Speyer Brothers v. Inland Revenue Commissioners (1902), 66 J P 551; Noakes v. Inland Revenue Commissioners (1900), 83 L T 714; compare Bechuanaland Exploration Co v London Trading Bank, [1898] 2 Q B. 658

(g) Marketable securities by or on behalf of any foreign or colonial State, Government, municipal body, corporation or company, bearing date or signed after the 31d June, 1862, and either made or issued in the United Kingdom, or offered for subscription and given or delivered to a subscriber in the United Kingdom, or (the interest thereon being payable in the United Kingdom) assigned, transferred, or in any manner negotiated in the United Kingdom, are liable to duty as follows -

(i) Colonial Government securities, according to scale (1) (see note (a), p 729, ante) (Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict c 39), Sched I, title "Marketable Security"); and see ibid, s 82 (1)

(ii) Colonial municipal securities, if not transferable by delivery, according to scale (1). If transferable by delivery, according to scale (1) if bearing date or signed before or on the 6th August, 1885, and not bearing date, signed or offered for subscription after that date, if bearing date, signed, or offered for subscription after that date, according to scale (3), unless given in substitution for a like security duly stamped, in which case scale (5) is applicable (ibid); and see note (a), p. 729, ante. As to denoting, see p. 716, ante.

(iii) Other foreign or colonial securities, to double the respective duties chargeable on colonial municipal securities (ibid, Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s. 76), unless duly stamped before the passing of the last-mentioned Act (29th April, 1910)

All other marketable securities which are transferable by delivery, and made or issued by or on behalf of any foreign State or Government, or foreign or colonial municipal body, corporation or company, are liable to duty if assigned, transferred, or in any manner negotiated in the United Kingdom after the 1st August, 1899 (Finance Act, 1899 (62 & 63 Vict c 9), s 4 (1)). The words "is not . . . chargeable" in ibid, s 4 (1) (b), must be read as "could not . . . become chargeable," that is to say, a security which "is not chargeable" under the Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict c 39), only because it has not yet been negotiated in the United Kingdom, will, when so negotiated, be chargeable under the Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict c. 39), and not the Finance Act, 1899 (62 & 63 Vict. c 9)

Colonial municipal securities coming under this head are liable according to scale (3), other securities according to scale (4) (see note (a), p 729, ante), unless already stamped before 29th April, 1910 (the date of the passing of the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8)).

It should be observed that there is no provision in the case of these securities for a reduced duty where the security is only a substituted security.

As to the meaning of the expressions "made," "issued," "offered for subscription," "transferred" etc., see Revelstoke (Lord) v. Inland Revenue Commissioners, [1898] A. C 565; Chicago Railway Terminal Elevator Co v. Inland Revenue Commissioners (1896), 75 L. T. 157; Brown v. Inland Revenue Commissioners, Gordon v. Inland Revenue Commissioners (1900), 84 L. marketable securities.

1567. The Commissioners have power to stamp any foreign or colonial security without reference to the date thereof and without any penalty upon being satisfied that it was not made or issued and has not been transferred, assigned or regulated within the United Kingdom (j).

They have also power in the case of issues of certain foreign securities to accept payment of the amount which would be payable if all the securities were stamped, and thereupon to dispense with the need for stamping the securities of that issue (k).

1568. Share warrants issued under the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908 (l) and stock certificates to bearer (m) and instruments having the like effect and issued by or on behalf of any company or body of persons formed or established in the United Kingdom, are liable to a duty of three times the duty on a deed of transfer of the shares or stock, the consideration being taken as the nominal value (n).

Share warrants and stock certificates to bearer.

1569 Share warrants and stock certificates to bearer and instruments having the like effect, by means of which any share or stock of any company or body of persons, formed or established out of the United Kingdom, is after the 1st August, 1899, transferred or negotiated in the United Kingdom, are liable to a duty of 2s. for every £10, or part thereof, of the nominal value of the share or stock to which the certificate relates (o).

(a) The words "good faith" imply a duty the breach of which would be bad faith, and therefore, since a solvent transferor is free to dispose of his property for inadequate consideration, can mean no more than that the consideration is a genuine element in the transaction and not merely introduced to defraud the revenue.

(b) Ordinarily "valuable consideration" means consideration in money or money's worth which is not merely illusory or nominal, and a conveyance for such consideration would not be "voluntary" (Re Tetley, Ex parte Jeffery (1896), 75 L. T. 166; Bayspoole v. Collins (1871), 6 Ch. App. 228, and see title CONTRACT, Vol. VII, pp. 383 et seq.); but it is provided that (except where marriage is the consideration; see p. 734, post) the consideration is chargeable with stamp duty according to an ad valorem scale upon the value of the property conveyed or transferred (c).

* No such instrument is to be deemed duly stamped unless the Commissioners have expressed their opinion as to the

for any conveyance or transfer shall not for this purpose be deemed to be valuable consideration where the Commissioners are of opinion that by reason of the inadequacy of the sum paid as consideration or other circumstances the conveyance or transfer confers a substantial benefit on the transferee (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 74 (5)) It has been suggested that the consequence of this provision is that no conveyance or transfer can be safely stamped without its being submitted for adjudication (Alper, Law of Stamp Duties, 12th ed., p 118) But it is to be observed that the qualification of the meaning of the word "valuable" only operates where the Commissioners have formed an opinion, and this opinion must be that referred to in the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 74 (2) (see the text, infra), formed in the course of the procedure for adjudication laid down in the Stamp Act 1891 (54 & 55 Vict c 39), see p 716, ante. Consequently a disposition made to a purchaser, mortgagee, or other person for a consideration which is substantial and a genuine element in the transaction may be duly stamped without regard to the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 74 (2), (5) if it is not presented for adjudication, and it is submitted that, upon general principles of construction if an instrument has once been duly stamped, it cannot be held that as the result of a subsequent adjudication the instrument is to be deemed not duly stamped and the transferor held liable to a penalty. The qualification of the ordinary meaning of "valuable" must, therefore, be held to be limited to the case of an instrument presented for adjudication which is not otherwise duly stamped. This view was expressed by WARRINGTON, J., in Re Wen and Pitt's Contract (1911), 55 Sol Jo 536, but the report, which represents the learned judge as being apparently of opinion that the fact of the deed being stamped indicated that the Commissioners had had the opportunity of considering the instrument, impairs the value of that case as an authority. Inasmuch as the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 74 (2), relates only to instruments not already adjudicated upon, the words "voluntary disposition" in that sub-section must be construed without reference to the qualification of the word "valuable" introduced by the second part of ibid, s 74 (5), the intention being that, while the obligation to obtain adjudication is limited to voluntary dispositions in the ordinary meaning of the term, the work of the Commissioners in the regular procedure of adjudicating upon unstamped instruments should be facilitated by removing all controversy in the case of instruments where the transferee obtained a substantial benefit. Where, therefore, the sufficiency of the stamp on a conveyance is questioned, the court must decide the question with reference to the ordinary meaning of "valuable."

(c) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 74. The duty charged is the like duty as if the conveyance were on sale, the value of the property conveyed being substituted for the amount or value of the consideration for the sale. Except as regards stock of the Bank of England and certain colonial stocks (as to which see the first heading, "Conveyance or Transfer whether on sale or otherwise," in the Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict c 39), Sched 1), the scale of duty is that contained in that Schedule under the title "Conveyance or Transfer on Sale," as amended by the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 73, and is approximately $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. for conveyances of stock and marketable securities in all cases, and of other property in cases where the value of the property conveyed does not exceed £500 and the instrument contains a statement that the transaction does not form part of a larger transaction or series of transactions in which the value or aggregate value of the property conveyed exceeds that amount. In other cases the scale is approximately 1 per cent. A composition for stamp duty on transfers of stock, entered into under the Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict c 39), s. 114 or s 115 (see p. 720, ante), covers this duty.

duty chargeable in accordance with the provisions for adjudication (d)

1575. Dispositions are not liable to this duty where the property is conveyed to a body of persons incorporated by a special Act and precluded by its Act from dividing any profit amongst its members, and the property is to be held for the purposes of an open space or for its preservation for the benefit of the nation (e).

A disposition made in consideration of marriage is not within the charge (f).

A conveyance made for nominal consideration for the purposes of securing a loan, or for effectuating a change in trustees, or where no beneficial interest passes in the property conveyed or made to a beneficiary by a person in a fiduciary capacity under any trust, and a disentailing assurance not limiting any new estate other than an estate in fee simple in the person disentailing, are expressly excluded from the charge of duty (g).

charged

1577. Subject to certain exemptions (i), a duty of 5 per cent. is levied annually upon the annual value, income, or profits of the real and personal property (j) of every body corporate or unincorporate (k), after deducting necessary outgoings properly incurred in the management of such property (l)

(d) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw 7, c 8), s 74 (2). see note (b), p 732, ante, and, as to adjudication, see p 716, ante

(i) See pp 735, 736, post

(j) As regards real property, the duty is to be levied on the annual value, which means substantially the Sched A assessment (as to which see title INCOME TAX, Vol XVI, p 619), subject to the deductions allowed, the words "income or profits" are directed principally to personal property and not intended to extend the recognised meaning of 'annual value' in relation to real property so as to include profits derived from a special use of the land such as gate money of a cricket club (Re Surrey County Cricket Club, [1901] 2 K B 400), and see, further, title CORPORATIONS, Vol. VIII., pp 377, 378. As to increment value duty payable by corporations, see pp 561 et seq, ante

(k) "Body unincorporate" includes every unincorporated company, fellowship, society, association, trustee or number of trustees, to or in whom respectively any real or personal property shall belong, in such manner, or be vested upon such permanent trusts, that the same shall not be liable to legacy or succession duty (Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1885 (48 & 49 Viet c. 51), s. 12)

Scott*, [1892] 2 Q. B 152, C A (property required by Act of Parliament to be "for ever held and enjoyed" by certain freemen))

(p) "Charitable" is not used in the extended sense attributed to that word in connection with charitable trusts, as to which see title CHARITIES. Vol IV, pp 105 et seq Though the term cannot be the subject of a precise definition, it does not, at any rate, include a mere appropriation for the benefit of certain freemen (Re Bootham Ward Strays, York, Inland Revenue Commissioners v. Inland Revenue (1887), 14 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 729, Re Linen and Woollen Drapers. etc Institution (1887), 58 L. T. 949)

(q) The word "science" is to be construed broadly, and include the science of engineering (Inland Revenue Commissioners v. Forrest (1890), 15 App Cas 334) In order that the whole property of an institution may be exempt, it is necessary that there should be a legal obligation that substantially the whole of it should be devoted to the promotion of science; and if one of the main objects is to promote the interests of the members, although by the acquisition of scientific knowledge, its property will be liable to the duty except such as is legally appropriated to the promotion of science and cannot be devoted in other ways to the general interests of the members (*Writers to the Signet (Society) v. 1579. The duty is a stamp duty under the management of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue (c), and recoverable in the same way as succession duty (d) from the body chargeable or the accountable officer (e), and is a first charge on the property of the body while in its possession or of any party acquiring it with notice of the duty being in arrear (f). SECT. 1.—In the High Court.

SECT. 1.

1580. All revenue duties and penalties are recoverable in the High Court, and all goods seized as forfeited under any Act of Parliament relating to inland revenue or to customs may be returned into the High Court for condemnation (k). The proceedings are taken on the Revenue side of the King's Bench Division (l). They must be commenced within three years next after the date when the penalty was incurred or the seizure made (m).

When information
unnecessary.

1591. But a court of summary jurisdiction may proceed to hear a case without the information or direction of the Commissioners where the offence is one against a Customs Act and is in respect of goods other than spirits, tobacco, or saccharine, or where, being spirits, tobacco, or saccharine, the quantity in respect of which the charge is brought is less than 5 gallons of spirits, 20 lbs. of tobacco, or 5 lbs. of saccharine (f).

SUB-SECT 5—Conduct of Proceedings

1592 Any solicitor, officer, or other person employed or authorised by the Commissioners of Customs and Excise or by their solicitor may prosecute, conduct, or defend any information or complaint before a justice of the peace in the United Kingdom in any matter relating to the revenue of customs or excise (g).

Right of audience

SUB-SECT 6—Service of Summons

1593. A summons issued by a justice in a customs or excise case may be served personally by an officer of customs and excise; and if personal service cannot be effected it is sufficient service if, in a customs case, the summons is left at the defendant's last known place of abode in the United Kingdom, or on board any ship to which he may belong or may have lately belonged, or if, in an excise case, a copy of the summons is affixed upon some conspicuous part of the office of customs and excise near to which the offence was committed (h).

Mode of service.

SUB-SECT 7.—Evidence

1594. In proceedings relating or incident to any customs or excise seizure, penalty, or forfeiture, orders issued by the Commissioners may be proved by production of any letter or instructions signed by a secretary or assistant secretary, and addressed to any officer of customs and excise, or to the officials generally, for their guidance in such matters (i).

SECT. 2
In Courts of Summary Jurisdiction.

Excise survey books.
Burden of proof.

1595. Excise survey books are of themselves evidence of the facts entered therein so far as they relate to a defendant's trade which is the subject of such entries, and the officer who made them need not be called to prove them even though he is in court (k).

1596. In any proceedings instituted for the recovery of penalties in respect of goods claimed to be forfeited for non-payment of duty, the burden is upon the defendant to prove that duty has been paid, or that the goods or commodities seized as forfeited are not of the sort or kind alleged in the information, or that, in the case of imported goods, they have been lawfully imported or unshipped, and he must show the place from which the goods were brought (l). A tobacco manufacturer charged with having on his premises sugar or other prohibited articles is required to prove that they were there "for the ordinary use of his family (a); and where proceedings are taken to recover the penalty in respect of the unlicensed sale of tobacco in a railway carriage, omnibus, stage coach, or tramway car, it rests with the defendant to prove the proprietorship of the vehicle (b). If any act is done for the doing of which a licence is required, upon proof that the act was committed, the burden is cast upon the person charged with doing the act to prove that he held the necessary licence in force at the time (c).

witnesses.

1597. Where during the course of the hearing of a case under any revenue statute the witnesses have been ordered to leave the court, the evidence of a witness who had remained in court cannot be admitted (d). A witness in a revenue case cannot be asked if he is the informer (e), nor can he be asked who is the informer (f).

charges are made on Treasury orders out of the credits granted by the Comptroller and Auditor-General (r) out of the Consolidated Fund (s).

SECT. 2.—Supply Services.

Nature of supply services.

1604. The supply services consist of the public expenditure not included in the Consolidated Fund services or in capital expenditure authorised by special Acts. This expenditure is voted annually by Parliament (t). It comprises the expenditure on the army, navy, ordnance factories, and civil services (u), and is met by appropriations in aid (v) or issues to the Paymaster-General or accounting officers (w) made upon Treasury orders out of the credits granted by the Comptroller and Auditor-General (x).

SECT. 3.—Pensions and Superannuation Allowances.

SUB-SECT. 1—Under Special Acts

Statutory sanction

1605. Pensions to persons who have been in the service of the Crown are granted either under some special Act of Parliament (y), or under the general Superannuation Acts, 1834—1909 (a) (hereafter, in this sub-section of the title, referred to as “the Superannuation Acts”).

To whom charged.

When granted under a special Act, the terms of the Act commonly regulate the conditions upon which the pension is payable; but, when any superannuation allowance is not otherwise provided for by Parliament, it is charged upon and payable by the department in which the person receiving it has served (b).

Pensions and Superannuation Allowances.Personal application.*Statutory restrictions on right to superannuation*Age limit.*Certificate of efficiency*Rates of superannuation.

1606. The Superannuation Acts (c) apply only to persons who have been appointed to their offices directly by the Crown, or who have entered upon them with a certificate from the Civil Service Commissioners (d). The Treasury may, however, by order or warrant relieve any person from the disability due to want of a certificate (e).

1607. The Superannuation Acts (c) do not confer any right to a pension or rating allowance or to compensation for past services (f); and the decision of the Treasury is final on any question arising in any department of the public service as to the claim of a person or class of persons to superannuation allowance (g).

No superannuation allowance may be granted to any person under sixty years of age, unless upon a medical certificate to the satisfaction of the Treasury that he is incapable from infirmity of mind or body of discharging the duties of his office, and that such infirmity is likely to be permanent (h).

Except in the case of a head officer of a department, the full superannuation is not to be granted to any person except on the production of a certificate of the head officer of his department that he has served with diligence and fidelity (i).

1608. The ordinary rate of superannuation allowance in the case of persons who entered the service of the Crown subsequent to the 19th April, 1859 (k), and before the 20th September, 1909, is as follows (l):—If the person has served ten years and upwards, but

No addition is made in respect of any service beyond forty years (m).

In the case of persons who entered the service of the Crown since the 20th September, 1909, the rate of superannuation allowance is to be calculated as if the word "eightieth" were substituted for "sixtieth" in the above scale. Provision is made for the further payment to anyone coming under the new scale of an additional allowance by way of a lump sum equal to one-thirtieth of the annual emoluments of his office multiplied by the number of completed years he has served, but not exceeding in any case one and a half times the amount of such salary and emoluments (n).

1609. In calculating the period served for superannuation, no period less than a whole year is regarded (o).

The same period cannot be reckoned both for the purpose of superannuation allowance and also for the purpose of naval or military non-effective pay (p).

Computation upon salary

1610 Superannuation allowance payable to any person is computed upon the average salary and emoluments enjoyed by him in the three years prior to his retirement, unless he has been at the time of his retirement in the class from which he retires for a period of three years, and has been on a regular scale of salary with increments of definite amounts accruing at definite periods (q)

SECT. 3.

Pensions and Superannuation Allowances.

1612. Where a person at the time he becomes a civil servant within the meaning of the Superannuation Acts (s) is serving the State in a temporary capacity, the Treasury may direct that his service in that capacity may be reckoned for the purposes of the Superannuation Acts as service in the capacity of a civil servant (t).

1613 The Treasury may by order or warrant make special provision for computing the superannuation payable to persons holding professional or other special offices (u)

Government undertaking to pay the company interest at 6 per cent. The war which concluded with the Peace of Utrecht in 1714 added £21,483,098 to the Debt, which at the close of the reign of Anne amounted to £36,175,460 (Dowell's History of Taxation and Taxes in England, Vol II, p 43; Fenn on the Funds). In 1716 the Bank of England made a further advance of £2,500,000 to the Government at 5 per cent, and in the same year provision was made for a sinking fund by stat (1716) 3 Geo I, c. 7 (Finance Accounts of the United Kingdom, 1911-12 (Parliamentary Paper (Commons), No 169 of 1912, p 89)). In 1720 the Funded Debt was increased by the addition of the stock of the South Sea Company, and in the following year the Bank purchased from the Exchequer what remained of the stock for £3,328,300, bearing interest at 5 per cent per annum (stat (1721) 8 Geo I, c 21). At the close of the reign of George I, in 1727, the Debt amounted to £53,979,708, the increase being due to the charging of the stock of the South Sea Company to the Consolidated Fund. Between 1727 and the outbreak of war in 1739 over seven millions were paid off the Debt by the operation of the Sinking Fund. During the course of the war many loans were contracted, chiefly at 4 per cent, and when peace was made at Aix la Chapelle in 1749 the Debt had been increased by £29,173,771 (Dowell's History of Taxation and Taxes in England, Vol II, p 403). In 1746 the last of the advances made by the Bank on which interest is still paid was made under the Bank of England Act, 1745 (19 Geo 2, c 6) (see Sir John Sinclair's History of the Public Revenue, 3rd ed., 1804, p 21). In the meantime, in 1742, the interest on the Bank's original capital now amounting to £3,200,000 had been reduced to 3 per cent (ibid. p 15). In 1749 a general reduction in the rate of interest payable on the whole of the public debt was provided for, all stock-holders were to receive 4 per cent until the 25th December, 1750; from that date the rate was to be 3½ per cent up to the 25th December, 1757, after which the rate was to be 3 per cent. The Seven Years' war, which ended with the Treaty of Paris in 1764, added £59,633,000 to the Debt (Dowell's History of Taxation and Taxes in England, Vol II, p 403). Some payments off having been made in the interval, the Debt amounted at the outbreak of the American War in 1776 to £126,842,811. The borrowings due to this war added £117,285,006 to the Debt (ibid. p 403), the total of which in 1786 reached £238,291,046 (Sir John Sinclair's History of the Public Revenue, 3rd ed., 1804, p 58). During the Revolutionary War with France £504,889,452 was added to the Debt (Dowell's History of Taxation and Taxes in England, Vol II, p 403). The loans, which were at 3 per cent, were issued at a discount, and bonuses in 4 and 5 per cent stock, as well as terminable annuities, were in some instances given to subscribers. At the close of the war in 1815, the Debt, including the capital value of Terminable Annuities, amounted to about 900 millions. The principal additions to the Debt since that date were 20 millions raised in 1835 as compensation to the owners of emancipated slaves, 30 millions raised to finance the Crimean War in 1854-6, and 162 millions added in connection with the 10 per cent wars in South Africa and China. The 3 per cent Consolidated Stock, the reduced 3 per cents and the new 3 per cents (for these stocks, see p 755, post) were by the National Debt (Conversion) Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict c 2), converted into a new stock bearing interest at 2½ per cent until 5th April, 1903, and thereafter at 2½ per cent, and redeemable on and after the 5th April, 1923, at par on such notice, at such times, and in such amounts as Parliament may determine. An option to substitute a specified amount of stock for a rentcharge covenanted to be paid is not affected by the reduction of the rate of interest (Northumberland (Duke) v. Percy, [1893] 1 Ch 298); and see National Debt (Conversion) Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict c 2), ss. 21 (1), 25 (2); Re Borough's Estate (1893), 31 L R Ir. 244; compare Re Howell-Shepherd, Churchill v. St George's Hospital, [1894] 3 Ch. 649.

On the other hand, the State has certain liquid assets of ascertainable value (m), and has also claims in respect of advances made chiefly to or for colonial governments (n).

(5) Debts due to the Bank of Ireland representing sums placed at the disposal of the Government at various times from the foundation of the Bank in 1782 to the year 1821(a). The debts due to both banks now bear interest at $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. per annum(b).

Terminable

Unfunded

1624. The Unfunded Debt is made up of: (1) Treasury Bills for Supply, and (2) Exchequer Bonds(f). The bills bear interest at various rates fixed by the Treasury; the bonds carry interest either at $2\frac{1}{2}$ or at 3 per cent per annum(g). The $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. bonds are repayable by annual drawings of £1,000,000 at par and expire on the 18th April, 1915. The 3 per cent bonds are repayable on the 5th April, 1915(h).

The National Debt.Guarantee in respect of loans.

1626. The guarantee of the British Government extends in some cases to both the principal and the interest, as in the case of the Transvaal Loans (£40,000,000) (k), and the Guaranteed Irish Land Stock (£11,185,662), while in other cases, such as the Local Loans 3 per cent. Stock (£71,058,813), the Guaranteed 2½ per cent. Irish Land Stock (£53,319,974), and the Guaranteed 3 per cent. Irish Land Stock (£11,966,124), the interest only is guaranteed by the State (l). In all cases there is some primary security for the loan.

Nominal
liabilities.

1627. In addition to these there are certain nominal liabilities in respect of moneys due to suitors in the courts and appropriated by authority of Parliament, unclaimed dividends at the banks paid into the Exchequer, unclaimed annuities and prizes (m). The State may also be called upon to make good out of the Consolidated Fund any amount by which the funds held by the National Debt Commissioners may prove insufficient to meet the claims of depositors in the Post Office Savings Bank or of the trustees of trustee savings banks and friendly societies (n)

Stock
accounts.

1628. The account of the stocks forming the National Debt is kept by the Bank of England (o); and the Bank is to continue a corporation for that purpose until all stock is duly redeemed by Act of Parliament (p).

Transfer
books

1629. Books are kept by the Bank in which all transfers of stock are recorded, a separate register being kept of stock transferable by deed (q).

The National Debt.*Transfers.

The transfer of stock other than stock registered as transferable by deed is effected by the signature of the transferee in the book attested by two witnesses, and, except where otherwise provided for by Parliament, no other mode of transfer is good (r). The conditions under which any stock may be registered as transferable by deed and the manner in which a transfer of such stock may take place are provided for by regulations made by the Bank with the concurrence of the Treasury (s).

The Bank may require evidence of title before allowing a transfer (t). It must require the production of probate or letters of administration before paying over the stock of a deceased stockholder to his executor or administrator (u).

No stamp duty is payable in respect of any deed of transfer of stock (v).

Transfer lists

Where stock is so transferred, it is the duty of the Bank immediately after the transfer to record in a list kept for the purpose the name and description of the person in whose name the stock stood in its books before the transfer, with the particulars of the amount transferred. Lists so made out are to be open to inspection during the usual business hours (w).

Payment of dividends.

1630. When the Treasury imprest for the payment has been issued, the Bank must pay out of the Consolidated Fund dividends due to the persons appearing from its books to be entitled to the stock (b).

The Bank may now be compelled to transfer stock into the joint names of a corporation and an individual (National Debt (Stockholders Relief) Act, 1892 (55 & 56 Vict. c. 39), s. 6). For the general rule of law in such cases, see Law Guaranty and Trust Society v Bank of England (Governor & Co) (1890), 24 Q. B. D. 406. Re-transfer of

1632. Any person legally entitled may apply to the court for an order re-transferring stock with the dividends upon it (d) which had been transferred to the National Debt Commissioners (c).

Where proceedings for this purpose are taken the Attorney-General represents the Crown both as parens patriæ and in its capacity as beneficiary (f).

In the absence of special circumstances, the taxed costs of the Attorney-General and the National Debt Commissioners are directed to be paid out of the fund recovered in an action for the re-transfer of stock (g).

1633 The reduction of the National Debt is effected partly (1) by the allocation to that object of certain receipts in the nature of capital (h), but mainly (2) by the appropriation of certain annual balances known respectively as the New and the Old Sinking Funds.

The former consists of such portion of the annual sum fixed as the charge for the National Debt as is not required in any financial year for the annual charges which are made payable out of that sum (i). The latter consists of the surplus, if any, of income over expenditure, excluding expenditure out of loans authorised by any Act other than the annual Appropriation Act, during any financial year (k).

New Sinking Fund

1634. Moneys available for the reduction of the Debt out of the New Sinking Fund are issued from time to time to the National Debt Commissioners (l), and must be applied by them within six months of the date of issue in purchasing, redeeming, or paying off either annuities charged on the Consolidated Fund, Exchequer Bonds or Bills or Treasury Bills, or any other form of debt for which the fund is specifically made available (m), but not in repayment of any advances made by the Banks of England and Ireland under the Exchequer and Audit Departments Act, 1866 (n), s. 12, or any loan borrowed on the credit of any sum which the Treasury is authorised to issue out of the Consolidated Fund towards making good the supplies granted to His Majesty (o).

Old Sinking Fund

The sum available out of the Old Sinking Fund must be issued during the financial year next after that from which it is derived, and applied to the same purposes as the New Sinking Fund, with the addition that it may be applied to the repayment of advances under the Exchequer and Audit Departments Act, 1866 (n), but subject to the above-mentioned limitation as regards loans (p).

(1) The proceeds of the additional duties of customs and excise of 8*d.* the barrel on beer and 6*d.* the proof gallon on spirits imposed by the Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1890 (q). The sum thus payable is to be taken to be, until Parliament shall determine to the contrary, the proceeds of those surtaxes in the financial year ending the 31st March, 1912 (r).

(2) A sum equal to the proceeds of the duties on licences for the sale of intoxicating liquors throughout the United Kingdom, and on carriage licences in Scotland in the financial year ending the 31st March, 1909 (s).

(3) The proceeds of the duties on the local taxation licences collected by the councils of the counties and county boroughs in England and Wales (t), and in Ireland, and of those duties collected in Scotland by the Commissioners of Customs and Excise (u).

The only one of these licences levied in Ireland is that for motor cars (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 89). On appointment such officers may be required to give security by a bond with a surety or sureties (k), and are liable to fine and imprisonment and to be deprived of the right to hold any office under the Crown for furnishing false statements or returns of moneys collected by or entrusted to them, or of the balances under their control (l).

Control of Treasury

1645. The accounting officers may be required to transmit their accounts with the authorities and vouchers for audit by the Comptroller and Auditor-General, who is required, upon being satisfied, to give a certificate of discharge (n). On the determination of his office every accounting officer must pay over any balance of public moneys in his hands to the Treasury, who, if the Comptroller and Auditor-General reports that money has been improperly withheld, may recover the same with interest (o). Against disallowances or charges by the Comptroller and Auditor-General accounting officers have a right of appeal to the Treasury (p).
